COOLEY'S CYCLOPÆDIA of PRACTICAL RECEIPTS, and Collateral Information in the Arts, Manufactures, Professions, and Trades, including Medicine, Pharmacy, Domestic Economy, and Hygiene, designed as a General Book of Reference for the Manufacturer, Tradesman, and Head of a Family. Edited by W. NORTH, M.A. F.C.S. With 370 Illustrations. 2 vols. royal 8vo. 42*s.*

A MANUAL of FAMILY MEDICINE and HYGIENE for INDIA. By Sir WILLIAM MOORE, K.C.I.E. Sixth Edition. With numerous Engravings. 8vo. 12*s.*

CHAVASSE'S ADVICE to a MOTHER on the MANAGEMENT of her CHILDREN, and on the Treatment on the moment of their more pressing Illnesses and Accidents. Fourteenth Edition (230th Thousand). 2*s.* 6*d.*

CHAVASSE'S ADVICE to a WIFE on the MANAGEMENT of her own HEALTH, and on the Treatment of some of the Complaints incidental to Pregnancy, Labour, and Suckling. With an Introductory Chapter especially addressed to a Young Wife. Thirteenth Edition (270th Thousand). 2*s.* 6*d.*

The ELEMENTS of HEALTH: an Introduction to the Study of Hygiene. By LOUIS C. PARKES, M.D. D.P.H. With 27 Illustrations. Post 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

A SHORT DICTIONARY of MEDICAL TERMS. 2*s.* 6*d.*

WORKS FOR NURSES.

A MANUAL for HOSPITAL NURSES and others ENGAGED in ATTENDING on the SICK. By EDWARD J. DOMVILLE, L.R.C.P. M.R.C.S. Eighth Edition. Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

A MANUAL of NURSING, MEDICAL and SURGICAL. By CHARLES J. CULLINGWORTH, M.D. F.R.C.P. Third Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

A SHORT MANUAL for MONTHLY NURSES. By C. J. CULLINGWORTH, M.D. Fourth Edition, Revised by M. A. ATKINSON. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.*

NOTES on GYNÆCOLOGICAL NURSING. By J. B. HELLIER, M.D. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.*

HINTS on ELEMENTARY PHYSIOLOGY. By FLORENCE A. HAIG-BROWN. With a Preface by Dr. ORD. With 21 Illustrations. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.*

LECTURES on MEDICINE to NURSES. By H. E. CUFF, M.D. With 25 Illustrations. Fcap. 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

ANTISEPTIC PRINCIPLES for NURSES. By C. E. RICHMOND, F.R.C.S. With Illustrations. Fcap. 8vo. 1*s.*

[Nearly ready.

London: J. & A. CHURCHILL, 7, Great Marlborough-street.

NOW READY

PHILOSOPHICAL TRANSACTIONS of the ROYAL SOCIETY of LONDON, 1896

Series A. Vol 187. Price £1 19s. 6d.

Contents.

1. ON the APPLICATION of the KINETIC THEORY to DENSE GASES. By S. H. Burbury.
2. The KINEMATICS of MACHINES. By I. A. Hearson.
3. EXPERIMENTS on FLUID VISCOSITY. By A. Mallock.
4. RESEARCHES on the ELECTRIC PROPERTIES of PURE SUBSTANCES.—No. 1. The Electrical Properties of Pure Sulphur. By Richard Threlfall and Joseph Henry Draper Brearley.
5. The RUBIES of BURMA and ASSOCIATED MINERALS: their Mode of Occurrence Origin and Metamorphoses. A Contribution to the History of Corundum. By C. Barrington Brown, Esq., and Prof. John W. Judd.
6. ALTERNATE CURRENT DYNAMO-ELECTRIC MACHINES. By J. Hopkinson and E. Wilson.
7. MATHEMATICAL CONTRIBUTIONS to the THEORY of EVOLUTION.—III. Regression Heredity, and Panmixia. By Karl Pearson.
8. The ROTATION of an ELASTIC SPHEROID. By S. S. Hough.
9. ON the MAGNETICAL RESULTS of the VOYAGE of H.M.S. PENGUIN, 1890-92. By Captain E. W. Creak, R.N.
10. BAKERIAN LECTURE.—On the Diffusion of Metals. By W. C. Roberts-Austen.
11. ON the STRUCTURE of METALS, its ORIGIN and CHANGES. By M. F. Osmond and Prof. Roberts-Austen.
12. ON the DETERMINATION of the PHOTOMETRIC INTENSITY of the CORONAL LIGHT during the SOLAR ECLIPSE of APRIL 16, 1893. By Captain W. de W. Abney and T. E. Thorpe.
13. ON a TYPE of SPHERICAL HARMONICS of UNRESTRICTED DEGREE, ORDER, and ARGUMENT. By E. W. Hobson.
14. MAGNETISATION of LIQUIDS. By John S. Townsend.
15. The TOTAL ECLIPSE of the SUN, APRIL 16, 1893. Report and Discussion of the Observations relating to Solar Physics. By J. Norman Lockyer.
16. MEMOIR on the THEORY of the PARTITION of NUMBERS. Part I. By Major P. A. MacMahon, R.A.
17. PROBLEMS in ELECTRIC CONVECTION. By G. F. C. Searle.
18. The HYSTERESIS of IRON and STEEL in a ROTATING MAGNETIC FIELD. By Francis Gibson Baily.

Series B. Vol 187. Price 19s.

Contents.

1. ON the EVOLUTION of the VERTEBRAL COLUMN of AMPHIBIA and AMNIOTA. By Hans Gadow.
2. The INFLUENCE of the CEREBRAL CORTEX on the LARYNX. By J. S. Risien Russell.
3. MICROSCOPIC and SYSTEMATIC STUDY of MADREPORARIAN TYPES of CORALS. By Miss Maria M. Ogilvie.
4. The ELECTROMOTIVE PROPERTIES of MALAPTERURUS ELECTRICUS. By Francis Gotch and G. J. Burch.

London: Harrison & Sons, 45, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. ARTHUR A. SYKES'S NEW BOOK NOW READY.

WITHOUT PERMISSION: a Book of Dedications. Art canvas. 3s. 6d. post free; or may be ordered through any Bookseller.

The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster.

MR. HERBERT SPENCER'S WORKS.

	s.	d.
FIRST PRINCIPLES	16	0
PRINCIPLES of BIOLOGY. 2 vols. ...	34	0
PRINCIPLES of PSYCHOLOGY. 2 vols.	36	0
PRINCIPLES of SOCIOLOGY. Vol. I. ...	21	0
,, ,, ,, Vol. II. ...	18	0
,, ,, ,, Vol. III. ...	16	0
ECCLESIASTICAL INSTITUTIONS ...	5	0
PRINCIPLES of ETHICS. Vol. I. ...	15	0
,, ,, ,, Vol. II. ...	12	6
The DATA of ETHICS (Separately) ...	3	0
JUSTICE (Separately)	8	0
The STUDY of SOCIOLOGY	10	6
EDUCATION	6	0
,, Cheap Edition	2	6
ESSAYS. 3 vols. ... 30s. (or each vol. 10s.)
SOCIAL STATICS and MAN v. STATE...	10	0
MAN v. STATE (Separately)	1	0

Williams & Norgate, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh, and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JOKAI'S NEW NOVEL,
ENTITLED

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. Translated by Mrs. WAUGH (ELLIS WRIGHT). With Engraved Portrait of Dr. Jókai (Authorized Edition). Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

FIFTH EDITION NOW READY.

"The author has given us a group of striking personalities, of every one of whom it is not too much to say that it is brilliantly drawn and vividly presented. From every point of view 'The Green Book' is a book to be read. It is a work of fine art."—Daily Chronicle.

Mr. Courtney says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly an astounding book. In force and fire and prodigal variety he reminds one of the elder Dumas."

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."
Pall Mall Gazette.

BY MAURUS JOKAI.
(Uniform with the above.)

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JOKAI. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special knowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that we never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. There are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the book.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and treatment."—Daily Chronicle.

OTHER POPULAR WORKS BY DR. MAURUS JOKAI.

Authorized Editions, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5s. each.
Translated from the Hungarian by R. NISBET BAIN.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. SECOND EDITION.

"A thrilling Hungarian historical novel. Jókai's extraordinary dramatic and descriptive powers have full play."
Truth.

PRETTY MICHAL. Second Edition.

"It is part of the high art of the story that the author has kept the whole atmosphere free from the complexity, the subtle motives of a later and more sophisticated age. Maurus Jókai's novel is a book to be read."—Saturday Review.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C. At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."
Illustrated London News.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore, NOTES AND QUERIES."
Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."
Quarterly Review.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d., of all Booksellers,

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY,
Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY,
Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY,
More especially of English Authors, with Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE,
Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY,
With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,
Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY,
Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY,
Including Histories of Old Families, completion of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES,
On points of ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPOGRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MISCELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATICS, PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and Newsvendors.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

NEXT WEEK, 2 vols. demy 8vo. 32*s*.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF BENJAMIN JOWETT, M.A.,

Master of Balliol College, Oxford.

By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., and the Rev. LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D.

With Portraits and other Illustrations.

JUST OUT, demy 8vo. 6*d*.

A LETTER TO THE DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, K.G., ON THE EASTERN QUESTION.

By the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

In crown 8vo. gilt top, price 5*s*.

PUPPETS AT LARGE.

Scenes and Subjects from Mr. Punch's Show.

By F. ANSTEY, Author of 'Vice Versâ,' &c.

With 16 Page Illustrations by J. B. PARTRIDGE.

London: BRADBURY, AGNEW & CO., LIMITED, 8, 9, 10, Bouverie-street, E.C.

Now ready, CHEAP EDITION, illustrated, 1 vol. demy 8vo. cloth, 10*s*.

THE ORDER OF THE COIF.

By Mr. SERJEANT PULLING.

Containing the Early History of the Order, together with an Account of the Aula Regis, and the Courts at Westminster Hall derived from it—The Justiciar—The Judges and Serjeants of the Coif—The Apprenticii ad legem—The Inns of Court—The Forms, Solemnities, and Usages kept up by the Bench and the Bar—Records and Memoirs of the Old Order, and its many Distinguished Members—Their Legal and Social position, and the gradual Innovations on the Old Institution.

"A monument of well-digested research.....An important contribution to the history of the Bench and Bar of England."—Illustrated London News.

London: WILLIAM CLOWES & SONS, LIMITED, Law Publishers, 27, Fleet-street, E.C.

24, BEDFORD-STREET, STRAND, W.C.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS beg to announce that they have published this week ROBERT the BRUCE, and the STRUGGLE for the SCOTTISH INDEPENDENCE ("Heroes of the Nations" Series), by Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., fully illustrated, crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.; also a New Novel entitled THAT AFFAIR NEXT DOOR, by ANNA KATHERINE GREEN, Author of 'The Leavenworth Case,' crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. Both of these volumes are obtainable at all the Libraries.

NOW READY.

THE APRIL NUMBER OF THE

PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

EDITED BY

LORD FREDERIC HAMILTON.

Price ONE SHILLING net.

Contents.

ON OULTON BROADS. Frontispiece.
An Etching by Horace Schroder.

SUNRISE. Mackenzie Bell.
With Illustrations by Abbey Altson.

LEVENS HALL, WESTMORLAND. Mrs. Bagot, of Levens.
Illustrated from Photographs.

DOLORES. Arthur Applin.
With Illustrations by Sydney Cowell.

The SWELL from the "H. F. H." J. C. L. Booth.
Illustrated by the Author.

A CAXTON MISSALE. Lady Newton.
With Facsimile Reproductions.

The BREECHING of SAMMY. Horace A. Vachell.

HONITON LACE. Alice Dryden.
With numerous Designs.

APRIL. Ada Bartrick Baker.
Illustrated by Will Robinson.

SPORT of the MONTH: Trout-Fishing. Hon. T. W. Legh, M.P.
With Full-Page Illustration by George Roller.

The STRANGE ADVENTURE of JOAN ARCHER. Geraldine Bonner.
With Illustrations by Bernard Higham.

PECULIARITIES of BRITISH ARMY DRESS. Walter Wood.

SPRING. Full-Page Illustration by E. G. Cohen.

WILD FLOWERS in the LONDON STREETS. A. Every.
With Illustrations by E. L. M.

ST. IVES. Chapters 16-18. The late Robert Louis Stevenson.
With Illustrations by G. Grenville Manton.

IN the NORTH-WEST. Clive Phillips-Wolley.
Illustrated by H. Granville Fell.

The STORY of 1812. Part IV. Colonel H. D. Hutchinson, Director of Military Education in India.

The MAJOR TACTICS of CHESS. Part II. Franklin K. Young.
With Diagrams.

FROM a CORNISH WINDOW. A. T. Quiller Couch.
With Thumb-Nail Sketches by Mark Zangwill.

The HUMOURS of the MONTH.

EXQUISITELY ILLUSTRATED BY THE LEADING ARTISTS.

Offices: 18, Charing Cross-road, London, W.C.

THE PALAZZO COMMUNALE PIACENZA.—Also Sketches of Burgos Cathedral and House of Jacques Cœur; Ecclesiastical Zoology; Royal Academy Lectures on Architecture; Sketches of London Street Architecture, No. XI., &c.

See the BUILDER of March 20 (4*d*.; by post, 4½*d*.).

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10*s*. 6*d*., 16*s*. 6*d*., and 25*s*. each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.

A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.

We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS

(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.

Established 1849.

Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins, 7½*d* and 1*s*. 1½*d*., labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for

ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S SPRING LIST.

SIX SHILLINGS.

FALSE DAWN. By Francis Prevost.
With Specially Designed Cover by A. A. Turbayne. [Just ready.

The author's previous volumes, 'RUST of GOLD' and 'ON the VERGE,' have placed him in the foremost rank of literary artists, and the Publishers feel confident that this, his first long novel, will more than confirm the reputation he has already acquired.

FIVE SHILLINGS.

GUY BOOTHBY'S NOVELS.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED BY STANLEY L. WOOD.

THE FASCINATION OF THE KING.
[Ready in April.

After the remarkable success of Mr. Boothby's previous Novels, 'DR. NIKOLA,' 'The BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL,' 'A BID for FORTUNE,' &c., this book will be eagerly welcomed, and will, it is anticipated, secure an even greater success.

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

DOCTOR NIKOLA.

"Deeply interesting.....The charm of the book is its remoteness from the ordinary scenes and ways of fiction; after reading it, one could almost fancy that one had stood within the gates of Lhassa the Blessed."—British Weekly.

SIXTH EDITION NOW READY.

THE BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL.

"An original idea worked out in original fashion. A book for all who like stories told in a bright, healthful style."—Globe.

THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

FORDHAM'S FEUD. By Bertram Mitford,
Author of 'The Curse of Clement Waynflete,' 'The Expiation of Wynne Palliser,' &c. Illustrated by Stanley L. Wood. [Ready shortly.

CAPTAIN SHANNON. By Coulson Kernahan.
Illustrated by F. S. Wilson. [Ready shortly.

After Mr. Kernahan's wonderful success in very different lines of literature, this thrilling romance from his pen will be eagerly anticipated.

The CRIME and the CRIMINAL. By Richard MARSH.

A most novel plot, worked out with the sensational power familiar to all readers of Mr. Marsh's previous works.

LADY TURPIN. By Henry Herman,
Author of 'His Angel,' &c. Profusely illustrated by Stanley L. Wood.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

The LITTLE LARRIKIN. By Ethel TURNER. Profusely illustrated.

"So brightly written and so full of delicate touches of both humour and pathos."
Pall Mall Gazette.

A LITERARY GENT. By Coulson Kernahan,
Author of 'God and the Ant' and 'The Child, the Wise Man, and the Devil,' of which 100,000 have already been sold. With Monochrome Portrait of the Author and special Cover Designed by A. A. Turbayne.

LEATHERETTE, 6d.; CLOTH, 1s.

This little book is thought by many to be the author's masterpiece, and, the Publishers believe, is especially interesting as being the first instance on record of an attempt to produce a 6*d.* book in a style of high artistic excellence.

SEVEN SEAS SERIES.

A New Library in which lowness of price and handiness of form are combined with the highest possible excellence of paper, print, and binding.

The name of the Series is taken from Rudyard Kipling's stirring ballad, and is derived from the fact that the Publishers have obtained contributors from the boundaries of all the Seven Seas that everlastingly wash the Anglo-Saxon dominion.

Amongst the Writers included are representatives of England, Ireland, Scotland, Australia, Canada, United States, and India.

Volumes by GUY BOOTHBY, ETHEL TURNER, ROWLAND GREY (Author of 'The Power of the Dog,' &c.), MAYNE LINDSAY, J. S. FLETCHER, and others will follow shortly.

CLOTH GILT, GILT EDGES, 2s.; LEATHERETTE GILT, 1s. 6d.

Volume I.

RING o' RUSHES. By Shan F. Bullock, Author of 'By Thrasna River.' Illustrated by Harold Copping.

"Thoroughly interesting, and at times fascinating.....There is plenty of Hibernian humour and genuine pathos."—Scotsman.

"Equal to the most vaunted productions of the Kailyard.....Clever, showing a fine command of humour and pathos, yet utterly free from cheap sensationalism."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Volume II.

The CIRCLE of the EARTH. By George KNIGHT, Author of 'Dust in the Balance' and 'Sapphira of the Stage.'

THE

NINETEENTH CENTURY CLASSICS.

Edited by CLEMENT K. SHORTER.

Published at HALF-A-CROWN each Volume.

Crown 8vo. tastefully bound, gilt top, uncut edges, art canvas, full gilt, printed at the Chiswick Press on Whittingham's best antique wove paper, with Photogravure Frontispiece to each Volume, and Introductions by Eminent Writers.

"A series of reprints of literary masterpieces.....These books will educate the eye as well as the intellect, and at a modest price of half-a-crown are within the reach of everybody. Beautiful books they are, and their intrinsic value is increased by bibliographical notes and introductions by experts."
Illustrated London News.

NEW VOLUMES.

BELLS and POMEGRANATES. By Robert BROWNING. Introduction by THOMAS J. WISE, and Photogravure Portrait of the Author. [Now ready.

PAST and PRESENT. By Thomas Carlyle.
Introduction by FREDERIC HARRISON, and Photogravure Portrait of the Author from the Portrait by Whistler. [Now ready.

BELLS and POMEGRANATES. Second Series.
By ROBERT BROWNING. Contains Photogravure Portrait of the Author from the Original Painting by D. G. Rossetti. [Ready shortly.

CRANFORD. By Mrs. Gaskell. Introduction by W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, LL.D. Photogravure Portrait of the Author. [Ready shortly.

VOLUMES ALREADY PUBLISHED.

SARTOR RESARTUS. By Thomas Carlyle.
Introduction by EDWARD DOWDEN, LL.D.

ALARIC at ROME, and other Poems. By Matthew ARNOLD. Introduction by RICHARD GARNETT, C.B. LL.D.

HEROES and HERO WORSHIP. By Thomas CARLYLE. Introduction by EDMUND GOSSE.

PROMETHEUS BOUND, and other Poems. By ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING. Introduction by ALICE MEYNELL.

London: WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED, Salisbury-square, E.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, March 20, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3622. SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTER-ETCHERS.—ANNUAL EXHIBITION of the Society NOW OPEN at the Society's Gallery, No. 5a, Pall Mall East, from 10 to 6.
A. STEWART, Secretary.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.
PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

PALL MALL CLUB.
(Established 1893.)
The Committee propose (prior to entering on New and Larger Premises) to elect FIVE HUNDRED NEW TOWN MEMBERS and ONE THOUSAND NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS at the Original Subscription of 3l. 3s. and 1l. 1s. per annum respectively.
The Subscription for Future Members will then be raised to 5l. 5s. (Town) and 2l. 2s. (Country).
For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY, Pall Mall Club Offices, 60, Haymarket, S.W.

THE INSTITUTE of ACTUARIES.
Founded 1848. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1884.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the ANNUAL EXAMINATION will be held on FRIDAY, April 23, SATURDAY, April 24, MONDAY, April 26, and TUESDAY, April 27, 1897, at the Rooms of the Institute, Staple Inn Hall, Holborn, W.C.; and at the Offices of the Scottish Life Assurance Company, 19 St. Andrew-square, Edinburgh; and at the Offices of the London Assurance Corporation, 69 and 70, Dame-street, Dublin.
Candidates who present themselves for Examination in London will be required to attend as under:—

	FRIDAY.		SATURDAY.
Candidates for:—
PART I.	9.30 to 1.30	..	2.0 to 6.0
PART II.	2.0 to 6.0	..	9.30 to 1.30
PART III. Section A.	2.0 to 6.0	..	9.30 to 1.30
	MONDAY.		TUESDAY.
PART III. Section B. ..	10.0 to 2.0	..	10.0 to 2.0

Candidates must give fourteen days' notice in writing, addressed to the Honorary Secretaries, of their intention to present themselves for Examination, specifying the particular Examination for which they intend to present themselves, and must at the same time remit the Examination Fee of One Guinea. A Candidate entering for both Sections of Part III. must remit Two Guineas.
All Candidates must have paid their current Subscriptions to the Institute prior to March 31.
By order of the Council,
FRANK B. WYATT, A. F. BURRIDGE } Hon. Secs.

MUSICAL CRITIC can supply Weekly or Fortnightly LONDON LETTER to Provincial or Colonial Journal.—Address BATON, care of Willing's, 162, Piccadilly, W.

A PROFESSOR of FRENCH, German, and Geography is seeking a SITUATION as COACH or MASTER in a SCHOOL. Great experience; good testimonials.—Address MONS. PAUL THIENIE, North Croft Villas, Englefield-green, Staines.

TO PUBLISHERS.—LITERARY ADVISER to one of the oldest London Publishing Firms for the last 7½ years NOW AT LIBERTY.—Letters to S. G., care of C. B. Ward, Solicitor, 35, Bedford-row, W.C.

A YOUNG MAN, aged 27, desires EMPLOYMENT in LIBRARY, Public or Private. No previous experience, but good education and knowledge of Books. Willing to work for nothing till efficient in technical details.—Address Y. O., 248, Holdenhurst-road, Bournemouth.

YOUNG LADY (experienced) wishes post as SECRETARY. Has had sound English education. French and German acquired abroad. Shorthand, Type-writing; used to reading aloud. Good references. Address A. L. P., care of Messrs. Reynell & Son, Advertisement Offices, 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

THE MARCHIONESS of DUFFERIN and AVA RECOMMENDS a YOUNG LADY as PRIVATE SECRETARY or as TRAVELLING COMPANION. Fluent French and German.—Address H. V. B. S., care of Miss Janes, 59, Berners-street, Oxford-street, London, W.

TREGARON INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL.
The Local Governing Body are prepared to appoint a HEAD MASTER for the above School.
Salary 150l. per annum, with a Capitation Fee of 1l. for each Pupil. Accommodation has to be provided for 60 Boys and 40 Girls under the Scheme.
The School will be opened shortly in temporary buildings.
Candidates must be Graduates of some University in the United Kingdom.
Applications, stating age, qualifications and experience, with twelve copies of not more than six nor less than three recent testimonials, must be in my hands on or before Friday, April 9, 1897.
M. MORGAN, Clerk to the Governing Body.
Tregaron.

FOYLE COLLEGE, LONDONDERRY.
(Constituted by Foyle College Act, 1896.)
The Governors are about to appoint a HEAD MASTER, who will be required to enter on his duties on the 1st day of August 1897.
The salary offered is 700l. per annum, with a Capitation Fee of 1l. and one fourth of the Result Fees earned at the Annual Examinations of the Board of Intermediate Education in Ireland, in addition to the Profits accruing from Boarders.
A Residence free of rent and taxes, with adequate accommodation for Boarders, is provided.
It is estimated that the Pupils will exceed 150.
The Governors will pay the salaries of the Assistant Masters.
Candidates, who must be Graduates in Arts of some University in the United Kingdom, must send their applications (with copies of their testimonials) not later than the 17th day of April 1897 (upon a form which will be supplied), to the undersigned, from whom further information can be obtained.
C. R. TILLIE,
Secretary to Governors, Ship Quay-street, Londonderry.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY, YOUNG MAN free to go to the Continent for a month as AMANUENSIS to Literary Man. Expert Shorthand and Type-writer.—Apply March 30, from 10 till 11, to GRANT RICHARDS, 9, Henrietta-street.

PUPIL REQUIRED in a FIRM of PUBLISHERS.—Could be received into Partnership at conclusion of term. Premium required and salary given.—Address BOX 1750, Chas. Tayler & Co.'s Advertisement Offices, 154 to 157, Fleet-street, E.C.

MOSS SIDE URBAN COUNCIL, MANCHESTER.—Appointment of MALE LIBRARIAN for FREE LIBRARY. Salary 100l. per annum.—Applications, with copy of testimonials, to H. T. CROFTON, 36, Brazennose-street, Manchester, on or before Saturday, April 3.

SHOREDITCH PUBLIC LIBRARIES.
WANTED, an experienced ASSISTANT. Age over 21; wages 22s. Weekly.—Applications, with copies of testimonials, to be sent to the undersigned not later than Wednesday next, March 31.
W. C. PLANT, Chief Librarian and Clerk.
236, Kingsland-road.

TO AUTHORS.—WANTED, ORIGINAL High-Class STORIES of about 12,000 words. State lowest price.—Address MAGAZINE, 12, St. Bride-street, E.C.

A PARTNER REQUIRED (able to invest) in a FIRM of PUBLISHERS now commencing business.—Address Box 1732, Chas. Tayler & Co.'s Advertisement Offices, 154 to 157, Fleet-street, E.C.

EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY.—The Proprietor of an old-established influential and profitable Weekly Journal, representing the interests of a large and most important class of the community, wishes to meet with a Gentleman who can command 7,500l. cash to purchase the interest of a retiring member. Only Principals or their Solicitors treated with.—Write for interview to LITERARY, Willing's, 162, Piccadilly.

PUBLISHING.—A NEW FIRM, about to commence business, will FURNISH exceptionally moderate ESTIMATES for PUBLISHING MEDICAL and SCIENTIFIC WORKS.—Address, in first instance, GALEN, Box 633, Willing's, 125, Strand.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.
FACULTY OF MEDICINE.
The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on MAY 3. The work is arranged so that a Student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then.
Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned.
A. E. BARKER, F.R.C.S., Dean of the Faculty.
J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—26, Sackville-street, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BERVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—Authors' MSS. 1s. per 1,000 words. Inclusive charges. Large quantities by arrangement. Examination Questions, &c., Reduplicated. Dramatic work a speciality.—EXCELSIOR DARLINGS, 88 Iverson road, West Hampstead, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—Over 5,000 words 1s. per 1,000. Special terms for larger quantities. MSS. carefully Revised. Testimonials, Reports, &c., duplicated. Translations.—E. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,
49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,
WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.
SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10d. per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

AUTHORS.—Literary Reader, University Man, Reviewer on London Press, Advises Authors, Revises, Prepares MSS. for Publication.—Box 1275, Sell's Advertising Offices, Fleet-street, E.C.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.
MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

TO AUTHORS.—Messrs. DIGBY, LONG & CO. (Publishers of 'The Author's Manual,' 3s. 6d. net, Eighth Edition), INVITE AUTHORS to FORWARD their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.—Address 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6d., by HORACE COX, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879.
Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

Catalogues.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO. 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth, Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings

NEW CATALOGUE, No. 87, OF CHOICE BOOKS AND MANUSCRIPTS,

Including a Remarkable Collection of RARE BOOKS on MUSIC, now ready, post free, Sixpence.

29, New Bond-street, London, W.

OLD COLOURED VIEWS of LONDON—Shipping—Caricatures—Costume—Proof Sets of Illustrations to Books—Naval and Military Subjects—Etchings—Portraits, &c. Just published a CATALOGUE, post free, by JAMES REMNANT & SON, 91, Oxford-street, London, W.—Old Books and Engravings bought for Cash.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, SIXpence.—WM. WARE, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS speedily procured. Acknowledged the most expert Book-finder extant. Please state wants to BAKER'S Great Bookshop, Birmingham.—Books Bought, Lent, or Exchanged.

STEVENSON, R. L.—FOR SALE, COPY of PORTRAIT in National Portrait Gallery by W. B. Richmond, R.A.—Apply MESSRS. KEMP, 203, Victoria-street, S.W.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c., ON SALE by FRANK T. SABIN, 118, Shaftesbury avenue, W.

LONDON INSTITUTION.—SHARE FOR SALE. (Subscription paid to June.) Offers wanted.—R., care of May & Williams, 160, Piccadilly.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

RICHMOND HILL.—Man of Letters wishes to LET HIS FLAT, FURNISHED, from MAY 1 to JULY 31. Two Public Rooms, Three Bed-Rooms, Kitchen, Bath. Splendid view, and 2,000 Books.
Apply X. Y. Z., care of Hiscoke & Son, Richmond.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.
All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1s. 6d. each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,
30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

BRANCH OFFICES:—
241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

REPRODUCTIONS IN PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHY
(the Carbon process) of the Chief Treasures of the Great Continental Galleries, including

The PUBLIC and PRIVATE GALLERIES of ROME.
The UFFIZI and PITTI GALLERIES, FLORENCE.
The ROYAL MUSEUMS of BERLIN and DRESDEN.
The MUSEUM of the LOUVRE, PARIS.
The PICTURE GALLERIES of HOLLAND and BELGIUM.
The MUSEO del PRADO, MADRID.
&c. &c. &c.

This almost exhaustive series of Autotypes includes nearly every work of Art of interest to the Artist, to the Historical Student, and to the Lover of Pictures. The selection of Works to be reproduced has, in every instance, been made under the advice of eminent Authorities and of the Official Directors of the respective Collections. By the aid of the most recent improvements in Photographic Science, absolutely faithful and Permanent Copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the Original Paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments, on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A.
SIR EDW. BURNE-JONES.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.
A large series of the Chief Works of these Masters, reproduced in various sizes, at prices ranging from 3s. 6d. to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of the Collection of Autotype Reproductions of the Works of Old and Modern Masters will be sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,
16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.
(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7l. 10s.
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5l. 5s.

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

Sales by Auction.

A Portion of the Library of the late F. W. SMITH, Esq., of Belfast.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS, including the Property of G. B. WORTHINGTON, Esq., comprising Sporting Works—Voyages—Topography, &c.; the Property of a LADY, consisting of Biographical Works—Illustrated Books—Travels—Galleries—Fine Art and Scientific Publications—Ichnographics, &c.; a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late F. W. SMITH, Esq., of Belfast, consisting chiefly of French and Italian Works; the Property of an AUSTRIAN NOBLEMAN, comprising scarce Sporting Works; the Property of J. C. CROWDY, Esq., consisting of the Writings of Dickens, Surtees, Thackeray, and others, Caricatures by Heath, &c.; and other Properties, in which will be found Works by SWINBURNE, R. L. Stevenson, Doyle, Bewick, Geo. Meredith, Audsley, and Bowes, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings by Masters of the English School, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 31, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, including Fancy Subjects by Masters of the English School, some finely printed in Colours, comprising Master Philip Yorke and the Age of Innocence, both after Sir Joshua Reynolds—and Thoughts on Matrimony, after J. R. Smith, all in the finest condition, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of CRAWFORD; also other Properties, comprising Mezzotint Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—the Cries of London, after Wheatley—Lady Kenyon, after Hoppner—Miss Farren, after Sir T. Lawrence—and others; also the Series of Six Original Water-Colour Drawings by R. Caldecott, illustrating 'The Mad Dog,' by Oliver Goldsmith, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A valuable Collection of Engravings formed prior to the year 1850.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 1, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS formed prior to the year 1850, comprising fine Mezzotint and other Engravings after Gainsborough, Hoppner, Sir J. Reynolds, Romney, and other Celebrated Artists, including Portraits of eminent Statesman, Authors, Military Commanders, Nobility and Gentry, Theatrical Celebrities, &c.—Fancy Subjects by F. Bartolozzi—five different Portraits of Lady Hamilton, after Romney and Sir J. Reynolds—a very interesting series of Portraits of the Lord Chancellors and other Dignitaries of the Law, &c., nearly all being in very fine states both as to impression and condition, several with the handwriting of Horace Walpole upon them.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Botanical Library of the late FREEMAN C. S. ROPER, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 2, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely (by order of the Executors), the LIBRARY of the late FREEMAN C. S. ROPER, Esq., F.L.S., F.R.M.S., &c., of Palgrave House, Eastbourne, comprising valuable Works on Botany and the other Branches of Natural History—Cooke's Handbook of British Fungi, Illustrations of British Fungi and British Fresh-Water Algæ—Dibdin's Tour in France and Germany, with extra Illustrations—Greville's Scottish Cryptogamic Flora—Grevillea—Harvey's Phycologia Britannica—Lindley and Hutton's Fossil Flora of Great Britain—Harris's Game and Wild Animals of Southern Africa—The Grete Herbal—The Phytologist—Saccardo Sylloge Fungorum—Sowerby's English Botany, with Four unpublished Plates—Sowerby's Mineral Conchology, complete Set—Stephens's Illustrations of British Entomology—Sussex Archæological Collections—Musée Français et Musée Royale—Sowerby's Coloured Figures of English Fungi, &c.—Manuscript Horæ on Vellum, with finely painted Miniatures—Graduale MS. on vellum, with Initial Letters, Miniatures, and elaborate Borders, Sæc. XV.—and Miscellaneous Works of General Literature, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Engravings, the Property of an Officer in the Army.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 5, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, Framed and in the Portfolio, the Property of an OFFICER in the ARMY, of the late Dr. EDWARD RIGBY, of Norwich, and other Private Collectors, and comprising Fancy Subjects after Masters of the English School, some finely printed in Colours—Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, R. Cosway, G. Romney and others, including Mrs. Musters, by J. Walker, after G. Romney—Mrs. Fitzherbert, after Cosway—'What You Will,' by J. R. Smith—'Thoughts on Matrimony,' by W. Ward, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

MONDAY NEXT.

A Choice Collection of Curiosities just over from New Guinea: Animal Skins and Horns from India and other Parts; Antiquities: China; Bronzes; Prints; Postage Stamps; and a General Collection of Natural History Specimens, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, March 29, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

400 Lots of Photographic Apparatus, Scientific Instruments, and Miscellaneous Property, from Private Sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, April 2, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books, being a Portion of the well-selected Stock of Messrs. HILL & SON, of No. 1, Holywell-street, W.C. (in consequence of the death of the Senior Partner).

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, March 31, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, a PORTION of the well-selected STOCK of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS of Messrs. HILL & SON, of No. 1, Holywell-street, W.C., comprising Caricatures by Alken, Rowlandson, Gillray, &c.—Singer's Playing Cards—Ottley's Engraving and Printing, 3 vols.—Caulfield and Richardson's Portraits—Reiner-Alteneck, Costumes au Moyen Age, 3 vols.—Archæa et Heliconia, 5 vols.—Camden's Britannia, 3 vols.—Burton's Monasticon of Yorkshire—D'Orbigny, Histoire Naturelle, 16 vols.—Cavendish Society, 30 vols.—Brayley and Britton's Surrey, 5 vols.—Bacon's Works, 17 vols.—Dr. Fuller's Works, 8 vols.—Montalembert's Monks of the West, 7 vols.—Dibdin's Tour in France and Germany, &c., 7 vols.—Books of American Travel—Scottish History and Poetry—Plays by the Old Dramatists—Novels by Dickens, Thackeray, &c.—Irving's Works, 27 vols.—Ainsworth's Magazine, 1842-53—Gentleman's Magazine, 1731 to 1850—Blackwood's Magazine, 1817 to 1880—Pickering's Aldine Poets, &c., 63 vols.—and other interesting Books of all Classes.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that the SALE of the COLLECTION of LANDSEER ENGRAVINGS of Sir HUMPHREY DE TRAFFORD, Bart., advertised for MONDAY, March 29, and Following Day, will NOT take place.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely :—

On MONDAY, March 29, COLLECTION of OLD CHINESE and JAPANESE BRONZES and CHINA, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, collected in the East; also JAPANESE OBJECTS of ART, the Property of a LADY.

On TUESDAY, March 30, ENGRAVINGS of the EARLY ENGLISH SCHOOL.

On WEDNESDAY, March 31, and Following Day, the CELLAR of WINES at Easton Park, the Property of the late DUKE of HAMILTON, K.T.

On THURSDAY, April 1, the CONDOVER HALL LIBRARY of the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq.

On FRIDAY, April 2, OLD CHINESE PORCELAIN.

On SATURDAY, April 3, the WORKS of the late HAMILTON MACALLUM, R.W.S. R.I.

On MONDAY, April 5, the COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES of the late MICHAEL ABRAHAMS, Esq.

On THURSDAY, April 8, Valuable CASKET of JEWELS, the Property of Miss ELLEN FARREN, the accomplished and popular Actress.

On FRIDAY, April 9, the COLLECTION of OLD NANKIN PORCELAIN of the late GEORGE JAMES, Esq.

On SATURDAY, April 10, the GEORGE JAMES COLLECTION of High-Class MODERN PICTURES and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P. K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 400 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues will be ready shortly, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY NEXT.

WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, Old and Modern—famous old Mezzotint Engravings—rare Sixteenth Century Engravings—old Print Collections after Great Masters—celebrated Books of Engravings—rare old Library Case Maps—old Framed Engravings after Great Masters—old Crayon Drawings—old Sporting Prints and Drawings—fine Gallery Painting by Stevens—Scene from 'Mazeppa,' by Richter—Scene from 'Macbeth,' by Zuccarelli—English Coronation Tickets and Prints—Ancient Deeds—a few Postage Stamps—Early Newspaper Duty Stamps, very fine—old Theatrical Water-Colour Drawings and Early Play-Bills—very old Grouped Views of Celebrated Places, including Constantinople—Memorial Mugs—old Coloured Engravings—large old Historic Engravings—old Royal Pedigree China—old Print Collections on various subjects—large Views by Rossini—celebrated Bartolozzi Portraits, Landscapes, and Ovals—Full Sets by Hogarth—Portraits—Lord Nelson and Wellington—Print Collections—Royal Naval Exhibition Portraits and Items—Original Letters of Famous Persons—Early Royal Academy Catalogues—old Music—Early Railway Books, Prints, and Maps—Topographical Books—Paintings by T. Richards—Early Italian Paintings—old Spanish MS.—old Prints of and relating to Her Majesty the Queen, her Reign, Foreign Connexions, Family, Court, Ancestry, Relations, and Heraldry—Pedigree—Personal Relics of General Gordon, Napoleon I., and George III.—rare Books with Early Portraits of Queen Victoria after Ross and others of note—old Historic Newspapers.

MR. JOHN PARNELL, Literary and Art Auctioneer and Valuer, will SELL by AUCTION, at his House, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., on THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT, April 1 and 2, at 1 o'clock each day.

On view Tuesday and Wednesday next.

As nearly all the 500 copies of the Catalogue have been posted, very few copies are now in hand.

Musical Instruments and Music.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, March 30, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES—American Organs—a very fine Organ Case—Double-action Harps—Violins, Violas, Violoncellos, and Double Basses, including the Collections of the late WILLIAM HENRY EDWARDS, Esq., and THOMAS BAKER, Esq. (sold by order of the Executors)—a large quantity of Banjos, Mandolines, and Guitars—Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments, also a Library of Music, collected during the past twenty-five years by an Amateur, consisting principally of Duets, Trios, Quartets, and Quintets for Strings and Pianoforte.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Engravings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 2, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, valuable ENGRAVINGS, many being printed in Colours, including a choice Collection of Portraits (by order of a connexion of the Cosway Family), together with Mezzotint Portraits, Miniatures, and a few Water-Colour Drawings.

On view two days prior. Catalogues on application.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, April 5, and Following Day, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, Rare BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

Catalogues on application.

Collection of Ex-Libris and Armorial China.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 6, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, comprising Examples in the Early English, Jacobean, Chippendale, and Bartolozzi Styles, many of which are dated.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 13, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the SECOND PORTION of MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY and ANTIQUE FURNITURE formed by the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A. (by order of the Executors).

Catalogues in preparation.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., during APRIL, PORTIONS of the LIBRARY formed by the late Sir TRAVERS TWISS, Kt., the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A., &c., comprising English and Foreign Books in all Branches of Literature.

Catalogues in preparation.

PARIS.—Sale on account of decease.—The COLLECTION of M. HARO, Senior, comprising Old and Modern Paintings—Water Colours, Drawings, and Pastels by Greuze, Hubert-Robert, Memling, Rembrandt, &c., and by Carolus Duran, Courbet, Delacroix, Domingo, Ingres, Henri Regnault, Robert Fleury, &c., Furniture, and Objects of Art, at the HOTEL DROUOT, Room No 6, on FRIDAY, April 2, and SATURDAY, April 3, 1897, at 2 P.M.

On view: Private, Wednesday, March 31; Public, Thursday, April 1, from 1 30 P.M. to 5 30 P.M.

Auctioneer: Maître G. DUCHESNE, 6, Rue de Hanôvre. Experts: Paintings, M. Henri Haro, 14, Rue Visconti and 20, Rue Bonaparte; Objects of Art, M. Arthur Bloche, 28, Rue de Chateaudun, Paris.

PRIZE TALES.

THREE PRIZES of 50*l.*, 25*l.*, and 20*l.* are OFFERED FOR COMPETITION.—Full particulars, length of Tales, &c., will be given in THE NEWS for March 26 and April 2, a copy of which will be sent on application to THE PUBLISHER, Home Words Office, 7, Paternoster-square, E.C.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.
No. 978. APRIL, 1897. 2*s* 6*d*.

RECENT BOOKS—FRENCH and ENGLISH.

A CITY of MANY WATERS. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, M.P.

The PRISONS of SIBERIA. I. ON the MARCH. By J. Y. Simpson.

DARIEL: a Romance of Surrey. By R. D. Blackmore. Chaps. 25-30.

HOW the FAMINE CAME to BURMA. By H. Fielding.

CONCERNING BILLIARDS. By Major W. Broadfoot.

The BLUE JAR. By H. Garton Sargent.

EVOLUTION and the AMATEUR NATURALIST. By Louis Robinson, M.D.

The NAVY ESTIMATES.

RECOLLECTIONS of an IRISH HOME.

ANOTHER YEAR'S PROGRESS in EGYPT—LORD CROMER'S REPORT.

William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.
Edited by W. L. COURTNEY.
APRIL.

OLGA NOVIKOFF (O. K.).—Russia and the Rediscovery of Europe.

LAURIE MAGNUS.—A German Poet of Revolt.

H. D. TRAILL.—Our Learned Philhellenes.

Major A. GRIFFITHS.—After Khartoum.

VIRGINIA M. CRAWFORD.—Feminism in France.

Rev. Canon MALCOLM MacCOLL.—Crete, an Object Lesson.

WILLIAM E. BEAR.—Market Wrecking.

EDWARD SALMON.—1497-1897: East and West.

NICHOLAS SYNNOTT.—Dangers to British Sea-Power under the Present Rules of Naval Warfare.

Judge O'CONNOR MORRIS.—The Financial Relations between Great Britain and Ireland.

Rev. R. F. HORTON, D.D.—The Free Church in England.

Sir GEORGE BADEN-POWELL, K.C.M.G. LL.D. M.P.—"Candia Rediviva."

Rev. W. GRESWELL.—Federalism in South Africa.

C. D. BAYNES, Editor of the Standard and Diggers' News.—Cecil Rhodes.

CHAPMAN'S MAGAZINE,
Edited by OSWALD CRAWFURD,
APRIL,
PRICE SIXPENCE, CONTAINS

VIOLET HUNT'S New Novel, entitled UNKIST, UNKIND! (Serial.)
And EIGHT COMPLETE STORIES by ROGER POCOCK, Mrs ERNEST LEVERSON, WINIFRED GRAHAM, BULKELEY CRESWELL, FRED. E. WYNNE, ELLA MERIVALE, BEATRICE HERON-MAXWELL, W. L. ALDEN.

Chapman & Hall, Limited, London.

"The representative of advanced science."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SCIENCE PROGRESS: a Quarterly Review of Current Scientific Investigation. Edited by J. BRETLAND FARMER, M.A., with the Co-operation of a powerful Editorial Committee.

Contents of APRIL Number.

On the Physiology of Reproduction in Plants. By H. Marshall Ward, D.Sc. F.R.S., Professor of Botany in the University of Cambridge.
Condensation and Critical Phenomena. II. By J. P. Kuenen, Ph.D., Professor of Physics in University College, Dundee.
A Remarkable Anticipation of Modern Views on Evolution. By E. B. Poulton, M.A. F.R.S., Hope Professor of Zoology in the University of Oxford.
The Diseases of the Sugar Cane. By C. A. Barber, M.A., late Superintendent of Agriculture in the Leward Isles.
Wind-Scorpions—A Brief Account of the Galeodidæ. By H. M. Bernard, M.A.
The Cell-Membrane. By J. Reynolds Green, Sc.D. F.R.S., Professor of Botany to the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain.
The Coagulation of the Blood. III. By W. D. Halliburton, M.D. F.R.S., Professor of Physiology in King's College, London.
On the Relation between the Form and the Metabolism of the Cell. By Max Verworn, Ph.D., Professor of Physiology in the University of Jena.
Appendix.—Reviews of Books.

Price 3*s*., or 3*s*. 5*d*. post free. Subscription, 10*s*. 6*d*. per annum post free. Vols. I., II., III., IV., and V. in handsome cloth binding, gilt lettered, each containing over 500 pp. price 15*s*. each.
London: The Scientific Press, Limited, 28 and 29, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C.

THE "UGLIFICATION" of LONDON; also Account of the Building Trades Exhibition. View in Albi Cathedral. 'Eighteenth Century Work.' View of Versailles in Eighteenth Century. Dimensions of English and French Cathedrals, &c.

See the BUILDER of March 27. 4*d*., by post 4½*d*.
Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

NOW READY.

Price 3s. 6d. net.

WHO'S WHO, 1897.

FORTY-NINTH YEAR OF ISSUE

(Entirely Re-modelled).

EDITED BY

DOUGLAS SLADEN.

Contains nearly 6,000 Biographies —mostly Autobiographies— of the Leading Men and Women of the Day, besides being a Complete Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, &c.

CONTENTS IN BRIEF.

PART I. Tables of Peers, Baronets, Knights, Members of Parliament, and many other Tables of a similarly useful nature.

PART II. Nearly 6,000 Biographies—mostly Autobiographies—of the Eminent Men and Women of the Day.

PART III. Lords, Ladies, and Honourables.

COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME.

In crown 8vo. 832 pp. bound in cloth gilt, with gilt edges and rounded corners.

Price 3s. 6d. net.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S NEW ATLASES.

PHILIPS' NEW HANDY GENERAL ATLAS OF THE WORLD.

Containing 120 pages of Coloured Maps and Plans, dealing exhaustively with Physical, Political, and Commercial Geography, with an Index of over 100,000 Names.

EDITED BY

GEORGE PHILIP, Jun., F.R.G.S.

Size, 15 by 12 inches. Weight, 9 lb.

Handsomely bound in half-morocco, gilt top, £2.

Full bound morocco, gilt edges, £2 12s. 6d.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

1. It is entirely of English origin and manufacture, and has been planned with special reference to the requirements of the British public. For this reason it will be found clearer, more up-to-date, and easier of reference than the Foreign Atlases which are being so extensively advertised in this country.

2. Special care has been taken to show all the British Colonies and Dependencies in great detail.

3. Physical and Commercial Geography are adequately treated in a series of Maps of the World and of the Continents.

Detailed Prospectus on application.

The Daily Mail says:—"In these days, when geographical and political questions are largely intermixed, to the general disturbance of the public mind, a new atlas which, in addition to being complete in every other respect, defines with scrupulous accuracy the most recent frontier limitations, is sure to be liberally welcomed. Such an atlas makes its appearance this week from the house of G. Philip & Son, under the title 'The Handy General Atlas of the World' (40*s.*). For ordinary purposes of study and reference this is the most convenient and complete work of its kind that I know. The index, which comprehends over 100,000 geographical names, quickly guides one to the discovery of the desired place on its particular map, and the maps themselves are in all respects admirable, carefully drawn, and beautifully printed in colours. The physical and climatological maps and the commercial charts are most useful."

The MERCHANT SHIPPERS' and OCEAN TRAVELLERS' ATLAS. A Series of 15 large Coloured Plates of the various Oceans and Seas, showing clearly Submarine Cables, Steamship and Sailing Ship Routes, distances between Ports, Canals, Lighthouses, Coaling Stations, and much additional information which will be found exceptionally useful to Merchants, Ship Brokers, Insurance Offices, and all those who are interested in Ocean Travels. Large folio, strongly bound in cloth, 1*l.* 10*s.*

Fairplay says:—"No atlas extant will serve the purposes of shipowners, merchants, and underwriters so well as this new one."

PHILIPS' READY REFERENCE ATLAS of the WORLD. With a Statistical Survey of each Country. Containing 72 Coloured Maps, 100 Pages of Letterpress, and an Index of over 20,000 Names. Edited by E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S., Hon. Fellow of the Geographical Societies of Edinburgh, Amsterdam, Lisbon, and Frankfurt-on-Main. Small 4to. cloth gilt, gilt edges, 10*s.* 6*d.*

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The first cartographical work published for the New Year. The maps are clearly drawn and printed, and all the boundaries affected by recent treaties or political developments are carefully marked. This atlas will be found most useful for immediate reference, and the statistical survey is a great acquisition."

PHILIPS' HANDY VOLUME ATLAS of the WORLD. An entirely New and Enlarged Edition, containing 72 entirely New Maps, 75 Pages of Commercial and Statistical Notes, and an Index of 20,000 Names. Edited by E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S. Size when closed, 6½ by 4 inches. Cloth, rounded corners, 5*s.*; French morocco, gilt edges, in cardboard box, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The National Observer says:—"To bring together within the compass of a volume hardly larger than an ordinary Church Service some seventy-two maps of the world, together with statistical and geographical information accompanying each map, the whole guaranteed by the high authority of so expert a geographer as Mr. E. G. Ravenstein, and procurable at a moderate price, is an undertaking which could hardly fail to commend itself to the English public."

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

L. REEVE & CO.'S NEW WORKS.

Complete in 1 vol. royal 4to. cloth, 6*l.* 6*s.* net; half-morocco, 7*l.*

FOREIGN FINCHES IN CAPTIVITY. By ARTHUR G. BUTLER, Ph.D. F.L.S. F.Z.S. F.E.S. With 60 Plates beautifully Coloured by hand.

The HYMENOPTERA ACULEATA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete with 3 Plates 16*s.*; Large Edition, with 49 Coloured Plates, 68*s.* net.

The HEMIPTERA HETEROPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete. With a Structural Plate, 14*s.*; Large Edition, with 31 Coloured Plates, 48*s.* net.

The HEMIPTERA HOMOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By JAMES EDWARDS. With 2 Plates, 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 28 Coloured Plates, 43*s.* net.

Part XXXVIII. with 4 Coloured Plates, 5*s.*

The LEPIDOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By CHARLES G. BARRETT, F.E.S. Vol. I. (RHOPALOCERA), 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 40 Coloured Plates, 53*s.* Vol. II. 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 46 Coloured Plates, 63*s.* Vol. III. 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 50 Coloured Plates, 63*s.*

The BUTTERFLIES of EUROPE. Described and Figured by H. C. LANG, M.D. F.L.S. With 82 Coloured Plates, containing upwards of 900 Figures. 2 vols. 3*l.* 18*s.*

Part XXVII. with 8 Coloured Plates, 15*s.*

LEPIDOPTERA INDICA. By F. MOORE, F.Z.S. F.E.S. Vol. I., with 94 Coloured Plates. Vol. II., with 96 Coloured Plates, each 9*l.* 5*s.* cloth; 9*l.* 15*s.* half-morocco.

The LARVÆ of the BRITISH LEPI- DOPTERA, and their FOOD PLANTS. By OWEN S. WILSON. With Life-sized Figures drawn and coloured from Nature by Eleanora Wilson. 40 Coloured Plates, 63*s.* net.

The COLEOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Complete in 5 vols. with 2 Structural Plates, 4*l.* Large Edition, with 180 Coloured Plates, 14*l.*

CATALOGUE of BRITISH COLE- OPTERA. By D. SHARP, M.A. F.R.S., and Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Price 1*s.* 6*d.*; or printed on one side only, for labels, 2*s.* 6*d.*

The STRUCTURE and LIFE- HISTORY of the COCKROACH. An Introduction to the Study of Insects. By Profs. L. C. MIALL, F.R.S., and ALFRED DENNY. 125 Woodcuts, 7*s.* 6*d.*

HANDBOOK of the BRITISH FLORA. By G. BENTHAM, F.R.S. Sixth Edition. Revised by Sir J. D. HOOKER, C.E. K.C.S.I. F.R.S. 10*s.* 6*d.*

ILLUSTRATIONS of the BRITISH FLORA. Drawn by W. H. Fitch, F.L.S., and W. G. Smith, F.L.S. 1,315 Wood Engravings. Fourth Edition. 10*s.* 6*d.*

HANDBOOK of BRITISH MOSSES. By the Rev. M. J. BERKELEY, M.A. F.L.S. Second Edition. 24 Coloured Plates. 21*s.*

A MANUAL of BRITISH ARCHÆO- LOGY. By CHARLES BOUTELL, M.A. Second Edition. 20 Coloured Plates, 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH INSECTS. By E. F. Staveley. 16 Coloured Plates. 14*s.*

BRITISH BEETLES. By E. C. Rye. New Edition, Revised and in part Rewritten by the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH BUTTERFLIES and MOTHS. By H. T. STAINTON. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH BEES. By W. E. Shuckard. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH SPIDERS. By E. F. Staveley. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH ZOOPHYTES. By A. S. PENNINGTON, F.L.S. 24 Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH GRASSES. By M. Plues. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH FERNS. By M. Plues. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH SEAWEEDS. By S. O. Gray. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

SYNOPSIS of BRITISH MOSSES. By C. P. HOBKIRK, F.L.S. Revised Edition. 7*s.* 6*d.*

No. 628. APRIL. 3*s.* 6*d.*

The BOTANICAL MAGAZINE: Figures and Descriptions of New and Rare Plants. By Sir J. D. HOOKER, F.R.S., &c. Third Series, Vols. I. to LII., each 42*s.* Published Monthly, with 6 Plates, 3*s.* 6*d.* Coloured. Annual Subscription, 42*s.*

L. REEVE & CO.,
Publishers to the Home, Colonial, and Indian Governments,
6, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NEW STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

A DEVOTEE.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY,
Author of
'Diana Tempest,' 'The Danvers Jewels,' &c.
Cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A DEVOTEE.

Manchester Guardian—"Another of Miss Cholmondeley's clever social sketches from the world about her."

DR. DONALDSON SMITH'S IMPORTANT NEW WORK.

THROUGH UNKNOWN AFRICAN COUNTRIES.

The First Expedition from Somaliland to Lake Rudolf and Lamu. A Narrative of Scientific Exploration and Sporting Adventure. By A. DONALDSON SMITH, M.D. F.R.G.S. With nearly 30 Full-Page Plates and numerous Smaller Illustrations by A. D. McCormick, Charles Whymper, &c., and detailed Maps of the Countries Traversed. Super-royal 8vo. One Guinea net.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Will be of the greatest interest to sportsman, traveller, and man of science."

Standard.—"Tells in clear, succinct, and well-chosen language the tale of a very adventurous journey."

Globe.—"A book which really has a reason for existence. A solid and permanent contribution to the literature of African exploration."

Saturday Review.—"No one who reads this modest narrative of one of the most plucky pieces of work in the recent history of African exploration will grudge Dr. Donaldson Smith his success. The chapters devoted to the visit to Sheikh Husein and to the headquarters of the Abyssinian general Wal da Gubbra are full of interest, and would in themselves make the fortune of most travellers."

SOLDIERING and SURVEYING in BRITISH EAST AFRICA, 1891-1894. An Account of the Survey for the Uganda Railway, and the various Campaigns in the British Protectorate during the last few years. By Major J. R. MACDONALD, R.E. Illustrated from Sketches and Photographs by the Author and numerous Plans and a Map. Demy 8vo. 16*s.*

Pall Mall Gazette.—"No country in the world has had greater need of an impartial historian than Uganda, and, strange to say, though the bitter feelings engendered by the struggles of the past ten years have not had time to cool, one has been found among the actors in these stormy scenes, Major Macdonald.....No one who reads this exciting book of adventure can regret that we are spending 3,000,000*l.* on the railway. Major Macdonald writes with considerable literary and historical skill, and his sketches and maps are excellent."

ON VELDT and FARM: in Cape Colony, Bechuanaland, Natal, and the Transvaal. By FRANCES McNAB. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Saturday Review.—"Well worth the study of those interested in the agricultural and general development of South Africa."

Globe.—"A delightful book, and we can confidently recommend it as far more worth a reading than many a work of infinitely greater pretensions."

FISH TAILS—and SOME TRUE ONES. By BRADNOCK HALL. With Etched Frontispiece by the Author, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by T. Hope McLachlan. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The BEGGARS of PARIS (PARIS QUI MENDIE). Translated from the French of M. LOUIS PAULIAN by LADY HERSCHELL. Paper boards, 1*s.*

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Lady Herschell's translation is worthy of M. Paulian's interesting matter."

HABIT and INSTINCT: a Study in Heredity. By Prof. C. LLOYD MORGAN, Author of 'Animal Life and Intelligence.' Based on the Author's 'Lowell Lectures' in 1895-96. Demy 8vo. 16*s.*

Times.—"A valuable book on a fascinating subject."

SIR ALFRED MILNER'S STANDARD WORK.

ENGLAND in EGYPT. By Sir ALFRED MILNER, K.C.B., Governor of Cape Colony, and High Commissioner to South Africa. Popular Edition. Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

SIX COLOURED PLATES. EVERY TUESDAY, ONE SHILLING.

In medium 8vo. with about 700 pages of Descriptive Letterpress, Index Matter, &c., and 316 Full-Page Plates, beautifully printed in Colours.

TO BE COMPLETED IN FIFTY-TWO WEEKLY NUMBERS.

FAVOURITE FLOWERS OF GARDEN AND GREENHOUSE.

By EDWARD STEP, F.L.S.

The Cultural Directions Edited by WILLIAM WATSON, F.R.H.S., Assistant Curator, Royal Gardens, Kew.

The names of the editors will be sufficient guarantee that the work will be scientifically accurate, although distinctly popular in treatment. Examples of all the great leading groups of flowers will be included, and a brief list given of the principal varieties reproduced from these, with their distinct CHARACTERISTICS, COLOURATION, HARDINESS, SIZE of BLOOM, FLOWERING TIME, HABITS, &c. With the principal genera the life history is given, as well as terse, clear INSTRUCTIONS for PROPAGATION and SUCCESSFUL MANAGEMENT.

The 316 COLOURED PLATES represent one or more types of these leading groups, and every care has been taken to present accurate pictures, even in apparently trifling details, of the flowers illustrated; in many instances the SEED, SEEDLING, ROOT, LEAF, BLOSSOM, and SECTION of FLOWER, showing SEED DEPOSITORY, &c., are given. These plates have been designed and coloured, in all cases, from the living plants.

Cases for binding 13 Numbers may be had, price 1*s.* 6*d.* cloth gilt, or 3*s.* in half-morocco.

THE WORK WILL BE COMPLETED IN FOUR VOLUMES.

VOLUMES I. AND II. ARE NOW READY, PRICE 15s. EACH, NET.

MARSHALL MATHER'S WORKS.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION.
With Steel Portrait and Bibliography.
In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3*s.* 6*d.*

JOHN RUSKIN:
His Life and Teaching.
By MARSHALL MATHER.

"It would be difficult to obtain a more lucid and comprehensive idea of John Ruskin and his life work in a small compass than can be assured by a careful study of that admirable little monograph, 'John Ruskin: his Life and Teaching.' By J. Marshall Mather. In its revised and enlarged form the book is a most excellent aid to the understanding of the very nature of the great art critic and philosopher, as well as of the brilliant productions of his pen."—Spectator.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2*s.* 6*d.*

POPULAR STUDIES OF NINETEENTH CENTURY POETS.
By MARSHALL MATHER.

"For popular reading we know of no volume better calculated to give a fair idea of the nineteenth century poets than the one before us."
Eastern Daily Press.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, gilt top, 6*s.*

THE SIGN OF THE WOODEN SHOON.
By MARSHALL MATHER.

"The pathos is delicate and true, the character sketching excellent and strong. Altogether 'The Sign of the Wooden Shoon' is decidedly superior in artistic quality to its predecessor, 'Lancashire Idylls.'"—Athenæum.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, gilt top, 6*s.*

LANCASHIRE IDYLLS.
By MARSHALL MATHER,
Author of 'Popular Studies of the Nineteenth Century Poets,' 'John Ruskin,' &c.

"It is a clean and wholesome book. It makes us ashamed of our 'Second Mrs. Tanquerays,' our 'Trilbys,' our 'Woman who Did' this and that other thing. This breath from the hills must act as a healthy corrective to all who avail themselves of its pages."—Liverpool Courier.

NEW COPYRIGHT NOVELS.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, price 3*s.* 6*d.* each.

THE LAWYER'S SECRET.
By JOHN K. LEYS.

"The story, in respect to its literary ability, its skill in handling a difficult plot, as well as its portrayal of character and the knowledge of life it reveals, is one of much more than average merit."
Scotsman.

UNDER FIRE.
By Capt. CHARLES KING.

"A finely conceived and well-written story."—Liverpool Post.

"Capt. Charles King has all the facility of James Grant in writing vivaciously a military novel, and, what is still higher praise, he has a considerable share of Marryat's power of stirring the deeper emotions."
Bristol Mercury.

A CRUEL DILEMMA.
By MARY H. TENNYSON.

"Miss Tennyson introduces us to some very bad people indeed; but one of the worst of them is so delightful, and so thorough in his wickedness, that we almost forgive it him. The book is entertaining, and the characters, notably the Baronet and the picture-dealer—a refreshing old ruffian—are cleverly portrayed."—Daily Chronicle.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, bevelled boards, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE BLINDNESS OF MADGE TYNDALL.
By SILAS K. HOCKING.

The fascinating story Mr. Hocking has woven round the history of Madge Tyndall acquires additional elements of attractiveness from the circumstance that the sympathetic pencil of Mr. Lancelot Speed has been requisitioned to aid the author in depicting the scenes that compose this graphic narrative.

In crown 8vo. cloth gilt, bevelled boards, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

THE SQUIRE OF LONSDALE.
By Miss EDITH KENYON.

Illustrated from Original Drawings by A. J. Symington.

The story deals with the incidents of English village life, and the peculiarities of the Squire, Rector, Doctor, and their dependents afford materials out of which the author has woven the fabric of a most interesting tale.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO. Chandos House, Bedford-street, Strand, London.

DOWNEY & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

LIMITED EDITION OF THE NOVELS OF CHARLES LEVER.

Edited by his DAUGHTER.

With all the Original Illustrations on Steel and Wood by PHIZ, CRUIKSHANK, LUKE FILDES, and other Artists.

THE FIRST COMPLETE UNIFORM ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

CHARLES LEVER'S NOVELS.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE SERIES,

THE CONFESSIONS OF HARRY LORREQUER,

With 22 Etchings by PHIZ, is now ready.

Full Prospectuses on application.

MISS EMILY SOLDENE'S RECOLLECTIONS.

MY THEATRICAL AND MUSICAL RECOLLECTIONS.

Demy 8vo. with 7 Portraits, 10*s.* 6*d.*

"I hear everybody is buying the book."
Illustrated London News.

"A veritable mine of anecdote."—Newcastle Leader.

"One of the most diverting and readable autobiographies of recent years."—World.

MR. JOHN O'LEARY'S RECOLLECTIONS.

FENIANS AND FENIANISM.

By JOHN O'LEARY.

2 vols. with Portraits, 21*s.*

"I do not remember to have read a more honest book."
Sketch.

"Not only of exceptional interest, but also of historical value."—New York Herald.

NEW NOVELS.

DID HE DESERVE IT? By Mrs. RIDDELL. 6*s.* [Next week.

A ROGUE'S CONSCIENCE. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY. 3*s.* 6*d.* [In April.

A JUSTIFIED SINNER. By Fitz-GERALD MOLLOY. 6*s.*

"Thoroughly interesting."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Here, in a story of intense interest, is traced the life of a man who makes a mistake in essaying matrimony.....The story holds the reader's closest attention."—Lloyd's.

"Mr. Molloy has treated his theme with his usual ability."
Glasgow Herald.

DINAH FLEET. By John Hill and G. F. BACON. 6*s.*

"We must congratulate the collaborators on 'Dinah Fleet.' .....There are nearly a dozen characters, and not one of them ever says a dull or stupid thing. Their dialogue is all as smart as smart can be.....The book is very lively reading."
Daily Chronicle.

The DUNTHORPES of WESTLEIGH. By CHRISTIAN LYS. 6*s.*

"Even a jaded reviewer found 'The Dunthorpes' kept him awake until long after midnight."—New Saturday.

A BIT of a FOOL. BySir Robert PEEL. 6*s.*

"A delightful volume.....'A Bit of a Fool,' indeed, though it wears the form of a novel, may safely be said, from the moralist's point of view, to have no equal in literature more recent than 'The Confessions of St. Augustine.'"
British Review.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS.

CONSTANCE. By F. C. Philips. 1*s.* 6*d.* fancy wrapper; 2*s.* cloth.

The ADVENTURES of a SHIP'S DOCTOR. By MORLEY ROBERTS. 2*s.*

A HOUSE of TEARS. Twenty-first Thousand. 2*s.*

London: DOWNEY & CO., LIMITED, 12, York-street, Covent-garden.

IN TWENTY MONTHLY PARTS. 2*s.* PER PART.

NOW READY.

PART II. OF THE

ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF SPORT.

EDITED BY

The EARL of SUFFOLK and BERKSHIRE, HEDLEY PEEK, and F. G. AFLALO.

The Photogravure Illustrations to Part II. are "Bear Shooting," by E. Caldwell, and "Black Game," by Archibald Thorburn.

"It is hardly possible to speak too cordially of the value of the first part, or to prophesy too confidently of the success of the work when it is completed. The articles are arranged in alphabetical order. They are written with crispness, care, and caution.....The illustrations are profuse and to the point, as is demonstrated by such articles as 'Antelope' and 'Archery.' Two photogravures are to accompany each part. 'The Mill Pool,' which is one of the two given with the first, is in truth a beautiful work of art. The paper of this new work is excellent, and different varieties of type are used to indicate the difference between matters of major and minor importance."—Spectator.

"The new Encyclopædia has made a good start, and if the quality of the work keeps up should have considerable success."—Times.

"The book is one that will be welcomed by all sorts and conditions of sportsmen."—Sportsman.

"There can be no doubt whatever that 'The Encyclopædia of Sport' will receive a very general welcome."
Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News.

"We hope the work will have the success it deserves."
Fishing Gazette.

"It is a most creditable production."—World.

"Extremely promising. The illustrations are excellent."
Athenæum.

"When complete the Encyclopædia promises to be an interesting, handsome, and exceedingly valuable contribution to the literature of sport, which no sportsman worthy of the name will be without."—Westminster Gazette.

A. J. DAWSON.

IN the BIGHT of BENIN. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Stories of Men and Women—black, white, and brown—on the West Coast of Africa.

"Will have a special interest at the present time.....Bright and full of movement and life and human interest. Mr. Dawson has succeeded in giving us something at once new and worth reading."—Manchester Guardian.

"Mr. Dawson has a keen eye for dramatic situations."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"Mr. Dawson, during his twelve months' sojourn on the West African Coast, had ample opportunity of studying the country, and of making himself acquainted with the extraordinary customs and religious superstitions of the Ju-Ju men."—Daily Chronicle.

"Adventures vividly set forth.....vigorously presented..... brightly written and cleverly characterized. His traders, missionaries, and natives are well realized types."
British Review and National Observer.

STANDISH O'GRADY.

The FLIGHT of the EAGLE. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The Adventures of Red Hugh, a famous Irish Chief, in the Days of Queen Elizabeth.

"He has presented an episode of Irish history in a most attractive form, and his book in all respects is well worth reading."—Scotsman.

SIDNEY PICKERING.

MARGOT: a Novel. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"An interesting, and in some parts powerfully written tale. The author seems able to draw his figures in a calm, dispassionate spirit.....He conveys the impression that he takes a wide but fine and discriminating view of the human comedy."—Glasgow Herald.

A BOOK FOR ANGLERS.

The BOOK of the DRY FLY. By G. A. B. DEWAR. With a Preface by the MARQUIS OF GRANBY. Demy 8vo. 15*s.* net. With a Photogravure Frontispiece and Plates (Plain and Hand-coloured) of Flies.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, LIMITED, 16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*; Roxburghe, Hand-Made Paper, price 10*s.* 6*d.* net; Large Paper, price 1*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* net.

NOW READY.

THE NINTH VOLUME OF THE

TOPOGRAPHICAL SECTION OF THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE LIBRARY,

Edited by G. LAURENCE GOMME, F.S.A.,

CONTAINING:

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, OXFORDSHIRE, RUTLAND.

THE PREVIOUS VOLUMES CONTAIN:

1. Bedfordshire, Berkshire, and Buckinghamshire.
2. Cambridgeshire, Cheshire, Cornwall, and Cumberland.
3. Derbyshire, Devonshire, and Dorsetshire.
4. Durham, Essex, and Gloucestershire.
5. Hampshire, Herefordshire, Hertfordshire, and Huntingdonshire.
6. Kent and Lancashire.
7. Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Middlesex, and Monmouthshire.
8. Norfolk, Northamptonshire, and Northumberland.

The Topographical Section of The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE LIBRARY contains a mass of valuable information concerning the Counties of England, which is of the greatest interest to Residents, Topographers, Antiquaries, and others.

In large 8vo. handsomely printed and bound in cloth, gilt top, with rough edges, price 15*s.*; Large-Paper Copies, price 2*l.* 2*s.* net.

A SUMPTUOUS ILLUSTRATED EDITION OF

The ENEMIES of BOOKS. By WILLIAM BLADES, Author of 'The Life and Typography of William Caxton,' &c. With a Preface by Dr. RICHARD GARNETT, C.B., of the British Museum.

"The little work has always been a favourite with booklovers. In its new form, therefore, it should become more popular than ever."—Manchester Guardian.

"Truly a pleasant book. There is a leisurely, old-world flavour about it which has an indescribable charm in these bustling times."—World.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 9*s.*

The STORY of the HOUSE of LANCASTER. By HENRY HARTWRIGHT.

"The events which took place in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries are made particularly attractive by Mr. Henry Hartwright's method of relating them."
Public Opinion.

In crown 4to. cloth, gilt edges, price 6*s.*

HUGO of AVENDON. A Drama in Four Acts. By E. L. M.

In paper cover, price 6*d.*

WOMAN. By MARION GRAHAM.

"An attractive brochure, in which the author seeks to incite women to higher ideals of life, to greater sweetness and strength of character, and to the realization of their powers of influence as wife, mother, sister, friend, or teacher."—Dundee Advertiser.

NEW STORY FOR CHILDREN.

In small fcap. 8vo. parchment cover, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

SPICK and SPAN. A Story for Children. By AUNT CHERRY.

"The little tale is prettily and simply told, and the tone of the book is altogether admirable."—Dundee Advertiser.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C

PUBLISHED BY MR. T. FISHER UNWIN.

OLIVE SCHREINER'S NEW NOVEL.

TROOPER PETER HALKET OF MASHONALAND.

With Photogravure Frontispiece, cloth, 6*s*.

PRESS OPINIONS.

The ATHENÆUM.

"Mrs. Schreiner has achieved a remarkable literary success. 'Trooper Peter Halket' does not compete with 'The Story of an African Farm,' either as a narrative or as a study of characters, but it is, in our opinion, superior in workmanship.....It is a well-sustained and eloquent parable, and several of the minor parables contained in it are told with rare grace of style and vigour of expression.....It is a book as conspicuous for its dramatic force and artistic construction as for the impressive moral it is intended to convey."

The SPEAKER.

"There can be no question as to the remarkable literary merits of 'Trooper Peter Halket.' Not even in 'A South African Farm' is the exquisite skill and delicacy of Olive Schreiner's art displayed more conspicuously than in these pages. There are some passages in the book which one reads with a sudden thrill of wonder and surprise, such as thrills the mind at first sight of some scene of natural beauty the existence of which had been undreamed of.....We have not referred to the most remarkable feature of this very remarkable book—the introduction into it of our Lord. With such wonderful skill and delicacy does Olive Schreiner perform her task, that before it is finished she reconciles her readers to her audacity, and leaves them completely under the spell of her enchantment."

The ACADEMY.

"This book, in its directness, its actuality, its intention of personal invective, is strikingly different from anything else Olive Schreiner has done.....It is an extraordinarily powerful bit of writing.....The conclusion is vigorously and pointedly told..... The book breathes a spirit of humanity, of sincerity, of unfaltering righteousness, which is rare enough in contemporary literature."

The PALL MALL GAZETTE.

"There is no need to say that it is well and impressively written; that the story of Peter's life is sketched for us by himself only as a true artist could do it. The book is full of passionate eloquence and entreaty."

The DAILY NEWS.

"The story is one that is certain to be widely read, and it is well that it should be so, especially at this moment; it grips the heart and haunts the imagination. To have written such a book is to render a supreme service, for it is as well to know what the rough work means of subjugating inferior races."

The DAILY CHRONICLE.

"We advise our readers to purchase and read Olive Schreiner's new book, 'Trooper Peter Halket of Mashonaland.' Miss Schreiner is one of the few magicians of modern English literature, and she has used the great moral as well as the great literary force of her style to great effect."

CLERICAL OPINIONS.

Rev. Prof. MARCUS DODS.

"To my mind the book is a great and noble one, in sincerity and passion striking a new note in literature. Its genius will open a way for it into the proper quarters, and wherever it is read it must do good."

Rev. W. J. DAWSON.

"It is Olive Schreiner's—and that is to say that it is a work of genius. No other writer of our time possesses the same fervour and intensity of religious imagination..... I can conceive that some readers will regard this book as repulsive and even blaspbemous. For me it is redeemed by its manifest sincerity, its passionate conviction, its prophetic quality."

Rev. GEORGE F. PENTECOST, D.D.

"Olive Schreiner's 'Peter Halket' is a most powerful exposé and indictment. It must produce a great conviction. I rank it with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'.....I hope this remarkable book will be read by a million of Her Majesty's subjects before the glory of the sixty years' reign is celebrated in June."

Rev. ALEXANDER WHYTE, D.D.

"There cannot be two opinions as to the genius and the heart of the writer of 'Peter Halket.'.....It is a noble book."

Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

"I finished the book feeling that I had listened to the voice of a true prophet of God—strong, fearless—indeed splendid in its courage and in its burning indignation."

Rev. CHARLES A. BERRY, D.D.

"I have read 'Trooper Peter Halket of Mashonaland' with great care and interest.....The moral force of the book is greatly increased by the evident restraint of the writer.....The book is not so much a story as a profound and sustained religious appeal."

Rev. R. F. HORTON, D.D.

"It seems to me singularly brave and powerful—what in the Old Testament would be called a Prophecy, and in the New a sermon."

Rev. J. CLIFFORD, D.D.

"It is a novel conceived with great power and carried out with skill and daring."

Rev. H. PRICE HUGHES, M.A.

"I have read Miss Olive Schreiner's work with a painful interest. It is not for me to dwell on the great literary gifts which distinguish this and all her writings. Her unique power of graphic, vivid, intense expression appears on every page, but the moral significance of this book for me outweighs its literary features."

SELECTED LIST OF RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

SOUTH AFRICA AS IT IS. By F. Reginald Statham, Author of 'Mr. Magnus,' &c. Demy 8vo. cloth, 10*s*. 6*d*.

"Carefully written.....Mr. Statham has discharged the task of historian in a thoroughly unprejudiced and judicial spirit."—Observer.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE GENTLE LIFE,' &c.

The BURDEN of LIFE. Essays by the late J. Hain FRISWELL. Edited, with a Memoir, by his Daughter, LAURA HAIN FRISWELL. Cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*. [Next week.

LE SELVE. By Ouida. Second Edition. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"Is admirably written."—Morning Post.

INTRODUCTORY STUDIES in GREEK ART. By Jane E. HARRISON. New Edition. Maps and Illustrations. Cloth, 7*s*. 6*d*.

"The reader will constantly encounter serious and earnest thought, wide knowledge, and a vivid exposition."—Academy.

MORE ABOUT WILD NATURE. By Mrs. Brightwen. With Portrait of the Author and many other Full-Page Illustrations. New Edition. Small crown 8vo. imitation leather gilt, gilt edges, in box, 5*s*.

IN BOHEMIA with DU MAURIER. By Felix MOSCHELES. 60 Original Illustrations by the late G. du Maurier. Third Edition. Cloth, 10*s*. 6*d*.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS. By W. Douglas Morrison, M.A. (The New Volume of "The Criminology Series.") Cloth, 6*s*.

STOPS; or, How to Punctuate. By Paul Allardyce. Ninth Edition. Parchment covers, 6*d*.; cloth, 1*s*.

LITTLE NOVELS.—New Volumes.

Paper, 6*d*. each; cloth, 1*s*. each.

PASSPORTS. By I. J. Armstrong.

ON THE GOGMAGOGS. By Alice Dumillo.

IVAN ALEXANDROVITCH. By Andrée Hope (Mrs. Harvey, of Ickwell-Bury). Dedicated to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone. Cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

WITH INTRODUCTION BY GRANT ALLEN.

IN the GUIANA FOREST. By James Rodway. Third Edition. Illustrated. Cloth, 7*s*. 6*d*.

VOLUMES IN "THE STORY OF THE NATIONS."

The BALKANS. By W. Miller, M.A.

TURKEY. By Stanley Lane-Poole.

BRITISH INDIA. By R. W. Frazer, LL.B.

CANADA. By J. G. Bourinot, C.M.G. LL.D.

Each illustrated, and with Maps and Index, cloth, 5*s*.

The ROMANCE of a KING'S LIFE. By J. J. Jusserand. Translated from the French by M. R., and Revised and Enlarged by the Author. With Photogravure and other Illustrations. In cloth, 6*s*.

CLIMBING REMINISCENCES of the DOLOMITES. By LEONE SINIGAGLIA. Translated by MARY ALICE VIALLS. With Introduction by EDMUND J. GARWOOD, A.C. Profusely illustrated, and with Map. In cloth, 21*s*. net.

PIONEER WORK in the ALPS of NEW ZEALAND: a Record of the First Exploration of the Chief Glaciers and Ranges of the Southern Alps. By ARTHUR P. HARPER, B.A. Maps and Illustrations. Cloth, 21*s*. net.

A CYCLOPEDIA of NAMES: a Pronouncing and Etymological Dictionary of Names in Geography, Biography, Mythology, History, Ethnology, Art, Archæology, Fiction, &c. Edited by BENJAMIN E. SMITH, A.M. In 1 vol. 13½ in. by 10 in. by 3 in. bound in half-cloth extra, 2*l*. 2*s*. net; half morocco, 2*l*. 15*s*. net.

"Will be found exceedingly useful."—Daily Chronicle.

CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

EDITED BY

GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.

Fully illustrated, in specially designed green cloth cover, crown 8vo. 1s. 6d. each.

CANTERBURY. 127 pages, with 27 Illustrations.

SALISBURY. 115 pages, with 35 Illustrations.

CHESTER. 96 pages, with 23 Illustrations. [Now ready.

ROCHESTER. [Ready immediately.

OXFORD. [Ready immediately.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"We have so frequently in these columns urged the want of cheap, well-illustrated, and well-written handbooks to our cathedrals, to take the place of the out-of-date publications of local booksellers, that we are glad to hear that they have been taken in hand by Messrs. George Bell & Sons."
St. James's Gazette.

"The volumes, two of which, relating to Canterbury and Salisbury, have already been issued, are handy in size, moderate in price, well illustrated, and written in a scholarly spirit. The history of cathedral and city is intelligently set forth, and accompanied by a descriptive survey of the building in all its detail. The illustrations are copious and well selected, and the series bids fair to become an indispensable companion to the cathedral tourist in England."
Times.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G., Quartermaster General. With 20 Maps.

"This brilliant and fascinating little book."
Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Evelyn Wood is to be congratulated on his excellent book."—Times.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GOLF in THEORY and PRACTICE: some Hints to Beginners. By H. S. C. EVERARD. A Practical Manual. With 22 Illustrations from Life.

"We have read the book 'right off,' as the saying goes, and this because, as in the case of a witching tale, it was difficult to stop.....The book is enjoyable and instructive, it is attractive in appearance, clear in its printing, valuable in its contents, and we hope it will have a wide circulation in the world of golf."—Golf.

"One of the very best books of its class."—Referee.

New and Revised Edition, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15s.

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT: a Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang. With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

ALDINE POETS.—New Volumes.

JAMES THOMSON. Revised Edition, with a New Memoir and Critical Appendix, by the Rev. T. C. TOVEY, M.A., Author of 'Gray and his Friends,' &c. 2 vols. fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net, each.

KIRKE WHITE. With Memoir by Sir HARRIS NICOLAS. 2s. 6d. net.

HANDBOOKS OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

NEW VOLUMES.

Edited by Professor HALES, M.A.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each.

The AGE of WORDSWORTH. By Prof. C. H. HERFORD, Litt.D., Professor of English Literature in the University College of Wales, Aberystwyth. [Ready.

The AGE of MILTON. By J. Bass MULLINGER, M.A., University Lecturer in History, and the Rev. J. H. B. MASTERMAN, B.A., late Lecturer of St. John's College, Cambridge. [Immediately.

The AGE of TENNYSON. By Prof. HUGH WALKER. [Immediately.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

FOURTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.

With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 21s. net.

1897 ISSUE NOW READY.

THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK.

A Statistical and Historical Annual of the States of the Civilized World for the Year 1897.

Thirty-fourth Annual Publication. Revised after Official Returns.

Edited by J. SCOTT KELTIE.

With Maps. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

TIMES.—"There can be few people of ordinary intelligence taking an interest in public affairs, whether at home or abroad, who have not at one time or another had occasion to refer to its pages for information or instruction, and to all such it will be sufficient to say that there has been no slackening in the diligence with which the work of revision has been carried out by the editors."

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR.

A Tale of Dartmoor in the Days of Waterloo.

By FREDERIC ADYE.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

MORNING POST.—"Since 'Lorna Doone' the natural features of an English district have not been described with such a vigorous touch as is Dartmoor and the country that surrounds it in Mr. Adye's novel.....His delightful romance, which has the freshness of the wild moors it so vividly paints."

NEW NOVEL BY CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

The PILGRIMAGE of the BEN BERIAH. By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.—New Volume.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3s. 6d.

"PEACOCK" EDITION, gilt side, back, and edges, 5s.

POOR JACK. By Capt. Marryat. Illustrated by Fred. Pegram. With an Introduction by DAVID HANNAY.

Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

WESTWARD HO! By Charles KINGSLEY. With Portrait.

By FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE.—Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LANDSCAPE in POETRY, from Homer to Tennyson. With numerous representative Quotations. By FRANCIS T. PALGRAVE, late Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford.

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"A singularly graceful and inspiring volume."

4to. 24s.

The MYCENAEAN AGE. A Study of the Monuments and Culture of Pre-Homeric Greece. By Dr. CHRESTOS TSOUNTAS, Ephor of Antiquities and Director of Excavations at Mycenae, and Professor J. IRVING MANATT, Ph.D. LL.D. With an Introduction by Dr. DORPFELD.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 450. APRIL. Price 1s.

The PRINCE of WALES'S HOSPITAL FUND. By C. S. Loch.
A LEAF from the JOURNALS of a LANDSCAPE-PAINTER. By Edward Lear.
The FAMINE in INDIA. By Col. Trevor, C.S.I. (late Agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana).
The BLACK DOG. A Tale of the Tay.
The REMAKING of the ARMY. By STEVINUS.
UNWRITTEN BOOKS.

Illustrated, price 1s. 4d.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE FOR APRIL

Contains, besides many Stories and Articles:

NEW CONDITIONS in CENTRAL AFRICA. The Dawn of Civilization between Lake Tanganyika and the Congo. Extracts from the Journals of the late E. J. GLAVE.
The MIRACLE of the GREEK FIRE. HOLY WEEK in JERUSALEM, 1896. By R. W. GILDER.
THACKERAY in WEIMAR. By WALTER VULPIUS. With Unpublished Drawings by W. M. Thackeray.
The DAYS of JEANNE D'ARC. I. By M. H. CATHERWOOD.

Illustrated, price 1s.

THE ST. NICHOLAS MAGAZINE FOR APRIL

Contains, besides many Stories and Articles,

The LIGHTS that GUIDE in the NIGHT. By Lieut. John M. Ellicott, U.S.N.
RHYMES ABOUT ANIMALS. By Frank Valentine.
SEEING and BELIEVING. By Harold Wilson, M.D. Illustrated by Diagrams.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S LAST NOVEL.

LOVICE,

By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' is now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"……Mrs. Hungerford undoubtedly describes it as if it were the freshest and most wonderful thing in the world. Her vivacity and charm are inexhaustible."—Morning Leader.

Mrs. LINTON'S Popular Novel, DULCIE EVERTON.—A New and Cheaper Edition will be ready on April 1. Cr. 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"A strong and impressive story."—Daily Telegraph.
"As a study of feminine antagonism the book is full of power."—Athenæum.

A NEW EDITION. The Two Series in One Volume. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. CAVALRY LIFE and REGIMENTAL LEGENDS. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. Handsomely printed in New Type.

A CHEAP EDITION of CLARK RUSSELL'S Novel, The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK," will be ready on April 1. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. Croker, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"A vigorous, wholesome, and entertaining love story."—Literary World.
"In 'Beyond the Pale' Mrs. Croker is once more on her native heath, and quite at her best……All this is told by Mrs. Croker with that unflagging vivacity, that lightness of touch, and that keen sense of humour which entitle her to occupy among the women novelists of the day very much the same place that Charles Lever held among his brother-writers in a former generation."—Spectator.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By William WESTALL. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"Such a series of hairbreadth escapes as should move Mr. Stanley Weyman, and even Mr. Anthony Hope, to jealousy."—Graphic.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. Waller. Illustrated by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"Steeped in mystery is Mr. Waller's romance……There are passages that are delightful."—British Review.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank Barrett, Author of 'The Sin of Olga Zassoulich.' With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Written in Mr. Frank Barrett's best manner, the interest……well maintained from the opening to the closing chapter."—Daily Telegraph.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie Murray.
BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.
LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The OUTSIDER. By Hawley Smart.
BY WOMAN'S WIT. By Mrs. Alexander.
The MASTER of TRENANCE. By T. W. Speight.
An ANXIOUS MOMENT. By Mrs. Hungerford.
APRIL'S LADY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

POPULAR EDITION OF MARK TWAIN'S WORKS.

Now ready, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 200 Illustrations.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.
The £1,000,000 BANK-NOTE.
A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.

MADAME SANS-GENE. By Edmond Lepelletier. Translated from the French by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth. 3s. 6d.

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE. One Shilling Monthly.

Contents for APRIL:—KAMBULA'S WAR-CLUB. By J. R. Werner.—CERAMIC ART at DERBY. By James Cassidy.—NOTES from the SOUTH. By Clare Sorel Strong.—A BOOKMAN'S ROMANCE. By Charles Lastel.—ROUND PEVENSEY MARSH. By Thomas H. B. Graham.—GOETHE and WEIMAR. By H. Schutz Wilson.—HISTORICAL MONUMENTS of CALCUTTA. By Kathleen Blechynden.—A BROAD-CHESTED SOUL. By Tom Russell.—"EIGHTEENTH CENTURY VIGNETTES." By Sylvanus Urban.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

2 vols. 8vo. 24s.

MEMOIRS OF BARON LEJEUNE,

Aide-de-Camp to Marshals Berthier, Davout, and Oudinot.

Translated and Edited from the Original French by Mrs. ARTHUR BELL (N. D'ANVERS),

With an Introduction by Major-General MAURICE, C.B.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"There are books of such surpassing interest, which impress the mind so deeply, that one must be careful, in speaking of them, to keep within bounds of a becoming restraint. And to this high class the 'Memoirs of Baron Lejeune' undoubtedly belongs."
GLASGOW HERALD.—"For those whose object is not so much information as the enjoyment which a well-told and stirring narrative affords, these memoirs are amongst the very best things that the eventful period has yet produced."

8vo. 16s.

VITA MEDICA:

CHAPTERS OF MEDICAL LIFE AND WORK.

By Sir BENJAMIN WARD RICHARDSON, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"These memoirs are strongly reminiscent of the man who wrote them, and that, perhaps, is their chief charm."

NEW BOOK BY PROF. MAX MÜLLER.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SCIENCE OF MYTHOLOGY.

By the Right Hon. Prof. MAX MÜLLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute.

2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

LEEDS MERCURY.—"This book will nobly help forward the work of progress in relation to the clearer elucidation of the origin and evolution of human myth, cults, superstitions, and highly spiritualized and beautifully humanized religions."

VOLUME FOR 1897.—8vo. 4s.

THE ANNUAL CHARITIES REGISTER AND DIGEST.

Being a Classified Register of Charities in or available for the Metropolis, together with a Digest of Information respecting the Legal, Voluntary, and other Means for the Prevention and Relief of Distress, and the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. With an Introduction by C. S. LOCH, Secretary to the Council of the Charity Organization Society, London, and an Elaborate Index.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE WILL TO BELIEVE,

And other Essays in Popular Philosophy.

By WILLIAM JAMES, LL.D., Professor of Psychology in Harvard University.

Contents:—The Will to Believe—Is Life Worth Living?—The Sentiment of Rationality—Reflex Action and Theism—The Dilemma of Determinism—The Moral Philosopher and the Moral Life—Great Men and their Environment—The Importance of Individuals—On Some Hegelisms—What Psychical Research has Accomplished—Index.

NEW BOOK BY MR. S. LEVETT YEATS.

A GALAHAD OF THE CREEKS,

And Other Stories.

By S. LEVETT YEATS, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

PLOUGHED, and Other Stories.

By L. B. WALFORD.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

THE MATCHMAKER: a Story.

By L. B. WALFORD.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 174. APRIL, 1897. 8vo. 6d.

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. Chapters 9, 10. By S. Levett Yeats, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'
EARLY SPRING in SAVERNAKE FOREST. By W. H. Hudson.
HEIMSUCHT. By Walter J. Purton.
A PERVERSE WIDOW. By S. M. Crawley Boevey.
The CONQUEST of RADICAL TED. By M. E. Francis.
The LIVING EARTH. By Grant Allen.
AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for APRIL, 1897.

1. DEAR FAUSTINA. Chaps. 10-12.
2. The PARSON'S DAUGHTER at DEAL.
3. PLAIN LIVING and HIGH THINKING.
4. The BIRDS of TENNYSON.
5. A RUSTIC'S GOAL.
6. An IDEAL LADY LETTER-WRITER.
7. IN the GATEWAY.
8. PROSPECTS of LITERATURE.
9. A DISCIPLE of an OLD CREED.
10. MONSIEUR DUVAL.
11. The CAREER of CLAUDIA. Conclusion.

SIXTEENTH EDITION NOW READY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36*s*.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes contain Portraits on Steel and Copper.

"Lord Roberts's narrative traverses all the critical periods of Indian war and politics during the last forty years. He writes of them as an eye-witness, as an expert, and latterly as the chief actor in the closing scenes of an eventful drama; his story produces the vivid impression which comes out of accurate knowledge and strange personal experiences."
Spectator.

"A book which is at once intensely interesting and exciting, and at the same time supplies a vast quantity of first-hand knowledge, invaluable alike to the statesman and the political student. And, last of all, it is a remarkable revelation of the type of character rare in all ages—that of a man at once great and fortunate who has remained simple, modest, and unspoiled by success."—World.

NOW READY.

The JERNINGHAM LETTERS.
Edited, with Notes, by EGERTON CASTLE, M.A. F.S.A. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24*s*.

NOW READY.

ON SOUTHERN ENGLISH ROADS.
By J. J. HISSEY. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. 16*s*.

NOW READY.

RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN: a Biography. By W. FRASER RAE. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 26*s*.

NOW READY.

AUSTRALIAN WRITERS. By J. F. DESMOND BYRNE. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

THREE NEW NOVELS.

NOW READY.

The CAREER of CLAUDIA. By F. M. PEARD, Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

NOW READY.

The BACKSLIDER. By Constance SMITH, Author of 'The Repentance of Paul Wentworth.' In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s*.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

The MISTRESS of BRAE FARM. By ROSA N. CAREY, Author of 'Nellie's Memories.' In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

THE NEW ISSUE OF THE

NOVELS OF MRS. HENRY WOOD.

THE STORY OF CHARLES STRANGE

(Fifteenth Thousand)

IS NOW READY.

In red cloth, gold lettered on side, similar to the 3*s*. 6*d*. Edition, 2*s*. 6*d*.

In green cloth, gold lettered on back, but with a plainer binding, 2*s*.

To be followed at regular intervals by the other Stories in the Series.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now ready at all Booksellers'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s*.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.

NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.

1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31*s*. 6*d*. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."
Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MISTRESS BEATRICE COPE.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' &c.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s*.

"An exceedingly able story."—Scotsman.

"The plot of Miss Gardiner's novel is stirring and sensational enough. But it is well worked out, and the interest which it arouses at the very outset is cleverly maintained to the end."—Glasgow Herald.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

BLIND BATS. By Margaret B. CROSS, Author of 'Stolen Honey,' 'Newly Fashioned,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Miss Cross has a delightful style, fresh, crisp, and witty, without straining after epigrams, and her portraiture is throughout lifelike without being photographic."
Pall Mall Gazette.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

JOHN C. NIMMO'S NEW BOOKS.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION.

In extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 5*s*. per Volume, net.

THE REV. S. BARING-GOULD'S

LIVES OF THE SAINTS.

With a Calendar for every Day in the Year.

New Edition, Revised, with Introduction and Additional Lives of English Martyrs, Cornish and Welsh Saints, and a Full Index to the entire Work.

Illustrated by over 400 Engravings.

To be published in Monthly Volumes.

In demy 8vo. about 400 pages, cloth, price 12*s*. net.

THE OLD ENGLISH BIBLE,

And other Essays.

By the Rev. FRANCIS A. GASQUET, D.D. O.S.B., Author of 'Henry VIII. and the English Monasteries,' &c.

Contents:—1. Notes on Mediæval Monastic Libraries.—2. The Monastic Scriptorium.—3. A Forgotten English Preacher.—4. The Pre-Reformation English Bible (1).—5. The Pre-Reformation English Bible (2).—6. Religious Instruction in England during the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries.—7. A Royal Christmas in the Fifteenth Century.—8. The Canterbury Claustral School in the Fifteenth Century.—9. The Note-Books of William Worcester; A Fifteenth Century Antiquary.—10. Hampshire Recusants. With a Complete Index.

In 2 vols. extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 21*s*. net; or in Eight Parts, 2*s*. 6*d*. net.

PART I. NOW READY.

THE FLORA OF THE ALPS.

Being a Description of all the Species of Flowering Plants indigenous to Switzerland; and of the Alpine Species of the adjacent Mountain Districts of France, Italy, and Austria, including the Pyrenees.

By ALFRED W. BENNETT, M.A. B.Sc. F.L.S., Lecturer on Botany at St. Thomas's Hospital.

With 120 Coloured Plates.

"The whole book forms a valuable contribution to the intelligent enjoyment of a holiday in Switzerland."
Academy.

"These very beautifully illustrated volumes will be welcomed by the numberless people whose summer holiday is spent in Switzerland or the Alpine districts."
Land and Water.

"Mr. Bennett gives an adequate description, and one which is both clear and exact, of all the species of flowering plants common to Switzerland."—Standard.

"The illustrations are numerous and accurate."—Times.

In 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. cloth, price 1*l*. 10*s*. net; or in Twelve Parts, 2*s*. 6*d*. net.

PART I. NOW READY.

BRITISH GAMEBIRDS AND WILD FOWL.

By BEVERLEY R. MORRIS, M.D.

Revised and Corrected by W. B. TEGETMEIER, F.Z.S. M.B.O.U.

With 60 Large Plates, Coloured by Hand.

"The work is handsomely got up and well printed."
Athenæum.

"Has held a unique position among works of its class. The sixty hand-coloured plates are splendidly executed."
Daily News.

"A new and revised edition of this well-known and sumptuous work, issued under the skilful supervision of Mr. W. Tegetmeier."—Times.

NEW ILLUSTRATED WORK ON HAMPTON COURT PALACE.

Small 4to. illustrated with 43 Drawings by Herbert Railton, cloth, gilt top, price 10*s*. 6*d*.

HAMPTON COURT.

By WILLIAM HOLDEN HUTTON, B.D., Fellow of S. John's College, Oxford.

"Pen and pencil have worked in harmony, and the whole is imbued with the spirit of the numerous refined and beautiful drawings which the draughtsman, revelling in a thoroughly congenial task, has contributed to the volume."
Daily News.

"Mr. Hutton's descriptions of the art collections is admirable.'—Public Opinion.

"A worthy memorial of one of our historic places."
Daily Chronicle.

"Mr. Railton's drawings are picturesque and intensely appreciative."—Magazine of Art.

London:
JOHN C. NIMMO, 14, King William-street, Strand.

SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1897.

CONTENTS.

PAGE
Prof. Max Müller's Contributions to Mythology 407
Mr. Carman's Poems 408
The Philosophy of Theism 408
The Municipal Life of Glasgow 410
A Memoir of Dr. Harper 410
A French Traveller on Timbuctoo 411
New Novels (A Matter of Temperament; Sebastiani's Secret; Hilda Strafford; A Pinchbeck Goddess; All in All; Margot; A Devotee; The Dunthorpes of Westleigh; Partie du Pied Gauche) ... 412–413
English Philology 413
Our Library Table—List of New Books ... 414–415
Two Prothalamia; The Destruction of the Spanish Armada; The Rev. William Fulford; The Spring Publishing Season; 'English Schools at the Reformation'; Tennyson Bibliography 415–417
Literary Gossip 418
Science — Botanical Literature; M. Antoine d'Abbadie; Societies; Meetings; Gossip 419–421
Fine Arts—Gardner on Greek Sculpture; Sales; Gossip 421–423
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week 423–424

LITERATURE

Contributions to the Science of Mythology. By the Right Hon. Prof. F. Max Müller. 2 vols. (Longmans & Co.)

Reviewing last year the new edition of 'Chips from a German Workshop,' vol. iv., we commented upon the author's failure to take note of anthropological and mythological research during the past quarter of a century, and thereby to bring his earlier speculations into touch with modern scholarship. Prof. Max Müller demurred to this criticism on the ground that he was "working at a very big book on comparative mythology," the natural inference being that he would therein restate the theories associated with his name in the light of recent investigation and speculation.

The "big book" has appeared, but, alas! instead of the systematic treatise we had hoped for, we have only "contributions"—contributions which add little to the establishment of the theories previously advanced by the author and his disciples, and still less to their defence. No orderly statement of rival theories is attempted; their bearing upon the author's views is not discussed definitely; no endeavour is made to frame a coherent scheme of mythological evolution based upon all the facts which research has brought to light, and taking account of all the hypotheses by which scholarship has essayed to explain these facts.

It may seem inconsistent after this to complain of the excess of the polemical element which unduly swells the bulk of Prof. Max Müller's new work. But the inconsistency is only apparent. Large as is the space occupied by these polemics, they are ineffectual because nowhere definite in aim or precise in method, whilst they constantly irritate by insistence upon secondary or irrelevant points. Prof. Oldenberg's views on certain points of Vedic religion are, naturally enough, vigorously combated, but was it worth while to rate the Athenæum reviewer for demurring to the author's claim that Prof. Oldenberg belongs to the same school of myth interpretation as himself? This claim, advanced afresh in this work, is another proof of the author's misapprehension of his adversaries' position and of the criticism directed against his own, which vitiates the whole of the polemical argument. His own words are conclusive on this point: "We know with perfect certainty that in their first apparition they [the gods] were simply the agents postulated as behind the most striking phenomena of nature. Whoever holds that opinion is on our side, however much he may differ on minor points." Now opinion concerning the ultimate origin and nature of the god is one thing; opinion as to how the god conception was embodied in myth is another. It is possible to share the author's view of the god as, ultimately, an agent postulated behind a striking phenomenon of nature, and yet to differ from him altogether concerning the evolution of the god embodied historically in myth and rite. And, as we insisted when reviewing vol. iv. of 'Chips,' the problem of evolution is of infinitely more import to the student than that of origin, or, rather, if he has solved the one he is practically master of the other. We have criticized Prof. Max Müller not because he advocates certain views as to the original significance of Zeus or Apollo, but because he explains the stories connected with these gods in a particular way. To show that his explanation is wrong may, possibly, affect his theory of origins adversely, but it need not do so necessarily, and in many cases we hold that it does not.

What, then, is Prof. Max Müller's explanation of mythology, i. e., of the mass of stories and rites associated with gods and kindred beings? The familiar one that it is the product of a disease of language, or, rather, as speech depends upon thought, of thought itself. Here, again, we must quote his own words: "Was the mind of man really so constituted that it could create the idea of gods as superhuman and omnipotent beings, and then ascribe to them stories such as are ascribed to Zeus? .....We may admit an infantia of our race, we cannot admit a period of dementia." So to relieve our forefathers from the stigma of dementia we must needs postulate a period of universal diseased thought, a process perilously akin to that by which the Irish snakes saved themselves from slaughter. For the "anthropological" mythologist the postulate is, of course, totally unnecessary; he never imagined that the mind of man was "really so constituted" that it elaborated a superhuman and omnipotent being first and then ascribed to him foolish or abominable stories. On the contrary, he assumes that what is "foolish" or "abominable" (inconsistent, that is, with the conception of superhuman omnipotence) is older, not younger, than that conception. To cite one instance, the story of a virgin conceiving through the medium of a shower of gold may offend our reason or our sense of the decent; but, as Mr. Hartland has shown in the 'Legend of Perseus,' races of men from all parts of the world and at all stages of history have been addicted to practices which show that they look upon the natural process as a secondary, not to say an unessential, element of conception. Prof. Max Müller would hardly attribute these practices to the prevalence of stories like that of Zeus and Danaë; in other words, the "diseased thought" explanation cannot apply to them; would he then hold that the races in question are living in a state of dementia?

The anthropologist will further object that the use of words like dementia, obscene, immoral, &c., is wholly out of place in discussing the beliefs and fancies of mankind at an early stage of development. Baby beats the naughty chair against which it has hurt itself; the fondest mother does not suspect dementia. Baby and kitty are both liable to "misbehave themselves," to use the maternal euphemism; we do not on that account tax them with obscenity. Kitty, if she is to develope into the household pet, has to be taught good manners; we are more ambitious for baby, who will, we hope, attain the same intellectual and moral level as ourselves; but before that happens baby must, if a boy—and especially a public-school boy—pass through an unmoral stage, characterized by what may be called the Red Indian ideal of conduct. The wise father does not trouble himself overmuch during this trying period, even when he finds the boy's masters dominated by much the same ideal; he reflects, if he reflects at all, upon the world-wide moral conservatism of sacerdotal classes. So, too, the ideal of godhead formed during the boyhood of the race neither shocks nor surprises the anthropologist; least of all does he marvel because it is the sacred literature of all races which forms the happy hunting-ground for stories such as distress so acutely Plato and Prof. Max Müller.

It is the old question: Is mythology, in the main, a record of man's upward progress from a condition to which existing savage races present the nearest obtainable analogy, or has it arisen during a period of degeneration from a loftier intellectual and moral standard? In so far as a particular section of mythology is concerned Prof. Max Müller holds the second view, and here the anthropological school, for the most part, is at variance with him. This fundamental difference, of course, entails divergence of method. Prof. Max Müller speaks of the incidents of Greek mythology as > "isolated rocks rising from a large field covered with snow, the accumulated folk-lore of centuries which hides and always will hide from our eyes large tracts of the surrounding country."

For the anthropologist the metaphor is wholly misleading; he would rather describe folk-lore as the mould from which the myth-tree derives substance and nourishment, and which, in its turn, it enriches with shed leaf and broken branch. The Perseus legend may again be cited against the author's analogy. Mr. Hartland has conclusively shown that the classical form of the story has entirely lost certain features preserved by modern folk-lore, or has so minimized them that in the absence of the modern parallels it would be impossible to detect their true character. Would Prof. Max Müller describe the incomplete classical version as the emerging mountain top alone worthy of study, and the complete modern versions as mere accretions of concealing snow?

We have insisted upon fundamental differences of principle and method between Prof. Max Müller and ourselves; we gladly note points of agreement. He combats—rightly, as we think—the claim for considerable Semitic influence upon Greek mythology, a claim which its latest advocate, M. Victor Bérard, has fairly reduced ad absurdum. Again, he strongly vindicates the importance of Vedic mythology. Vedic literature is not all its first investigators fondly imagined, but that is no reason for denying, as some seem inclined to do, its great age, its archaic character, the weight attaching to it in any general attempt at reconstituting Aryan mythology. But is it as early, comparatively speaking, as Prof. Max Müller holds? He lays, and rightly lays, the utmost stress upon the equation Dyaush-pitar, Ζεὺς πατήρ, Ju-piter, and upon the original supremacy of Dyaush-pitar. Is it not, then, significant that, whilst Greeks and Romans have retained him at the head of their pantheon, the Aryan tribes who invaded India in the second millennium before Christ have dispossessed him in favour of other gods such as Indra? To raise the question does not imply depreciation of the Vedas, but it does imply doubt as to their great superiority over the Greek sources for the purpose of reconstructing the oldest Aryan mythology.

Each separate "contribution" of Prof. Max Müller's would yield material for lengthy specialist discussion. It has, therefore, seemed advisable to restrict this notice to the broad aspects of the questions, alike of principle and method, raised by the work. Special mention is, however, due to the sections devoted to Mordwinian mythology; the sources from which the author draws his account are inaccessible to most English readers, and the mythology itself, like that of the kindred Finns, is full of interest and charm.

A considerable portion of the first volume deals with phonetic problems. The author is anxious to show that the greater latitude claimed by himself and other philologists of the old school in comparing mythological names is free from objection either in principle or in practice. He certainly succeeds, where the new philologists entirely fail, in making the layman understand phonetic questions. But the principle for which he contends, viz., that proper names in general, and mythological names in particular, are not subject to the same strict rules of phonetic modification as ordinary words, is obviously capable of extension, and goes far to reduce the value of philological as compared with historical and psychological analysis in the study of mythology.

Behind the Arras: a Book of the Unseen. By Bliss Carman. (Mathews.)

Mr. Carman calls his last book a book of the unseen, and thus at the outset emphasizes its contrast with his previous books, which were very definitely books of things seen, or at all events things apprehended by the senses. The year was always April to him; he was generally on foot upon a great highroad, or rowing on a Canadian river; and he was quite content that the world should still be seen under that aspect, with the sunlight on its dust or its flowing water. And so, in some of his vagabond lyrics, he was able to express, with a ringing simplicity, the joy of casual things, the philosophy of the gipsy. No one recently has written verses which give the reader an easier sense of happiness, of physical exhilaration, of the deliberate, irresponsible turning of one's back on care and the many bondages of the world. His new book, while it is still full of confidence in the possibilities of happy and vigorous living, is overshadowed with a cloud which had not before crossed his sky. By certain rustlings of the painted arras on the walls of the house of life, he has realized that there may, after all, be something, of much moment to him, behind the arras; that, at all events, there is something. It is his disquietude which he translates to us in these poems. And, as usually happens when the artist in the things of the world suddenly opens his eyes upon what seems to him a vaguer horizon than the sky-line which has hitherto limited his vision, his style has become rougher, more uncertain, more tumultuous. He is trying to express more than he at present knows how to express; he is a little in the hands of his message; the mystery which he has so lately had eyes to see makes him stumble on his path through the "selva selvaggia." Instead of welcoming the hours because they brought the sunlight, he busies himself with questioning those wandering messengers, asking them why, having brought it, they should also bear it away with them. He sets himself (perhaps not very seriously) to wrestle with problems, and especially with that insoluble problem of death. He inquires into the fates of men, into what is unseen, or misconceived, in the dealings with us of destiny. And so he has become restless, troubled, anxious, and when he writes a lyric of what would have once been merely the passing of a familiar figure in the street, it becomes, as in this piece of 'The Dustman,' a symbol:—

"Dustman, dustman!"
Through the deserted square he cries,
And babies put their rosy fists
Into their eyes.

There's nothing out of No-man's-land
So drowsy since the world began,
As "Dustman, dustman,
Dustman."

He goes his village round at dusk
From door to door, from day to day;
And when the children hear his step
They stop their play.

"Dustman, dustman!"
Far up the street he is descried,
And soberly the twilight games
Are laid aside.

"Dustman, dustman!"
There, Drowsyhead, the old refrain,
"Dustman, dustman!"
It goes again.

Dustman, dustman,
Hurry by and let me sleep.
When most I wish for you to come,
You always creep.

Dustman, dustman,
And when I want to play some more,
You never then are further off
Than the next door.

"Dustman, dustman!"
He beckles down the echoing curb,
A step that neither hopes nor hates
Ever disturb.

"Dustman, dustman!"
He never varies from one pace,
And the monotony of time
Is in his face.

And some day, with more patent dust,
Brought from his home beyond the deep,
And gently scattered on our eyes,
We, too, shall sleep,—

Hearing the call we know so well
Fade softly out as it began,
"Dustman, dustman,
Dustman!"

The once confident poet sees every figure now on that rustling arras looking at him with new eyes; all these shapes have become symbols: but, seeing them for the first time, they are too strange to him for his mind to grasp more than certain hints of their meaning. And so, all through the book, marking as it does an intellectual advance, an advance in perception, we seem to see the writer at a somewhat hesitating step in his career, not yet quite the master of his new magic. It is a step forward, if into the darkness; and the next step (can we doubt?) will bring him again into the light, but into that light which is on the other side of the darkness.

Philosophy of Theism: being the Gifford Lectures delivered before the University of Edinburgh in 1895–6. Second Series. By Alexander Campbell Fraser. (Blackwood & Sons.)

In the course of this second series of his admirable lectures on the philosophy of theism, Dr. Fraser repeatedly warns the reader that the considerations which he advances are to be taken in close and organic connexion with those which were propounded in the first series. There he treated with a masterly hand some of the leading problems of what in the strict sense of the term may be called natural theology. Here he attempts a rationale of theism, and an interpretation of the chief enigma of theism—the existence of evil. A year has now passed since the former volume was reviewed in these columns (No. 3568, March 14th, 1896), and in order to appreciate the gist and purport of this, its sequel, the reader must recollect the course of thought which has led to it. Dr. Fraser set out upon his inquiry by stating in their philosophical form the three questions confronting every thoughtful man in the world into which, unasked and unwarned, he finds himself ushered at birth: What am I? What is that which I see around me? What is the power that is operative in it and in me, and persists through all their changes? —in other words, the problems of self, the world, and God. He had little difficulty in showing that all attempts to reduce any two of these three to the third, any endeavour to formulate a self-consistent monism, made for a doctrine of universal nescience; and that, in particular, the materialistic monism, dear to some modern speculators, rendered the cosmos absolutely unmeaning. After examining some theories of physical causation and adopting the view that the cosmic and interpretable character of nature is essentially a Divine revelation, he raised the question whether the religious "leap in the dark" was any more irrational than the step from the known to the unknown which all induction in the physical interpretation of the world necessarily involves. Finally, he concluded, as the result of many converging lines of argument, that it was reasonable to postulate a morally perfect power as the foundation of the physical, æsthetical, and spiritual experience of mankind; and that, while this hypothesis provided the sole escape from the paralysis of sceptical despair, it offered a more satisfactory explanation of a greater number of the aspects of life than any other, or rather than universal doubt, the only other possible alternative. It is the idea of infinity attaching to the world of reality which in the last resort awakens both doubt and faith; and the one or the other is triumphant according as this infinity is regarded from an atheistical or a theistical point of view.

But theism involves many intellectual difficulties, and it is to these difficulties that Dr. Fraser specially addresses himself in the second series of his lectures. What account can it give of the ultimate interpretation of nature, of the problems of causation, of necessity, of design and adaptation? And, most important of all, What account can it give of the problem of evil? or how can it reconcile the pain and suffering of the world with the existence of an omnipotent and benevolent God?

That this last problem is the real crux of the theistic hypothesis, and the chief difficulty which it presents to the human mind and heart, Dr. Fraser demonstrates in the clearest of language, and he applies all his eloquence and acumen to the task of showing that the existence of evil is not in itself a ground for refusing to adopt that hypothesis. In its bearing on the problem of evil theism comes to be identical with the belief that the universe in its ultimate aspect is morally trustworthy. To say that Dr. Fraser has solved the problem would be like saying that he has squared the circle or discovered a method of perpetual motion. The problem, he frankly confesses, does not admit of solution in the strict use of the term. It offers, he says, an insoluble difficulty to any purely empirical philosophy. The difficulty is not to be overcome, but only to be reduced and mitigated; and so much, at least, may be attained by the reflection that without some ethical or theistic trust empirical philosophy is itself paralyzed. The ultimate mysteries of causality, the final riddles of natural science, are in themselves every whit as dark as the moral problems presented by the pain, the suffering, the injustice, and what theologians call the sin and guilt of the world. Science is not complete, nor its procedure even intelligible, without some form of faith—without the hypothesis that nature is uniform, that the man who trusts her will not be put to intellectual confusion. Reduced to its simplest form, Dr. Fraser's argument is that if the universe is held to be intellectually trustworthy it may, with at least equal reason, be held to be morally trustworthy too; that morality as well as science is incomplete, and its procedure unintelligible, without the faith that all life is of Divine constitution; and that the man who trusts the power that is darkly revealed in it will not in the end be put to moral shame. The final sanction for the theistic hypothesis, as applied to the explanation either of the physical or the moral world, is that without it we are reduced to a condition of unreason and despair, in which, as we can know nothing, so, on the other hand, we can hope for nothing; that knowledge in the physical and hope in the moral world ultimately rest on the same basis; and that atheism, to be consistent, should deny the possibility of both.

We find, says Dr. Fraser, the germ of theism in this ethical root of life and this spiritual ground of the interpretability of experience. In the threefold articulation of real experience from which he started, theism of this kind is the unifying and harmonizing principle. If the existence of evil be held to be in irreconcilable conflict with this principle, an agnostic pessimism would be the only rational temper in which a man might view the world. The solutions provided by the hypothesis of Manicheism that the universe is the battle-field of two rival and eternal powers, one good, the other evil, or by the orthodox theory that the whole human race have fallen from a Divine ideal as the result of temptation by a malignant spirit called the Devil, will neither of them fit into any philosophic estimate of things, because the solution in the one case is inconsistent with moral faith in the universe, and in the other only puts the difficulty further back and aggravates it. To argue, again, that evil is an unconditional necessity in a finite world of individual beings, or in a world that was of necessity formed of pre-existing matter, is beside the mark; for evil would no longer be immoral if it were necessary—if it ceased to consist in what ought not to be, and were transformed instead into what cannot but be.

These and other attempts to explain away the existence of evil Dr. Fraser passes over as unworthy of serious consideration in comparison with some other theories which, with a scarcely greater show of reason, have been suggested in their place. It may, says Dr. Fraser, be a sign of perfect goodness that men should be placed in this world on educational trial with an absolute power to make themselves bad and so remain. He speaks of this with great reverence as a Divine experiment in personal responsibility, and suggests that, even though failure be sometimes the result, it is a better scheme of things than a wholly physical, non-moral, and necessitated universe. He appears also to suppose that even omnipotence cannot exclude the existence of evil, so long as there are beings whose characteristic is that within certain limits they are endowed with freedom of choice — a characteristic which he sums up by calling them persons. But surely it is a contradiction, a mere confusion of thought, to speak of omnipotence as unable to prevent beings so endowed from exercising their freedom to choose evil instead of good. That is as much a limitation of the Divine perfection as any of those attempts to explain away the existence of evil which Dr. Fraser finds so unsatisfactory. It is surely conceivable that omnipotence might create beings who would always choose good, even after temptation; and a God at once benevolent, omnipotent, and omniscient, such as theism supposes, must, so far as the light of human reason extends, be regarded as abrogating one of His attributes if He creates a being who, as He knows, will choose evil.

Although it is difficult to refuse assent in the main to Dr. Fraser's contention that the religious "leap in the dark" is as justifiable as the leap which is taken in every physical induction, he does not appear to have paid sufficient attention to a consideration of some weight which, with many minds, destroys the value of the analogy. Any physical induction, it may be said, is capable of verification, of direct and cumulative testimony to its truth; but where is the verification of the theory that, in the last resort, a world which seems so full of unmerited suffering and triumphant wrong is morally trustworthy? The truth of the induction that all men are mortal is attested afresh every hour; the theory that the universe is morally trustworthy, that every wrong is somehow righted, seems as frequently to be demolished by the hard facts of actual life. If this objection can be answered, it will be by an extension of some of the arguments which Dr. Fraser uses in his observations on optimism as a working creed. It may also, perhaps, be said that it is experience of life rather than any process of reasoning which forces the conviction upon us that it is more rational to hold such a theory than to accept the necessary alternative, and abandon the human mind to the suicidal belief that morality is a delusion. With an intense conviction, which his sober eloquence does much to recommend to those who follow his arguments, Dr. Fraser comes to the final conclusion that while there is a residuum of mystery in the problem of evil which cannot be removed, there is still sufficient room for an optimist conception of life. The incomplete knowledge which is all that we possess does, he maintains, afford a tolerable ground for religious and moral faith. A pessimist scepticism could only rest upon a complete perception that the existing universe must necessarily exclude all grounds for that faith. It is, in his view, ultimately a balance of probabilities, inclining to a theistic optimism which leaves many things unexplained.

There is much else in this interesting volume which calls for further and deeper discussion than space here allows. On one or two isolated points, however, a word may be said. The chapter on "Philosophical Faith" contains a lucid statement of the method of ascertaining truth in the sphere of religion, or at least such truth as is within the grasp of man, though possibly it is an extravagant comparison which Dr. Fraser draws between Bacon's famous "Natura non nisi parendo vincitur" and the language of the Fourth Gospel, "If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine." Nor, again, in replying to a critic who had objected that an omnipresent Being could not by any possibility be a Person is Dr. Fraser particularly convincing. His answer is briefly that the special character of a "person" is moral relation, and that what is not thus characterized is a "thing"; and the answer, and the language in which Dr. Fraser embodies it, seem to suggest that he does not recognize any other existence than can be conveniently covered by these two names. He would possibly admit that in certain aspects of theism God might be designated as simple power, or law, or love, or justice; but to assert that God is in respect of any of these a Person is a kind of anthropomorphism which is hardly consistent with the serious character of Dr. Fraser's argument.

When all is said, however, these lectures form unquestionably one of the finest products of the Gifford Trust. Nearly all the lectures hitherto delivered under that trust have been published. They extend to a remarkable number of volumes, and they are of very unequal value. None of them treats their great subject in a broader, deeper, or more instructive spirit than those which Dr. Fraser, in the evening of a life devoted to philosophy, has given to the world.

Glasgow, its Municipal Organization and Administration. By Sir James Bell, Bart., and James Paton, F.L.S. (Glasgow, MacLehose & Sons.)

Matthew Arnold once asked, speaking of the poorest class of the inhabitants, "Who can forget the hardly human horror, the abjection and uncivilizedness of Glasgow?" Quite another phase of Glasgow's life has impressed students of what may be styled the comparative aspects of municipalism. Glasgow as a municipality was discovered in good earnest a few years ago, when Mr. Albert Shaw, an American investigator, devoted a large chapter of eulogy to it, unhesitatingly assigning to it the first place among British communities. Naturally this has given rise to criticism and questionings. Whether Glasgow has not become a trifle self-conscious, whether hints about a "model municipality" have not somewhat shaken its equilibrium, may be tested in certain respects by this substantial quarto, bearing on the title-page the names of a recent Lord Provost and of Mr. Paton, "the talented Curator of the Corporation Galleries and Museum," as Sir James Bell calls him, frankly expressing his indebtedness to Mr. Paton for bringing into "literary form" the material, of which much was supplied by the departmental officers. The time was not unfavourable for a comprehensive view of the city's corporate work, and the means employed, with the results obtained, were eminently worthy of Glasgow. A mass of detailed information about its present condition is preceded by a sketch of the constitutional evolution of the city through successive stages—a mere village beside a cathedral church; a city and chartered bishop's-burgh with fortunes intertwined with those of the bishopric; a trading community struggling with the overweening bailies of Dumbarton, Renfrew, and Rutherglen; a royal burgh in 1611, although still lacking essential elective rights; at last, in 1690, with a population of 13,000, endowed with all the normal burghal liberties; and in 1893 a "county of a city." The population, in 1791 under 67,000, grew in a century to 656,000. In this exceptional increase the prime factor was the rise of industrialism, bringing with it a great shifting of the balance of population in Scotland from, roughly, a proportion of three in the country for one in the town to the converse proportion of three in the town for one in the country. The public energy of the city's merchants had been manifested in the deepening of the river so early as the sixteenth century; in 1688 a quay was built at the Broomielaw; in the middle of the seventeenth century the narrowing and deepening of the channel became a policy. There was a union of geography and native enterprise. "Glasgow made the Clyde—the Clyde made Glasgow." When James Watt arrived with the steam-engine and Henry Bell with the steamship, they found an important mercantile centre ready on the instant to make the most of the industrial opportunity.

The conception of municipalism steadily changes. A book like Mr. Paton's, grouping the efforts of four or five centuries, shows in singular admixture old and new ideals. Civic rule, once a merchant monopoly, took fresh shape when the crafts made good their claims and prepared the way for a more truly democratic future. Such changes of machinery, however, were small compared with those revolutionary alterations of the conception of corporate duty necessitated by modern conditions and the overmastering requirements of public health.

How Glasgow has met these new conditions is Mr. Paton's theme. The city expands first, the corporate idea afterwards. Municipal Glasgow is now a government by a town council, which appoints and regulates many departmental committees, whose functions embrace such varied matters as police, streets, sewage, cleansing, the fire brigade, gas and electric lighting, baths, public health, city improvement, tramways, parks, art galleries, museums, and libraries. Obviously much value would attach to a study of the past course, the present state, and the apparent promise of all these activities, with the suggestions they offer on the scope, limits, and methods of municipalism—a study, that is, sufficiently from the inside, sufficiently sympathetic, and above all sufficiently independent and critical to detect and point out flaws and dangers, whether of principle or of mode. Mr. Paton falls short in the last requirement. His work is not a study, but a statement, complacent, though by no means vainglorious, fully and sometimes interestingly descriptive of the work and attainment of each department. Throughout, the department's own point of view appears to be followed with little pretence of discrimination or criticism. Hence the book lacks the data which might have put an outsider in a position to offer a disinterested opinion. Mr. Paton's style is fluent but loose, and his composition very often incorrect. He is a better citizen than grammarian; the bulk and character of his matter have obviously baffled his powers to assimilate it without oversights in syntax. Although we have not examined the historical pages minutely, we have noticed a few errors. Prince David, afterwards David I., is referred to as the son, instead of the brother, of Alexander I. One passage states that Glasgow Bridge was built in 1345, another that it was "about 1350." Sir James Marwick has shown reasons for believing that neither date is trustworthy. The procedure of the town council towards the absent archbishop James Beaton, as shown by the notarial instrument of 1561, is capable of a very different interpretation from Mr. Paton's. Moreover, the archbishop did not "assign his temporalities" to the Earl of Arran. One thing in this volume appears inexplicable on any satisfactory basis. The map of the city "in the seventeenth century" seems to be borrowed—with an altered and most misleading title, which is erroneous by a century—from that prepared for Mr. Renwick's 'Glasgow Protocols,' for there it is a delineation of Glasgow, not in the seventeenth century, but about 1547.

Mr. Paton's numberless details of modern development, however, are of more moment than his syntax, his history, or his maps. He has made publicly available an important collection of material to establish the validity of Glasgow's claim to municipal distinction. One cardinal omission, however, those interested in the larger issues of municipalism may regret. He has, in dealing with the manifold corporate activities, forgotten to explain circumstantially the action of the multiform, but concentric machine which actuates and guides the whole. He has stopped on the threshold with the fact that there are committees. How do the committees and their departments transact their business with the world and between themselves? How is their interaction managed so as to secure economy, and maintain a unity and harmonious relation of parts? What are the rules of initiative and the boundaries betwixt departmental and central power? Are the committees in reality as in theory the mere executive of the council? or, on the contrary, is their movement centrifugal, and do the functions of the council tend to resolve themselves into a corrective veto and control? The burghal constitutionalist interested in issues such as these must often search in vain for enlightenment upon them, although they lie close to the vitals of administration, and may some day yield valuable deductions for imperial legislation and affairs. A chapter on the subject, such as Mr. Paton and Sir James Bell together were well qualified to write, would have fittingly rounded off their cyclopædia of progressive Glasgow.

Memoir of Hugo Daniel Harper, D.D. By L. V. Lester, M.A. (Longmans & Co.)

This is a record, pleasantly and concisely written, of a great educationalist who yet was not thought, apparently, either by his friends or himself, to have possessed any particular genius for teaching in the ordinary sense of the term, nor any initial desire to become a schoolmaster. Yet every public-school man who has not narrowed his range to the egotism of a single school will know that Dr. Harper was a leader among head masters while he was at Sherborne, and a strenuous and effective "governor" of various public schools after he had become Principal of Jesus College, Oxford. He had a marvellous activity both of mind and body; and there is no doubt that he overtaxed himself. It is fatal "never to be tired," as his pupils and colleagues said of him, and the last years of his life, though painless and tranquil, were deeply pathetic to those who remembered him in his strenuous prime.

Harper was born in 1821, and, as a child, went to Macaulay's school at Plymouth. Family losses made his father glad to obtain for him a nomination at Christ's Hospital, where he had a distinguished career, and, in 1840, passed on as exhibitioner and scholar to Jesus College, Oxford. He was exactly contemporary with the late Sir

Henry Maine, and they left the school for their respective Universities in the same year. Harper's leading talent was mathematical; yet he only just missed double first-class honours in 1844, and in the next year he obtained fresh mathematical distinctions, and was made Fellow of his college. Thenceforward, till his death in 1895, his career was educational—first at Cowbridge Grammar School, then at Sherborne, and lastly at Oxford as Principal of his old college.

At Cowbridge, however, he only remained three years; in 1850 he was elected head master of Sherborne against such formidable candidates as Colenso, R. Payne Smith, afterwards Dean of Canterbury, and Mr. Wratislaw, subsequently head master of Bury St. Edmunds. Sherborne was an ideal field for Harper's energies. Despite some cramping traditions and local inconveniences, the school had had a fairly honourable career, and under Dr. Lyon (1823-45) had "flourished and prospered." But Lyon's successor was a man of feeble health and no administrative talent, and under his brief sway of five years Lyon's hundred boarders had dwindled to two! There was, in a word, present rack and ruin coupled with a tradition of quite recent success. Such was Harper's prospect in 1850; when he left Sherborne for Oxford, twenty-seven years later, the school numbered over 300, and was growing still. Harper had made his mark as one of the best head masters of his time. He shares with Thring of Uppingham the honour of having brought the head masters of the great foundations into line with their newer brethren, and having united them in a conference on terms of rational equality. Thring devised the plan, but Harper carried it out in practice; what the other head masters thought of his services may best be seen from the letters of Dr. Bell of Marlborough and Dr. Jex-Blake of Rugby in this volume.

Combined, however, with these signal powers of administration, there was in Harper a certain tendency to vehemence and over-confidence in forecasting the future, very markedly illustrated in the correspondence here printed on the subject of the Endowed Schools Bill of 1869. Harper's letters show great power and tenacity in argument, but it is impossible to avoid feeling that the honours in the friendly encounter rest, not with him, but with the present Archbishop of Canterbury, then, of course, head master of Rugby. The statesmanlike forecast of Temple has been, in all essential points, fulfilled; the vehement alarm of Harper has been shown to have been baseless. Nevertheless, the dangers he foresaw, though not inevitable, were possible; but for Harper, Thring, and a few others, they might have been very real.

We do not gather from Mr. Lester's pages what the exact share of Harper in the institution of the Oxford and Cambridge "Certificate" Examination was. We have always understood that it was a leading one; in any case, at the first examination, held in 1874, "Sherborne," says Mr. Lester, with unnecessary grimness, "submitted itself to the harrow." The truth was, of course, that the Universities' examination was the only alternative to State inspection, of which most of the head masters had a justifiable, but surely exaggerated horror.

In all these matters Harper's part was pre-eminent; yet it would be an error to regard him as an organizer and administrator only. He was a man of potent influence upon boys and upon his colleagues—qualities not always combined. One of the latter says: "Dr. Harper was never upon the box-seat at all. He was always in the middle of his team, pulling as much as any two, the best of comrades and the dearest of friends.....There was nothing his masters would not do for him." He would have desired no better epitaph. But side by side with his energy should be reckoned his unselfish generosity. He began life in poverty, and never, we imagine, achieved wealth; he was always spending and being spent for others, whether in meeting from his private purse the necessities of Sherborne or in pleading for the interests of assistant masters. Mr. Lester deserves the gratitude of the public, as well as that of teachers, for publishing this brief record of laborious and well-spent years. We call his attention, in conclusion, to a curious statement on the middle of p. 144; we should be inclined to amend it conjecturally and read discussed for "dismissed."

Timbuctoo the Mysterious. By Félix Dubois. Translated from the French by Diana White. With Illustrations, Maps, and Plans. (Heinemann.)

The formation of the Niger Company and the recent military expedition are a very late acknowledgment of the importance of the position which the French have assumed in all the upper Nigerine region. It is thirteen years since Col. Borgnis-Desbordes planted the French flag at Bammaku on the Niger, after a fierce tussle with Samory, and only three years since the taking of Jenne, and two since the entry into Timbuctoo; so that we had sufficient warning if we had intended to be at all beforehand with the French in their decisive seizure with both hands of the rich and extensive territory watered by the Upper Niger—"this splendid country," says M. Dubois, "which is many times larger than France, and contains from ten to fifteen millions of people," and which, he declares in another place, is quite a kindly and agreeable place of settlement for Europeans, for "were it not for the unaccustomed proportions of the river and the marvellous sun, there would be nothing specially tropical about the country."

But this is scarcely the place in which to insist on and to emphasize the political consequence of the French acquisition of Timbuctoo and the country round about. "Ils y sont; ils y restent"; and our immediate business here is to point out the singular value of this book of M. Félix Dubois, which is adequately translated by Miss Diana White.

The fascination of Timbuctoo for the geographer and the traveller has long been curiously intense. Of what other considerable place on the earth can it be said that, known to the Romans (as Nigira Metropolis), celebrated in the fables of the Middle Ages, actively sought for during the last two hundred years, and for the last hundred longed for so keenly that great travellers "with desire of it fell sick" (like Bunyan's Pilgrim) or died in the quest of it—spite of all these things that it has only now been truly discovered for us? And yet that is the fact, for the book of René Caillié—another Frenchman who, disguised as a Mussulman, penetrated to Timbuctoo in 1826—is of little worth; that of Dr. Barth—a German who accompanied the Richardson expedition across the desert from Tripoli about thirty years later—is of less worth still, while that of Dr. Oscar Lenz, who spent three weeks in Timbuctoo in 1879, is little better than Barth's; and these are all. Never have English travellers been so unfortunate as in their quest for Timbuctoo, and that was mainly because the only route to it which was not encumbered with the gravest difficulties and dangers—that from the Atlantic seaboard by way of the Senegal—has been occupied, if not absolutely barred, by the French for about two hundred years. And even on that route a traveller would not have found "roses, roses, all the way" had he not been preceded by a subjugating army, as M. Félix Dubois has been.

But if M. Dubois cannot boast that he has shown the traveller's qualities of resourcefulness and audacity in danger, that is only because there was no danger to encounter; and he at least is able to manifest in a high degree the far more valuable qualities of observation, enthusiasm, and research. Were it not that there is no reason in the world why we should doubt that M. Dubois has been to Timbuctoo (apart from the fact that his book is filled with reproductions, not of fancy pictures, but of obviously realistic photographs of strange people and places), we should find it hard to believe the many astonishing revelations which he makes of the history and antiquities, the architecture, the commerce, and the literature of the Upper Niger. Here, first, are some sentences (at intervals of some pages) that suggest the beauty and wealth of the land as they were unfolded on his progress from the Senegal down the Niger to Timbuctoo:—

"The road from Dioubaba to Bammaku cuts from east to west across the massive Foota-Jallon range that separates the basin of the Senegal from that of the Niger. It is full of pictures recalling the Forest of Fontainebleau, and is so abundantly watered that you fall asleep every night to the sound of some gurgling cascade or waterfall.....The Niger, with its vast and misty horizons, is more like an inland ocean than a river. Borne along upon it, scarcely seeing land, the traveller is carried away by those endless dreams which haunt the infinitudes of the sea. Its waters break upon its banks in the cadenced waves of the Mediterranean shores; and when winds, grown to violence in the desert, swell its waves into a great race, sea-sickness will convince the most rebellious that the river Niger is of kin to oceans.....Between Segu and the regions bordering Timbuctoo I passed wonderful herds of oxen, horses, goats, and sheep. Unlike the stunted cattle and emaciated hacks of the countries of the Niger's source, these oxen had imposing humps, and the horses were on the lines of Arabs. The sheep, too, were astonishing. Long fleece replaced the close wool of the Southern animal, and the flocks were to be counted by such thousands of heads that I was greeted at long distances by ovations of bleating."

But it is the great town—or perhaps one should say city—of Jenne that wakes his enthusiasm to the highest pitch, as much almost as if it were Babylon the Great or Thebes of the Hundred Gates; Jenne, which boasts a barbaric kind of Egyptian architecture dating from the tenth or eleventh century; Jenne, built by the Songhays, who declare they came from Egypt before the days of Mohammed; Jenne, for ages the capital of the great Songhay empire, extending from Lake Tchad to the Atlantic, and from the desert to the hills and forests that look down on the filthy swamps where we have planted our Gold Coast and Guinea Coast colonies; Jenne, whose golden fame gave us our phrases "Guinea gold" and "Guinea Coast"; Jenne, which is the mother and mistress, the maker and feeder, of Timbuctoo. Timbuctoo itself, the great, the mysterious Timbuctoo, is but the emporium or warehouse port of Jenne, the author declares, and he urges very plausibly that the reason why we have heard in Europe so much of Timbuctoo and so little of Jenne is that we were wont to get our geographical gossip by way of the Sahara and through the traders and wanderers of the desert, who, having reached Timbuctoo with their camels, would have found it difficult to penetrate with them into the lacustrine and riverine region which Jenne commands, and who, therefore, knew only Timbuctoo and talked only of it, as sailors landing in Liverpool may never go near Manchester nor trouble their heads about it.

Into the history of Jenne and the Songhays (whose "oral traditions, chronicles, and dwellings all betray their Nilotic fatherland") M. Dubois enters with fulness and gusto. We may doubt some of his conclusions, but he is worth listening to, and his enthusiasm is infectious. He declares he takes his account from that long-famed work, in the existence of which Orientalists have only half believed—if they have believed so much—the 'Tarik è Soudan,' a copy of which he found at Jenne and compared with another at Timbuctoo, and which, he says, is now being translated by M. Houdas, the Orientalist who has made so admirable a translation of the native history of the emperors of Morocco by Ben Ahmed Ezziani. He recounts the three Songhay dynasties—the Dia, the Sunni, and the Askia—who controlled the destinies of their people for a thousand years, enumerates their kings, and relates some of their greatest exploits—especially those of Ali the Conqueror and Mohammed Askia, who was probably the greatest of all the kings, being a great administrator as well as a great warrior. At the end of the sixteenth century the Songhay empire was overthrown by the Moors, who, according to their wont, cast a deadly blight upon the prosperity of those whom they ruled, so that thenceforth for Jenne and Timbuctoo that decay began which has continued in flux and reflux ever since. What Timbuctoo was like when in greatest repute it is impossible fully to know. "But," says M. Dubois,

"its university of Sankoré was at the height of its prosperity, the fame of its professors being known not only in the black countries, but throughout Arabian Africa itself. Learned strangers flocked hither from Morocco, Tunis, and Egypt. The civilization of Arabia clasped hands with the civilization of Egypt.....Such was the splendour that our imaginations are still dazzled by its reflections, three centuries after the setting of her star. So great was her glory that, in spite of all the vicissitudes she has suffered, her vitality is not yet extinguished."

In truth, Timbuctoo at its busiest and most famous seems to have been the Paris of the Western Soudan—being noted not only for its commerce and its learning, but even more for its gaiety and its encouragement of all the arts of pleasure and debauchery, insomuch that the beauty and charm of the ladies of Timbuctoo, the ruinous expense of its life, its feasting and dancing, were spoken of and desired from Tangier to Lake Tchad. Says one:—

"Many people who only came to stay a few weeks would prolong their visit for months and years, detained either by the agreeable life of the town or by some passion; and many who arrived with a fortune returned home ruined."

It would be unfair to take by quotation anything away from the freshness of M. Dubois's account of the "poor and miserable and blind and naked" condition (so to say) in which he found this whilom queen of the desert and the Niger. But what will France do with her? Who can tell? Meanwhile she has laid an iron hand upon her. She has put gunboats with mitrailleuses upon her river, and built forts to command her, while a negro army under French officers is enrolled for the defence and subjection of her and the enormous country round about.

M. Dubois's book should at once take a place of authority on the shelves of the traveller and geographer; but, more than that, its vigour, its picturesqueness, and its extraordinary store of new information should recommend it to all who like to be amused and interested as well as solidly instructed.

NEW NOVELS.

A Matter of Temperament. By Caroline Fothergill. (Black.)

A CLEVER book, and somewhat off the lines familiar to the present generation of novel-readers. There is no "extra strong emotion," no insistence on the physical side of passion, no attempt to make the novel perform the functions of the treatise, no "problem." It is a plain, straightforward study of a not uncommon type of character. Gilbert Ford is a country doctor, whom we find at the opening of the story just engaged to a neighbour, Henrietta Farrington. Her sister has shown signs of consumption, and has been ordered by an eminent specialist to try a winter in Egypt as a last chance. Here the first contrast of temperament shows itself. Both regret the necessity for postponing their marriage; but while Henrietta accepts the six months' exile as a manifest duty, Ford resists her decision, opposing, and not insincerely, his own professional opinion that the disorder has progressed too far for anything to be hoped from change of climate. It is characteristic of the man that he urges this last objection, without the least reticence, upon the invalid's sister:—

"When he laboured under any mental burden it was a necessity to him to get rid of it, no matter who took it up; and the knowledge that some one else always did take it up—Henrietta generally, since they had been engaged—in no way lessened his relief at being without it. He was very happily constituted," muses Henrietta herself. Elsewhere she owns to her sister, who is not in love with him, that "though charming he is wanting in wisdom." It is not that he is devoid of a certain "natural honesty of mind," but he has all a cat's dislike of present discomfort. Characteristic of him also is it

"that nothing ever came to or from him incompletely, or went through successive stages in his mind. The whole thing was there at once, fully formed, ready to be carried out at a moment's notice in all its details."

How well one knows the kind of man! and how certain one is to like him, and trust him not an inch further than one can see! Henrietta, unfortunately for her, has to trust Dr. Ford; and it is only thanks to his counterpart, a plain-spoken, cynical, loyal young lady, that disaster does not ensue. Miss Fothergill is obviously a disciple of Miss Austen, and that is a pleasant thing to come across in these days. It is to be hoped that her example may lead some other lady novelists to recognize that there is an English school of fiction, and that it is not wholly devoid of merit. Of course in some ways it is easier for a "charming woman" to write of "things that she don't understand," or her readers either; but when she will use her own observation, and give us the results as cleverly as Miss Fothergill has done, she ought not to miss her reward.

Sebastiani's Secret. By S. E. Waller. (Chatto & Windus.)

WHAT Sebastiani's secret was, beyond that it was kept in a walking-stick and had something to do with the lost continent of Atlantis, it is difficult, even after perusal of Mr. Waller's book, to say. One or two incidental facts we have gathered: as that hats with feathers and jewels, as worn in the sixteenth century, were also fashionable in the lost continent; that there is an "ancient reigning family" which "comes down direct from the Shepherd Kings of Babylon, and then through the Sassanian Emperors of Persia and the Cæsars of Rome," but sprang originally from the same quarter; and certain other matters which the ordinary histories omit. But except that the secret confers some kind of power over women, apparently by imparting a knowledge of details concerning their private life which they would rather not have known—a power which hardly exercises any influence on the course of the story—we can make little or nothing of it. The author, it is clear, intends to be "weird"; but in honesty we must say that nowhere in the course of his story could we contrive to shudder "worth a cent." This is distinctly a pity, for of all the emotions excited by fiction, that expressed by the shudder is perhaps, at least after a certain time of life, the most thoroughly satisfying. The truth is that Mr. Waller, who we suspect is a beginner, has several qualifications, such as a fair command of language and some power of characterization; but he has started with a far too difficult subject, and written before having got it quite clearly worked out in his own mind. Knowing that the occult business, the Oriental business, the society business, are all popular, he has tried to combine them, with the result of producing a hazy narrative in which it is difficult to make out what has happened, and why that more than anything else. In a word, it is not "convincing," and of a story containing elements of the occult or mysterious "convincingness" is the primary and indispensable quality.

Hilda Strafford, &c. By Beatrice Harraden. (Blackwood & Sons.)

Miss Harraden describes well the dreary hopelessness of life on a ranch for a woman absolutely uninterested in the cultivation of lemon trees, and of the tragedy of two well-meaning people, one of whom loves and the other does not, bound together in such circumstances. The idea of the story is good, because the incidents are admirably chosen to show off the character of Hilda Strafford, a shallow, unloving nature, which would pass through life evenly and monotonously in ordinary circumstances. Here she is in a sort of way abstracted and made clear in the rarefied atmosphere of the ranch. Her husband, a weak, loving fool, also gains a touch of heroism in the hard fight that he makes for her love and against malignant nature. Both in this and the other story, however, the brighter side of ranch life is shown in the comradeship of the men, who help one another, and especially the weak husband, in the fight against storms and despondency.

A Pinchbeck Goddess. By Mrs. Fleming (Alice M. Kipling). (Heinemann.)

This book reads rather like one by the author's brother with all the genius extracted. The Indian society such as he delights to represent it, with its painted women and third-rate subalterns, is all there, but without a touch of that human interest which always relieves the horror of his descriptions of life at Simla. Here the vulgarity is unrelieved, and consequently tedious; vulgarity is essentially false, and it is only tolerable in fiction when the undercurrent of genuine feeling is revealed, as Flaubert clearly saw in 'Madame Bovary.' The description of the society in which Flaubert's heroine lived and of the heroine herself would be hopeless stuff if the author did not show what it really concealed and how it arose. Here the only person who raises a fitful interest is the silly Major Strath-Ingram, who for one moment, in proposing to the heroine, becomes luminous. The heroine herself is impossible and uninteresting. The parade of quotations as headings and titles for the chapters is ridiculously excessive for such a book as this.

All in All. By Corinna Bruce. (Hurst & Blackett.)

The author of 'All in All' possesses many ideas and words, but she has not yet secured an absolute control over them. The ideas will sometimes mingle in a phantasmagoria, and the words rebel against the bit and snaffle. Of one of her heroines Miss Bruce informs us that

"hers was a character who forgave the blow from the hand she loved.....The women who are gentle generally get pushed against the wall; it is the bold ones which are most successful."

The style is not all so slipshod. The author has probably started authorship at an early age, and we see no reason why she should not write a stronger romance. 'All in All' is on the old lines of multiple marriage and heirs in the background; it is melodramatic, but not without interest and attraction.

Margot. By Sidney Pickering. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

'Margot' is a little overstrained in parts, but still sufficiently accurate in its intuitions and delineations. Of course, the heroine is a young woman with a stain upon her past—a stain inherited from her mother, and a second stain resulting from an indiscretion on her own part. There is no dishonour in respect of the former blemish, and the reader will forgive such slight and momentary deflection from the path of duty as was involved in the mistake of a girl. But the two things taken together form a dark background to her life; and Mr. Pickering's task is to describe her as a pure-minded and delicate woman, winning her way up again from misery to peace and happiness. The plot of the story is not particularly ingenious, and it may be regarded by experienced novel-readers as somewhat cheap. Margot herself is the most attractive and the best-drawn character in the book, though there are others, like the Englishman Esdale and the Russian doctor Petroff, who bear witness to Mr. Pickering's skill as a portrait painter. There is some literary merit in 'Margot,' but a rendering of a long quotation from Heine on the third page (a device which is fortunately not repeated) is a little unhappy in at least one phrase.

A Devotee: an Episode in the Life of a Butterfly. By Mary Cholmondeley. (Arnold.)

In this short tale Miss Cholmondeley has omitted the sensational element, modelled upon Wilkie Collins, which marred to some extent her clever novel 'Diana Tempest,' and consequently her new story is much more homogeneous. Her sketches of young men and women belonging to fashionable society are as clever as ever; but Mr. Loftus is altogether a lady's hero, a far-away connexion of Sir Charles Grandison's, and quite as unreal. No wonder his first wife ran away from him.

The Dunthorpes of Westleigh. By Christian Lys. (Downey & Co.)

This domestic story is in some respects above the average of the class to which it belongs, that vast multitude which it would be difficult indeed for any man to number, of tales for family reading regulated by the highest moral and the feeblest literary principles. The mystery attendant upon the rightful ownership of the Dunthorpes' estate, the murder of the old squire, and other little obstacles which check the course of Cicely Dunthorpe and Kenneth Rivington's wooing for a time, are handled with some capacity and without undue sentimentality. The sketches of the imbecile dipsomaniac and his admirable wife are good, in spite of various attendant circumstances wherein the probabilities are strained to the uttermost.

Partie du Pied Gauche. Par Mlle. Marie Anne de Bovet. (Paris, Lemerre.)

Mlle. de Bovet is becoming a serious rival of "Gyp" in sparkling dialogue on subjects which do not suit all worlds and all moralities. In her present novel—reprinted, if we mistake not, from La Vie Parisienne—she shows great brilliancy, but lacks the somewhat pathetic note which in "Gyp's" most doubtful books redeems the choice of subject. Mlle. de Bovet can do such remarkable work in a different line, as was shown both by her novel dealing with Ireland and by her other writings on the same theme, that we cannot but regret her present one. She may reply that the public buys the work of her newer style, and that she dare not even allow the advertisement in it of the more delicate products of her pen.

ENGLISH PHILOLOGY.

Lakeland and Iceland: a Glossary of Words in the Dialect of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and North Lancashire, which seem allied to or identical with the Icelandic or Norse. By the Rev. T. Ellwood.—Two Collections of Derbicisms. By Samuel Pegge. Edited, with Two Introductions, by Prof. Skeat and Thomas Hallam.—A Warwickshire Word-Book. By G. F. Northall.—A Bibliographical List of Works illustrative of the Dialect of Northumberland. Compiled by Oliver Heslop. (English Dialect Society.)—With the publication of these four opuscula the English Dialect Society concludes its honourable career. In an accompanying circular, signed by Prof. Skeat as President of the Society, the members are informed that no subscriptions are asked for in 1897 and succeeding years, as no further publications are to be issued; those members who have not already subscribed for the 'English Dialect Dictionary' are strongly urged to do so, and those who are engaged in the preparation of glossaries are requested to send their collections in MS. to Prof. Wright in order that they may at once be utilized in the 'Dictionary,' without the delay that would be caused by their being printed separately. There can be no doubt that the Society was well advised in its decision to terminate its labours with the year in which the 'English Dialect Dictionary' was begun to be issued. It has always been understood that the primary object of the Society was the collection of materials for this dictionary, and now that this object has been accomplished with a sufficient approach to completeness to justify Prof. Wright in actually commencing his work, it would have been a mere waste of effort to continue the publication of separate glossaries. There may still be room for a few monographs on individual dialects, but these can hardly be important enough to warrant the existence of the Society beyond its natural limit. Of the four works now issued by far the most important is the volume containing Dr. Pegge's collections relating to the dialect of Derbyshire. The author, who died in 1796 at the age of ninety-two, was a remarkably careful and sagacious student of dialect, and the early date at which he wrote imparts to his observations a peculiar value. The difficult task of preparing Dr. Pegge's notes for the press has been accomplished by Prof. Skeat with evident skill and judgment. With the able help of the late Mr. Hallam the vocabulary of the dialect as recorded more than a century ago has been compared throughout with the living speech of the county, and especially with that of the parish of Whittington, of which Dr. Pegge was rector. It has been found that about one-third of the words explained by Pegge are now obsolete, though many of them are well remembered by the older people in the district. Mr. Hallam's introduction abounds with information of the highest value to all students of dialectal phonetics.—As is indicated by the title which he has given to his glossary, Mr. Ellwood's interest in the dialect of the Lake district is chiefly etymological, and he has admitted only a few words other than those which he regards as derived from the Scandinavian languages. As the proofs have been revised by Mr. Magnússon, the correctness of the Icelandic data may be safely relied upon, and the work is not without philological value, though Mr. Ellwood's etymologies are not always right. "Stoun, a sudden fit of pain," has no connexion with the Icelandic stingr. The word is well known in the form stound, meaning originally a moment, "spell," and cognate with the German Stunde, an hour. Gey, meaning "very," cannot come from the Old Norse gagn. Fotring iron, an instrument for separating the awns from barley, is absurdly derived from fótr, a foot, and is said to be so called "because it was used between the feet"! It really belongs to the obsolete verb falter or foulter, which will be found (under the former spelling) in the 'Oxford English Dictionary.' Mr. Ellwood's references to customs and superstitions common to the Lake district and Iceland are of considerable interest.—It is singular that Mr. Northall's Warwickshire glossary should be the first attempt to treat systematically the dialect of the native county of Shakspeare. It is disappointing to find that it contains hardly any words that are not already well known from the glossaries of the adjoining counties; but that is not the fault of the compiler, who has done his work with great care and intelligence. We do not remember having heard before of the "liver-pin," an imaginary portion of the human mechanism which requires to be "oiled" by generous diet. Other words new to us and of obscure origin are ivel, to pilfer; ched, "full to the brim with eating"; and syke, bacon. Mr. Northall's abstinence from etymological suggestions is to be commended.—The bibliography of works illustrating the dialect of Northumberland, by Mr. Heslop, is carefully executed and useful. Mr. Heslop has very properly included notices of the books and papers treating of the place-names and surnames of the county. If equally well-prepared bibliographies existed for all the English counties, a great deal of labour would be saved to students of dialect and local history.

The second part of the English Dialect Dictionary, edited by Prof. Joseph Wright (Frowde), contains the words from "Ballow" to "Blare." It is worth notice that while the letter A occupies in the 'Dialect Dictionary' only a few pages more than in Webster's 'English Dictionary,' the portion of the letter B ending with blare fills more than four times the space that it occupies in that work. This curious disproportion is due to the fact that the words beginning with A in literary English are chiefly learned words of Latin or Greek origin, which, of course, do not come into the dialects at all, while those beginning with B are mainly popular words, which, for the most part, have senses in dialect more or less different from their meaning in standard English. The quality of the work in this second part confirms the high opinion which we have previously expressed of Prof. Wright's ability and diligence. In our notice of the first part we had occasion to point out a few oversights of no great importance; in the second, which we have scrutinized with equal minuteness, we have hardly been able to discover any mistake worth mentioning. There are one or two misspellings in the Latin scientific names of plants and animals, and in some cases the same word is differently spelt in different places without proper cross-references. For example, bead-bind, given as a Hampshire name for the black bryony, is clearly, in spite of the difference of application, the same word as bellwine, which is used in various districts for the bindweed and similar plants. The article on the verb be fills nine columns, although forms differing merely in pronunciation from those of standard English are not noticed. Readers who have made no special study of dialect will be astonished to find in how many different ways the "I am" of literary English is rendered in different parts of the country. In Yorkshire generally, though not at Sheffield, it becomes "I is"; in Staffordshire, "I bin"; in other counties, "I be," "I are"; and in the south-west it is "Cham." The part does not contain much etymological information, such of the words as are not found in literary English being for the most part of obscure origin; but in several instances interesting cognate forms are adduced from the glossaries of German and Scandinavian dialects. The Dorsetshire beal, a weasel, is correctly compared with the French belette, but we believe (in opposition to the opinion of French philologists) that it is of Celtic origin.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Probably English readers will turn first to the papers about Tennyson and Lady Tennyson in Mrs. Fields's Authors and Friends (Fisher Unwin), and after these to that about Longfellow. It is rather interesting to learn that the author, when quite a little girl, discovered 'The Lady of Shalott' for herself when it still appeared meaningless to her teachers, and her description of the great man's reading of his own poems is effective. In other respects the Tennyson papers are disappointing. The paper about Longfellow has better stuff in it. Indeed, the picture of Longfellow at home leaves little to be desired. It is a graphic and vivacious piece of work. Of the various good things about what people said and wrote to Longfellow there is nothing better than his note about a stranger who called to ask if Shakspeare lived in the neighbourhood. But Longfellow's account of Jules Janin is rather nice too. Janin offered him every civility. "What can I do for you in Paris? Whom would you like to see?" Then he asked Longfellow to dinner, and the party consisted of Janin and his wife and one other. Like the Spanish marshal who had no enemies to forgive on his death-bed because he had shot them all, Janin had no friends left. Writing in 1879, Longfellow made some mention of Shelley's lines ending

Where moonlight and music and feeling
Are one.

The author ventures to reprint the song "because it is seldom found among Shelley's poems." This is a mistake. The song first appeared in these columns, and has been included probably in every edition of Shelley; but except at first the song has always been given with the additional opening stanza,

The keen stars were twinkling, &c.

The other papers deal with Wendell Holmes, Mrs. Stowe, Celia Thaxter, and Whittier.

Messrs. Cassell & Co. publish Essays in Liberalism, by Six Oxford Men. The design of the work is good, but the execution feeble. It has been the wish of the authors—the young authors, we believe—to defend Liberalism of a high type. They are anti-Socialist, but above all anti-materialist, and denounce those who ask for the pecuniary benefit of reforms, and try to teach men to desire to hear rather of liberty and of justice. Nothing can be better; but the practical difficulties which have stood in their way are considerable. To begin with, their baggage is not sufficient for their march. Then they have shrunk from the Home Rule question, but must be reminded that the omission of any attempt to deal with it exposes them to being told that their book is worthless as a contribution to politics. They have not faced the problem of national defence. They make hardly a mention of the treatment of subject races. From their own point of view they were bound to allot a considerable place to lashing what to them must be the vice of acquiring possessions and protectorates without that regard to the moral considerations involved which was prominent half a century ago. If they had a sufficient message to the electorate upon such topics to justify a book, they ought to have made up their minds whether they were going to appeal to good men and to enlightened men, apart from party, to support their views, or whether they were to appeal to such men within the Liberal party only. If this latter course was to be taken, then it was incumbent on them to defend the Liberal party upon the point which appears to separate it from men like Mr. Courtney, Mr. Arnold-Forster, Sir Albert Rollit, Mr. Drage, and others, who, supporting the present Government and opposing the Liberal party, nevertheless hold in the main the views of the authors of the present volume. They have fallen between two stools, and their book will have no effect. The authors say that "no particular essay in this book has been devoted to a restatement of Home Rule for Ireland as part and parcel of our creed: those articles rather have been treated which for the moment are the text of burning questions. To say that Home Rule is not one of these is a frank statement of tactics and possibilities."

We confess we cannot understand this passage, and think its style is cryptic. But there can be no doubt about the fact, which is that Home Rule has been wholly ignored, and that, as it still stands first in the Liberal programme, and as Irish Home Rule can only be avoided by being merged in what is known as Home Rule All Round, the authors ought to have discussed one or other, or both, as a preliminary to their investigations, or else to have abandoned the pretence of writing as members of the Liberal party to members of that party. We might, if it were worth it, take many exceptions by way of criticism of details to the various essays, which are all of a somewhat perfunctory kind. Here and there they have the youthful cocksureness which was to be expected. Take, for example: "No specialist ever respected a newspaper's opinion on his own subject. Their influence is the proof and the measure of our ignorance." The authors do not appear to have stopped to think whether the statement in the first half of this quotation is true. But surely every colonial specialist respects the Times colonial articles from the pen of Miss Flora Shaw. Every specialist in foreign affairs respects the articles of Dr. Dillon and o Mr. Henry Norman. Every specialist in naval matters respects the articles of Mr. Thursfield and Mr. H. W. Wilson. Every specialist in the procedure of the House of Commons respects the articles of Mr. T. P. O'Connor and of Mr. H. W. Lucy. Every specialist in the relations of foreign affairs to the possibilities of war respects the articles of Mr. Spenser Wilkinson; and, not to multiply examples, we have confined ourselves to a few writers in the metropolitan daily press alone, ignoring the excellent provincial press. In the same essay it appears to be made a ground for a sneer against the Conservative party that a Bill conferring the suffrage on women passed its second reading in a House of Commons with a Conservative majority, and that a somewhat similar Bill was rejected in a Parliament with a Liberal majority. The Bill, by the way, is styled "the thing," a somewhat contemptuous treatment of a subject which, at all events, might be thought worth discussion. The writer seems to forget that a similar Bill had previously passed its second reading in a Liberal Parliament, a fact which in itself appears to knock on the head his somewhat careless arguments. Another of the writers in making an attack on a not very important book, which we agree with him attracted more attention than it deserved ('Made in Germany'), prints tables of warships built in the United Kingdom for foreign countries which he takes from the author, adding, "After inquiry I should much doubt whether these figures are reliable or correct." He then adds in a note other figures of his own, which he says he got from "a friend," and which are certainly equally incorrect. If "the thing" was worth naming, it was worth taking some trouble to obtain figures, which we imagine might have been got, if not from any public source, at least through such special papers as Engineering, or from the directors of Armstrongs, the Thames Iron Works, a few of the Clyde firms, and Yarrows. The author of the essay is using his figures to show that this country continues to build warships for foreign countries, but the figures which he gives, if they were accurate, would go to show that the tonnage is small as compared with that of other countries which ought not to be able to stand the comparison, and to any intelligent reader they will seem to upset the writer's case. His case is a good one, but he does not prove it, and rather seems to establish the contrary. Inquiry in France of two firms alone would show that during several of the recent years named they have turned out more tons of ships for foreign countries than are shown in the incorrect figures here given as the product of the United Kingdom.

In his convenient little series of "Canterbury Poets," Mr. Walter Scott has published a third instalment of Browning, Dramatic Romances and Lyrics, including also 'Sordello.' The introductory note and picture of Asolo are both good, and the volume, containing much of Browning's best work in the interesting early versions, should be popular.

Messrs. Chapman & Hall have sent us two more volumes of their wonderfully cheap edition of Dickens's novels, Nicholas Nickleby and Dombey and Son.—To the handsome series of "Nineteenth Century Classics" (Ward & Lock), edited by Mr. Shorter, has been added Carlyle's Past and Present, with a clever and interesting introduction by Mr. Frederic Harrison.

Messrs. A. & C. Black send us Who's Who for 1897, much enlarged and improved on what it used to be by Mr. Douglas Sladen. There are some noticeable omissions, but not many.

We have received the first two numbers of The Booksellers' Review. The second is a considerable improvement on its predecessor, and the journal promises to be of much service to the trade.

We have on our table Sketch of the Life of Mahomet and of the History of Islam in the Luganda Language, by the Rev. G. K. Baskerville and the Rev. Y. Kayi'zi (S.P.C.K.),—Might have Been, by the Rev. J. Parker, D.D. (Chatto & Windus),—Some Account of the Life and Labors of Dr. François Joseph Gall, Founder of Phrenology, by C. F. Wells (Fowler),—Among the Menabe, by the Rev. G. H. Smith (S.P.C.K.),—Elementary Geology, by G. S. Boulger (Collins),—Evil and Evolution, by the Author of 'The Social Horizon' (Macmillan),—A Text-Book of the History of Sculpture, by A. Marquand and A. L. Frothingham (Longmans),—Experience, by the Rev. W. Richmond (Sonnenschein),—Introduction to Public Finance, by C. C. Plehn (Macmillan),—Thirteenth Annual Report of the Bureau of Ethnology, 1891-2, by J. W. Powell (Washington, Government Printing Office),—Outlines of Business Knowledge requisite for Women, by B. Stewart (Hatchards),—The Art of Extempore Speaking, by H. Ford (Stock),—Sententiæ Juris, Legal and other Epigram, by W. Holloway (Redway),—Uncle Sam's Letters on Phrenology, by N. Sizer (Fowler),—A Pennyworth of Blunders, by D. Macrae (Glasgow, Morison Brothers),—Tracings; or, Reflection of Nature, written by E. Scott O'Connor (New York, the Century Company),—The Green Men of Norwell, by Mary C. Rowsell (Simpkin),—The White Tzar, by L. T. Meade (Marshall & Co.),—The Dream of Mr. H.—, the Herbalist, by Hugh Miller (Blackwood),—The Little Runaways, by M. H. Capes (S.S U.),—The Palace on the Moor, by E. D. Adams (Arnold),—John Wolfgang, by Beauseant (Headley Brothers),—The Great Beckleswaithe Mystery, by H. Herman (Simpkin),—The Sorceress of Paris, by P. H. Ditchfield (Low),—Aunt Dorothy's Tea-Table, by Catherine M. MacSorley (S.P.C.K.),—The Paladins of Edwin the Great, by Sir Clements R. Markham (Black),—Where Billows Break, by H. Deccan (Digby & Long),—A Tragic Idyl, by Paul Bourget (Downey & Co.),—Lyrics of a Life, by the Rev. W. Earée (Edinburgh, Banks & Co.),—From Dawn to Dusk, a Book of Verses, by G. Milner (Manchester, Cornish),—Echoes from Youthland, by H. Walton (Marshall & Co.),—Ballads and Songs of Spain, by L. Williams (Digby & Long),—The Articles of Christian Instruction in Favorlang-Formosan, Dutch, and English, edited by the Rev. W. Campbell (Kegan Paul),—When the Worst comes to the Worst, by the Rev. W. Robertson Nicoll, LL.D. (Isbister),—The Double Text of Jeremiah (Massoretic and Alexandrian) Compared, by A. W. Streane, D.D. (Cambridge, Deighton, Bell & Co.),—and Loose Leaves from a Minister's Manuscripts, by S. Wainwright (Simpkin). Among New Editions we have Curiosities of Law and Lawyers, by C. James (Low),—Quicksilver, by G. Manville Fenn (Blackie),—The Farm in the Karoo, by Mrs. Carey-Hobson (Sonnenschein),—Strathpeffer Spa, its Waters and Climate, by R. F. Fox, M.D. (Black),—The Holy Eucharist and Common Life, by G. Sarson (Hibberd),—and A New Course of Experimental Chemistry, by J. Castell-Evans (Murby).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Benson's (E. W.) Cyprian, his Life, Times, and Work, 8vo. 21/ net, cl.
Chamberlain's (Rev. J.) In the Tiger Jungle, and other Stories of Missionary Work, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hale's (W. B.) The New Obedience, a Plea for Social Submission to Christ, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Kinross's (J.) Dogma in Religion and Creeds in the Church, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Ward's (Rt. Rev. A. B.) Life of Service before the Throne, 3/6
Wiedemann's (A.) Religion of the Ancient Egyptians, 12/6 cl.
Wirgman's (A. T.) The Doctrine of Confirmation considered in relation to Holy Baptism, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Fine Art.

Ruskin's (J.) Munera Pulveris, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.

Poetry.

Apollo Poets: Longfellow, Byron, Milton, Wordsworth, 3/6 each, cl.
Arnold's (M.) Empedocles on Etna, a Dramatic Poem, 10/6
More Songs from Vagabondia, by Bliss Carman and R. Hovey, Designs by T. B. Meteyard, 12mo. 5/ net, bds.
Radford's (D.) A Light Load, Poems, with Designs by B. E. Parsons, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.

Bibliography.

Bibliographica, Vol. 3, folio, 42/ net, half bound.
Humphreys's (A. L.) The Private Library, royal 16mo. 3/6 net.

Philosophy.

British Moralists, Selections from Writers principally of the Eighteenth Century, edited by Bigge, 2 vols. cr. 8vo. 18/
James's (W.) The Will to Believe, and other Essays in Popular Philosophy, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Lafargue's (J.) Les Moralités Légendaires, 16/ net, bds.
Seth's (A.) Man's Place in the Cosmos, and other Essays, cr. 8vo. 7/6 net, cl.

History and Biography.

Colville's (J.) Byways of History, Studies in Social Life and Rural Economy of Olden Time, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cool's (Capt. W.) With the Dutch in the East, illus. 21/ cl.
Dictionary of National Biography, Vol. 50, royal 8vo. 15/ net.
Eminent Persons, Biographies reprinted from the 'Times,' Vol. 6, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Gough (General Sir A.) and Innes's (A. D.) The Sikhs and the Sikh Wars, 8vo. 16/ cl.
Kent's (C. F.) A History of the Hebrew People, Vol. 2, 6/ cl.
Wagner's (Richard) Letters to August Roeckel, translated by E. C. Sellar, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

Freeman's (E. A.) Sketches of Travel in Normandy and Maine, cr. 8vo. 8/6 cl.
Thomson's (H. C.) The Outgoing Turk, Impressions of a Journey through the Western Balkans, 8vo. 14/ net, cl.

Philology.

Beuzemaker's (J. J.) Second French Course, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Temple's (G.) A Glossary of Indian Terms relating to Religion, Customs, &c., royal 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Thimm's (C. A.) Egyptian Self-Taught, cr. 8vo. 2/ swd.
Winjkoop's (Rev. J. D.) Manual of Hebrew Syntax, 5/ net.

Science.

Bailey's (G. H.) First Stage Inorganic Chemistry, 2/ cl.
Benton's (C. J.) A Table of the Principal Stars, 8vo. 2/ swd.
Butterfill's (H. H.) First Principles of Mechanical and Engineering Drawing, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Cabot's (R. C.) A Guide to the Clinical Examination of the Blood, 8vo. 16/ cl.
Davis's (E. P.) A Treatise on Obstetrics, royal 8vo. 16/ net.
Mason's (R. O.) Telepathy and the Subliminal Self, 6/ cl.
Matriculation Model Answers: Heat and Light, cr. 8vo. 2/
Teegan's (T. H.) Key to Elementary and Intermediate Algebra, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Thomson's (R.) The Plagues of Egypt and their Relation to the Natural Phenomena of the Land, cr. 8vo. 3/ cl.
Treatise on Surgery, by American Authors, 2 vols. 34/ net.
Woll's (F. W.) A Handbook for Farmers and Dairymen, 6/6

General Literature.

Addison's Sir Roger de Coverley, with Full Notes by J. R. and A. A. Large, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Addison's Spectator, Selections, ed. Rev. H. Evans, 2/ cl.
Balzac's A Woman of Thirty, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Bodkin's (M. McD.) White Magic, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Clark's (Capt. C.) My Yarns of Sea Foam and Gold Dust, 6/
Colmore's (G.) Love for a Key, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net, sewed.
Cornford's (L. C.) The Master Beggars, illus. 4/6 net, cl.
Dawe's (C.) Capt. Castle, a Tale of the China Seas, 6/ cl.
Dewar's (G. A. B.) The Book of the Dry Fly, 8vo. 15/ net, cl.
Fitzpatrick's (J. P.) The Outspan, Tales of South Africa, 3/6
Forbes's (A. W. H.) Is Science Guilty? or Some of the Sins of Scientific Civilization, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Friswell's (J. H.) The Burden of Life, a Volume of Essays, 3/6
Gunter's (A. C.) Don Balasco of Key West, cr. 8vo. 2/ boards.
Howells's (W. D.) The Landlord at Lion's Head, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Johnson's (T.) The Swedish System of Physical Education, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Lilly's (W. S.) Essays and Speeches, 8vo. 12/ cl.
Macleod's (F.) Spiritual Tales, Barbaric Tales, Tragic Romances, cr. 8vo. 2/6 each, net, sewed.
Macrae's (D.) The Railway Chase and Popping the Question, with other Sketches, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Morrah's (H.) The Faithful City, a Romance, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Murray's (D. C.) Mount Despair, and other Stories, 2/ bds.
Ouida's The Massarenes, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Short Innings, A, a Public School Episode, by Tivoli, 3/6 cl.
Strachey's (J. St. L.) From Grave to Gay, Essays and Studies, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Street's (L.) Nell and the Actor, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Tales from the Isles of Greece, translated by W. H. D. Rouse, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net, cl.
Unknown God, The, 12mo. 2/6 net, cl.
Winter's (J. S.) Into an Unknown World, a Novel, 6/ cl.
Yeats's (S. L.) A Galahad of the Creeks, and other Stories, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Amelung (W.): Führer durch die Antiken in Florenz, 5m.
Brunn (H.): Griechische Kunstgeschichte, Book 2, 7m. 50.

Poetry and the Drama.

Boschot (A.): La Crise Poétique, 2fr. 50.

Political Economy.

Block (M.): Les Progrès de la Science Économique depuis Adam Smith, 2 vols. 16fr.
Molinari (M. G. de): La Viriculture, 3fr. 50.
Say (L.) et Chailley-Bert (J.): Supplément au Nouveau Dictionnaire d'Économie Politique, 5fr.

History and Biography.

Armaillé (Comtesse d'): Une Fiancée de Napoléon, Désirée Clary, Reine de Suède, 1777-1860, 3fr. 50.
Aumale (Le Duc d'): Le Roi Louis Philippe et le Droit de Grâce, 1830-1848, 0fr. 50.
Barante (C. de): Souvenirs du Baron de Barante, 1782-1866, Vol. 6, 7fr. 50.

General Literature.

Fabre (F.): Taillevent, 3fr. 50.
Gyp: Joies d'Amour, 3fr. 50.
Lacour (P.): Cœurs d'Amants, 3fr. 50.
Maisonneuve (H.): L'Une ou l'Autre, 3fr. 50.
O'Monroy (R.): Tutur et Toto, 3fr. 50.
Vandérem (F.): Les Deux Rives, 3fr. 50.
Xanrof: Cris du Cœur, 2fr.
Zola (É.): Nouvelle Campagne, 3fr. 50.

TWO PROTHALAMIA.

King's College, London, March 22, 1897.

Surely your correspondent of last week makes too much of what he seems to think is a great discovery, and far too much of its importance. Even such an accessible and current volume as Murray's 'Handbook for the Eastern Counties' mentions Vallans's 'Tale of Two Swannes' (see p. 82 of the first edition, 1870). Happening many years ago to be writing some notes on the 'Prothalamion,' and having noticed the title of Vallans's poem, I at once perused the 'Tale of Two Swans,' and came to the conclusion that the 'Prothalamion' owed very little, if anything, to it—certainly not anything of importance; and after reading your correspondent's remarks that is still, with all deference, my conclusion.

It may be well to give the full title of Vallans's work: 'The Tale of Two Swans, wherein is comprehended the original and increase of the River Lea, commonly called Ware River; together with the Antiquities of Sundrie Places and Towns seated upon the same.' Quid hoc ad Prothalamion?

In the Elizabethan times swans were very common objects on the Thames near London as they are still on the upper reaches of the river, and long before Vallans a much more famous person had employed a swan for descriptive purposes, so to speak, i. e., had represented a swan floating down a river, and so taken the opportunity of sketching the banks and places and things of interest on them. This was no other than Leland in his Κύκνειον ἆσμα, Cygnea Cantio, who in this way does for the Thames in charming Latin hendecasyllabics what in his not always vivacious blank verse Vallans does for the Lea. So if the "palma" for this idea is to be borne off by anybody—"palmam qui meruit ferat" quotes your correspondent—it should be borne off by Leland rather than Vallans; but assuredly Thames swans are not so rare in poetry in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries—see Ben Jonson, for instance—that they can be monopolized.

Then as to details, your correspondent urges these parallels: (1) He says Vallans speaks of Cynthia and how she outshines the lesser stars, and so Spenser; (2) Vallans speaks of "the Lee," and Spenser has "down along the Lee"; (3) Vallans has "the meadows with their partie-coloured coats," and describes Thames' bank as "paynted all with variable flowers"; (4) Vallans uses the words "nurse" and "merry," and so Spenser; (5) there is the same "feeling" in Vallans's opening lines and in Spenser's; (6) Vallans says swans had drawn Venus's chariot, and so Spenser; (7) Vallans eulogizes Queen Elizabeth, and so Spenser; (8) both Vallans and Spenser compare the swans' whiteness to snow. Now is it possible—with all seriousness I ask the question—is it possible to read these parallelisms without being reminded of the immortal "comparisons" between Macedon and Monmouth? All your readers will sympathize with Mr. Wickham Flower's wish to have justice done to an interesting old poem; but is it possible, when he writes "thusly," to keep out of one's thoughts Fluellen's celebrated speech? There are such things as common property in literature. Probably both Vallans and Spenser were well acquainted with Horace's "velut inter ignes Luna minores," &c. As to the "Lee," Vallans means the Lea still so called; Spenser probably uses here as elsewhere an old common noun meaning "a river"; see 'The Ruines of Times':—

> Whilest thus I looked loe! adown the Lee
> I saw an Harpe, &c;

and 'Faerie Queene,' V. 19, 1:—

> His corps was carried down along the Lee

(i. e., the corpse of the Saracen slain by Sir Artegall). As to Queen Elizabeth, see Spenser's praises of her in the 'Shepheard's Calendar' and the 'Faerie Queene' passim. Certainly it cannot be denied that both writers in this instance name "the world" in lauding her; but how else are the references "very similar"? Elizabethan literature abounds in such eulogies of the sovereign.

But suppose such parallelisms could be maintained, what would be their value? Would they one whit justify against Spenser the charge of plagiarism—of "appropriating without permission the work" of another writer of his time, which is unmistakably suggested or advanced by Mr. Flower? Spenser took from Vallans "what was not his own." What was it, then, he took? Was it anything whatever of real importance, or that is worth considering? "Palmam qui meruit ferat," and Vallans, it is implied, deserves the palm, and ought to have it. But why? Certainly no reason has yet been assigned for such a transference. For the sake of argument, take away from Spenser the things which Mr. Flower alleges he "appropriated"; would Spenser's poem suffer any appreciable loss? Suppose it were conceded that Spenser borrowed the idea of the swans drawing Venus's chariot from Vallans, is the "palm" to be handed over to Vallans?

The merit of Vallans's verses is not now before us. It may be, and perhaps it is, noticeable. But why should an attempt be made to extol Vallans at the expense of Spenser? This is not to do Vallans any good service.

The very heading of Mr. Flower's article—'Two Prothalamia'—is not to be justified. It is quite misleading. Vallans calls his poem a 'Tale of Two Swans.' His birds voyage down the Lea, which at last flows into the Thames, and they are employed, as said before, for descriptive purposes. Spenser's birds are two ladies about to be married to two gentlemen—"two gentle knights of lovely face and feature"; for when the swans, after floating down the Thames, reach Essex House, Spenser forgets his allegory, and "two gentle knights" issue from "those high towers," and receive "those two fair brides, their love's delight."

Lastly, Mr. Flower has not studied Spenser's poem very carefully, or he would have seen it was written, not in 1595, but in 1596, as it alludes to the Earl of Essex's famous expedition to Cadiz, from which he returned in August. He was back at home, and Spenser was one of his guests, when the 'Prothalamion' was written.

JOHN W. HALES.

I HAVE been much interested in reading Mr. Wickham Flower's communication (p. 378) on Vallans's poem, first printed in 1590. I have had a copy of it in my possession for some years, and long ago arrived at Mr. Flower's opinion concerning it, namely, that it must have been well known to Spenser, and undoubtedly inspired his subsequently printed 'Prothalamion.' The truth of this has been now sufficiently demonstrated by Mr. Flower, and it is unnecessary to emphasize it. I need only refer to it for the purpose of quoting a line which has escaped the notice of Shakspearean critics, and serves to illustrate and explain a couplet in 'As You Like It,' upon the precise rendering of which commentators are not agreed. I allude to the words of the song (Act II. sc. v.) which commences:—

> Under the greenwood tree
> Who loves to lie with me,

the disputed word occurring in the third line—

> And tune his merry note
> Unto the sweet bird's throat.

The point at issue is whether Shakspeare wrote "tune" or "turn," and it is easy to see how a compositor may well have printed the one word for the other. The earlier editions have "turn," which is retained by Dyce and by the editors of the 'Cambridge Shakespeare' in spite of Pope's suggestion that "tune" is the right word. With all deference to the first-named authorities, I am persuaded that Pope's view is the correct one. To an ornithologist who understands music and appreciates the songs of birds there can be hardly any doubt on the point, and confirmation of this is afforded by a line in the poem now under consideration, 'A Tale of Two Swannes':—

> Where Venus like the Goddesse of great Love
> Sate lovely by the running river side
> Tuning her Lute unto the waters fall.

Gilbert White shared Pope's view, and thought the bird alluded to by Shakspeare might be the blackcap. In his third letter to Daines Barrington (first ed., p. 124) he remarks that the note of this bird "has such a wild sweetness that it always brings to my mind those lines in a song in 'As You Like It':—

> And tune his merry note
> Unto the sweet bird's throat."

Another point of interest to ornithologists may be noted, namely, that this poem affords an illustration of the use of the word "busking," to denote the peculiar manner in which a swan when swimming carries the wings arched above the back. In an article contributed to the Zoologist in October, 1895, on the origin of the terms "cob" and "pen" as applied to swans, I pointed this out, and quoted from Vallans's poem as follows:—

"In some of the old writers we find a special term—'busking'—to denote this peculiar action; to busk, or bush out the wings, evidently from busk or buske (O.F. bosc), as bush was anciently written, e.g., by Chaucer. Spenser uses the word buskets, and Shakspeare in 'The Tempest' (Act IV. sc. 1.) has 'my bosky acres and my unshrubbèd down.' A direct application of the term to the bird under notice may be found in 'A Tale of Two Swannes,' printed in London by Roger Ward for John Sheldrake in 1590. Thus:—

> Not far from hence stands many a milke-white Swanne,
> Attending for to entertain their Prince,
> Among the which was one of chiefe accompt
> That busked up his winges in greatest pride,
> And so salutes this worthie companie."

J. E. HARTING.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE SPANISH ARMADA.

Cavendish Mansions, Portland Place, W.

DURING the reading of a paper by me on the above subject before the Royal Historical Society on January 18th last, I mentioned incidentally that I was preparing for publication an English version of Capt. Cuellar's narrative of his extraordinary adventures in Ireland in 1588. My friend Prof. Laughton was good enough to inform me that I had been anticipated, and that another translation was in the press. I presume that this is the version referred to by Mr. Crawford in your issue of March 13th as being the work of Mr. H. Dwight Sedgwick. As I have studied the document somewhat closely, I can positively confirm Mr. Crawford's suggestion that Capt. Cuellar's narrative was not written to the king. I have not seen Mr. Sedgwick's version, but I gather from Mr. Crawford's letter that there is some confusion with regard to the name of the hospitable chief by whom Cuellar was entertained and whose castle he defended. Cuellar calls him Manglana, and I gather that Mr. Sedgwick supposes his name to have been MacClancy. Mr. Froude confessed himself puzzled, and gave up the riddle.

There is no doubt in my mind that the chief in question was MacGlanogh, a vassal of O'Rourke's, who lived on Lough Melvin. My perusal of the narrative conveyed to me that the castle of MacGlanogh was inaccessible by armed men from the shore nearest to it, as all that side of the lake was a bog. In the 'Four Masters,' and also in the calendars of Irish State Papers, many references to this castle and village will be found, with descriptions exactly tallying with that given by Cuellar. The place had been captured from the MacClancys by an ancestor of MacGlanogh in 1421.

MARTIN A. S. HUME.

THE REV. WILLIAM FULFORD.

THE Rev. William Fulford, whose death was lately recorded in some of the daily newspapers, was one of that brilliant group of young men who in 1856 produced the twelve numbers of the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, now so eagerly sought by collectors of the works of William Morris. Born in Birmingham in 1832, Fulford was educated at King Edward's Grammar School and at Pembroke College, Oxford. Having taken classical honours and graduated as a Master of Arts, he accepted a classical mastership at a school at Wimbledon, where in 1855 and 1856 Dr. Aldis Wright was mathematical master. The school was one at which pupils were prepared for Addiscombe. In 1856, when William Morris embarked both money and mental capital in the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine, he appointed Fulford editor. In that capacity he must have done his work very well, for, apart from the considerable mass of contributions from his own pen and Morris's, the articles got together are notable enough, and the greater number of the contributors have become distinguished in one connexion or another. To name these young men will suffice on the present occasion: Judge Lushington, his brother Sir Godfrey Lushington, Dr. Aldis Wright, Prof. Lewis Campbell, Canon R. W. Dixon, Mr. Cormell Price, the late Mr. Charles Faulkner (sometime partner in the firm of Morris, Marshall, Faulkner & Co.), the late Mr. Wilfred Heeley, the late Mr. Bernard Cracroft, Sir Edward Burne-Jones, Mr. Robert Campbell, and Dante Gabriel Rossetti. Besides this brilliant assemblage of the male sex, there was one lady among Mr. Fulford's contributors, Lady Burne-Jones; and I believe the list is now completely published for the first time.

Mr. Fulford's own contributions should be named in detail. They are (1) 'An Essay on Tennyson' in three parts; (2) "In youth I died," a poem; (3) 'Found yet Lost,' a tale; (4) 'A Few Words concerning Plato and Bacon'; (5) 'Fear,' a poem; (6) 'Remembrance,' a poem; (7) 'Troilus and Cressida'; (8) 'A Night in a Cathedral'; (9) 'The Suitor of Low Degree,' a poem; (10) 'The Singing of the Poet,' a poem; (11) 'A Study in Shakespeare'; (12) 'To the English Army before Sebastopol,' a poem; (13) 'Woman, her Duties, Education, and Position'; (14) 'Cavalay, a Chapter of a Life'; (15) 'Alexander Smith'; (16) 'A Year Ago,' a poem; (17) 'Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night"'; (18) 'Rogers's Table-Talk'; (19) 'Childhood,' a poem. The whole of the poems reappeared in a volume published by Mr. Fulford in 1859 under the title of 'Songs of Life.' This volume was followed in 1862 by a more ambitious one, 'Saul, a Dramatic Poem; Elizabeth, an Historical Ode; and other Poems' (among which, by-the-by, is a very tender and generous 'Lament for the Death of Shelley'). Three years later, in 1865, Mr. Fulford made his last appeal to an unregarding or little regarding public in 'Lancelot: with Sonnets and other Poems,' including a dramatic piece called 'Buondelmonti's Wedding.'

Most of his work in verse is marked by metrical qualities, showing that he had a fine ear. His moral sense, or sense of moral beauty, was very high; indeed, he may be said to have discerned beauty mainly through the moral sense, and to have discerned it with absorbing pleasure. But in much of his work he was too directly dependent on other poets. "In youth I died" has very justly been included in several anthologies, and there are many pieces among those in which he was least imitative that deserve similar preservation.

Mr. Fulford was for some years an army coach, and continued to be so until his health began to fail. He had considerable individuality of character, and inspired affection in those who knew him well. His most notable book, the 'Saul' volume, was dedicated to his friend and brother poet Canon Dixon, already named in this notice as one of his coadjutors in the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine. Mr. Fulford died at St. Barnabas's Home, East Grinstead, on the 2nd inst. H. B. F.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

The Cambridge University Press promises the following works: 'An Introduction to the Greek Old Testament,' by Prof. Swete,—'The Sarum Consuetudinary,' edited by the Rev. W. H. Frere,—'Notes on New Testament Translation, being Otium Norvicense, Part III.,' with additions by the late Dr. Field,—'The Mission of St. Augustine to England,' edited by Canon A. J. Mason,—'A Selection of Passages of Unpointed Hebrew from Genesis, Isaiah, and the Psalms,' by Prof. W. H. Bennett,—in "The Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools," 'The Pastoral Epistles,' by Dr. J. H. Bernard,—in the "Cambridge Bible for Schools," 'The Books of Joel and Amos,' by Canon Driver; and 'The First Book of Maccabees,' by the Rev. W. Fairweather and the Rev. J. S. Black,—in "Texts and Studies," 'The Curetonian Syriac Gospels,' re-edited by Mr. F. C. Burkitt; 'Clement of Alexandria: Quis Dives Salvetur?' re-edited by Mr. P. M. Barnard; and 'Palladius: Historia Lausiaca,' by the Rev. E. C. Butler, O.S.B.,—in "Studia Sinaitica," 'A Palestinian Syriac Lectionary,' edited by Mrs. Lewis and Prof. Nestle; 'Select Narratives of Holy Women,' Part I., with a translation by Mrs. Lewis; 'The Stories of Barbara and Irene,' from the Sinai palimpsest, by Mrs. Lewis; 'The Stories of Euphemia and Sophia,' from the Sinai palimpsest, by Mrs. Lewis; and 'The Stories of Cyprian and Justa,' in Greek, Arabic, and Syriac of the eighth century, by Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Gibson,—Vol. III. of 'The Jātaka,' translated by Mr. H. T. Francis and Mr. R. A. Neil,—'The Syriac Version of the Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius,' edited by Dr. W. Wright and Mr. N. McLean,—'Selected Poems from the Divāni Hamsi Tabriz,' edited by Mr. R. A. Nicholson,—'Aristophanes: Equites,' with introduction and notes by Mr. R. A. Neil,—'Herondas: The Mimes,' edited by Mr. W. Headlam,—'Plato: Philebus,' edited by the Rev. R. G. Bury,—'The Fragments of Sophocles,' by Prof. Jebb,—'The Italic Dialects,' by Mr. R. S. Conway,—'Plato: Republic,' edited by Mr. J. Adam,—'Brevia Placitata,' by Mr. G. I. Turner,—'Onomasticon Anglo-Saxonicum,' by the Rev. W. G. Searle,—'The Economical Works of Sir William Petty,' edited by Prof. Hull, of Cornell,—'The Catalogue of the Library at Sion Monastery,' edited by Miss Bateson,—in the "Historical Series," 'The Foundation of the German Empire, 1815–1871,' by Mr. J. W. Headlam; and 'Italy from 1815,' by Mr. W. J. Stillman,—in the "Geographical Series," 'A History of Ancient Geography,' by the Rev. H. F. Tozer,—Part II. of the 'Statutes of Lincoln Cathedral,' arranged by the late Henry Bradshaw, edited by the Rev. C. Wordsworth,—Vol. III. of 'The Archives of the London Dutch Church,' edited by Mr. Hessels,—'The Triumphs of Turlogh,' edited by Dr. Standish O'Grady,—'An Old English (West-Saxon) Grammar,' by Mr. A. J. Wyatt,—Vol. II. of Prof. Lambros's 'Catalogue of the Greek Manuscripts on Mount Athos,'—'Catalogue of Vases in the Fitzwilliam Museum,' by Mr. E. A. Gardner,—'Arnold of Rugby,' by Mr. J. J. Findlay,—'King Lear,' edited by Mr. Verity,—and in the "Pitt Press Series," 'Prometheus Vinctus,' edited by Mr. W. W. Walker; 'The Olynthiac Orations,' edited by Prof. T. R. Glover; Book III. of the 'De Bello Civili,' edited by Mr. Peskett; 'Minna von Barnhelm,' edited by Mr. Wolstenholme,—Part II. of 'Quand j'étais Petit,' edited by Mr. Boïelle; 'Gray's Poems,' edited by the Rev. D. C. Tovey; 'Goethe's Iphigenie,' edited by Dr. Breul; and Book III. of the 'Anabasis,' edited by Mr. G. M. Edwards.

Messrs. Hutchinson & Co.'s spring announcements include 'The Romance of Isabel, Lady Burton, the True Story of her Life,' told in part by herself and in part by Mr. W. H. Wilkins,—'Jane: a Social Incident,' by Marie Corelli,—'The Jessamy Bride,' by Mr. Frankfort Moore,—'The Three Daughters of Night,' by Derek Vane,—'Human Sacrifice amongst the Eastern Jews,' by the late Sir Richard Burton,—'The Dagger and the Cross,' by Mr. J. Hatton,—'The Black Mass,' by Frederic Breton,—'The Savage Club Papers,' edited by Mr. J. E. Muddock,—'In Golden Shackles,' by Alien,—'Elementary Jane,' by Mr. R. Pryce,—'A Passing Madness,' by Miss F. Marryat,—'By Right of Sword,' by Mr. A. W. Marchmont,—the concluding volume of "The Poets and Poetry of the Century," 'Moral and Religious Verse,' edited by Mr. A. H. Miles,—'Maurice Quain' and 'The Adventure of the Broad Arrow,' by Mr. Morley Roberts,—'The Larranys,' by George Ford,—'They that Sit in Darkness,' by John Mackie,—'The Water-Finder,' by Lucas Cleeve,—'The Lady Charlotte,' by Miss A. Sergeant,—'Scarlet and Steel,' by Mr. Livingston Prescott,—the first two volumes of the "Concise Knowledge Library,"—'Mrs. Keith Hamilton, M.B.,' by Miss Annie S. Swan,—'Australia in the Early Days,' by Marcus Clarke,—'Ripple and Flood,' by James Prior,—'Hardy Coniferous Trees,' by A. D. Webster,—'That Tree of Eden,' by A. Hamilton Church,—and 'Father Hilarion,' by K. D. King.

Messrs. Partridge & Co. promise 'The Pilgrims of the Night,' by Sarah Doudney,—'Come, Break your Fast,' by the Rev. M. G. Pearse,—'The Missing Million,' by Mr. Harcourt Burrage,—'Scuttling the Kingfisher,' by Mr. Alfred E. Knight,—'The United States of America to the Time of the Pilgrim Fathers,' by Mr. Barnett Smith,—'Vashti Savage,' by Sarah Tytler,—in the "Home Library," 'Petrel Darcy,' by T. Corrie, and 'Honor,' by E. M. Alford,—in the "Popular Biographies," 'Capt. Allen Gardiner, Sailor and Saint,' by Jesse Page,—in the "World's Wonders Series," 'Marvels of Metals,' by F. M. Holmes,—also a "British Boys' Library" and a "British Girls' Library."

'ENGLISH SCHOOLS AT THE REFORMATION.'

Mr. Leach returns to the attack in the following letter, dated March 15th:—

"Your reviewer in your last week's issue tries to evade an acknowledgment of ignorance in his attack on my statement as to the marriage of canons in early English collegiate churches, by an allegation which is due either to carelessness or to misrepresentation. For his defence is, he 'reasonably took exception to the definition of secular canons, because it is inapplicable to the whole of the period' up to the Reformation. But I gave no 'definition' of secular canons; and the passage in which I described them as 'ordinary clergymen, who, like the canons of our cathedrals now, married and gave in marriage,' occurs in a section headed at the beginning and on the top of each page 'Early College Schools.' The section dealt exclusively with the collegiate churches which appear in Domesday Book, a dozen of which I mentioned by name, all founded in 'Early English, i.e. Præ-Norman times.' When I came to deal in a later section with 'Later College Schools,' i.e. those founded from 1250 onwards, I expressly spoke (p. 20) of 'the secular clergy—who, by this time, were enforced celibates like the monks.' Either your reviewer had read both these sections, which only occupy eight pages altogether, or he had not. If he had, he has deliberately misrepresented what I said. If he had not, he was grossly careless in delivering his attack."

Mr. Leach's section on "Early College Schools" deals with some of the collegiate churches which appear in Domesday Book, but it is not limited to the period before the Conquest; it consists of notes on the history of these places to the middle of the sixteenth century, and no indication is given that the explanation of the technical term "secular canon" is intended to hold good only of pre-Norman times. We had observed the passage in the section on "Later College Schools," from which it appears that Mr. Leach is of opinion that the secular clergy had become "enforced celibates like the monks" by the middle of the thirteenth century.

TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

PART I.—CONTRIBUTIONS TO PERIODICAL LITERATURE, &c.

1.

'The Gem, a Literary Annual.' 1831, p. 87.

No More. ("Oh sad No More! Oh sweet No More!")

These lines have not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works.

2.

'The Gem, a Literary Annual,' 1831, p. 131.

Anacreontics. ("With roses musky breathed.")

These verses have not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works.

3.

'The Gem, a Literary Annual,' 1831, pp. 242-243.

A Fragment.

Where is the Giant of the Sun, which stood
In the midnoon the glory of old Rhodes.

This 'Fragment' has not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works.

4.
The Englishman's Magazine, vol. i. No. 5, August, 1831, p. 591.

Sonnet. ("Check every outflash, every ruder sally.")

Reprinted (with text unchanged, but with the punctuation slightly modified) in 'Friendship's Offering,' 1833, p. 29. This Sonnet has not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works.

5.
'The Yorkshire Literary Annual,' 1832, p. 127.

Sonnet. ("There are three things which fill my heart with sighs.") Dated "London, September 20th, 1831."

This Sonnet has not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works. It was, however, reprinted in the Athenæum, No. 2062, May 4th, 1867, p. 592.

6.
'Friendship's Offering, a Literary Album,' 1832, p. 367.

Sonnet. ("Me my own Fate to lasting sorrow doometh.")

This Sonnet has not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works.

7.
'The Keepsake,' 1837, pp. 247-248.

St. Agnes.

Deep on the convent roofs the snows
Are sparkling to the moon.

Reprinted in 'Poems,' 1842, vol. ii. pp. 171-173. In subsequent editions this poem appeared under the amended title of 'St. Agnes' Eve.'

8.
'The Tribute; a Collection of Miscellaneous Unpublished Poems, by Various Authors,' 1837, pp. 244-250.

Stanzas. ("Oh that 'twere possible.")

In 1855 these 'Stanzas' were incorporated into division 24 of 'Maud.' They were, however, rearranged; the major portion of the latter half was omitted; and some slight alterations were made in the part reprinted.

9.
Punch, vol. x., February 28th, 1846, p. 103.

The New Timon, and the Poets.

We know him, out of Shakspeare's art,
And those fine curses which he spoke;
The old Timon, with his noble heart,
That, strongly loathing, greatly broke.

Signed "Alcibiades."

This poem was wisely dropped by its author, and has not been included in any of the authorized editions of his collected works. It was written under the feelings of resentment and irritation aroused by Sir E. Bulwer Lytton's attack in 'The New Timon,' wherein Tennyson was alluded to as "School-miss Alfred," and his poetry described as

A jingling medley of purloined conceits,
Out-babying Wordsworth and out-glittering Keats.

10.
Punch, vol. x., March 7th, 1846, p. 106.

After-thought.

Ah, God! the petty fools of rhyme,
That shriek and sweat in pigmy wars.

Signed "Alcibiades."

Reprinted (under the amended title of 'Literary Squabbles') in the Library Edition of Tennyson's 'Works,' 1872, vol. iii. pp. 264-265.

11.
The Examiner, No. 2147, March 24th, 1849, p. 180.

Stanzas to ——. ("You might have won the Poet's name.")

First reprinted in 'Poems,' sixth edition, 1850, pp. 347-348.

12.
'The Manchester Athenæum Album,' 1850, p. 42.

Lines. ("Here often, when a child, I lay reclined.")

These 'Lines' have not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works. In 1875 they were reprinted in Cope's Tobacco Plant, vol. i. No. 63, p. 762.

13.
'The Keepsake,' 1851, p. 22.

Stanzas. ("What time I wasted youthful hours.")

These 'Stanzas' have not been included in any of the authorized editions of Tennyson's collected works.

14.
'The Keepsake,' 1851, p. 122.

Stanzas. ("Come not, when I am dead.")

First reprinted in 'Poems,' seventh edition, 1851, p. 372.

15.
The Household Narrative of Current Events, February—March, 1851, p. 71.

To W. C. Macready. [A Sonnet.] ("Farewell, Macready, since to-night we part.")

Reprinted in the People's and Howitt's Journal, N.S., part xxi., April, 1851. Also included in Tennyson's 'Collected Works,' 1894, p. 578.

These lines were read, with the author's permission, by John Forster, at a farewell banquet given to Macready on Saturday, March 1st, 1851. Charles Dickens and Sir E. Bulwer Lytton (who occupied the chair) were among the speakers.

16.
The Examiner, No. 2296, January 31st, 1852, p. 67.

Britons Guard your Own. ("Rise, Britons, rise, if manhood be not dead.") The poem was unsigned. Mr. R. Herne Shepherd was incorrect in reporting it as signed "Merlin."

These patriotic stanzas have not been included in any of the authorized editions of Tennyson's collected works.

17.
The Examiner, No. 2297, February 7th, 1852, p. 85.

The Third of February, 1852. Signed "Merlin."

My Lords, we heard you speak: you told us all
That England's honest censure went too far.

First reprinted in the Library Edition of Tennyson's 'Works,' 1872, vol. iii. pp. 193-195.

18.
The Examiner, No. 2297, February 7th, 1852, p. 86.

Hands all Round. Signed "Merlin."

First drink a health, this solemn night,
A health to England, every guest.

First reprinted (but revised so freely that the poem was practically rewritten) in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 195-197.

19.
The Examiner, No. 2445, December 9th, 1854, p. 780.

The Charge of the Light Brigade. Signed "A. T."

Half a league, half a league,
Half a league onward.

Reprinted in 'Maud,' 1855, pp. 151-154. Also printed in August, 1855, on a single quarto sheet (with an appropriate prose note by the author added) for distribution among the soldiers in the army before Sebastopol.

In the Examiner the following prose note was appended to the poem: "Written after reading the first report of the Times correspondent, where only 607 sabres are mentioned as having taken part in the charge." This note has never been reprinted.

20.
The Times, No. 22,900, January 26th, 1858, p. 8.

Two Stanzas, on the Marriage of the Princess Royal. ("God Bless our Prince and Bride.")

These wedding verses (two stanzas of seven lines each) have not been included in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works. They were sung at the royal wedding to the tune of the National Anthem.

21.
The Times, No. 23,301, May 9th, 1859, p. 10.

The War. ("There is a sound of thunder afar.") Signed "T."

Reprinted in 'The Death of Œnone, Akbar's Dream, and other Poems,' 1892, pp. 93-95 (under the amended — and better known — title, 'Riflemen Form!'), with the following prose note added:— "I have been asked to republish this old poem, which was first published in the Times, May 9th, 1859, before the Volunteer movement began."

22.
Once a Week, vol. i. No. 3, July 16th, 1859, pp. 41-43.

The Grandmother's Apology. [With an Illustration by J. E. Millais.] ("And Willy, my eldest-born, is gone, you say, little Anne?")

Reprinted in 'Enoch Arden,' &c., 1864, pp. 114-127, under the amended title of 'The Grandmother.'

23.
Macmillan's Magazine, vol. i. No. 3, January, 1860, pp. 191-198.

Sea Dreams: an Idyll. ("A city clerk, but gently born and bred.")

Reprinted in 'Enoch Arden,' &c., 1864, pp. 96-113.

24.
The Cornhill Magazine, vol. i. No. 2, February, 1860, pp. 175-176.

Tithonus. ("Ay me! ay me! the woods decay and fall.")

Reprinted, with some interesting emendations in the text, in 'Enoch Arden,' &c., 1864, pp. 139-143. In the later revised editions the opening line reads:

The woods decay, the woods decay and fall.

Thomas J. Wise.

Literary Gossip.

By order of the Trustees of the British Museum a portfolio of facsimiles from early printed books in the Museum collection, mostly from books exhibited in the King's Library, will shortly be published. The portfolio will contain thirty-two plates with full descriptions, the books illustrated being, for the most part, of the greatest rarity, while the large size of many of them has hitherto prevented their being given as illustrations in histories of printing. Among them are the early block-books of the 'Ars Moriendi' and 'Biblia Pauperum,' the 1454–1455 indulgences, the Gutenberg Bible, Mentz Psalter of 1457, Mentz Bible of 1462, specimens of the work of Sweynheim & Pannartz, Jenson, Ratdolt, and Aldus, of the early French printers, of Gerard Leeu and Colard Mansion, six Caxtons, and books printed at Oxford and St. Albans, and by Machlinia, Wynkyn de Worde, and Pynson.

The discovery is reported from Sandwich of another original copy of Mrs. Browning's 'The Battle of Marathon,' which was printed for W. Lindsell, 87, Wimpole Street, Cavendish Square, in 1820. It was bought at a local sale with a number of other books for a few shillings. Up to the year 1891 but three copies of this scarce work were known to exist, and the only one that has ever been sold by auction realized 330 dollars at the Foote Sale held at New York a couple of years ago. This may have been one of the three copies already mentioned, but in any case only five at the most can be accounted for at the present time. The book is consequently scarcer than 'Pauline.' Mr. Browning had neither seen nor heard of a copy up to within a short time of his death, and, when his attention was called to it, expressed a doubt whether it might not be a fabrication.

Shortly after Easter Mr. Nutt will bring out a page-for-page reprint of Wordsworth's 'Poems in Two Volumes' of 1807, similar to that of the 'Lyrical Ballads' of 1798, which Prof. Dowden edited for him in 1890. Copies of these 'Poems' of 1807 are exceedingly rare—much more so than those of the 'Lyrical Ballads,' one in good condition fetching from 50*s.* to 80*s.* Without the aid of a text of 1807 it is impossible thoroughly to examine the merits of the case Jeffrey and others v. Wordsworth. Along with a brief introduction, the editor, Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, furnishes notes (chiefly textual), tending to show that the poet, far from contemptuously ignoring his censors, as he is popularly supposed to have done, was in truth careful to profit by their strictures by altering or omitting such passages as offered fair occasion for criticism.

Prof. J. P. Mahaffy is contributing an article on 'Pompey's Pillar' to Cosmopolis for April, and Mr. St. Loe Strachey a paper entitled 'A Poll of the People (the Referendum).' The instalment promised of the Tourguénief letters includes some addressed to M. Émile Zola. In the German section of the review a dramatic poem by Herr Ludwig Fulda will appear.

The Rev. H. de B. Gibbins, D.Litt., author of 'Industry in England,' has been asked by the Cobden Club to re-edit the late Mr. Montgredien's history of 'Free Trade.' Dr. Gibbins is writing introductory and supplementary chapters to bring the work down to the present day, as Mr. Montgredien's last preface was written in 1881.

We greatly regret to hear of the decease of Miss Emily Shirreff. She and Mr. Grey did much for the cause of woman's education when it was not so popular as it is now. In 1858 she wrote a valuable monograph on 'The Intellectual Education of Women,' of which she brought out a second edition six years later. In 1872 she published a work on 'The Kindergarten.'

A new translation of the 'Consolation of Philosophy' of Boethius, by Mr. H. R. James, of Christ Church, Oxford, with the metres of the original rendered into English verse, is in the press, and will be published by Mr. Elliot Stock. It will contain brief notes, an analysis of each book, and a short introduction.

Prof. Smend, of Göttingen, who wrote a careful examination of the new-found text of Ecclesiasticus in the Theologische Literaturzeitung for March 20th, is now on a pilgrimage to the manuscript at Oxford, and seems to have found the solution of some passages which are doubtful owing to the damaged condition of the fragment. Prof. Smend is well known for his commentary on Ezekiel, and has also made a special study of the book of Ecclesiasticus, which was interrupted by the news of the discovery of the Hebrew text.

The Times records the decease of Mr. J. Biddulph Martin, the author of 'The Grasshopper in Lombard Street,' and President of the Statistical Society.

An effort is being made at Sheffield to raise the endowment fund of the proposed new University College to 130,000*l*. The endowment of Owens College, Manchester, amounts to close upon three-quarters of a million, whilst that of Liverpool College and of Mason College, Birmingham, falls a little short of a quarter of a million.

The decease is announced of M. Lucien Biart, the well-known man of letters. Early in life he was employed in America as a collector by the Museum of Natural History of Paris, and on his return to Paris he contributed to the Revue des Deux Mondes and other periodicals narratives of travel and stories of which the scene was laid in Mexico and South America. He was a most prolific writer. Among other things he published a translation of 'Don Quixote.'

Mr. Bowden is celebrating the success of the first book in which his name appeared as a publisher on his own account, Mr. Coulson Kernahan's 'The Child, the Wise Man, and the Devil,' by printing an édition de luxe, from new type and upon hand-made paper. A new portrait of the author has been painted for this edition by Miss Bertha Newcome, and a special cover has been designed by Miss N. Erichsen. Each copy will be numbered, and signed by the author. The work has been translated into French, German, Dutch, Danish, Welsh, and other languages.

The American-German poet Conrad Krez, who was one of those Achtundvierzigers who have in their exile done credit to their native country, has just died at Milwaukee. During the American Civil War he rose to be a brigadier-general.

The only Parliamentary Paper of general interest this week is the Report of the Inter-Departmental Committee on Post Office Establishments, together with a Treasury Letter Thereon (4*d*.).

SCIENCE

BOTANICAL LITERATURE.

Round the Year: a Series of Short Nature Studies. By Prof. L. C. Miall, F.R.S. (Macmillan & Co.)—The sub-title expresses the nature of this work with sufficient accuracy. It is a series of short chatty articles on various natural phenomena which have the great advantage of being accurate. The book has, we should say, been inspired throughout by Gilbert White's 'Natural History of Selborne.' The contents are so varied that we can hardly select one for comment. We cannot see why it is "wrong" to call the bud-scale of the sycamore a leaf-stalk—dilated, it is true, for protective purposes into a sheath. Here and there the author girds at the language which botanists (and other naturalists too) adopt, and goes on to say "that we ought to have, as they have in Germany, descriptions of native plants in our own language, but we prefer to write our floras in Latin and Greek." We do not know a single modern British flora that is not written in English; and even the series of colonial and Indian floras published at Kew are in the vernacular. If the author objects simply to the terminology of the science, we may remind him that those most interested soon become familiar with the meaning of terms, and, experiencing their convenience, speedily adopt them. It is only those who have no real knowledge or interest in the subject who refuse to read a book because they have not mastered the alphabet. We do not think it possible that anybody "who would first take the trouble to master the structure of half-a-dozen plant types" could remain in ignorance of a considerable amount of terminology, or could express himself rationally without it if he tried.

Plants of Manitoba.—The publishers of this production are Messrs. Marcus Ward & Co., and that is nearly all that we can tell the reader, for the names of the author and of the draughtsman are not given, nor is there a single line of descriptive text. The publication consists of some forty small coloured illustrations representing common types of Canadian vegetation. The plants are well drawn and effectively coloured, but deficient in detail, and consequently of little value for botanical purposes. The popular names are, as usual, misleading, and sometimes applied differently from what they are on this side of the Atlantic.

An Introduction to Structural Botany.—Part II. Flowerless Plants. By Dukinfield Henry Scott. (Black.)—The first instalment of this book was so excellent that we looked forward with much interest to the appearance of the second part. Let us say at once that we have not been disappointed. Twenty-three plants are analyzed, these twenty-three being representatives of so many different groups of cryptogams. These groups are as a rule more isolated than in the case of the corresponding groups of flowering plants, and the connecting links are fewer, or at least less obvious. Mosses and liverworts are in this case, whilst it seems certain that under Fungi and Algæ are included many groups whose genetic relations are uncertain. Some of these cryptogams, and notably the ferns, present phenomena considered to represent alternations of generation, i. e., an asexual followed by a sexual stage. The facts are obvious, but it seems probable that some morphologists place too high a significance on these stages of growth—some even going so far as to deny that there is any homology between the plant in its two stages. The prothallus of a fern corresponds, roughly speaking, to the inflorescence of a flowering plant in which specialized buds develope into flowers and sexual organs, just as the prothallus produces now leaf-buds (apogamy), now sexual structures. May it not be that the explanation of the so-called alternation of generations lies in the investigation of the nature of buds and the manner of budding?

M. ANTOINE D'ABBADIE.

We regret to announce the death of Antoine Thompson d'Abbadie, which took place at Paris on March 20th. D'Abbadie was the Nestor of African travellers and one of the oldest contributors to the pages of this journal. He was born at Dublin in 1810, the son of a Frenchman who had married an Irishwoman, but educated in France, whither his parents removed in 1818. In 1835 the Académie des Sciences sent him on a scientific mission to Brazil, but it was his expedition into Abyssinia (1837–48) which won him fame; and the thoroughness with which he did his work will ever ensure him a foremost place among African explorers. He connected Masaua on the Red Sea by a chain of triangles with Kafa, which he was the first European to reach; and collected vocabularies and Ethiopic manuscripts. Dr. Beke not only charged him with having brought about the expulsion of the Protestant missionaries from Adwa and with generally meddling in Abyssinian politics in a spirit inimical to this country, but also denied that he had ever visited Kafa. Time, however, has done justice to the deceased. D'Abbadie's work has triumphantly stood the test applied to it by the engineers attached to the Abyssinian expedition in the north, whilst Cecchi and Chiarini have vindicated his honour in the extreme south. The definite results of this great expedition were only made public in extenso many years after the explorer's return to France, and he has hence been nicknamed "Cunctator" by his impatient admirers. His classified catalogue of Ethiopian MSS. appeared in 1859; a 'Géodésie d'Éthiopie' in 1860–76; the first volume of a connected narrative of the expedition, by his brother Michel Arnould d'Abbadie ('Douze Ans de Séjour dans la Haute Éthiopie'), in 1868; a 'Dictionnaire de la Langue Amariñña' in 1881; and the first volume of a 'Géographie de l'Éthiopie,' containing a mass of native information, in 1890.

In 1882 the Académie des Sciences, which had elected him a member in 1867, dispatched him to St. Domingo to observe an eclipse of the sun. Immediately on his return he proceeded to the East for the purpose of making magnetical observations, his travels extending from Constantinople in the north to Zeila and Berbera in the south. About the same time he was engaged on the observation of minute earth-tremors produced by the breaking of the waves upon the shore, for which purpose he had devised an ingeniously constructed instrument.

D'Abbadie has bequeathed to the Académie des Sciences his estate in the Pyrenees, yielding 40,000 fr. a year, subject to the life interest of his wife, and on condition of that learned body preparing within fifty years a catalogue of half a million stars.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—March 18.—The President in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'The Cultural Evolution of Cyclamen latifolium, Sibth.,' by Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, 'On the Conditions which render absolute the Readings of the Mercurial Thermometer,' by Mr. S. A. Sworn,—and 'Experiments on the Flame Spectrum of Carbon Monoxide,' by Prof. Hartley.

Geographical.—March 22.—Sir Clements Markham, President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Col. J. R. Wilmer, Capt. A. V. Jenner, Lieut. E. C. Lyndale-Biscoe, Lieut. E. T. Williams, Messrs. T. Bate, H. A. H. Dunsford, R. H. Holman, W. E. Jennings, F. Lowenadler, J. W. Martin, S. Symington, W. J. Tanner, H. Times, E. Tozer, and L. Travers.—The paper read was 'The North Polar Problem,' by the President.

Geological.—March 10.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Messrs. C. Kirby, J. C. l'Anson, and A. J. Hodgkinson-Carrington were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'Volcanic Activity in Central America in relation to British Earthquakes,' by Mr. A. Gosling, communicated through H.M. Foreign Office by the President,—'The Red Rocks near Bonmahon on the Coast of Co. Waterford,' by Mr. F. R. C. Reed,—and 'On the Depth of the Source of Lava,' by Mr. J. L. Lobley.

Asiatic.—March 9.—The Right Hon. Lord Reay, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Surgeon-Captain F. H. B. Brown 'On the Ruins of Dimāpūr in Assam,' in which he said these ruins consisted of a number of tanks, large quantities of broken pottery, and a number of carved stones of grey speckled sandstone enclosed in an area measuring about a mile square by a brick wall, probably of later date, with a moat and a gate. Dimāpūr was sacked by the Ahōms in 1535, and has since been uninhabited, while a dense jungle has grown up all over the upper valley of the Dhunsiri. The stones themselves are carved in a most beautiful and decorative manner with geometrical designs, figures of animals, conventionalized lotus flowers and trees. They consist of two kinds, one round, free-standing, with expanded mushroom-like tops, narrow necks, gradually again widening to their bases; the other Y-shaped, the stem of the Y forming the base, while the free ends of the limbs have mortices. The mouldings of both these kinds strongly suggest a wooden origin. At present three groups have been found, with two solitary stones, one of which is much larger than any of the other round ones which it to some extent resembles. Their orientation approaches north and south. They are arranged in rows, in one group a double row of round stones, each pair of which apparently stood due east of a double row of Y-shaped stones, in another a row of round ones, and in the third a row of stones shaped like a U, to east and west of each pair of which stood a pair of round ones. In the first group are remains more or less complete of sixty-four stones, only of a few in the second, and of twenty or thirty, at least, in the third. The carving in the first group is the most finished in execution, that of the third the least so, while the others are intermediate. The centre stones in the first group are the largest, the round ones being here about 11 ft. high, while towards the ends they are only 7 ft. While the round ones were evidently free-standing, the others bore in their mortices crowning ornaments of some kind or another, all traces of which have been lost, probably from their having been made in metal or wood. The vagueness of the symbolism employed precludes at present a definite attribution to any religion. If Buddhist, as seems in some respects most likely, they were probably in connexion with some central building, very much as a stupa is with its rail; the beauty of their design and execution seems hardly reconcilable with any form of primitive cult. It is possible that they have some relation to the Mohammedan artists employed in Upper Assam during the fifteenth century. Local tradition refers them to rites of human sacrifice.

British Archæological Association.—March 17.—Mr. C. H. Compton, V.P., in the chair.—The Hon. Secretary announced that it had been decided to hold the Congress this year at Conway, upon the invitation of the Mayor and Corporation.—Mrs. Collier read an interesting paper upon the church and painted glass at Bowness on Windermere, which edifice, she said, appeared not to have received so much notice from antiquaries as it deserved. The church is dedicated to St. Martin, but the actual date of its erection is not recorded. It is a very ancient structure, and some of the materials employed in its construction have been traced to Roman origin, and were probably brought from a Roman station which is known to have been established in the neighbourhood. Like most of the churches in the Lake district, it is simple and rudimentary in construction, consisting, until the recent additions, of a nave and aisles, chancel, and a low, square embattled tower at the west end. The principal entrance is by a porch in the south aisle, but there is a narrow arched door at the east end of the same aisle and a similar one at the west end of the north aisle. The east window is of late Perpendicular work, without tracery or other enrichment, and the arches, capitals, and bases of the columns are equally devoid of all ornamentation, and until recently were covered with successive coats of whitewash. St. Martin's was anciently a chapelry in the parish of Kendal, some miles distant, and though now a separate parish, the Rector of Bowness still pays a pension of 13*s.* 4*d.* to the Vicar of Kendal in token of submission to the mother church. In the year 1864 some curious inscriptions and texts were accidentally discovered painted on the walls, beneath the coats of whitewash. They consist of quotations from Robert Openshaw's Catechism, relate to the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper, and belong to the age of James I. The chief feature of interest in the church is the painted glass in the east window, which was brought into prominent notice during the process of restoration in 1873. This glass is considered by competent authorities to date from about the year 1480, and to have been originally in the Priory of Cartmell, near Grange, whence it was removed to Bowness c. 1523.—A second paper was read by Mr. G. Patrick, in the absence of the author, Mr. H. Syer Cuming, upon 'Mead and Mead Vessels.' The author traced the origin of the beverage known as mead or metheglin, so much appreciated by the Britannic tribes and the Teutonic nations, from the hydromel of the classic age, and brought its history down to the latter part of the last century. Pliny knew it, and called it a wine made solely of honey and water, rain-water after being kept for five years being best for the purpose, though some, he says, boiled down fresh rain to one-third of the quantity gathered, to which they added one-third in quantity of old honey, and kept the mixture exposed to the rays of a hot sun for forty days after the rising of the dog star. Sometimes it was racked off in the course of ten days, and preserved in vessels tightly stopped. The vessels in which the metheglin was stored and in which it was brought to table were particularly described, and drawings illustrative of examples of mead cups and pots, several of which are in the author's collection, were exhibited. These vessels are reported to have been in early ages amongst the Celtic chieftains of gold and silver and jewelled as well as of glass, but those which have come down to our days are made of various woods, wrought out of single blocks of beech, oak, elm, pine, walnut, willow, sycamore, and yew, sometimes ornamented with incised lines, or bearing dates and initials. They were called meadars or methars, and the author considered that the famous Dunvegan cup, in the Isle of Skye, was only an oaken methar of bizarre design mounted on four silver legs, and he believed its antiquity must be brought down from the tenth century to the end of the fifteenth century.—Both the papers were illustrated, and elicited much discussion.

Numismatic.—March 18.—Sir J. Evans, President, in the chair.—Mr. H. O. O'Hagan and Mr. W. S. Talbot were elected Members.—Mr. W. T. Ready exhibited a very rare archaic drachm of the town of Salybria, on the European coast of the Propontis; also a counter, dated 1648, struck in the name of Charles II., and consequently within two months after the execution of his father: Obv., ADMITT . NOE . PARTNERS . 1648; three crowns; C. R. II. beneath. Rev., PER . FECI . 1648; Cupid holding wreath and bow; in field to left, tree stump with offshoot; to right, a shrub, to which is hung a quiver.—Mr. R. A. Hoblyn exhibited a series of the "voce populi" halfpennies and farthings coined in Ireland shortly before 1760.—Mr. J. B. Caldecott exhibited specimens of the Isle of Man coinage as follows: specimens of the pattern penny of 1723, without initials or value on reverse, struck in silver and copper; specimens of the pattern halfpenny of the same issue, struck in silver on thick and thin flans and on a thick flan in copper; the pattern penny of 1732, with the date divided by the Derby crest (the child on this piece is in a cradle, from which a sprig issues), with I D and value on reverse, struck in bronzed copper; two copper proofs of the ordinary issue of 1733 shown for reference.—Dr. Frazer exhibited three medals of Louis XVI., Marie Antoinette, and the Dauphin, being copies by the Irish medalist William Mossop of similar pieces made by Ferdinand and Daniel Loos, of Berlin. He also exhibited a pewter impression of a plaque by the same artist, bearing the portraits of Lord John Beresford and his wife, Barbara Montgomery, the original of which once formed the central ornament of a silver tankard.—Mr. W. C. Boyd exhibited a bronze medal by F. Halliday, 1859, probably struck for a Mr. Walter Hawkins, of Kensington, for presentation to young men starting in life. It was intended to encourage the practice of industry, courtesy, and integrity. The obverse represents the stranger looking for a seat in a Greek theatre, and the Athenians keeping their seats while the Spartans in a body rise to make room for him, the incident being taken as typical of courtesy. Below, to the left, is Socrates receiving the cup of hemlock, representing integrity, whilst on the right is Demosthenes speaking on the seashore, emblematic of industry.—Mr. E. Whymper gave an account of a find in 1895 of forty-two Roman copper coins on the summit of the Théodule Pass. The coins belonged to A.D. 270–354.—Mr. Grueber communicated a paper by the late Mr. H. Montagu on some Roman gold coins in his collection.—Sir H. Howorth made remarks on the coins of Peada and Æthelred, which have hitherto been attributed to the kingdom of Mercia but which he proposed to transfer to East Anglia, and to the interval between the reigns of Beorn or Beonna, circ. A.D. 760, and of Æthelberht, who was murdered by Offa, King of Mercia, A.D. 791. Sir H. Howorth was of opinion that there could hardly have been any Mercian coinage before the reign of Offa.

Linnean.—March 4.—Dr. A. Günther, President, in the chair.—The Rev. H. B. Barber was elected a Fellow.—Mr. W. Carruthers exhibited, with the aid of lantern-slides, a series of portraits of Linnæus. He had been fortunate enough not only to see the original paintings, but also to obtain photographs of them, so that he was now able to exhibit exact copies. Putting aside "supposed portraits," and such as might be termed "fancy portraits" having no claim to authenticity, he had satisfied himself of the existence of eight that were certainly painted or drawn from life, and had been copied more or less frequently by different engravers. The earliest was painted by Hoffman in 1737, while Linnæus was working for his patron Cliffort at Hartecamp, and represents him at the age of thirty in the picturesque dress in which he travelled through Lapland. Of the next portrait, an engraving by Ehrensverd in 1740, no original is known to exist. In 1747, at the age of forty, two pencil sketches of Linnæus, one being a full-length, were made by Rehn; and five years later a beautiful pastel was executed by Lundberg. Scheffel in 1755 painted him at the age of forty-eight; and this portrait is preserved at Hammarby in the house of Linnæus, now public property under the care of Prof. Fries of Upsala. Then came the medallion by Inlander, executed in 1773, of which a copy (one of three) is in possession of the Society. The following year, when Linnæus was sixty-seven years of age, his portrait was painted by Krafft, and was placed originally in the Medical College of Stockholm, of which Linnæus was one of the founders. It was supposed to be lost, but had been removed to the Royal Academy of Sciences in Stockholm, where Mr. Carruthers discovered it. The latest portrait was that by Roslin, painted in 1775, when Linnæus was in his sixty-eighth year. A fine copy of this by Pasch, presented to Sir Joseph Banks, and given by him to Robert Brown, now hangs in the Society's library.—Dr. W. B. Benham read a paper on some new species of earthworms belonging to the genus Perichæta from New Britain and elsewhere, with remarks on certain diagnostic characters of the genus. After pointing out the characters of Perichæta and the various structures available for the determination of species, the author gave an account of five new forms which had been received from Borneo, Singapore, the Philippines, and New Britain. Those from the last-named island had been collected by Dr. A. Willey during his voyage to the South Sea islands in quest of the eggs of Nautilus. No earthworms had been previously recorded from New Britain. Dr. Benham recalled the fact that in 1891 he had proposed the name malamaniensis for a species of Perichæta from the Philippine Islands without giving a diagnosis of it, and that he now supplied.—On behalf of Mr. G. W. P. Ellis, Demonstrator in Botany at the University Botanical Laboratory, Cambridge, the Secretary gave the substance of a paper 'On a Trichoderma parasitic on Pellia epiphylla,' a form of disease in liverworts, which the author had noticed in the Botanic Gardens, Cambridge. The chief point to be determined was whether the fungus had lived as a saprophyte on the dead thallus, and thence extended as a parasite into the living tissues; or whether the appearance was associated with the fact that rhizoids were not yet developed at the apical parts by which the fungus might enter. The author found that the thallus of Pellia epiphylla was affected by a disease evidently epidemic in nature, caused by a fungus whose septate mycelium was found in the tissues of the host. On isolation it was seen to be the conidial form of an Ascomycete, and from its structure and conidia, and from its life-history, so far as it could be made out, it appeared to be similar to, if not identical with, the Trichoderma phase of Hypocrea, but no resting stage had yet been found. It was cultivated on nutrient media, and spores from a pure culture when applied to healthy thallus produced in it a disease like that of the original thallus. By means of sections the direct infection of the host by its upper surface was followed out and the parasitic nature of the fungus was established.

Zoological.—March 16.—Dr. W. T. Blanford, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during February, and called attention to the two otters from Co. Down now living in the Society's gardens, and pointed out that they differed in several respects from the common otter. The Irish otter had been separated specifically from Lutra vulgaris by Ogilby in 1834, under the name of Lutra roensis, and Mr. Sclater thought it was worth inquiring whether Ogilby was not right.—Mr. A. Smith Woodward gave an account of his palæontological tour in Brazil and Argentina and of the fossil remains of vertebrated animals that had come under his observation in those countries.—Dr. R. H. Traquair exhibited and made remarks upon a new specimen of the supposed fossil lamprey (Palæospondylus gunni) from the old red sandstone of Caithness, and read a note on its affinities.—A communication was read from Dr. R. Collett on a collection of mammals made by Mr. K. Dahl in North and North-West Australia in 1894-96. The collection contained specimens of thirty-four species, two of which, viz., Pseudochirus dahlii and Smithopsis nitela, proved to be new to science. The former species had been described in the Zoologischer Anzeiger for 1895; the latter was characterized in the present paper.—Mr. P. L. Sclater read a paper 'On the Distribution of Marine Mammals.' The marine area of the globe was divided into six sea-regions, viz, Arctatlantis, Mesatlantis, Indopelagia, Arctirenia, Mesirenia, and Notopelagia, which corresponded to a certain extent with the six land-regions proposed by Mr. Sclater in 1874. The characteristic mammals of each sea-region were pointed out.—Mr. F. E. Beddard read a paper on a collection of earthworms from South Africa, belonging to the genus Acanthodrilus, which had been made in the Cape Colony by Mr. Purcell, of the South African Museum. Examples of nine new species were contained in the collection, which fact was of great interest, as previously only one representative of the genus had been known to exist in South Africa. Mr. Beddard also described a new genus of earthworms, belonging to the family Eudrilidæ, from Lagos, West Africa, under the name of Iridodrilus.—Dr. F. Major exhibited a series of skulls and photographs of species of the African bush-pigs (Potamochœrus), and pointed out the characters of a new species from Nyasaland, which he proposed to call P. johnstoni, remarkable for its large size and slender snout. He also showed that the Nyctichœrus hassana of Heuglin, from Abyssinia, formed a distinct species of Potamochœrus.

Entomological.—March 17.—Mr. R. Trimen, President, in the chair.—Mr. H. Hague was elected a Fellow.—Mr. Butterfield, present as a visitor, exhibited a series of thirty-three male and six female Phigalia pedaria, taken near Bradford, Yorkshire, from February 14th to 17th, 1897. Twenty-one males were typical in having a greater or less development of the four transverse bars. The remaining twelve were without bands, and varied in colour from black to smoky olive; they were decidedly less in point of size, ranging from 1⅝ in. to 1⅞ in., as against 1⅞ in. to 1¹¹⁄₁₂ in. in the banded forms, and were also poorer in scales and slightly deformed. He had only met with this variety once before in the last twenty years, and suggested that the eruption of small, black, and depauperized forms might have been produced by dryness and want of food in the larval conditions, the trees having been extensively defoliated in the preceding year.—Mr. Kirkaldy exhibited an example of the rare macropterous form of Velia currens, Fabr., taken at East Grinstead, and one of Cicadetta montana, Scop., from Brockenhurst. Mr. Burr exhibited a series of grasshoppers with red and blue hindwings of the family Œdipodidæ, to show the remarkable variation in colour seen in this group. Red, blue, and yellow forms are found alike in the same species, the blue being due to the failure of the red pigment, and therefore an incipient albinism, the yellow being a further form of albinism.—Mr. Champion communicated a paper on the Elateridæ and Rhipidoceridæ collected by Mr. H. H. Smith at St. Vincent, Grenada, and the Grenadines, and exhibited the specimens.—Dr. Forel also communicated a paper on the Formicidæ collected by Mr. Smith in the same islands.

Society of Arts.—March 22.—Lord Belhaven and Stenton in the chair.—Prof. Roberts-Austen delivered the second of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On Alloys.'

March 24.—Mr. A. Siemens in the chair.—A paper 'On the Transmission of Power by Alternating Electric Currents' was read by Mr. W. B. Esson, and was followed by a discussion.

Bibliographical.—March 15.—Dr. Garnett in the chair.—Mr. G. J. Gray read a paper on William Pickering, the earliest bookseller known to have lived on London Bridge. Pickering was an original member of the Stationers' Company, and Mr. Gray traced his career from 1556 to 1571, largely from the entries in its records. During these years he had sixty-five ballads and other works licensed to him which appear to have perished; but sixteen other works survive, though mostly in unique or imperfect copies, and these were described and illustrated by means of photographs.—Dr. Garnett, Messrs. C. Welch, H. B. Wheatley, and H. R. Plomer were the principal speakers in the discussion which followed.

Aristotelian.—March 8.—Mr. B. Bosanquet, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. A. F. Shand 'On Types of Will,' which was followed by a discussion.

March 22.—The President in the chair.—The Rev. J. Lindsay was elected a Member.—The question 'Has Ethical Science a Practical or a Purely Speculative Aim?' was discussed in papers by Mr. J. H. Muirhead, Mrs. S. Bryant, and Mr. H. Sturt.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Institute of Actuaries, 7.—'Mortality Experience of Assured Lives and Annuitants in France,' Mr G F. Hardy.
— Institute of British Architects, 8.—'Heraldry of the Renaissance in England,' Mr J A. Gotch
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Alloys,' Lecture III., Prof. W. C. Roberts-Austen. (Cantor Lecture)
Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Lead-Work,' Mr. W. R. Lethaby.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—'Electric Lifts and Cranes,' Mr. H. W. Ravenshaw.
Wed. United Service Institution, 3.—'The Education and Training of Naval and Military Cadets,' Major-General A. B Tulloch.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Cycling, Historical and Practical,' Mr. G. L. Hillier.
— Chemical, 8.—Annual General Meeting; Ballot for Election of Officers and Council.
Thurs Royal Institution, 3.—'The Relation of Geology to History,' Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins.
— Royal, 4½.
— Society of Arts, 4½.—'A Visit to Russian Central Asia,' Mr. M. F. O Dwyer.
— Linnean, 8.—'The Evolution of Oxygen from Coloured Bacteria,' Dr. A. J. Ewart; 'The Germination of Spores of Agaricineæ,' Miss H. B. Potter.
— Chemical, 8.—'The Composition of Cooked Fish,' Mr. K. P. Williams; and a Paper by Mr. E. Aston and Dr. J. N. Collie.
Fri. Physical, 5.
— Philological, 8.—'Sir Thomas Wyatt's Poems,' Prof. G. Foster.
— Geologists' Association, 8.—'The Physical History of Romney Marsh,' Mr. G. Dowker.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Metallic Alloys and the Theory of Solution,' Mr C. T. Heycock.
Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations,' Lord Rayleigh.

Science Gossip.

Dr. Robert Hogg, who died on the 14th inst. at the age of seventy-nine, was one of the foremost men in horticultural circles. Originally a partner in a large nursery, now forming the site upon which the Imperial Institute, the South Kensington Museum, and other buildings are placed, Hogg for many years conducted, either alone or in connexion with the late Mr. G. W. Johnson, a journal known as the Cottage Gardener, which gradually evolved into the Journal of Horticulture. But probably his greatest claim to the appreciation of his colleagues and of those who are to come after him was the production of the 'Fruit Manual,' a standard work of original research in the shape of a descriptive enumeration of fruits cultivated in this country, which has gone through several editions, and is as well known to fruit growers on the Continent as it is here.

The Russian Government has made arrangements for facilitating excursions to those geologists who attend the Seventh International Geological Congress, but the organizing committee wish it to be understood that only recognized geologists will share in these privileges. This means, we suppose, that the committee will decide who is a geologist and who is not.

The Report of the Meteorological Council for the year 1896 has just been issued as a Parliamentary Paper.

The Swiss papers report the death at Lugano of Dr. Kenngott, who was for thirty-five years Professor of Mineralogy in the University of Zurich, and Director of the Mineralogical Museum. His name will be familiar to many by his long series of publications in his own science, especially by the three volumes of his 'Handwörterbuch der Mineralogie.'

At the anniversary meeting of the Royal Irish Academy on the 16th inst. Prof. Albert von Kölliker and M. A. Michel Lévy were elected honorary members in the section of science.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish immediately a second edition of Sir William Roberts's book 'Collected Contributions on Digestion and Diet.' The new edition will have as an appendix a reprint of the author's report on 'The Opium Habit in India.'

Dr. T. K. Abbott writes:—

"In your notice of Prof. Sylvester it is stated that, being a Jew, he was debarred from proceeding to his degree at Cambridge, where he had been declared Second Wrangler. It deserves to be put on record that he came over to Trinity College, Dublin, and was admitted to the degrees of B.A. and M.A. in 1841. This university had already in 1836 admitted to the degree of B.A. a Jewish alumnus of its own, Nathan Lazarus Benmohel, the first Jew to obtain a degree in any university in the United Kingdom. Mr. Benmohel had also what I suppose was the unique distinction of having his testamur issued many years after his death. As he resided in Trinity College until his death, he never thought it necessary to apply for it, but the Committee of the Anglo-Jewish Exhibition, held some years ago, obtained it for the purpose of exhibition as an interesting historical document."

The approximate place of D'Arrest's periodical comet for the 1st prox. is, according to M. Leveau's ephemeris, R.A. 21ʰ 6ᵐ, N.P.D. 96° 52′. On the 5th it will be very near the bright star β Aquarii. It rises about three hours before the sun, and next week will be the most favourable time for seeing it, on account of the absence of moonlight.

The planet Mercury will be in superior conjunction with the sun on the morning of the 2nd prox., and at greatest eastern elongation from it on the 28th, so that he will be visible after sunset in the last week of April, situated in the constellation Taurus, and passing very near the Pleiades. Venus is in Aries, and sets earlier each evening; on the 28th of next month she will be in inferior conjunction with the sun. Mars continues visible in the evening in the south-western part of the sky, passing in an easterly direction through the constellation Gemini. Jupiter is almost stationary in Leo; he will be due south at 9 o'clock in the evening on the 9th prox., and at 8 o'clock on the 24th. Saturn rises now a little before midnight in the constellation Scorpio, and will do so earlier as April advances, about 9 o'clock in the evening at the end of it.

FINE ARTS

A Handbook of Greek Sculpture. By E. A. Gardner.—Parts I. and II. Handbooks of Archæology and Antiquities. (Macmillan & Co.)

Handbooks and histories of Greek art are now so numerous that when a new work of the kind falls into the hands of the reviewer his first question is, By what special features or characteristics is the fresh accession justified? In the case of Prof. Ernest Gardner's handbook, we are glad at the outset to say that the answer is prompt and satisfactory. The introduction alone, which runs to over forty pages, makes the book indispensable to every student of the subject. This introduction falls into two distinct parts—(a) Sources of our Knowledge—Literature and Monuments; (b) Materials and Processes of Greek Sculpture. Every teacher of Greek archæology realizes that some knowledge of both these departments is essential as a preliminary mental equipment to the student before his study of the historical sequence of Greek sculpture begins; but hitherto he has been left to furnish himself haphazard, without any mapping out, any definite conspectus, of the material with which he will have to deal. In the matter of sources Prof. Gardner's first paragraph admirably clears the ground, and must be quoted:—

"The sources from which we derive our knowledge of Greek sculpture and its history fall naturally into two classes: one of these is literary, and may be sought in the writings that have been preserved to us from classical times; the other is monumental, and is to be found in extant works of sculpture. For the first we must go to libraries, for the second to museums. An intelligent combination of the two, and a correct appreciation of their varying relations, is a necessary foundation for any scientific study of the history of Greek sculpture. And each class is still further complicated in itself by the indirect nature of the evidence with which we have to deal and the difficulty of ascertaining the exact relation between the information we possess and the ultimate fact we desire to ascertain."

In most handbooks and histories all this—trite enough to the specialist, and present in some implicit fashion in the mind of the student—is assumed; Prof. Gardner states fairly and squarely the special intricacies and difficulties of the subject, and prepares the mind of the student for the peculiar and delicate character of the mental discipline his composite material will yield. Moreover, he is no longer turned loose on his "Schriftquellen" and his monuments, for, proceeding to "Literary Sources," the author points out the very various nature of even the literary evidence. It is either direct or indirect, i.e., either the work of an ancient writer dealing directly, whether from the theoretical, historical, or descriptive point of view, with archæology, or the indirect chance allusion of poet, historian, or philosopher, from Homer downwards. The character and relative value of these various literary sources are carefully scrutinized, and the principal lost treatises of which we only know by quotation are noted. This all clears the air, and it will be the student's own fault henceforth if he does not realize that, e.g., the careful, conscientious, descriptive treatises of Pausanias or the fact-loving Pliny are evidence of another sort from the rhetorical exercises and descriptions of imaginary collections of Callistratos and the Philostrati. This, again, is information that has always been assumed in the student, probably because archæology until quite recent years was seldom taken up in England, except as the parergon of the accomplished scholar. Prof. Gardner shows everywhere in his book that he has this advantage over older specialists: he has been trained himself in the method of his study, and he has had practical experience in the training of the average student, as to whose scholarship, therefore, he makes no rash assumptions.

The second portion of the introduction, on the "Materials and Processes of Greek Sculpture," is even more valuable, because containing material less easily accessible to the student, i.e., the technicalities of his subject, the methods of working in wood, stone, metal, terra-cotta, the application of colour to sculpture, and the use of painting from finished models. Every student of Greek art cannot be a sculptor, but every student, if he is to deal seriously with his monumental evidence, must know something of the nature of, e.g., the stone used at different periods—must be able to distinguish at a glance the coarse limestone of Cyprus, the local Peiræus stone, the coarse grain of the island marbles, and the fine grain of the marble of Pentelicus. On all these matters Prof. Gardner writes con amore. During his directorship at Athens he has had ample occasion for a first-hand study of material and technique, and he has made good use of his opportunities, as is seen by his careful analysis of the unfinished statues in various stages that are preserved in the National Museum at Athens. We should like to have had the author's views on the difficult question of patina; it has recently been urged (and we think with high probability) that the beautiful patina so much admired on ancient bronzes was a deliberately calculated and artificially produced effect. The question about patina was raised, it will be remembered, as long ago as Plutarch's days. In his 'Pythian Responses' he notes that some visitors to Delphi were astonished not so much by the artistic merit of the statues as by the colour of the bronze, which was of a deep blue, and made the statues of naval commanders look as though they had suffered an appropriate "sea change." Had there been, they asked, some particular method of alloying or treating the bronze with a view to this effect? The recent investigations on patina have been published too late for discussion in Prof. Gardner's book, so it is possible he may reconsider his somewhat premature statement that "any attempt to apply a pigment to the surface of a bronze statue seems out of the question."

We confess that with the introduction, which cannot be too highly praised, our interest in the book ends. We should have liked to see this introduction, with some amplification, published separately as an indispensable prolegomenon to all other histories and handbooks. Once the history of Greek sculpture fairly begins, the distinctive personal note ceases. The information given is sound, the style clear, but the general effect is depressing as of a thrice-told tale—told moreover in a safe-guarded and even timorous fashion—and there is scarcely sufficient new material to justify the retelling. The author, it is fair to state, hoped to include in his second part the new discoveries at Delphi. This hope he has renounced, chiefly because, "pending the publication of the Delphic discoveries by those to whom they are due, it would be rash to include them in a handbook like this." We fail to see the rashness of additional new facts, and the handbook would have done well to wait. Moreover, the real test comes when new, unsifted, unlabelled material has to be dealt with. Perhaps the author was wise to confine himself to such facts and theories as have already met with general acceptance among archæologists: but students of archæology are not children, and an occasional excursus into the knight errantry of the subject is an inspiration and an impetus all round. The book suffers a good deal, if not from quod semper, at least from quod ubique quod ab omnibus. We feel this most in the matter of the interpretation of monuments, which is specially barren. Where Prof. Gardner cannot get a consensus he stands out. In the matter of the Parthenon marbles, because archæologists are not agreed as to details of meaning in the pediment sculptures, the student is left with the general impression that no solid advance has been made, and that one interpretation is as good as another. Thus, p. 279, "This [the snake coil] has been quoted to prove the figures are either Cecrops and one of his daughters or Asclepius and Hygieia: neither theory is as yet convincingly proved." Probably nothing short of an inscription will convince Prof. Gardner; but we are sorry for the student who can resist the cumulative evidence for Cecrops. For facts we may safely rely on Prof. Gardner; for constructive imagination we had better go—elsewhere.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 20th and 22nd inst. the following, from various collections. Drawings: T. S. Cooper, Summer Time, a bull and seven cows in Canterbury meadows, 105*l.*; Canterbury Meadows, with cows and sheep, 73*l.* W. Müller, The Rialto, 56*l.* J. Linnell, A Landscape, with peasants caught in a storm, 50*l.* F. W. Topham, St. Patrick's Day, scene in the west of Ireland, 110*l.* C. Montalba, Venice, a funeral barge, or "The Last Journey," 52*l.* Pictures: R. Beavis, Going to Market, 110*l.* T. S. Cooper, A Mountainous Landscape, with cows and sheep, 194*l.*; Summer Time, six cows on the bank of a stream, 131*l.*; In the Shade, a landscape with cows and sheep, 154*l.* J. T. Linnell, A Summer's Evening, a landscape with shepherds and sheep, 157*l.* W. Müller, A Rustic Landscape, with a peasant and boat near a cottage, 225*l.* P. Nasmyth, A Farm Scene, with peasants, cattle, and sheep, 144*l.* E. Nicol, The Price of the Pig, 173*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 23rd and 24th inst. the following works of Bartolozzi from the Bessborough Collection, the property of the Hon. Ashley Ponsonby: Venus attired by the Graces, after A. Kauffman, open letter proof, in brown, 47*l.*; ditto, printed in red, 31*l.* An Album, containing 69 Fancy Subjects, 33*l.*; ditto, containing 160 Plates, 26*l.*; ditto, containing Portraits of Miss Brunton, Cipriani, and others, 84 plates, 31*l.*; ditto, containing 74 Landscapes, &c., 35*l.*; ditto, containing Portraits, &c., 100 plates, 48*l.* Portraits: Miss Farren, Countess of Derby, after Sir T. Lawrence, printed in brown, 32*l.*; ditto, proof, 42*l.* Lady Hamilton as the Seamstress, after Romney, by Cheesman, 54*l.* Queen Marie Christine, after Chevalier Roslin, 37*l.* Princess Mary Sophia and Amelia, after J. Copley, 88*l.* After R. Cosway, Mrs. Hardinge, 'The Fair Moralist,' 73*l.*; Mrs. Udny, 35*l.* After J. Downman, Duchess of Devonshire, 61*l.*; ditto, 69*l.*; Lady Duncannon, 40*l.*; ditto, 92*l.*; Miss Farren, open letter proof, 27*l.*; ditto, printed in colours, 81*l.*; Lady Elizabeth Foster, 64*l.*; Duchess of Richmond, 31*l.*; Mrs. Siddons, open letter proof, 36*l.*; ditto, printed in colours, 105*l.* After Sir J. Reynolds, Jane, Countess of Harrington, and Children, second state, 27*l.*; ditto, first state, printed in brown, 43*l.*; Miss Emily Pott as Thaïs, second state, 31*l.*; Lady Smythe and Children, second state, 40*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

On the 1st of July next Messrs. Christie will sell the collections of pictures, drawings, and objets d'art belonging to the late Mr. George P. Boyce, including a certain number of his own works, such as 'The Confessor's Chapel, Westminster,' a delightful drawing we have more than once praised. It is important because it shows that edifice as it appeared with all the charm of Time's colouring, before the "effacing fingers" of Sir Gilbert Scott were busy upon what the centuries had spared. Besides this there will be sold of Boyce's painting 'Bridewell Precincts,' 'Whitby,' 'The Sphinx,' 'Dorchester Church, Oxon,' and some very fine studies of the most sterling quality made in Egypt and Venice. Much interest will attach to the sale of the pictures and drawings in colours and black and white which Boyce bought of Rossetti, all of which are entirely autographic and in fine condition. The pictures in oil comprise 'Bocca baciata,' 1859. The drawings of both kinds include 'Borgia (girl and boy dancing),' 1851; 'How They met Themselves,' 1851–60; 'The Annunciation (Mary bathing her feet in a rivulet),' 1852; 'Giorgione painting from a Model,' 1853; and 'Bonifazio's Mistress,' 1857. Many of these works of Rossetti were at the Academy in 1883; most of those by Boyce were exhibited in Pall Mall.

A paragraph which has been going the round of the papers as to a discovery, in the Speaker's house, of a portrait of Sir Thomas More which had been forgotten is based on a misconception. The portrait had never been lost sight of, but was hung in a place where it was not easily seen. The present Speaker, naturally thinking that Sir Thomas More was perhaps the most illustrious of his many illustrious predecessors, removed the picture to a place in which it is better seen.

Mr. Leslie will be represented at the approaching Academy exhibition by one picture only, which he calls 'The Day of Rest.' It is a meadow scene in evening light with the horses of a farm enjoying their holiday.

The Egypt Exploration Fund has recently received two handsome bequests—one of 1,000*l.* from the late Mr. Edward Cooper, of South Kensington, the other of 500*l.* from Mrs. Overend, of Retford, Nottingham. Three expeditions have been organized by the Fund during the past winter. One, under Prof. Petrie, has been working at Behnesa, and another, under Mr. Bernard Grenfell, is at Beni Mazar, both places being in Upper Egypt; whilst the third is at Deir el Bahari, where the copying of the inscriptions and mural paintings has been continued, and a commencement made of restoring such parts of the temple there as are in an unsafe state. These extensive operations have considerably taxed the resources of the Fund, so that these bequests come at an opportune time.

The hundred and sixty-first exhibition of the Fine-Art Society consists of more than a hundred drawings—more strictly, sketches on paper in several materials—of "Wild Beasts," by Mr. J. M. Swan. Slight as they are, they exhibit much character, and they illustrate the deftness of the draughtsman. They are hardly, however, strong enough to form an exhibition by themselves.

The exhibition of F. Madox Brown's paintings at the Grafton Galleries will be closed on the 30th inst. About a month later, probably at the end of April, the galleries will be reopened with a collection of pictures of subjects from the drama, and portraits of actors, actresses, and playwrights.

A large picture by Mr. Rudolph Blind is now on view at Mr. Graves's in Pall Mall, and is about to be engraved. It is called 'Christ the Consoler,' and represents the chamber of an artisan, where he and his wife are deploring the death of their child; to them Christ in glory appears, as if to enforce the promise, "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you."—Mr. T. McLean's exhibition of cabinet pictures at 7, Haymarket, will be opened to the public on Monday next; the private view takes place to-day (Saturday).

At Mr. Graves's may be seen after to-day (Saturday) "Eighty Water-Colour Drawings depicting the Scenery of Sark," by Mr. F. W. Sturge. The exhibition will remain open until the 16th of April.

The private view of the exhibition of the New English Art Club, Dudley Gallery, is appointed for Saturday, April 3rd, the public being admitted on the Monday following.

The University of Glasgow is about to print an illustrated catalogue of the Hunterian coins.

Mr. F. G. Stephens writes to us in regard to our review of Madox Brown's life that in 1860 he looked on Madox Brown as an outsider with regard to the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. It seems that in the book by Mr. Stephens which Mr. Hueffer mentions the name of Madox Brown occurs but once, he being simply mentioned as an artist of merit who is to be classed with Leslie, Dyce, Mulready, and others.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

St. James's Hall.—Henschel Concerts. Royal College of Music Concert.
Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts.
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts. Promenade Concerts.
St. James's Hall.—Madame Marchesi's Vocal Recital. Bohemian Quartet Party.
Queen's Hall.—Lamoureux Concerts. Philharmonic Concerts.

Mr. Henschel opened his eighth concert on Thursday last week at St. James's Hall with an excellent performance of Mozart's Overture to 'The Magic Flute.' The symphony chosen was Haydn's in G, No. 13 of Breitkopf's edition, and full justice was done to the genial and graceful music. A very effective rendering was also given of Liszt's symphonic poem 'Tasso,' one of the most brilliant and satisfactory of the twelve works written in this form by Liszt. The soloist was Mr. Maurice Sons, a violinist who extracts a thin tone from his instrument, but on this occasion he interpreted the solo part of Beethoven's Concerto with artistic intelligence and notable executive skill.

The students of the Royal College of Music may be said never to have given a more successful orchestral concert than that of Friday last week at St. James's Hall. The programme opened with "the first performance in London" of an Overture in E by Schubert, which proved to be an attractive and characteristic work. The event of the evening was the interpretation of Tschaïkowsky's fantasia for orchestra, 'Francesca da Rimini,' which had not previously been heard in the metropolis. This is a work of great power and beauty of expression, and scored in a most masterly manner. The spirit of the music, the poetic basis of which is found in Dante's well-known poem, seemed to appeal to the young executants, and the rendering was distinguished by remarkable verve and intensity. Mr. Samuel Grimson, a violinist of great promise, played the solo part of Herr Joachim's 'Hungarian' Concerto with marked executive skill and artistic perception, and the vocalists were Miss Helen Jaxon, Mr. Emlyn Davies, and Miss Muriel Foster.

There was an overflowing attendance at the Crystal Palace Concert on Saturday afternoon, owing to the reappearance of M. Paderewski after an absence from England of some duration. The great pianist played the solo portions of Chopin's Concerto in F minor and of Liszt's brilliant development of this form of composition in E flat with a virtuoso's command of the key-board, and interpreted the slow movements in each work with keen appreciation of the requirements of the music. A very fine performance of Beethoven's 'Pastoral' Symphony was given. The vocalist was Mlle. Martha Müller.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. Robert Newman held his fifth Symphony Concert at the Queen's Hall, when the first performance was given in London of César Franck's symphonic poem 'Le Chasseur Maudit.' This work is based upon Bürger's well-known ballad 'Der Wilde Jaeger,' and the music follows the chief incidents of the gruesome story in a most clear and patent manner. The natural result is that it possesses little charm; but it is an excellent example of programme music of the most direct kind, and the orchestral parts are written in a masterly manner. Far more enjoyable was the interpretation of Tschaïkowsky's Fifth Symphony in E minor, Op. 64, a worthy companion to the great Sixth Symphony, known as the 'Pathetic,' by the same composer. Rimski-Korsakoff's 'Caprice Espagnol,' Op. 34, a brightly written suite in five movements, and an entirely unnecessary orchestral version by H. Esser of Bach's fine Organ Toccata in F, were also included in the programme.

The selections at the Queen's Hall Promenade Concert on Saturday included the gay introduction to the second act of Humperdinck's latest opera 'Der Königskinder' and Mr. F. H. Cowen's pleasing suite 'In Fairyland,' both of which were most effectively played under Mr. Wood's direction.

Madame Blanche Marchesi gave on Monday afternoon the first of two vocal recitals at St. James's Hall, and sang an interesting selection of high-class songs in her usual finished and refined style. Her most successful effort was in the aria "Ombra mai fù" from Handel's opera 'Xerxes.' This beautiful air, which has been made so familiar by various instrumental arrangements under the vague title of 'Handel's Largo,' was sung with the utmost dignity and pathos, and the rendering was a notable example of this artist's great vocal skill. The enjoyment of the afternoon was increased by some very impressive and brilliant violoncello playing by Herr Henry Bramsen.

The Bohemian Quartet Party gave its fifth concert on Tuesday afternoon at St. James's Hall, when the programme was made up of Mozart's Quartet in D, No. 20 of Breitkopf & Härtel's edition; Schumann's Quartet in F, Op. 41, No. 2; and Dvoràk's Quintet in A, Op. 81, the pianoforte part of which was excellently played by Miss Fanny Davies. The spirit of Mozart's music was admirably expressed, the remarkable body of tone which these players produce from their instruments being specially noticeable in the fine adagio. The romantic sentiment of Schumann's delightful work was no less happily set forth, and the vivacious scherzo was rendered with so much brilliancy and élan that the audience made an attempt to have it repeated. The executants, however, were heard at their best in Dvořák's music, the spirit and rapid changes of sentiment of which were grasped and interpreted with an unfailing accuracy, fidelity, and brilliancy that at times were little short of marvellous.

A special event of the week has been the arrival in London of M. Lamoureux and his highly trained orchestra. The first concert was given on Monday evening at the Queen's Hall, when the most important works performed were Mendelssohn's 'Ruy Blas' Overture and Mozart's great Symphony in C, commonly known as the 'Jupiter.' Both of these were interpreted with remarkable precision and the greatest delicacy in the soft passages. The tone of the strings of M. Lamoureux's force is somewhat thin, but the beauty and refinement in the playing of the wood wind are very striking. This was specially noticeable in the rendering of M. Saint-Saëns's picturesque symphonic poem 'Le Rouet d'Omphale,' which was superbly played and repeated. A 'Fantaisie Dialoguée' for organ and orchestra, by M. L. Boëllmann, proved to be a work more remarkable for the skill and effectiveness of its writing than for the originality of its themes. M. Boëllmann is organist at the church of St. Vincent de Paul, Paris, and his knowledge of the requirements and capabilities of his instrument is admirably shown in his fantasia.

The second concert took place the following evening, and was notable for a fine performance of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. As on the previous occasion, the orchestra was most successful in French music, and an ideal rendering was given of the Prelude to M. Saint-Saëns's oratorio 'Le Déluge,' the solo violin part in which was beautifully played by M. Lucien Capet. Excellent performances were also given of Wagner's Overture to 'The Flying Dutchman' and Chabrier's orchestral rhapsody 'España.'

The third Lamoureux Concert took place at the Queen's Hall on Wednesday afternoon. Very effective performances were given of Brahms's Second Symphony in D, and particularly of Liszt's 'Mephisto Valse' and Wagner's 'Siegfried Idyl.' An interesting item was the singing by M. Bailly of Pan's song from Bach's "drama per musica" 'The Contest of Phœbus and Pan,' a work first performed under the composer's direction in 1731.

The opening concert (which took place on Wednesday at the Queen's Hall) of the eighty-fifth season of the Philharmonic Society was distinguished by the production of Sir Alexander Mackenzie's 'Scottish' Concerto for pianoforte and orchestra, in G, Op. 55, written in the summer of 1895 at the request of M. Paderewski, who played the solo part on Wednesday. The work, which consists of three movements, is thoroughly Scotch in character, and is written with great brilliancy, especially for the pianoforte. On a first hearing, however, the themes scarcely seem of sufficient importance to bear the elaborate treatment to which they are submitted. The symphony chosen was Beethoven's Fourth in B flat, in the interpretation of which the orchestra showed marked advance on the attainments of last year. The other orchestral works were Dvořák's Scherzo Capriccioso and Wagner's 'Kaisermarsch.' The vocalist was Madame Blanche Marchesi. Sir A. C. Mackenzie conducted.

Musical Gossip.

Mr. Pinero issued on Tuesday an announcement that he and Mr. Comyns Carr had agreed to write an "operatic drama" for the Savoy, the music to be composed by Sir Arthur Sullivan. Rumours of such an arrangement were current nearly a year ago, but we understand that the scenario of the new work has now been submitted to and accepted by Sir Arthur Sullivan. Although doubtless containing plenty of the comedy element, the opera will, as its description suggests, be rather more serious than is usual at the Savoy, and it is hoped it will be ready for production by October next.

Meanwhile various alterations have been made in the score and libretto of 'His Majesty,' and invitations to witness the revised version were issued for Thursday of this week. The alterations include the elimination of much extraneous matter and the addition of a new song and quartet.

Sir Arthur Sullivan is at present chiefly occupied with his new ballet in commemoration of the Queen's long reign, and this work will be produced at the Alhambra in about a month's time. It is understood to deal more or less with British sports and pastimes from Druidical to our own days, but with special reference to the maypole dances and other village gatherings of a couple of centuries ago.

Immediately after their last concert at St. James's Hall on Tuesday the Bohemian String Quartet left for Berlin, where on Friday of this week they had to fulfil a concert engagement at the Singakademie. The success which this accomplished party have achieved is, however, so great that they will give a fresh series of London concerts after Easter, the first taking place at St. James's Hall on May 3rd.

The subscribers to the opera will be glad to learn there is a chance that M. Jean de Reszke may appear at Covent Garden earlier than was expected. According to present arrangements the return visit of the Grau company to New York will be abandoned, so that the party will be back in Europe by about the 10th prox. If this be the case, M. de Reszke (who was married the day before he sailed for New York) will be able to enjoy his long-delayed honeymoon and yet appear at Covent Garden during the first week of the season.

M. Paderewski on the morrow of his appearance at the first Philharmonic Concert on Wednesday started on his brief provincial tour, which will extend to the end of the month. He will return to London to give a pianoforte recital on June 15th, and later, from October 18th onwards, will pay a two months' visit to England.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	National Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
—	String Quartet Concert, 7.30, Queen's Small Hall.
Mon.	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss A. V. Mukle and Miss F. Thomas's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	M. J. A. Hugo's Recital.
Tues.	Madame Marchesi's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Gertrude Lonsdale's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Herr Felix Mottl's Wagner Concert, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
Wed.	Mr. Philip Cathie's Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Madame Frickenhaus's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Police Orphanage Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Westminster Orchestral Society's Concert, 8, Westminster Town Hall.
Thurs.	Royal Academy of Music Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Henschel's Symphony Concert, 7.30, St. James's Hall.
—	Victoria Madrigal Society's Concert in Aid of the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund, 8, St. Martin's Town Hall.
Fri.	Herr Theodore Werner's Violin Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Florence May's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mr. G. A. Clinton's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
Sat.	Crystal Palace Concert, 3.
—	Mozart Society's Concert, 3, No. 26, George Street, Hanover Square.
—	Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Symphony Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Promenade Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.

To Correspondents.—H. B. M.—J. B.—E. L. G.—Alpha—E. R.—M. G. K.—W. C. B.—L. C. de L.—M. A. L.—L. N.—G. de la Q.—received.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

OUIDA'S NEW NOVEL.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

1 vol. crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

First Edition exhausted on day of publication. SECOND EDITION ready next week.

WILLIAM BLACK'S NOVELS.

Bound in cloth, HALF-A-CROWN each.

The NEW UNIFORM EDITION. Price 2s. 6d. each Volume. 27 Volumes already published. The New Volumes, now in preparation, bringing the Series down to date, are:—

1. WOLFENBERG. [Now ready.
2. The HANDSOME HUMES. [Ready April 1.
3. HIGHLAND COUSINS. [Ready May 1.
4. BRISEIS. [Ready June 1.
5. MAGIC INK. [Ready July 1.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS OF

TWO NOVELS BY ALFRED CLARK.

Uniform crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

A DARK PLACE OF THE EARTH.

"Fresh, powerful, and extraordinarily vivid in presentment."—Athenæum.

THE

FINDING OF LOT'S WIFE.

"A very fine piece of imaginative work—a night's entertainment of modern Arabian adventure."—Scotsman.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

WAR, FAMINE, and our FOOD SUPPLY. By R. B. MARSTON. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.; boards, 2s.

The work is on the lines of Mr. Marston's article 'Corn Stores for War Time,' which appeared in the Nineteenth Century for February, 1896, and attracted a good deal of attention both in this country and abroad.

READY APRIL 9.

NEW WORK BY CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN.

The LIFE of NELSON the EMBODIMENT of the SEA POWER of GREAT BRITAIN. By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N., Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

Full Prospectus post free on application.

VOLUME I. READY ON APRIL 9.

A HISTORY of the ROYAL NAVY from the EARLIEST TIMES to the PRESENT. By W. LAIRD CLOWES, Fellow of King's College, London, Gold Medallist, U.S. Naval Institute, Hon. Member R.U.S. Institution. Assisted by Sir C. R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, &c. 5 vols. with very numerous Illustrations, royal 8vo. cloth extra, 25s. each, net.

TWO ADDITIONS TO LOW'S 2s. 6d. LIBRARY OF TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

Uniform crown 8vo. Volumes, fully illustrated, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

HAUSALAND; or, Fifteen Hundred Miles through the Central Soudan. By the Rev. C. H. ROBINSON, M.A. With Map, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations.

TWO KINGS of UGANDA; or, Life by the Shores of the Victoria Nyanza. By the Rev. R. P. ASHE, M.A. With Map and Illustration.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

MESSRS. SKEFFINGTONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

By EDITH E. CUTHELL, Author of 'Only a Guardroom Dog,' 'A Baireuth Pilgrimage,' &c.—THIS DAY, elegant cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

SWEET IRISH EYES: a Charming Story of Society Life.

THIS DAY. By ERNEST G. HENHAM.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

GOD, MAN, AND THE DEVIL. A New Novel.

This new and striking Novel deals with the Marriage Question, Divorce, &c.

THIS DAY. By LILIAN STREET, Author of 'The Little Plain Woman,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

NELL AND THE ACTOR. A New Novel.

THIS DAY. By RICHARD PENDEREL, Author of 'Wilfrid Waide, Barrister and Novelist,' 'Dick Wylder,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

AS A ROARING LION. A Romance.

THIS DAY. By C. J. WILLDEY.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

Translator of that successful Book, OLIVEIRA MARTIN'S 'The ENGLAND of TO-DAY.'

THE BOOK OF HUMBUG. An Exposure of Shams Literary and Social.

The humorous and clever sarcasm of this book cannot fail to obtain for it a very wide circle of readers.

JUST OUT, crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

HELEN MATHERS' NEW BOOK 'THE JUGGLER AND THE SOUL.'

A startling and striking New Story by the AUTHOR of 'COMIN' THRO' THE RYE.'

FORTY-THIRD THOUSAND, JUST OUT, crown 8vo. cloth, price 5*s.*

MARIE CORELLI'S BOOK 'THE MURDER OF DELICIA.'

NEARLY READY, crown 8vo. price 5*s.*

New and Important Work by the Rev. T. MOORE, M.A., Author of 'The Englishman's Brief,' 'The "Dead Hand" in the "Free Churches" of Dissent,' &c.

Dedicated to the memories of St. Augustine and King Ethelbert.

BEGINNINGS OF THE ENGLISH CHURCH AND KINGDOM,

EXPLAINED TO THE PEOPLE. This valuable work is written in a thoroughly popular and interesting style, while the utmost care has been taken to insure strict accuracy in every particular.

This day, Dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty the Queen.

HYMNS FOR THE QUEEN'S COMMEMORATION.

By the most Eminent Authors and Composers. The ROYAL EDITION, complete with Music, printed on superfine paper and bound in cloth, with gold lettering, price 1*s.* net. Cheap Editions for Congregations, Schools, &c., 2*d.* and ½*d.*

NEXT WEEK, crown 8vo. cloth, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

ORIGINAL SERMONS FOR THE QUEEN'S COMMEMORATION.

Specially written by the Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D., Dean of Canterbury. The Rev. CANON HAMMOND, LL.B., Vicar of St. Austell, Author of 'Church or Chapel,' &c. The Rev. H. J. WILMOT BUXTON (Two Sermons). The Rev. J. B. C. MURPHY, Chaplain to the Forces, Author of 'Homely Words for Life's Wayfarers.' The Rev. J. ROOKER, M.A., Vicar of Coldharbour, Dorking.

This volume also contains a TABLE of the CHIEF EVENTS affecting Religion, the Church of England, Education, &c., from 1837 to 1897.

IN PREPARATION, price 10*s.* 6*d.* By GEORGE MORLEY, Author of 'Leafy Warwickshire,' 'In Rustic Livery,' 'Sweet Audrey,' &c.

IN RUSSET MANTLE CLAD. Scenes of Rural Life in Warwickshire.

Dedicated by special permission to the Right Hon. the Countess of Warwick.

'In Russet Mantle Clad' deals exclusively with idyllic life in the charming Warwickshire greenwood. What Thomas Hardy has done for Wessex and Richard Jefferies for Wiltshire, George Morley has endeavoured to do for Warwickshire.

With the delicate touch of a lover of Nature he has limned the scenery and the peasants as only a native with an intimate knowledge and a graphic pen could portray them. He has preserved in the mouths of his peasants that direct and homely mode of expression which is more nearly the language of the Bible and Shakespeare than any other English dialect.

The book is written in an extremely popular style, with marginal head-notes, and will be embellished by a set of Illustrations of some of the most beautiful scenes described, made expressly for this work.

The work will be published in June, price 10*s.* 6*d.*, it will be elegantly printed on superfine antique laid paper, with wide margins, the Illustrations being on enamelled art paper, and it will be clothed in a binding of special design, with the top edges in dull gold.

IN PREPARATION, demy 8vo. cloth, with many Illustrations, price 10*s.* By Rev. CANON HAMMOND, Author of 'Church or Chapel,' &c.

A CORNISH PARISH: being an Account of St. Austell—Town, Church,

District, and People. By JOSEPH HAMMOND, LL.B., Vicar.

This is a careful but at the same time vivacious and often humorous description of his Parish, by Canon Hammond. After tracing the history of the place from early times—for which he draws largely on public documents—we have a brief description of the town, which is the centre of the China Clay trade, followed by a series of interesting extracts from the Overseers' "Account Books," which goes back to 1671. Next we have a description of the Church, with its rich adornments and many curious carvings—Canon Hammond calls it a "Sermon in Stone." Next the Church Registers; then he shows us the Church Plate and gives us its history. Then we make under his guidance a series of excursions in the neighbourhood, where, among other things, the Fisheries, Mines, and Clayworks are all described. He concludes with an appreciation of the Cornish folk, and an account of their characteristics—including their speech, food, charms, superstitions, folk-lore, &c., of which he has many good stories to tell. The book is crammed with information. The interest of the reader never flags, for there is not a dull page in the twenty chapters.

London: SKEFFINGTON & SON, 163, Piccadilly, W.

Publishers to H.M. the Queen and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'A WOMAN'S CROSS.'

A LAST THROW. By Alice M. DIEHL. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

NOTE. — The First Edition exhausted on publication. Second Edition this day.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'UNE CULOTTE.'

A SHORT INNINGS: a Public School Episode. By "TIVOLI." Crown 8vo. buckram, with a Frontispiece, 3s. 6d.

A RATTLING BOOK OF ADVENTURE.

MY YARNS of SEA-FOAM and GOLD-DUST. By Captain CHARLES CLARK. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

NEW NOVEL BY FLORENCE MARRYAT.

IN the NAME of LIBERTY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Ready April 2.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS. FLORENCE SEVERNE.

The DOWAGER'S DETERMINATION. By Mrs. FLORENCE SEVERNE, Author of 'The Pillar House,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. (Second Edition.)

"A powerful story. The authoress manages her incidents with skill and grace."—Pall Mall Gazette.

REGINALD ST. BARBE'S SUCCESSFUL NOVEL.

FRANCESCA HALSTEAD: a Tale of San Remo. By REGINALD ST. BARBE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. (Second Edition.)

"Francesca is a beautifully drawn portrait, tender, graceful, and womanlike."—Glasgow Herald.

JEAN DE LA BRETE'S FAMOUS NOVEL.

OUVRAGE COURONNÉ PAR L'ACADÉMIE FRANÇAISE.

FATE'S FETTERS (UN VAINCU). Translated from the French by Mrs. F. HOPER-DIXON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Next week.

NOTE. — This Novel in the original ran into Eleven Editions.

NEW NOVEL BY ROBEY F. ELDRIDGE.

The KESTYNS of CATHER CASTLE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Immediately.

A LADY'S CONFESSIONS. By THERESA MOLYNEUX. Crown 8vo. art linen, 3s. 6d.

CHEAP EDITION OF POPULAR NOVELS.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2s. 6d. each.

The MASQUERADE MYSTERY. By FERGUS HUME.

A MAN'S PRIVILEGE. By Dora RUSSELL.

HUSH MONEY. By Jean Middlemass.

A LOVER of the DAY. By Annie THOMAS.

The BIRDS of OUR COUNTRY. By H. E. STEWART, B.A. With Illustrations by Archibald Thorburn, J. Giacomelli, G. E. Lodge, K. Keyl, R. Kretschmer, &c. Crown 8vo. pictorial cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d. Over 400 pages. [Immediately.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.,
PUBLISHERS OF
The AUTHOR'S MANUAL,' 3s. 6d. net (Eighth Edition),
18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JOKAI'S NEW NOVEL,
ENTITLED

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. Translated by Mrs. WAUGH (ELLIS WRIGHT). With Engraved Portrait of Dr. Jókai (Authorized Edition). Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

FIFTH EDITION NOW READY.

"The author has given us a group of striking personalities, of every one of whom it is not too much to say that it is brilliantly drawn and vividly presented. From every point of view 'The Green Book' is a book to be read. It is a work of fine art."—Daily Chronicle.

MR. COURTNEY says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly an astounding book. In force and fire and prodigal variety he reminds one of the elder Dumas."

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."
Pall Mall Gazette.

OTHER POPULAR WORKS BY DR. MAURUS JOKAI.
AUTHORIZED EDITIONS.

BLACK DIAMONDS. Translated by FRANCES GERARD. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s. [Third Edition.

Translated by R. NISBET BAIN.
Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5s. each.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. [Second Edition.

PRETTY MICHAL. [Second Edition.

NEW "GREENBACK" NOVELS.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ALLANSON'S LITTLE WOMAN. By EASTWOOD KIDSON.

The THIRTEENTH BRYDAIN. By MARGARET MOULE, Author of 'Wingrove's Ways,' 'Dick's Wife,' 'Miss Maidment,' &c.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C. At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. GOULD, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2s.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr. Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull—"Very successful."
Metropolitan—"Instinct with patriotic fire."
Illustrated London News—"Right well done."
News of the World—"There is real poetry in these songs."
Mirror—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."
Echo—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors most enjoy."
Nonconformist—"These songs bear a true literary mark, and give out the genuine ring."
Graphic—"We may fairly say that Dr. Bennett has taken up the mantle of Dibdin."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."
Illustrated London News.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotemen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."
Bookseller.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."
Manchester Examiner.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

THE RELIQUARY and ILLUSTRATED ARCHÆOLOGIST.
Edited by J. ROMILLY ALLEN, F.S.A. 2s. 6d. Quarterly.
APRIL Contents.
CORNER of CHANCERY LANE, 1798. With Collotype Frontispiece.
The FLORENTINE CRICKETS. By Sophia Beale. 7 Illustrations.
The ETRUSCAN WARE of WALES. By W. Turner. 7 Illustrations.
RECENT CAVE HUNTING in DERBYSHIRE. II. Thirst House. By J. Ward, F.S.A. 12 Illustrations.
DISCOVERY of ANCIENT REMAINS in DEEP DALE, BUXTON. By W. H Salt. 3 Illustrations.
SCULPTURED STONE BALL found at Glass Hill, Aberdeenshire. 8 Illustrations.
CROSS at NEUADD SIARMON, near BUILTH. By J. Romilly Allen, F.S.A. Illustrated.
The CROSSES at PENMON, ANGLESEY. Illustrated.
EXCAVATIONS at ROTHLEY, LEICESTERSHIRE. Illustrated.
HOP TALLIES—LEADEN COFFIN found at Horncastle, Lincs.
NOTICES of NEW PUBLICATIONS:—'The Ecclesiastical Architecture of Scotland,' by David Macgibbon and Thomas Ross.—'Samuel Rowe's Perambulation of Dartmoor,' Revised and Corrected by J. Brooking Rowe, F.S.A.—'Choir Stalls and their Carvings,' by Emma Phipson.—'Details of Gothic Wood Carving,' by F. A. Crallan.—'Huntingdonshire and the Spanish Armada,' by W. Mackreth Noble.
London: Bemrose & Sons, Limited, 23, Old Bailey; and Derby.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.
Devoted to Literature, Science, Art, and Politics.
Volume LXXIX. No. 474. APRIL, 1897.
Dominant Forces in Western Life. Frederick J. Turner.
Mark Twain as an Interpreter of American Character. Charles Miner Thompson.
The Nominating System. E. L. Godkin.
An Archer in the Cherokee Hills. Maurice Thompson.
"The Song o' Steam." Arlo Bates.
Cheerful Yesterdays. VI. Thomas Wentworth Higginson.
The Verge of Tears. Edith M. Thomas.
Mercury in the Light of Recent Discoveries. Percival Lowell.
The Lady and the Parson. Sally Nelson Robins.
The Juggler. 7, 8. Charles Egbert Craddock.
The Victory of Samothrace. Emily Huntington Miller.
A Century of Anglo-Saxon Expansion. George Burton Adams.
Bryant's Permanent Contribution to Literature. Henry D. Sedgwick, Jun
The Story of an Untold Love. 15-18. Paul Leicester Ford.
Comment on Recent Books in American History.
Men and Letters:—
The Demand for an American Literature. Bradford Torrey.
A Reminiscence of Charles Reade Frances Courtenay Baylor.
The Book that is not Written. Mary Hartwell Catherwood.
Price One Shilling net; postage, 3d.
Annual Subscription, 15s. post free.
London: Gay & Bird, 22, Bedford-street, W.C.

THE ANTIQUARY.
Monthly, price 6d.
Contents for APRIL.
NOTES of the MONTH.
QUARTERLY NOTES on ROMAN BRITAIN. XXI. By F. Haverfield, M.A. F.S.A.
RAMBLINGS of an ANTIQUARY. Hardwick Hall. IV. By George Bailey. Illustrated.
NOTES on SOME ANNUAL CUSTOMS of the ABRUZZI PEASANTRY. By G. M. Godden. With Translations by C. M. Harrison. (Continued.)
The JAWS of DEATH. By A. W. Buckland. Illustrated.
PUBLICATIONS and PROCEEDINGS of ARCHÆOLOGICAL SOCIETIES.
REVIEWS and NOTICES of NEW BOOKS:—'Ecclesiastical Vestments: their Development and History'; 'The Life and Miracles of St. William of Norwich'; 'Australian Legendary Tales'; 'The Complete Angler'; 'Earl Rognvald and his Forebears.'
London: Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—Escallop-Shell—Casanoviana—Lilies of the Valley at Canterbury—'The Untrodden Ways'—'Cawd for nowt but iverrything'—"A large order"—Canon Elleton—Dr. Beaumont—"Gite"—"Under the weather"—"Swellness"—The Evil Eye—Epitaph—Egg-berry.

QUERIES:—"By" in the Dialects—"Handicap"—"Harbour": "Arbour"—'il Penseroso'—"Bugalug"—Blanckenhagen—Nordhaven—Sutton, Earl of Dudley—"Day's work of land"—Cherry Blsssom Festival—Breton Folk-music—Best Ghost Story—Napoleon on the Bellerophon—Gost House—"Your Worship" and "Your Honour"—Graham, Lord Easdale—Calendar Letters—Wilkes—"Lead, kindly Light"—Ploughwoman—Record of Clergy—Authors Wanted.

REPLIES:—'Sir A. Sherley, Author of Shakspeare's Plays'—'Mag-astromancer'—"Cast for death"—Modern Jacobite Movement—Squire's Coffee-house—"Came in with the Conqueror"—Literary Blunder—Bishops' Wigs—Baptisteries—"Come, let us be merry"—Sir M. Costa—Exploded Tradition—Author Wanted—Divining-rod—Tapestries from Raphael Cartoons—Cartwright's 'Royal Slave'—"Dear knows"—Earldom of Radnor—"Eye-rhymes"—Pearls—S. Duck—Peacock Feathers Unlucky—Wayzgoose—Abergavenny Parish Registers—Midsummer Fires—"Pechatted"—Classon—Brighton—"Fighting like devils," &c.—'Old Mortality'—Haddon Hall—Carrick Family—Shelta—Fullerton of Graighall—Owen Brigstocke—Horace, 'Sat.' I.—White's Sonnet on 'Night'—Bevis de Hampton—Rev. Dr. Oldys—French Prisoners of War—Incident in Sicily—Grote MSS.—Handmaid—Author Wanted.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Maitland's 'Domesday Book and Beyond'—Macalister's 'Ecclesiastical Vestments'—Du Bois's 'African Slave-Trade.'

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4d.; by post, 4½d.

Published by John C. Francis, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM
Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.
Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on
DR. DONALDSON SMITH'S AFRICAN TRAVELS.
REPRINTED PAPERS of PROF. SKEAT.
A HEBREW FRAGMENT of ECCLESIASTICUS.
A BOOK on the SPORTING DUKES of RICHMOND.
NEW NOVELS—Clarissa Furiosa; Under the Circumstances; The Speculators; Out of the Darkness; A Modern Judas.
BOOKS on GREEK LITERATURE.
SCOTTISH FICTION.
BOOKS on ENGLISH LITERATURE.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
'The CENTENARY BURNS'—TWO PROTHALAMIA—SALE—The SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON—ST. PATRICK.
Also—
LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Elementary Mathematical Books; Prof. Sylvester; Astronomical Notes; Prof. H. Drummond; Societies; Meetings.
FINE ARTS—The Institute of Painters in Water Colours; The Serangeum in the Piræus; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—Gossip.
The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY, price THREEPENCE, of John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

MR. ARTHUR A. SYKES'S NEW BOOK NOW READY.
WITHOUT PERMISSION: a Book of Dedications. Art canvas, 3s. 6d. post free; or may be ordered through any Bookseller.
The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster.

ANDREW MELROSE'S NEW LIST.
TOLD from the RANKS. Recollections of Service during the Queen's Reign. By PRIVATES and NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS of the BRITISH ARMY. With Illustrations by W. B. Wollen, R.I. Large imperial 16mo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.
NEW WORK ON BIRD LIFE.
BIRDS of OUR ISLAND. By F. A. FULCHER. Profusely illustrated. Large imperial 16mo. cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.
BOOKS FOR THE HEART.
Edited by the Rev. ALEXANDER SMELLIE, M.A.
Fcap. 8vo. printed on antique laid paper, cloth boards, gilt top, 2s 6d.
QUIET HOURS. By JOHN PULSFORD, D.D. With an Introduction by the EDITOR.
The CONFESSIONS of ST. AUGUSTINE. With an Introduction by the Editor.
Other Volumes in preparation.
16, Pilgrim-street, London, E.C.

J. W. ARROWSMITH'S LIST of NEW BOOKS.
SECRETS of the COURTS of EUROPE. By ALLEN UPWARD. Crown 8vo. cloth, 388 pp. 6s.
The Daily Chronicle says:—"These dozen tales are quite as good in their way as any that the Brigadier Gérard ever told his listeners. With a pretty wit, a well-instructed mind, and a rare inventive faculty, Mr. Upward has given us a most audaciously amusing, if a most outrageously misleading, volume of stories."
The Daily Mail says:—"These brilliantly written confidences of an ex-ambassador are excellent reading."
The Scotsman says:—"The cleverest, most surprising, and most fascinating stories that have appeared in English fiction for a long time.... As splendid in their audacity as they are at once startling and plausible in their invention."
ZISKA. By MARIE CORELLI. Gilt top, crown 8vo. 365 pp. 6s.
RICHARD WAGNER'S LETTERS to AUGUST ROECKEL. Translated by ELEANOR C. SELLAR. With an Introductory Essay by HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN. Gilt top, crown 8vo. 178 pp. buckram, 2s. 6d.
HOW to MANAGE a HORSE. By E. L. T. Edited by EDITH CARRINGTON and F. LEIGH, M.R.C.V.S. Crown 8vo. cloth, 100 pp. 1s.
Bristol: J. W. Arrowsmith.
London: Simpkin Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.
Founded 1797.
HEAD OFFICE: NORWICH—Surrey-street.
LONDON OFFICES { 50, Fleet-street, E.C.; 10, King William-street, E.C.; 195, Piccadilly, W.; and 1, Victoria-st., S.W.
Amount Insured £330,000,000
Claims Paid £11,600,000
Agents Wanted in Metropolitan District.—Applications to be made to either of the above London Offices.
Norwich, March 25th, 1897.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

NOW READY, 2 vols. demy 8vo. 32s.
THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF BENJAMIN JOWETT, M.A.,
Master of Balliol College, Oxford.
By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., and LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D.
With Portraits and other Illustrations.
JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

Now ready, CHEAP EDITION, illustrated, 1 vol. demy 8vo. cloth, 10s.
THE ORDER OF THE COIF.
By Mr. SERJEANT PULLING.
Containing the Early History of the Order, together with an Account of the Aula Regis, and the Courts at Westminster Hall derived from it—The Justiciar—The Judges and Serjeants of the Coif—The Apprenticii ad legem—The Inns of Court—The Forms, Solemnities, and Usages kept up by the Bench and the Bar—Records and Memoirs of the Old Order, and its many Distinguished Members—Their Legal and Social position, and the gradual Innovations on the Old Institution.
"A monument of well-digested research.....An important contribution to the history of the Bench and Bar of England."—Illustrated London News.
London: WILLIAM CLOWES & SONS, LIMITED, Law Publishers, 27, Fleet-street, E.C.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

GENERAL LITERATURE.

NEW VOLUME OF 'THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

READY THIS DAY, 15s. net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.
Volume L. (RUSSEN–SCOBELL) of the DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY. Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

Volume I. was published on January 1, 1885, and a further Volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work.

READY THIS DAY, with a Portrait, large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The AGE of the DESPOTS. By the late John Addington SYMONDS.

. This is Volume I. of a NEW and CHEAPER EDITION of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY." In 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each. The remaining volumes will be published at intervals.

READY THIS DAY, crown 8vo. 6s.

FROM GRAVE to GAY: being Essays and Studies concerned with certain subjects of serious interest, with the Puritans, with literature, and with the humours of life, now for the first time collected and arranged. By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY.

SECOND AND COMPLETING VOLUME OF THE 'HISTORY OF THE HEBREW PEOPLE.'

READY THIS DAY, with Maps and Chart, crown 8vo. 6s.

A HISTORY of the HEBREW PEOPLE, from the Division of the Kingdom to the Fall of Jerusalem in 586 B.C. By CHARLES FOSTER KENT, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Biblical Literature and History, Brown University.

THROUGH LONDON SPECTACLES. By Constance MILMAN. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Altogether a very pleasant and companionable little book."—Spectator.
"Pleasantly written essays on literary topics and arcadian scenes."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"A bright, stimulating, leisurely written collection of nondescript papers."
Manchester Guardian.

HISTORY in FACT and FICTION. By the Hon. A. S. G. CANNING, Author of 'Lord Macaulay: Essayist and Historian,' 'The Philosophy of Charles Dickens,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"An intensely interesting book.....I do not think that I ever saw the difficulties of the Eastern Question in so clear a light as I did after reading the short chapter which Mr. Canning devotes to it."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"The work will be read with interest and profit."—Scotsman.
"The work is interesting from beginning to end, and it will add to Mr. Canning's fame as an able, thoughtful, and impartial writer."—Belfast News-Letter.
"A very good epitome of the general history of the great nations of the world."
Lloyd's Newspaper.
"One of those too rare books which any person endowed with average intellectuality may read with full assurance of deriving pleasure from its perusal."—People.

SIR CHARLES HALLÉ'S LIFE and LETTERS. Being an Autobiography (1819–60), with Correspondence and Diaries. Edited by his Son, C. E. HALLÉ, and his Daughter, MARIE HALLÉ. With 2 Portraits, demy 8vo. 16s.

"The volume is one of the most interesting of recent contributions to the literature of music.....A strong sense of humour is manifest in the autobiography as well as in the letters, and there are some capital stories scattered up and down the volume."—Times.

The MEMOIRS of BARON THIÉBAULT (late Lieutenant-General in the French Army). With Recollections of the Republic, the Consulate, and the Empire. Translated and Condensed by A. J. BUTLER, M.A., Translator of the 'Memoirs of Marbot.' 2 vols. with 2 Portraits and 2 Maps, demy 8vo. 28s.

"Mr. Butler's work has been admirably done.....For solid history, bright sketches of rough campaigning, shrewd studies of character, and lively anecdote, these memoirs yield in no degree to others."—Times.

PREHISTORIC MAN and BEAST. By the Rev. H. N. HUTCHINSON, Author of 'Extinct Monsters,' 'Creatures of other Days,' &c. With a Preface by Sir HENRY HOWORTH, M.P. F.R.S., and 10 Full-Page Illustrations. Small demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"A striking picture of living men and conditions as they once existed.....It combines graphic description with scientific accuracy, and is an admirable example of what a judicious use of the imagination can achieve upon a basis of established facts."—Knowledge.

A YEAR in the FIELDS. Selections from the Writings of JOHN BURROUGHS. With Illustrations from Photographs by Clifton Johnson. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The book is an excellent example of its kind, pleasant, chatty, and readable.....Fresh and graphic, instinct with country sights, scents, and sounds."—Land and Water.
"The book is pleasant reading, and Mr. Burroughs is a true lover of Nature."—Athenæum.

The MONEY-SPINNER, and other Character Notes. By H. SETON MERRIMAN, Author of 'The Sowers,' 'With Edged Tools,' &c., and S. G. TALLENTYRE. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations by Arthur Rackham. Second Edition, crown 8vo. 6s.

"We have many bad books, and many goody-goody books, but few good books; this is one of them."—MR JAMES PAYN in the Illustrated London News.

SELECTED POEMS of WALTER VON DER VOGELWEIDE, the MINNESINGER. Done into English Verse by W. ALISON PHILLIPS, M.A., late Scholar of Merton College, and Senior Scholar of St. John's College, Oxford. With 6 Full-Page Illustrations, small 4to. 10s. 6d. net.

"Mr. Phillips has done his work well. This book is one of the best things of its kind that have appeared for many years."—Academy.

ROBERT BROWNING'S COMPLETE WORKS. New and Cheaper Edition. Edited and Annotated by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C., M.P., and FREDERIC G. KENYON. In 2 vols. large crown 8vo. bound in cloth, gilt top, with a Portrait-Frontispiece to each Volume, 7s. 6d. per Volume.

"Not only a cheap, but a handy, useful, and eminently presentable edition.....Altogether a most satisfactory and creditable production."—Globe.

NEW AND RECENT FICTION.

The WAYS of LIFE. Two Stories. 1. MR. SANDFORD. 2. The WONDERFUL HISTORY of Mr. ROBERT DALYELL. With a Preface entitled 'ON the EBB TIDE.' By Mrs. OLIPHANT. Crown 8vo. 6s. [Shortly.

CAPTAIN CASTLE: a Tale of the China Seas. By CARLTON DAWE, Author of 'Yellow and White,' 'Mount Desolation,' 'Kakemonos,' &c. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 6s. [Ready this day.

The YOUNG CLANROY: a Romance of the '45. By the Rev. COSMO GORDON LANG. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Told with a breezy and healthy vigour, as well as with simplicity."—Observer.
"A pleasant story, simply told."—Pall Mall Gazette.

OUT of the DARKNESS. By Percy Fendall and Fox RUSSELL. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Considerably above the average.....Well written, with a carefully elaborated plot, and some originally conceived and strongly individualized characters."—Court Journal.

GILBERT MURRAY. By A. E. Houghton. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Eminently readable and eminently wholesome."—Academy.
"It is a welcome relief when the flood of fiction brings to the reviewer's door such a story as 'Gilbert Murray.'"—Speaker.

UNDER the CIRCUMSTANCES. By Archie Armstrong. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"It is refreshing to come across an intelligent novel which can be pleasurably read by young and old. This is a well-told story of to-day, written in good English."—Athenæum.
"Mr. Armstrong writes freshly and briskly, his dialogue is vivacious, and his individuals are piquant and interesting."—Globe.
"Capital light reading—all the characters are naturally and brightly depicted."
St. James's Gazette.
"There is not a dull page in it. A taking manner is allied to an unusual amount of interest and ingenuity in unravelling the threads of a complicated plot."—Morning Post.
"A capital romance, exciting, lively, and sensational to exactly the right degree."
Black and White.

The WITCHFINDER. By T. Pellatt. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"An interesting and well-written romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"An effective story that will appeal to the student of manners and customs no less than to the general reader. One or two scenes are not only pathetic, but really powerful."
Standard.

The BORDERER. By Adam Lilburn. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"All the characters in the story are men and women, who live and grow and work out the destiny that is in them."—Daily Telegraph.
"The dramatic interest is on the same high level as the descriptions.....In some respects the author reminds us of George Eliot."—Illustrated London News.
"A powerful novel, with real insight into the elemental motives and passions of human nature."—British Weekly.

RODNEY STONE. By A. Conan Doyle, Author of 'The White Company,' &c. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"A delightful quality about 'Rodney Stone' is its lilting 'go.' There is not a dull page in it from first to last. All is light, colour, movement, blended and inspired by a master hand."—Punch.

The SOWERS. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'With Edged Tools,' 'The Grey Lady,' &c. FOURTEENTH EDITION. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"From first to last the book teems with interest.....There have been few such good novels for years."—MR. JAMES PAYN in the Illustrated London News.

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY. By Mrs. Humphry Ward, Author of 'Robert Elsmere,' 'The History of David Grieve,' 'Marcella,' &c. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"An exceedingly able book. We doubt if any other living woman could have written it.....It is a work which does her heart and imagination infinite credit."—Standard.

CLEG KELLY, Arab of the City. By S. R. Crockett. THIRTY-SECOND THOUSAND. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The story teems with incidents of all sorts, and it carries the reader along, keenly interested and full of sympathy, from the first page to the last."—Spectator.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE

For APRIL. Price ONE SHILLING.

Contents.

The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (April).
A DAY of CELEBRATION: an Anniversary Appeal. By Walter Besant.
The STORY of SCOTT'S RUIN. By Leslie Stephen.
DUELS of ALL NATIONS: German Duels and their Punishments. By James Pemberton-Grund.
The COST of COUNTRY HOUSES. By C. J. Cornish.
MORRANT'S HALF-SOVEREIGN. By Eden Phillpotts.
An OLD GREEK ROMANCE. By Charles Elton, Q.C.
The PATRIOT'S PROGRESS. By Stephen Gwynn.
The MOON'S MIRACLE. By Walter Ramal.
RECOLLECTIONS of FREDERICK DENISON MAURICE. By Sir Edward Strachey, Bart.
PAGES FROM a PRIVATE DIARY.
IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chapters 10-12. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.

READY THIS DAY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND NEWSAGENTS'.

 Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward, post free on application, their Catalogue of Publications.*

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, March 27, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3623. SATURDAY, APRIL 3, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—The NINTH MEETING of the SESSION will be held on WEDNESDAY, April 7, at 8 P.M., at 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly. Antiquities will be exhibited and the following Paper read:—'Notes on Middlesex Brasses.' By ANDREW OLIVER, Esq.
GEO. PATRICK, Honorary Secretary.

THE DÜRER SOCIETY.

Provisional Committee.

WALTER CRANE.	MISS BERTHA NEWCOMBE.
CAMPBELL DODGSON.	J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE.
GEORGE J. FRAMPTON, A.R.A.	FRANK SHORT.
G. PERCIVAL GASKELL.	EDWARD F. STRANGE.
SELWYN IMAGE.	GLEESON WHITE.
H. C. MARILLIER.	MISS ALICE B. WOODWARD.

FREDERICK WHELEN, Hon. Treasurer.

This Society is being formed for the purpose of issuing Facsimile Reproductions of the Works of Albert Dürer and his Contemporaries. The Annual Subscription is One Guinea, and the number of Members will be limited to two hundred and fifty.
Further particulars can be obtained on application to the Hon. Sec.
SID. M. PEARTREE.
12, Chalcot-gardens, Haverstock-hill, N.W.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C., Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)

Arrangements are made to provide Members with seats to view the QUEEN'S PROCESSION on the line of route at moderate prices.—For terms, &c., apply Secretary's Offices, 60, Haymarket, S.W.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)

The Committee propose (prior to entering on New and Larger Premises) to elect FIVE HUNDRED NEW TOWN MEMBERS and ONE THOUSAND NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS at the Original Subscription of 3*l.* 3*s.* and 1*l.* 1*s.* per annum respectively.

The Subscription for Future Members will then be raised to 5*l.* 5*s.* (Town) and 2*l.* 2*s.* (Country).

For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY,
PALL MALL CLUB OFFICES, 60, HAYMARKET, S.W.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE (1897).

President—The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.

The Conference will be held in LONDON on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of existing libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Organizing Committee will be glad to receive offers of Papers. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to invitations to all functions and entertainments.
J. Y. W. MAC ALISTER, Honorary General Secretary.
20, Hanover-square, W.

THE MARCHIONESS of DUFFERIN and AVA RECOMMENDS a YOUNG LADY as PRIVATE SECRETARY or as TRAVELLING COMPANION. Fluent French and German.—Address H. V. B. S., care of Miss Janes, 59, Berners-street, Oxford-street, London, W.

YOUNG LADY (experienced) wishes post as SECRETARY. Has had sound English education. French and German (acquired abroad). Shorthand, Type-writing; used to reading aloud. Good references.—Address A. L. P., care of Messrs. Reynell & Son, Advertisement Offices, 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT EDITOR on well-known WEEKLY JOURNAL. Must be experienced and under thirty years of age.—Apply to N. F., Box 1297, Sell's Offices, Fleet-street, E.C.

PUPIL REQUIRED in a FIRM of PUBLISHERS.—Could be received into Partnership at conclusion of term. Premium required and salary given.—Address Box 1750, Chas. Tayler & Co.'s Advertisement Offices, 154 to 157, Fleet-street, E.C.

GILSTRAP FREE LIBRARY, NEWARK-ON-TRENT

WANTED, a LIBRARIAN for the above Library. Age not to exceed 25. Experience in Library Work, and testimonials referring thereto, essential. Salary to commence at 100*l.* a year, paid Monthly. Canvassing prohibited.
Applications, with testimonials, to be sent to the undersigned by noon on Wednesday, April 7 next.
BECHER TIDD PRATT, J.P., Chairman.
Newark-on-Trent, Notts.

TREGARON INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL.

The Local Governing Body are prepared to appoint a HEAD MASTER for the above School.
Salary 150*l.* per annum, with a Capitation Fee of 1*l.* for each Pupil. Accommodation has to be provided for 60 Boys and 40 Girls under the Scheme.
The School will be opened shortly in temporary buildings.
Candidates must be Graduates of some University in the United Kingdom.
Applications, stating age, qualifications, and experience, with twelve copies of not more than six nor less than three recent testimonials, must be in my hands on or before Friday, April 9, 1897.
M. MORGAN, Clerk to the Governing Body.
Tregaron.

MERTHYR TYDFIL COUNTY SCHOOL.

WANTED, EARLY in MAY, MATHEMATICAL MASTER, able to teach Welsh. Salary 120*l.*
Application, with one copy of testimonials, to be sent before April 8 to CHARLES OWEN, M.A., Head Master.

CITY of LONDON SCHOOL, Victoria Embankment, E.C.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT MASTER to teach about Thirty Hours per Week in the Modern Third Class and elsewhere. Thorough German (Literary and Colloquial) and Mathematics. A good knowledge of French a recommendation.
The salary will be 250*l.* a year. Candidates for the appointment are requested to forward their applications, accompanied with a copy of testimonials as to qualification and character, not later than Saturday, April 24 next, to the SECRETARY, at the School, Victoria Embankment, E.C. Selected Candidates will be duly communicated with. Forms of application can be obtained of the Secretary. A Gentleman not over 30 years of age will be required.

CENTRAL WELSH BOARD for INTERMEDIATE EDUCATION.

EXAMINATION OF SCHOOLS, 1897.

APPOINTMENT OF CHIEF EXAMINERS.

The Executive Committee of the Central Welsh Board will shortly proceed to the appointment of FIVE CHIEF EXAMINERS.

Candidates must have special knowledge of at least one of the following Departments:—

1. CLASSICS.
2. MATHEMATICS.
3. ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE.
4. WELSH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE.
5. HISTORY.
6. MODERN LANGUAGES.
7. PHYSICS.
8. CHEMISTRY.
9. BOTANY.

Candidates are requested to send in their applications not later than April 30 next to the undersigned, from whom further particulars may be obtained.
OWEN OWEN, Chief Inspector.
Oswestry, March 25, 1897.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE, Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, OXFORD.

An OPEN THEOLOGICAL SCHOLARSHIP, of the annual value of 75*l.* (tenable for one, two, or three years), is offered by the Dr. Daniel Jones's Trustees for competition.
For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, 1, St. James's-square, Manchester.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART. Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on MAY 3. The work is arranged so that a Student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then.
Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned.
A. E. BARKER, F.R.C.S., Dean of the Faculty.
J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL, Albert Embankment, S.E.

The SUMMER SESSION will COMMENCE on MONDAY, May 3. Students entering in the Summer are eligible to compete for the Science Scholarships of 150*l.* and 60*l.* awarded in October.
A SCHOLARSHIP of 50*l.*, open to University Students, and other Prizes and Scholarships of the value of 500*l.*, are offered for annual competition.
All Appointments are open to Students without extra payment.
SPECIAL CLASSES for the Examinations of the University of London are held throughout the year.
TUTORIAL CLASSES are held prior to the Second and Final Examinations of the Conjoint Board in January, April, and July.
A REGISTER of approved Lodgings, and of private families receiving Boarders, is kept in Secretary's Office.
EXCELLENT DAY CLUB accommodation is provided in the School building.
Prospectuses and all particulars may be obtained from the Medical Secretary, Mr. G. RANDLE.
H. P. HAWKINS, M.A., M.D. (Oxon.), Dean.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

A PARTNER REQUIRED (able to invest) in a FIRM of PUBLISHERS now commencing business.—Address Box 1732, Chas. Tayler & Co.'s Advertisement Offices, 154 to 157, Fleet-street, E.C.

WANTED, REALLY GOOD PLOT.—State full particulars and price to STORY, care of Advertising Offices, 10, High Holborn, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING, MANUSCRIPTS, PLAYS, &c., COPIED. Terms 1*d.* per folio (72 words); or 5,000 words and over, 10*d.* per thousand, in two colours, 1*s.*, paper included.—MISS NIGHTINGALL, Springfield, Walkern-road, Stevenage.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Literary Articles, &c., COPIED with accuracy and despatch. 1*d.* per folio. Manifold or Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TIGAR, 23, Maitland Park-villas, Haverstock-hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

ASH PARTNERS, LIMITED, PUBLISHERS, Hereby notify that they COMMENCE BUSINESS ON MONDAY, APRIL 5.

The particular aim of this Firm of Publishers is to carry on business upon lines of complete accord with Authors, and thus to fulfil the objects of the Incorporated Society of Authors, who are desirous "of achieving a just and equitable method of publishing which shall be acknowledged by both Authors and Publishers and universally adopted."

The Offices of ASH PARTNERS, LIMITED, are at
36, ST. MARTIN'S-LANE, CHARING CROSS
(Opposite Messrs. Chatto & Windus).

TO AUTHORS, EDITORS, PUBLISHERS.—A London Graduate (in First-Class English Honours) gives opinions on MSS., assists in revision, seeing through Press, instructs in composition. Confidential. Highest references.—G. G., 4, Richmond-road, Bayswater, London, W.

TO AUTHORS.—Messrs. DIGBY, LONG & CO. (Publishers of 'The Author's Manual,' 3*s.* 6*d.* net, Eighth Edition), INVITE AUTHORS to FORWARD their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.—Address 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879.
Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.
Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors, old and modern—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.

CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3d. post free

MAGGS BROS.,

109, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

BOOKS relating to Art, Astronomy, Banking, Birds, Campaigns, Dramatic Biographies, Finance, French Revolution, Napoleon, Natural History, Parliament, Political Economy, Science, Sports, and other subjects are offered in BOOK CIRCULAR, No. 11; 1,500 entries.—W. J. SMITH, 41, North-street, Brighton. Free on application.

JUST PUBLISHED,

CATALOGUE 273.—IMPRESSIONS of the FIFTEENTH and SIXTEENTH CENTURIES. With an Index of the Printers. 1,199 Nos.

MARTINUS NIJHOFF, The Hague (Holland).

ELLIS & ELVEY,

Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.

NEW CATALOGUE (No. 85) OF CHOICE BOOKS AND MANUSCRIPTS,

Including a Remarkable Collection of RARE BOOKS on MUSIC, now ready, post free, Sixpence.

29, New Bond-street, London, W.

OLD COLOURED VIEWS of LONDON—Shipping—Caricatures—Costume—Proof Sets of Illustrations to Books—Naval and Military Subjects—Etchings—Portraits, &c.—Just published, a CATALOGUE (post free) by JAMES RIMELL & SON, 91, Oxford-street, London, W.—Old Books and Engravings bought for Cash.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,

IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,

14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

CATALOGUES on application.

Now ready,

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS

NOW OFFERED AT

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST

(100 PAGES)

Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;

241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;

48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at

BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

REPRODUCTIONS IN PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHY

(the Carbon process) of the Chief Treasures of the Great Continental Galleries, including

The PUBLIC and PRIVATE GALLERIES of ROME.

The UFFIZI and PITTI GALLERIES, FLORENCE.

The ROYAL MUSEUMS of BERLIN and DRESDEN.

The MUSEUM of the LOUVRE, PARIS.

The PICTURE GALLERIES of HOLLAND and BELGIUM.

The MUSEO del PRADO, MADRID.

&c. &c. &c.

This almost exhaustive series of Autotypes includes nearly every work of Art of interest to the Artist, to the Historical Student, and to the Lover of Pictures. The selection of Works to be reproduced has, in every instance, been made under the advice of eminent Authorities and of the Official Directors of the respective Collections. By the aid of the most recent improvements in Photographic Science, absolutely faithful and Permanent Copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the Original Paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments, on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A.

SIR EDW. BURNE-JONES.

DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.

A large series of the Chief Works of these Masters, reproduced in various sizes, at prices ranging from 3*s.* 6*d.* to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of the Collection of Autotype Reproductions of the Works of Old and Modern Masters will be sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS speedily procured. Acknowledged the most expert book-finder extant. Please state wants to BAKER'S Great Bookshop, Birmingham.—Books Bought, Lent, or Exchanged.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c. ON SALE, by FRANK T. SABIN, 118, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STURGES, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)

Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS, south aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

Valuable Engravings, the Property of an Officer in the Army.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 5 and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, Framed and in the Portfolio, the Property of an OFFICER in the ARMY of the late Dr. EDWARD RIGBY, of Norwich, and other Private Collectors; and comprising Fancy Subjects after Masters of the English School, some finely printed in Colours—Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, R. Cosway, G. Romney, and others, including Mrs. Musters, by J. Walker, after G. Romney—Mrs. Fitzherbert, after Cosway—"What You Will," by J. R. Smith—"Thoughts on Matrimony," by W. Ward, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Roman Coins, the Property of a Gentleman, and other Small Collections.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 9, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ROMAN CONSULAR and IMPERIAL COINS, in GOLD, SILVER, and COPPER, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and other SMALL COLLECTIONS of COINS, the Properties of the late Prof. MIDDLETON, Litt.D., D.C.L., V.P.S.A., the late W. BEESLEY, Esq., of Banbury, &c., comprising the following pieces worthy of notice: Rare Aurei of Pictina, Pertinax, Sept. Severus, Julia Domna, Caracalla, and Geta, and Trajan Decius—Silver Medallions of Augustus—Two Æ of Julia Titi and Diadumenian—Early British Stater AN of Antedrigus—Quarter Stater AN of Tasciovanus—Pennies AR of Harthacanute, Henry I., and Stephen—Peninsular War Medal, with clasp for "Maida"—Silver Medal of the Worlingworth Volunteers, 1859—Abyssinian Gold Decoration granted to General Charles Kirkham, 1863, and various other Foreign Orders, &c.—Coin Cabinets and Numismatic Books.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the late J. MEDMER GOODWIN, Esq., of Bath.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 13, and Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a Portion of the Library of the late JOHN MEDMER GOODWIN, Esq., of Bath, comprising Modern Illustrated French Works—Books on Architecture—Archæological Publications—Works on Art, &c.; the Property of the late Rev. PECKLETON POWER, including Theological Works—Biography—Architecture—Poetry, &c.; the Property of Mrs. CLUTTERBUCK, comprising First Editions of the Writings of W. A. Maxwell, C. Lever, J. H. Jesse, Charles Dickens, &c.—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Leech, H. K. Browne, Tenniel, Millais, and others; the Property of a LADY, including Pierce Egan's Life of an Actor, First Edition—Dickens's Works, Édition de Luxe, 30 vols.—Scarce Sporting Works, &c.; and other Properties, comprising Horæ Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, MS. on Vellum, Sæc. XV.—First Editions of Lever, Dickens, Thackeray, Keats, &c.—Harvey's Phycologia Britannica, 3 vols.—Greville's Scottish Cryptogamic Flora, 6 vols.—Curtis's Botanical Magazine, 97 vols.—Surtees's Durham, 4 vols., &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, April 5, and Following Day, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, Rare BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

Catalogues on application.

Collection of Ex-Libris and Armorial China.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 6, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, comprising Examples in the Early English, Jacobean, Chippendale, and Bartolozzi Styles, many of which are dated.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Further Portion of the Library of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., removed from Ore.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 7, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. J. FARMER-ATKINSON, Esq., F.S.A., consisting chiefly of valuable Examples of Biblical and Liturgical Literature in various Languages.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 8, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a valuable COLLECTION of BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising many choice Examples of Early Foreign and English Printing—Works of Elizabethan and Jacobean Authors—Scarce Editions of the Bible—Manuscripts on Vellum, with Illuminated Capitals and Miniatures—fine Examples of Bindings, some with Arms, also a remarkable Collection of Early Playbills from the Vienna Exhibition, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Antique Furniture and China.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 13, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the ANTIQUE FURNITURE and CHINA belonging to the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A., by order of the Executors.

Catalogues on application.

THURSDAY NEXT, April 8.

OLD ENGLISH MEZZOTINT ENGRAVINGS by Faber, Pelham, Cousins, McArdell, Ward, Reynolds, Dawe, Turner, Fisher, Valentine Green, Burford, Bromley, Dunkarton, Smith, Murphy, Frye, David Martin, John Martin, Okey, Huffam, Corbutt, Lens, and other great masters; and Portraits by F. Bartolozzi, R.A.

CATALOGUE.

MEZZOTINTS:—Marquis of Granby, Mrs. Scroop, Gulielmus Dolben, Constantia Philips, Admiral Hawke, Edmund Burke, Nicholas Saunderson, Dr. Desaguliers, June, October, Hereditary Princess of Brunswick Luneburgh, Anne, Princess of Denmark, Queen Elizabeth in Armada Thanksgiving Dress, Charles, Prince of Wales, Hon. Agar Ellis, Sir James Brooke, Lady Grosvenor, Earl Gower, Claude Lorraine, Ortance Manzini, Louis XIV., Jesus Christ, William IV., George IV., George, Prince of Wales, Lord Palmerston, Lord Brougham, Lord John Russell, Duke of Northumberland, Earl of Leicester, Hon. Archibald Douglas, Departure of Regulus, The Visitation, Rembrandt's Jew, Adoration of the Shepherds, The Young Musicians, The Laughing Boy, Linnæus in his Lapland Dress, The Wounded Hussar, The Temptation, The Toilet, Jewish Bride, Joseph and Potiphar's Wife, The Angel appearing to the Shepherds, The Resurrection, The Night Ballad-Singer, Morning, Evening, Night, and Midnight (a set of sea pieces), Lord Chancellor Truro, General Bolivar, Edmund Dunch, Esq., John Dormer, Esq., Lieut. Bellot, Abelard and Heloise, Friar confessing a Lady, The Fair Penitent, Friar confessing a Culprit, Tho' Absent not Forgot, The Sailor's Departure, James Northcote, R.A., John Clark Powell, Esq., Rev. Thomas Lupton, Self-Admiration, The Crucifixion, Field Flowers, Meet me by Moonlight, The Brothers, Christ at Emmaus, Daniel in the Lions' Den, A Moral Philosopher instructing his Grandchildren, The Transfiguration, Jesus Disputing in the Temple, Cattle by Moonlight, A Storm at Sea, Man mending a Quill Pen, Sir Robert Peel, The Golden Age, L'Antiquaire, Lady Sale, Abraham offering Isaac (and another in colours), Samuel Urlsperger, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Satan addressing his Legions, The Sweets of Liberty, The Light of the Harem (in colours), Homerus, Plato Aristonis F. Atheniensis, Earth, La Préface de Gil Blas, Children and Pets (oval in colours), James Wood, Esq., President of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, Joannes Gottlob Carpzov, Daniel Gerdesius, Joannes Matthias Gesnerus, Jacobus Basnage, Willem D'Orville, The Two Friars, Mr. Thomas Wright, William Carey, D.D., Lord Bishop of St. Asaph, Bowyer Edward Sparke, D.D., Lord Bishop of Ely, Gerbrandus van Leeuwen, S. Franciscus Seraphicus, Dame Française, The Assignation, The Right Rev. Daniel Wilson, D.D., Lord Bishop of Calcutta, Sir Richard Williams Bulkeley, Bart., Lord Sandon, Mrs. Fry, Burns and Highland Mary. And the following Portraits engraved by F. Bartolozzi, R.A.: Viscountess Bulkeley, Queen Charlotte, Linnæus, Omai, Mr. Dalton, Dr. Fothergill, Woman of Otaheite, L. da Vinci, A. Caracci, Dr. Thornton.

MR. JOHN PARNELL, Literary and Art Auctioneer and Valuer, will SELL these by AUCTION, in the order named in the above Catalogue, at his House, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., on THURSDAY NEXT, April 8, at 1 o'clock.

On view Wednesday next from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

FRIDAY NEXT.

Original Unpublished Victorian Literature.

Queen Victoria's First Visit to the City, A.D. 1837, Historic Verse—Queen Victoria's Jubilee, A.D. 1887, Historic Verse—Over the Water, a Tale of the Early Days of Queen Victoria, a Three-Volume Novel—Thirteen Victorian Parliamentary Poems on Celebrated Members of the Reign—The Sailing of the Fleet to the Baltic, A.D. 1854, Historic Verse—Entry of the Princess Alexandra into London, A.D. 1863, Historic Verse—and many Rare Portraits of Queen Victoria and her Ancestors, and Prints relating in many ways to Her Majesty. "Vivat Regina."

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL these by AUCTION, at his Literary Sale-Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., on FRIDAY NEXT, April 9, at 1 o'clock.

On view Wednesday, April 7. MS. Catalogue can be inspected at the Rooms.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, April 13 and 14.

United States of America, and America and West Indies generally.

Special Sale of early Dutch, French, and English Maps of America, United States, West Indies, and the English-American Colonies, past and present—old Newspapers, Drawings, Historic and other Portraits, and Views of and in America—an Original Early (Eighteenth Century) United States Navy Painting—Seventeenth Century South American Views—Paul Jones Medal and Ballad—large Coloured Botany Prints—early Press News from America—Portraits of Aborigines—early Prints of Columbus, Genoa, Montezuma, Presidents, Noted Citizens, Ambassadors, Authors, and Artists of United States, Venezuela, and other Republics—Colony of Liberia and Early Slave Advertisements—old Irish and German Portraits—American Addresses to George II. and III.—rare Early Spanish, French, and Dutch Portraits and Prints, by famous old Engravers after Vandyke, Rubens, Breughel, Elsheymer, Velasquez, Titian, and other Great Masters—Turner's full-length Mezzotint of General Simon Bolivar—separate States and Republics Collections—old Anglo-American and West Indian Heraldry and Portraits—early New York Woodcut Advertisements, also Baltimore and Washington special Portraits of English Sovereigns from Queen Elizabeth to Queen Victoria—early English County Maps and Heraldry interesting to Anglo-American Families—old English Guide and Road Books and Maps and Book-Plates—old Named Water-Colour Landscape Drawings in England, Ireland, Scotland, and the Continent of Europe by Great Artists—an Original Unpublished Poem on the United States in MS. and other rare and important items. On view Saturday, April 10, and Monday, April 12, from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M. each day.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL by AUCTION, on TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, April 13 and 14 at 1 o'clock each day, at his House, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., where the MS. Catalogue can be seen and read, and the various items comfortably examined on the view days named.

HANOVER GALLERY, LIVERPOOL.

Collection of remarkably choice Artist's Proof Etchings by the famous Etcher Axel Herman Haig.

MESSRS. BRANCH & LEETE will SELL by AUCTION, on WEDNESDAY, April 7, at 2 o'clock, in the HANOVER GALLERY, HANOVER-STREET, LIVERPOOL, a COLLECTION of over SIXTY CHOICE PROOF ETCHINGS, including many of the principal Works of Axel Herman Haig, together with a few by other well-known Etchers, the Property of a GENTLEMAN who is changing his residence.

On view Monday and Tuesday, April 5 and 6, when Catalogues may be had on application to the AUCTIONEERS.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Important Sale.

Valuable Lathes by Holtzapffel & Evans, expensive Compound Geometric Chuck by Plants, Tools and various Accessories; also a beautiful Set of Jubilee Coins, Gold and Silver Watches, Jewellery, Silver Plate, and other Effects of the late HENRY PEACOCK, Esq.; Cameras and Lenses by Best Makers, and Apparatus, Scientific Instruments, and Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, April 9, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

TUESDAY, April 13.

Valuable Collections of British and Foreign Birds' Eggs and a fine Egg of the Great Auk, Cabinets, Cases, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY, April 13, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous and Modern Publications, several Tons of Serials, Magazines, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on MONDAY, April 5, at 1 o'clock, MANY THOUSAND VOLUMES of MISCELLANEOUS and MODERN BOOKS—Recently Published Novels—Railway Reading and Juvenile Books. Also several Tons of Serials, Magazines, Illustrated Papers, &c., the Stock of a SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER, retiring.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books, including the Library of the late Right Hon. Sir F. Pollock, formerly Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 7, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including the above Library, comprising Hogarth's Works, by Heath—Alken's Sporting Ideas—Sladder's Military Costume—Sheraton, Chippendale, and Heppelwhite's Cabinet Work—Philosophical Transactions, 1800 to 1867—Archæologia, 1821 to 1849—Palmer's Index to the Times, 1829-1896, 266 vols.—Series of Annual Register, Quarterly, and other Reviews—Hansard's Debates, 179 vols.—Political Tracts and Trials—Speeches of Eminent English Statesmen, 50 vols.—Writings of Bacon, Cobbett, Johnson, Junius, Carlyle, Macaulay, Mahon, Hallam, Alison, Mill, De Morgan, Motley, &c.—Browning's Works, 26 vols.—Abbotsford Waverley, 12 vols.—Lacroix, Œuvres, 4 vols.—Early MS. Horæ—Botanical, Chemical, and other Scientific Treatises, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

ORIENTAL CARPETS and RUGS, many without reserve.—An important shipment direct from Constantinople, collected from the most famous looms in the East, and comprising Specimens from Mousoul, Daghestan, Shirvan, Kurdistan, and other centres in Turkey, Persia, Afghanistan, Beloochistan, &c. MESSRS.

KNIGHT, FRANK & RUTLEY will SELL by AUCTION, at their CONDUIT-STREET AUCTION GALLERIES, 9, Conduit-street and 23A, Maddox-street, London, W., the above ORIENTAL CARPETS and RUGS, on April 8 and 9.

On view two days prior and morning of Sale. Catalogues free.

THE CONDUIT-STREET AUCTION GALLERIES.—MESSRS.

KNIGHT, FRANK & RUTLEY'S GALLERIES, 9, Conduit-street and 23A, Maddox-street, W., are OPEN DAILY for the reception of FURNITURE, Pictures, Jewellery, Silver Plate, China, Books, Old Lace, and other Property intended for Public Auction. Valuations prepared. Sales held at Private Residences in all parts of the country. Trade Stocks promptly Catalogued and Sold.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, April 5, the COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES of the late MICHAEL ABRAHAMS, Esq

On TUESDAY, April 6, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE of the late Mrs. J. E. WINGFIELD STRATFORD, and others.

On WEDNESDAY, April 7, a COLLECTION of OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE, forming Part of the Morgan Settled Estates, under the direction of Mr. Justice Stirling, High Court of Justice, Chancery Division.

On THURSDAY, April 8, Valuable CASKET of JEWELS, the Property of Miss ELLEN FARREN, the accomplished and popular Actress; JEWELS and LACE of the late JULIA, LADY FITZGERALD; JEWELS of the late LADY AITCHISON, Gold Boxes, Miniatures, &c.

On FRIDAY, April 9, the COLLECTION of OLD NANKIN PORCELAIN of the late GEORGE JAMES, Esq.

On SATURDAY, April 10, the GEORGE JAMES COLLECTION of High-Class MODERN PICTURES and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS; also Choice MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late HENRY RENSHAW, Esq., and others.

On MONDAY, April 12, the REMAINING WORKS of the late LAKE PRICE and LOUIS FALERO.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 400 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues will be ready shortly, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

PARIS.—COLLECTION of Madame la COMTESSE DE LA FERRONNAYS—OLD and MODERN PAINTINGS by Coypel Greuze, Rigaud, &c.—magnificent Tapestries ordered by King Louis XIV.—Furniture and Objects of Art.

SALE at the HOTEL DROUOT, Room No. 6, MONDAY, April 12, 1897, at 2.30 P.M. On view Private, Saturday, April 10, Public, Sunday, April 11, from 1.30 to 5.30 P.M.

Auctioneers Maître P. CHEVALLIER, 10, Rue Grange Batelière; Maître G. DUCHESNE, 6 Rue de Hanovre. Experts (Paintings) M. HENRI BARO 14, Rue Visconti and 29, Rue Bonaparte, (Objects of Art) M. ARTHUR BLOCHE, 28, Rue de Chateaudun, Paris.

NOW READY.

NAPLES IN THE NINETIES.

BY

E. NEVILLE ROLFE.

With 10 Full-Page Illustrations and others in the Text.

Square crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

FERRETS:

THEIR MANAGEMENT IN HEALTH AND DISEASE,

With Remarks on their Legal Status.

BY

NICHOLAS EVERITT.

With numerous Illustrations.

Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

A DOZEN WAYS OF LOVE.

BY

Miss L. DOUGALL,
Author of 'Beggars All.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

Price 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

WHO'S WHO, 1897.

FORTY-NINTH YEAR OF ISSUE

(Entirely Re-modelled).

EDITED BY

DOUGLAS SLADEN.

Contains nearly 6,000 Biographies —mostly Autobiographies— of the Leading Men and Women of the Day, besides being a Complete Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, &c.

In crown 8vo. 832 pp. bound in cloth gilt, with gilt edges and rounded corners.

Price 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW VOLUME OF
'THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

Now ready, 15s. net, in cloth; or in half morocco, marbled edges, 20s. net.

Volume 50 (RUSSEN—SCOBELL) of the DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

Volume I. was published on January 1, 1885, and a further Volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work.

Nearly ready, with Portraits, demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

ISABELLA the CATHOLIC, QUEEN of SPAIN, her LIFE, REIGN, and TIMES, 1451-1504. By M. le BARON DE NERVO. Translated from the Original French by Lieut.-Colonel TEMPLE-WEST (Retired).

NEW EDITION OF SIR WILLIAM ROBERTS'S 'DIGESTION AND DIET.'

Now ready, SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. 5s.

COLLECTED CONTRIBUTIONS on DIGESTION and DIET. With an Appendix on the Opium Habit in India. By Sir WILLIAM ROBERTS, M.D. F.R.S.

With a Portrait, large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The AGE of the DESPOTS. By the late JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

 This is Volume I. of a NEW and CHEAPER EDITION of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each. The remaining volumes will be published at intervals.

THROUGH LONDON SPECTACLES. By CONSTANCE MILMAN. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Altogether a very pleasant and companionable little book."
Spectator.

FROM GRAVE TO GAY: being Essays and Studies concerned with certain Subjects of Serious Interest, with the Puritans, with Literature, and with the Humours of Life, now for the first time Collected and Arranged. By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SECOND AND COMPLETING VOLUME OF THE 'HISTORY OF THE HEBREW PEOPLE.'

With Maps and Chart, crown 8vo. 6s.

A HISTORY of the HEBREW PEOPLE from the DIVISION of the KINGDOM to the FALL of JERUSALEM in 586 B.C. By CHARLES FOSTER KENT, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Biblical Literature and History, Brown University.

HISTORY in FACT and FICTION. By the Hon. A. S. G. CANNING, Author of 'Lord Macaulay: Essayist and Historian,' 'The Philosophy of Charles Dickens,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"An intensely interesting book....I do not think that I ever saw the difficulties of the Eastern Question in so clear a light."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW VOLUME BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

Shortly, with a Preface, entitled 'ON the EBB TIDE,' crown 8vo. 6s.

The WAYS of LIFE. Two Stories. 1. Mr. SANDFORD. 2. The WONDERFUL HISTORY of Mr. ROBERT DALYELL. By Mrs. OLIPHANT.

THREE NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

CAPTAIN CASTLE: a Tale of the China Seas. By CARLTON DAWE, Author of 'Yellow and White,' 'Mount Desolation,' 'Kakemonos,' &c. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Very interesting....All who care for stories of the sea will appreciate 'Captain Castle'"—Daily Mail.

The YOUNG CLANROY: a Romance of the '45. By the Rev. COSMO GORDON LANG. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Told with a breezy and healthy vigour, as well as with simplicity."
Observer.

OUT of the DARKNESS. By Percy FENDALL and FOX RUSSELL. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Considerably above the average....Well written, with some originally conceived and strongly individualized characters."—Court Journal.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE

For APRIL. Price ONE SHILLING. Contents.

The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (April).
A DAY of CELEBRATION: An Anniversary Appeal. By Walter Besant.
The STORY of SCOTT'S RUIN. By Leslie Stephen.
DUELS of ALL NATIONS: German Duels and their Punishments. By James Pemberton-Grund.
The COST of COUNTRY HOUSES. By C. J. Cornish.
MORRANT'S HALF-SOVEREIGN. By Eden Phillpotts.
An OLD GREEK ROMANCE. By Charles Elton, Q.C.
The PATRIOT'S PROGRESS. By Stephen Gwynn.
The MOON'S MIRACLE. By Walter Ramal.
RECOLLECTIONS of FREDERICK DENISON MAURICE. By Sir Edward Strachey, Bart.
PAGES FROM a PRIVATE DIARY.
IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chapters 10-12. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' SELECTED LIST.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 978. APRIL, 1897. 2s. 6d.

RECENT BOOKS, FRENCH and ENGLISH.
A CITY of MANY WATERS. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, M.P.
The PRISONS of SIBERIA. I. On the March. By J. Y. Simpson.
DARIEL: a Romance of Surrey. By R. D. Blackmore. Chaps. 25-30.
HOW the FAMINE CAME to BURMA. By H. Fielding.
CONCERNING BILLIARDS. By Major W. Broadfoot.
The BLUE JAR. By H. Garton Sargent.
EVOLUTION and the AMATEUR NATURALIST. By Louis Robinson, M.D.
The NAVY ESTIMATES.
RECOLLECTIONS of an IRISH HOME.
ANOTHER YEAR'S PROGRESS in EGYPT: Lord Cromer's Report.

PERIODS OF EUROPEAN LITERATURE.
Edited by Professor SAINTSBURY.
NOW READY.

The FLOURISHING of ROMANCE and the RISE of ALLEGORY. Twelfth and Thirteenth Centuries. By GEORGE SAINTSBURY, M.A., Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in Edinburgh University. Crown 8vo. 5s. net.

PROFESSOR SETH'S NEW WORK.

MAN'S PLACE in the COSMOS, and other Essays. By ANDREW SETH, LL.D., Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in Edinburgh University, Author of 'Scottish Philosophy,' 'Hegelianism and Personality.' Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

A SPOTLESS REPUTATION. By DOROTHEA GERARD (Madame Longard de Longgarde), Author of 'Lady Baby,' 'The Wrong Man,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE COUNTY HISTORIES OF SCOTLAND.

MORAY and NAIRN. By Charles RAMPINI, LL.D., Sheriff-Substitute of these Counties. Demy 8vo. with 3 Maps and Plan, 7s. 6d. net.
[In a few days.

TWO NEW NOVELS.

A PRINCE of TYRONE. By CHARLOTTE FENNELL and J. P. O'CALLAGHAN. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The KNIGHT'S TALE. By F. Emily PHILLIPS, Author of 'The Education of Antonia.' Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CHEAP REISSUE.

ANCIENT CLASSICS FOR ENGLISH READERS.

Edited by Rev. W. LUCAS COLLINS.
In Shilling Volumes, bound in limp cloth.

Now ready.

HOMER: ILIAD. By the Editor.—HOMER: ODYSSEY. By the Same.—HERODOTUS. By G. C. Swayne.—CÆSAR. By Anthony Trollope.

GEORGE ELIOT'S WORKS. Stan- dard Edition, in 21 vols. handsomely bound in cloth, gilt top, 2l. 12s. 6d.; half brown calf, gilt top, 4l. 14s.; half blue and green polished morocco, gilt top, 5l. 2s. 6d.; half brown polished morocco, panelled back, 5l. 10s.

GEORGE ELIOT'S NOVELS and LIFE. Cheap Edition. Crown 8vo. uniform binding.

ADAM BEDE. 3s. 6d.—The MILL on the FLOSS. 3s. 6d.—ROMOLA. 3s. 6d.—FELIX HOLT. 3s. 6d.—SILAS MARNER. 2s. 6d.—SCENES of CLERICAL LIFE. 3s.—MIDDLEMARCH. 7s. 6d.—DANIEL DERONDA. 7s. 6d.—GEORGE ELIOT'S LIFE. 7s. 6d.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE TERRITORIAL TYRANNY OF THE TURK. 1453-1896.

A Coloured Map with Tabular Statement showing at a glance the date of conquest, and period of subjection, of the various Turkish dependencies past and present, with their proper relative grouping, and geographical distribution.

By ARTHUR PAUL, M.A. (Lond.),
Lecturer in English, King's College, London.

Price, folded in cover, 1s.

MR. GLADSTONE writing to the Author says:—"Allow me to thank you for your interesting map, and to express the hope that it may aid in quickening the attention of the public to the Eastern Question, the curse and shame of Christendom."

THE FOUNDATIONS OF SUCCESS.

A Plea for Rational Education.

By STANLEY DE BRATH, M.Inst.C.E.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The aim of this book is to make a practical suggestion towards supplying the admitted demand for Systematic Secondary Education by showing the natural principles on which it should be based. These principles, underlying all sound thought, are the 'Foundations of Success' for individuals and nations.

"For comprehensive treatment of his subject, for thorough acquaintance with what has been previously written, and for lucid statement of common-sense principles, this little work deserves the highest commendation."
Prof. RAMSAY, F.R.S., in the Academy.

ENGLISH MAPS FOR ENGLISH READERS.

"It is, we are afraid, true that many of the current phrases of patriotic support to home products are honoured, even by those who utter them, in the breach rather than the observance. Those who patronize foreign in preference to English articles not seldom enter the excuse that the former are the cheaper, and if inferior yet serve their turn. We are the more pleased to be able to call attention to a publication which at once meets the needs of the time, is of English origin and manufacture, and is produced at a price which, when the value of work and the excellence of its execution is considered, is strikingly small. Lord Rosebery once, to the indignation of Mr. Labouchere, prided himself that the little England party was dead. As regards the cranks of individuals the legitimate congratulations perhaps came too soon. Taken in its broad sense the verdict is a true one, and irrespective of political parties British hearts beat proudly at the thought of the mighty empire over which the flag of England waves. Each morning brings news from every quarter of the globe of the doings of England's sons. The colonies, with their vigorous life, are pressing on from strength to strength. Level laws and even justice are daily gaining wider rule in lands where barbarism and savage tyranny have reigned supreme. The advance of civilization into the dark places of the earth has progressed with leaps and bounds. Lord Salisbury's wise advice to statesmen wishful to appreciate properly international questions to study large maps is received as a leading rule. But not less is it incumbent on all citizens of a world-wide empire to study on the map the dominions linked with the destiny of the race. Even to follow the 'little wars,' which it is the pride of England that her naval and military forces can, when called upon, carry out so brilliantly, it is essential that an up-to-date atlas should be at hand. Never, perhaps, was the need more in evidence than the last few years. It is excellently met by the 'New Handy General Atlas,' just published by George Philip & Son, of 32, Fleet-street, at a cost, according to the binding, of 2l. 12s. 6d. or 2l. Not the least of the merits of this production is that it is entirely of English origin and manufacture. Edited by Mr. George Philip, jun., F.R.G.S., it has been specially designed with reference to the requirements of the British public, and after a careful examination of its contents it appears to us to admirably provide what is wanted. The British colonies and dependencies are shown in great detail. Railways, means of communication, and so forth, are set out, and the clearness of the plates and the exhaustive means of reference render all its mass of information instantly available"
Morning Advertiser.

 Illustrated Prospectus of PHILIP'S NEW HANDY GENERAL ATLAS gratis on application.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO.

NEW EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

EDUCATION of GIRLS and WOMEN in GREAT BRITAIN. By C. S. BREMNER. With a Preface by Miss E. P. HUGHES, of Cambridge. 4*s.* 6*d.* "A valuable repertory of information."—Times. "An interesting record of progress and results."—Scotsman. "She is to be congratulated on her thoroughness and moderation."—National Observer.

The SCIENCE of EDUCATION. By J. F. Herbart. Translated, with a Biographical Introduction, by H. M. and E. FELKIN. With a Preface by OSCAR BROWNING, M.A. A New Edition, Revised, with an Index. 4*s.* 6*d.* "The book is of enormous value."—Westminster Review. Mr. and Mrs. FELKIN'S 'INTRODUCTION to HERBART' is also published, price 4*s.* 6*d.*; and they have in preparation an Annotated Translation of his 'LECTURES on EDUCATION.' A Translation of his 'APPLICATION of PSYCHOLOGY to EDUCATION,' by Miss MULLINER, will also shortly be issued.

AESCHYLUS. PROMETHEUS BOUND. Edited, with Introduction, Appendices, and Notes, by C. R. HAINES, M.A. (Uppingham). With 10 Archæological Illustrations and Map. 3*s.* 6*d.* "A beautiful little edition of this masterpiece. Excellent both from a scholastic and æsthetic point of view, the notes showing great taste and judgment, the illustrations from ancient art being charming and instructive, and the printing and paper of first-rate quality."—Educational Review. "The attention is at once arrested by the taste and excellent get-up of the book. A charming little volume."—Academy.

SIDE LIGHTS on SHAKSPERE. With 2 Illustrations. By L. ROSSI and E. M. CORBOULD. 3*s.* 6*d.* "Filled with facts and written with a degree of freshness, not to say vivacity, which is uncommon. Exactly the kind of information which students preparing for examinations require."—Speaker.

A FIRST GREEK READER and WRITER. By J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D., Public Orator in the University of Cambridge. 2*s.* 6*d.* "A most valuable addition to the series. The matter is most judiciously chosen and arranged, and its difficulties carefully graduated, so that the exercises, both Greek and English, are, in the variety and character of their contents, much more interesting than is usual in such books."—Educational Review.

GEOMETRY for KINDERGARTEN STUDENTS. Specially adapted to meet the requirements of the Examinations of the National Froebel Union. By ADELINE PULLAR. With about 500 Figures. Crown 8vo. 3*s.*

The NICENE CREED: a Manual for the Use of Candidates for Holy Orders. By the Rev. J. J. LIAS, Chancellor of Llandaff and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Llandaff. 6*s.* "He has done excellent service in the preparation of this scholarly, open-minded, and luminous exposition of the Nicene Creed."—Speaker.

SOAMES'S PHONETIC METHOD.

The TEACHER'S MANUAL. Edited by Prof. W. VIETOR, M.A. Part I. The Sounds of English, including some Foreign Sounds used in Loan Words. [Shortly.

SECOND EDITION, ready this day, pp. viii–528, 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

DICTIONARY of QUOTATIONS (ENGLISH). By Colonel P. H. DALBIAC, M.P. Including Authors and Copious Subjects Indexes. (1) All Quotations direct from the Original Authors; (2) Best Editions invariably used; (3) in all cases full references to the "Chapter and Verse." "An improvement upon Bartlett."—Times. "The fulness and accuracy of its references make it worthy of a place in every library where scholarship is valued."—Scotsman. "A distinct advance on all its predecessors."—Journal of Education. "Up-to-date and admirably explicit in the matter of references."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The YOUNG BEETLE-COLLECTOR'S HANDBOOK. By Dr. E. HOFMANN. Translated by W. EGMONT KIRBY, M.D. 20 Coloured Plates (over 500 figures). [In April.

TWO USEFUL ANNUALS.

1. The PUBLIC SCHOOLS YEAR BOOK, 1897. Eighth Year of Issue. Cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.* Contains full information relating to the Sixty principal Public Schools, besides Woolwich, Sandhurst, Cooper's Hill, and the Britannia. Appendices of Preparatory Schools, Entrance Scholars, Public School Bibliography, New Books, &c.

2. The ART SCHOOLS of LONDON: Painting, Music, &c. By T. MACKENZIE. Cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.* "An able handbook for the guidance of those intending to follow the study of art. It is assuredly the best of its kind."—Black and White.

STEPS to the TEMPLE of HAPPINESS. Thirty-two Moral Stories for the Young. With Hints to Parents on the Education of Children. By HENRY SMITH. With 14 Illustrations by Owen Dalziel and Katie Hobbs. Fcap. 4to. silk, 5*s.*

NEW EDITION.

WITH 70 PAGES OF NEW MATTER AND A NEW INDEX.

APPEARANCE and REALITY: a Metaphysical Essay. By F. H. BRADLEY, M.A., Fellow of Merton Coll., Oxon. Large 8vo. 12*s.* "A truly great book.....Of supreme interest and importance to the student of ethics, as well as of metaphysics. The style is singularly bright and attractive.....Altogether the most important independent work on metaphysics that has ever been written in English."—Journal of Ethics.

ON HUMAN NATURE: Essays in Ethics and Politics. By ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER. Translated by BAILEY SAUNDERS, M.A. 2*s.* 6*d.* Contents.—Human Nature—Government—Free Will and Fatalism—Character—Moral Instinct—Ethical Reflections.

The RATIONAL, or SCIENTIFIC, IDEAL of MORALITY. Containing a Theory of Cognition, a Metaphysic of Religion, and an Apologia pro Amore. By P. F. FITZGERALD. 376 pages, 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* "There is much that is suggestive of high thinking in the pages of this book."—Scotsman.

TEN YEARS in a PORTSMOUTH SLUM. By Father DOLLING. With 18 Full-Page Plates. Third Edition. 6*s.* "We know of no slum record so well told or so important. Should be carefully read by every one interested in the practical work of reform."—Progressive Review.

FERDINAND LASSALLE and HELENE VON DONNIGES. A Modern Tragedy. By ELIZABETH E. EVANS. 1*s.* "No novelist ever imagined a more romantic story."—Glasgow Herald. "A well-written and deeply interesting little book."—Western Morning News. "Cannot fail to arouse general interest."—Westminster Review.

The FARM in the KAROO: a Sketch of South African Life. By Mrs. CAREY-HOBSON. Illustrated. 2*s.* 6*d.* "Delightfully natural."—Daily Telegraph. "Excellent reading."—Literary World.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

BRADSHAW (Dr. JOHN). CONCORDANCE to the POETICAL WORKS of MILTON. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

DEMARR (J.). ADVENTURES in AUSTRALIA FIFTY YEARS AGO (1839–44). Map and Plates. 6*s.*

FIELDING (HENRY). TOM JONES. Adapted for Family Reading by his Great-Granddaughter, J. E. FIELDING. 6*s.* "All the alterations have been effected with a very skilful hand."—Times.

HARTMANN von AUE: der ARME HEINRICH. With Introduction, Notes, and Glossary by J. G. ROBERTSON, M.A. Ph.D. 4*s.* 6*d.*

HINTON (C. H.). SCIENTIFIC ROMANCES. Series II. 6*s.*

INDERWICK (F. A., Q.C.). The KING'S PEACE: Historical Sketch of the English Law Courts. 16 Plates. 4*s.* 6*d.*

LAYCOCK (F. U.). ECONOMICS and SOCIALISM: the Cause and Cure of Trade Depressions and National Poverty. 7*s.* 6*d.*

LEA (Dr. H. C.). HISTORY of AURICULAR CON- FESSION and ABSOLUTION in the LATIN CHURCH. 3 vols. 45*s.*

LILLIE (A.). The WORSHIP of SATAN in MODERN FRANCE. 6*s.*

MORRIS (Wm.) and BAX (E. B.). SOCIALISM: its Growth and Outcome. Second Edition. 3*s.* 6*d.*

SANDEMAN (G.). PROBLEMS of BIOLOGY. 6s.

STEPHEN (LESLIE). SOCIAL RIGHTS and DUTIES. 2 vols. 9*s.*

STOUT (Prof. G. F.). ANALYTIC PSYCHOLOGY. 2 vols. 21*s.*

TEBB (W.) and VOLLUM (Col. E. P., M.D.). PREMA- TURE BURIAL. 5*s.*

WUNDT (Prof. W.). LECTURES on HUMAN and ANIMAL PSYCHOLOGY. Edited by Prof. J. E. CREIGHTON and Prof. E. B TITCHENER. Cuts. Second Edition. 10*s.* 6*d.*

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO., Limited, London.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

8vo. 16s.

VITA MEDICA:

CHAPTERS OF MEDICAL LIFE AND WORK.

By Sir BENJAMIN WARD RICHARDSON, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S.

TIMES.—"An admirable picture of the character of the writer, displaying not only his geniality and kindliness, but his unwearied industry, and his never-failing enthusiasm."

NEW BOOK BY PROF. MAX MÜLLER.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SCIENCE OF MYTHOLOGY.

By the Right Hon. Prof. MAX MÜLLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute.

2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

SCOTSMAN.—"There can be no two opinions about the value of the book as a permanent contribution to science. The work has many claims to be regarded as the keystone and completion of the arch which its author, by the honoured labour of a long life, has thrown across the gulf of ignorance and prejudice that lies between man's desire and a knowledge of the truth."

NEW BOOK BY MR. S. LEVETT YEATS.

A GALAHAD OF THE CREEKS,

And Other Stories.

By S. LEVETT YEATS, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'

Crown 8vo. 6s. [On Monday next.

THE RED SCAUR:

A Story of Rustic Life in Northumberland.

By P. ANDERSON GRAHAM.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

BLACK AND WHITE.—"To read this book is to get away into the country as it was a good many years ago. It is, moreover, to be refreshed by contact with a writer who knows the English tongue, and uses it beautifully."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Those who desire a novel to be a tale of real men and women, motived by elemental passions and universal instincts, moving in an atmosphere that convinces us of its truth, and against a background of admirably described scenery, should make a point of reading 'The Red Scaur.'"

NEW BOOK BY THE LATE CANON LIDDON.

EXPLANATORY ANALYSIS OF ST. PAUL'S FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.

By HENRY PARRY LIDDON, D.D., D.C.L. LL.D., Late Chancellor and Canon of St. Paul's.

8vo. 7s. 6d. [In a few days.

THE CHURCH OF THE SIXTH CENTURY.

SIX CHAPTERS IN ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.

By WILLIAM HOLDEN HUTTON, B.D., Birkbeck Lecturer in Ecclesiastical History, Trinity College, Cambridge, Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College, Oxford, Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Ely.

With 11 Illustrations of Churches, &c., in Constantinople.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 174. APRIL, 1897. 8vo. 6d.

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. Chapters 9, 10. By S. Levett Yeats, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'

EARLY SPRING in SAVERNAKE FOREST. By W. H. Hudson.

HEIMSUCHT. By Walter J. Purton.

A PERVERSE WIDOW. By S. M. Crawley Boevey.

The CONQUEST of RADICAL TED. By M. E. Francis.

The LIVING EARTH. By Grant Allen.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NEW STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

A DEVOTEE.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY, Author of 'Diana Tempest,' 'The Danvers Jewels,' &c.

Cloth, 3s. 6d.

Westminster Gazette.—"The many readers and admirers of that fine novel 'Diana Tempest' will welcome a new book by Miss Cholmondeley with interest and high expectation, and it is pleasant to be able to inform them that they will not be disappointed. A most original and truthful sketch. The chief strength of the clever English novelist is in agreeable moralizing and reflection, and Miss Cholmondeley's moralizings are most admirable, informed by close observation of life and touched with a fine point of irony."

DR. DONALDSON SMITH'S IMPORTANT NEW WORK.

THROUGH UNKNOWN AFRICAN COUNTRIES.

The First Expedition from Somaliland to Lake Rudolf and Lamu. A Narrative of Scientific Exploration and Sporting Adventure. By A. DONALDSON SMITH, M.D. F.R.G.S. With nearly 30 Full-Page Plates and numerous Smaller Illustrations by A. D. McCormick, Charles Whymper, &c., and detailed Maps of the Countries Traversed. Super-royal 8vo. One Guinea net.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Will be of the greatest interest to sportsman, traveller, and man of science."

Standard.—"Tells in clear, succinct, and well-chosen language the tale of a very adventurous journey."

Globe.—"A book which really has a reason for existence. A solid and permanent contribution to the literature of African exploration."

St. James's Gazette.—"While to the large class of people interested in African exploration this book is indispensable, sportsmen will find in its pages a wealth of exciting incidents rarely equalled in similar works."

SOLDIERING and SURVEYING in BRITISH EAST AFRICA, 1891-1894.

By Major MACDONALD, R.E. Fully illustrated, with Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"No country in the world has had greater need of an impartial historian than Uganda, and, strange to say, though the bitter feelings engendered by the struggles of the past ten years have not had time to cool, one has been found among the actors in these stormy scenes, Major Macdonald.....No one who reads this exciting book of adventure can regret that we are spending 3,000,000*l.* on the railway. Major Macdonald writes with considerable literary and historical skill, and his sketches and maps are all excellent."

Daily Chronicle.—"The illustrations from photographs and sketches are better than any we have seen of this part of the Dark Continent, and the maps are distinctly good."

ON VELDT and FARM: in Cape Colony, Bechuanaland, Natal, and the Transvaal.

By FRANCES McNAB. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Saturday Review.—"Well worth the study of those interested in the agricultural and general development of South Africa."

Globe.—"A delightful book, and we can confidently recommend it as far more worth a reading than many a work of infinitely greater pretensions."

FISH TAILS—and SOME TRUE ONES.

By BRADNOCK HALL. With Etched Frontispiece by the Author, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by T. Hope McLachlan. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SIR ALFRED MILNER'S STANDARD WORK.

ENGLAND in EGYPT.

By Sir ALFRED MILNER, K.C.B., Governor of Cape Colony, and High Commissioner to South Africa. Popular Edition. Large crown 8vo. with Map, cloth, 7s. 6d.

BY MR. J. CHURTON COLLINS.

A TREASURY of MINOR BRITISH POETRY.

Selected and Arranged, with Notes, by J. CHURTON COLLINS, M.A. Handsomely bound, crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Standard.—"A choice and beautiful book."

THIRD EDITION.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, MASTER of BALLIOL.

A Personal Memoir. By the Hon. LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, Author of 'Safe Studies,' &c. Third Edition. With an excellent Portrait, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

EDITED BY GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.

Fully illustrated, in specially designed green cloth cover, crown 8vo. 1s. 6d. each.

CANTERBURY. 127 pages, with 27 Illustrations.

SALISBURY. 115 pages, with 35 Illustrations.

CHESTER. 96 pages, with 23 Illustrations. [Now ready.

ROCHESTER. [Ready immediately.

OXFORD. [Ready immediately.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"We have so frequently in these columns urged the want of cheap, well-illustrated, and well-written handbooks to our cathedrals, to take the place of the out-of-date publications of local booksellers, that we are glad to hear that they have been taken in hand by Messrs. George Bell & Sons."
St. James's Gazette.

"The volumes, two of which, relating to Canterbury and Salisbury, have already been issued, are handy in size, moderate in price, well illustrated, and written in a scholarly spirit. The history of cathedral and city is intelligently set forth, and accompanied by a descriptive survey of the building in all its detail. The illustrations are copious and well selected, and the series bids fair to become an indispensable companion to the cathedral tourist in England."
Times.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY.

By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G., Quartermaster General. With 20 Maps.

"This brilliant and fascinating little book."
Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Evelyn Wood is to be congratulated on his excellent book."—Times.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GOLF in THEORY and PRACTICE:

some Hints to Beginners. By H. S. C. EVERARD. A Practical Manual. With 22 Illustrations from Life.

"We have read the book 'right off,' as the saying goes, and this because, as in the case of a witching tale, it was difficult to stop.....The book is enjoyable and instructive, it is attractive in appearance, clear in its printing, valuable in its contents, and we hope it will have a wide circulation in the world of golf."—Golf.

"One of the very best books of its class."—Referee.

New and Revised Edition, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15s.

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT: a Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang.

With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

NEW VOLUME OF THE ALL-ENGLAND SERIES.

With 100 Illustrations, 1s.

GYMNASTIC COMPETITION and DISPLAY EXERCISES

Set at various Open Competitions and Displays during the Last Twelve Years, and Voluntary Exercises shown by Winners of Open and Championship Gymnastic Competitions. Compiled by F. GRAF.

The book also contains an Illustrated Glossary of the Principal Gymnastic Terms, the Exercises for the Second and Third Class Badge of the A. G. and F. A. (Illustrated), 42 Exercises for Developing Muscles, and an Article on TRAINING for COMPETITIONS, by A. BARNARD.

NEW VOLUME OF BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

HORACE. A New Literal Prose Translation.

By A. HAMILTON BRYCE, LL.D., Translator and Editor of 'Vergil,' &c. 3s. 6d.

ALDINE POETS.—New Volume.

JAMES THOMSON. Revised Edition, with a New Memoir and Critical Appendix, by the Rev. T. C. TOVEY, M.A., Author of 'Gray and his Friends,' &c. 2 vols. fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net, each.

READY NEXT WEEK. EDITION LIMITED.

Pott 4to. printed on antique laid paper at the Chiswick Press. Price to Subscribers, 15s. net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896:

containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Indexes of Names and Subjects, and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

The Publishers reserve to themselves the right of raising the price after publication. A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15s. net, each.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York-street, Covent-garden.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

BY THE LATE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

CYPRIAN:

HIS LIFE, HIS TIMES, HIS WORK.

By EDWARD WHITE BENSON, D.D. D.C.L., sometime Archbishop of Canterbury.

8vo. 21*s.* net.

TIMES.—"In its main outlines full of dramatic insight and force, and in its details full of the fruits of ripe learning, sound judgment, a lofty Christian temper, and a mature ecclesiastical wisdom."

FIFTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS in WEST AFRICA. By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY. With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.

BY THE LATE EDWARD A. FREEMAN.

SKETCHES of TRAVEL in NORMANDY and MAINE. By EDWARD A. FREEMAN. With Illustrations from Drawings by the Author, and a Preface by W. H. HUTTON, B.D. Crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

1897 ISSUE NOW READY.

The STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK. A Statistical and Historical Annual of the States of the Civilized World for the Year 1897. Thirty-fourth Annual Publication. Revised after Official Returns. Edited by J. SCOTT KELTIE. With Maps. Crown 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

SPECTATOR.—"It is, however, almost an impertinence to praise 'The Statesman's Year Book,' so deservedly high is its reputation for sound figures and clearly stated facts."

GUESSES at the RIDDLE of EXISTENCE, and other Essays on KINDRED SUBJECTS. By GOLDWIN SMITH, D.C.L., Author of 'Canada and the Canadian Question,' 'Essays on Questions of the Day,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

ATHENÆUM.—"Deserves to be widely read."

SECOND EDITION NOW READY, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The QUEEN of the MOOR: a Tale of Dartmoor in the Days of Waterloo. By FREDERIC ADYE.

MANCHESTER EXAMINER.—"Reminds us very forcibly of some of the most characteristic romances of Charles Kingsley and Mr. Blackmore. The 'Queen of the Moor' is, like 'Westward Ho!' and 'Lorna Doone,' full of nature and of human nature."

NEW NOVEL BY CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The PILGRIMAGE of the BEN BERIAH. By Charlotte M. YONGE.

SCOTSMAN.—"The hand of Miss Charlotte M. Yonge has not lost its cunning with the burden of years.....It is a book one feels glad to have read."

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.—New Volume.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3*s.* 6*d.* "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5*s.*

POOR JACK. By Captain Marryat. Illustrated by Fred Pegram. With an Introduction by DAVID HANNAY.

The MYCENÆAN AGE. A Study of the Monuments and Culture of Pre-Homeric Greece. By Dr. CHRESTOS TSOUNTAS, Ephor of Antiquities and Director of Excavations at Mycenæ, and Professor J. IRVING MANATT, Ph.D. LL.D. With an Introduction by Dr. DORPFELD. 4to. 24*s.*

FOREIGN STATESMEN.—New Volumes.

Edited by Prof. J. B. BURY.

Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

MARIA THERESA. By Rev. J. Franck Bright, D.D., Master of University College, Oxford.

JOSEPH II. By Rev. J. Franck Bright, D.D.

"." These two volumes supplement one another as a history of the period.

GLOBE.—"Dr. Bright tells the tale of considerable success on the one hand and comparative failure on the other with praiseworthy mastery and clearness. He writes from a full mind and with precision and clearness."

VOLUME VI. NOW READY.

EMINENT PERSONS: Biographies Reprinted from the 'Times.' Vol. VI., 1893-1894. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Containing, amongst others, Prof. JOWETT, Sir SAMUEL BAKER, LORD COLERIDGE, the TSAR ALEXANDER III.

SEVENTH EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

ELEMENTARY ALGEBRA for SCHOOLS. By H. S. Hall, M.A., and S. R. KNIGHT, B.A. Globe 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*; with Answers, 4*s.* 6*d.*

NEW EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

ALGEBRA for BEGINNERS. With numerous Examples. By I. TODHUNTER, Sc.D. F.R.S. New Edition, Revised and Enlarged by Professor S. L. LONEY, M.A. Globe 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*; with Answers, 4*s.* 6*d.*

MACMILLAN & CO., Limited, London.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

ACADEMY NOTES, 1897, with Illustrations of the Principal Pictures at Burlington House, will be published as usual on the OPENING DAY of the ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

LOVICE, by Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' is now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"In 'Dolly' and the rest we recognize the old, light, humorous touch which is distinctly Mrs. Hungerford's own....'Lovice' will not fail of widening the popularity of its author, and will deepen the regret of her numerous admirers that it can have no successor."—Glasgow Herald.

"Mrs. Hungerford undoubtedly describes it as if it were the freshest and most wonderful thing in the world. Her vivacity and charm are inexhaustible."—Morning Leader.

MRS. LINTON'S LATEST NOVEL.

DULCIE EVERTON. A New and Cheaper Edition is now ready. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"A strong and impressive story."—Daily Telegraph.

"As a study of feminine antagonism the book is full of power."—Athenæum.

CAVALRY LIFE and REGIMENTAL LEGENDS. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. A New Edition in One Volume. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A CHEAP EDITION OF CLARK RUSSELL'S NOVEL,

The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK," is now ready. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s.*; cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.*

The following NEW and CHEAPER EDITIONS will be ready on April 8:—

A POINT of CONSCIENCE. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The WHITE VIRGIN. By G. Manville FENN. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s.*

The HARDING SCANDAL. By Frank BARRETT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6*s.*

"Mrs. Croker's knowledge of Irish life and character is revealed in its strength and fulness in this capital story. It is the Ireland of to-day....The minor characters are as well and truly drawn as the important, and the story over-brims with life, and is the best told of Irish stories we have read for many a day."—Daily Chronicle.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.*

"Like Mrs. Croker and Mr. Anthony Hope, Mr. William Westall must be counted of the tribe of benefactors whose aim is to cheer, to amuse, and to entertain, rather than to harass, to harrow, and to horrify their readers....Mr. Westall is in love with his subject, he knows the ground right well, and the result is a rattling tale of military adventure, with a pleasant undercurrent of romance....A tale brim-full of exciting incident, and told with that buoyant geniality and straightforward simplicity which long ago earned Mr. Westall his honourable place among the story-tellers of his generation."—Spectator.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. Illustrated by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

"A novelist who failed to make an exciting tale out of such weird material would be lacking in the first principles of his craft."—Daily Telegraph.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank BARRETT, Author of 'The Sin of Olga Zassoulich.' With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"Mr. Barrett has a happy knack of putting his readers in a good humour with himself, his book, and life....A wrong righted, a villain brought to justice, and two happy love stories should suffice to fill an idle hour very pleasantly."—Bookman.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie Murray.
BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.
LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY BOOKS.

The OUTSIDER. By Hawley Smart.
BY WOMAN'S WIT. By Mrs. Alexander.
The MASTER of TRENANCE. By T. W. Speight.
An ANXIOUS MOMENT. By Mrs. Hungerford.
APRIL'S LADY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

NEW POPULAR EDITION OF MARK TWAIN'S WORKS.

The following are now ready, crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* each.

The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 200 Illustrations.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.
The £1,000,000 BANK-NOTE.
A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.

MADAME SANS-GENE. (Founded on SARDOU and MOREAU'S Play.) By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Translated from the French by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for APRIL, 1897.

1. DEAR FAUSTINA. Chaps. 10-12.
2. The PARSON'S DAUGHTER at DEAL.
3. PLAIN LIVING and HIGH THINKING.
4. The BIRDS of TENNYSON.
5. A RUSTIC'S GOAL.
6. An IDEAL LADY LETTER-WRITER.
7. IN the GATEWAY.
8. PROSPECTS of LITERATURE.
9. A DISCIPLE of an OLD CREED.
10. MONSIEUR DUVAL.
11. The CAREER of CLAUDIA. Conclusion.

SIXTEENTH EDITION NOW READY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36*s*.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes contain Portraits on Steel and Copper.

"Lord Roberts's narrative traverses all the critical periods of Indian war and politics during the last forty years. He writes of them as an eye-witness, as an expert, and latterly as the chief actor in the closing scenes of an eventful drama; his story produces the vivid impression which comes out of accurate knowledge and strange personal experiences."
Spectator.

"A book which is at once intensely interesting and exciting, and at the same time supplies a vast quantity of first-hand knowledge, invaluable alike to the statesman and the political student. And, last of all, it is a remarkable revelation of the type of character rare in all ages—that of a man at once great and fortunate who has remained simple, modest, and unspoiled by success."—World.

POPULAR EDITIONS OF STANDARD WORKS.

The AUTOBIOGRAPHY of a SEA-MAN: Thomas, Tenth Earl of Dundonald. Popular Edition. With Portraits, Charts, and Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

MY REMINISCENCES. By W. P. FRITH, R.A. A New and Cheaper Edition, being the Eighth. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The PRIVATE LIFE of MARIE ANTOINETTE. By HENRIETTE FÉLICITÉ CAMPAN, First Lady-in-Waiting to the Queen. With 2 Portraits. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The LIFE of MARY, QUEEN of SCOTS. From the French of M. MIGNET. By Sir ANDREW SCOBLE, Q.C. With 2 Portraits. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The LIFE of OLIVER CROMWELL. From the French of M. GUIZOT. By Sir ANDREW SCOBLE, Q.C. Crown 8vo. with 4 Portraits, 6*s*.

DEAN HOOK: his Life and Letters. Edited by the Very Rev. W. R. STEPHENS, Dean of Winchester. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The LIVES of PAINTERS: Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, Fuseli, Sir Thomas Lawrence, and Turner. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. Crown 8vo. with Portraits, 6*s*.

The LOST POSSESSIONS of ENGLAND—TANGIER, MINORCA, CUBA, MANILA, CORSICA, BUENOS AYRES, JAVA, the IONIAN ISLES, &c. By W. FREWEN LORD, Barrister-at-Law. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

AFRICAN HUNTING and ADVENTURE from 1852 to 1860. By WILLIAM CHARLES BALDWIN, F.R.G.S. With Illustrations by Joseph Wolf and J. B. Zwecker, and a Portrait of the Author and Map. Third Edition. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. 18*s*.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

On MONDAY NEXT, April 5, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7*s*. 6*d*.

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.
PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now ready at all Booksellers'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s*.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"Pleasantly written and readable as it is, it cannot but prove welcome to a large number of readers who have no access to the heavier naval literature from which it is drawn."—Scotsman.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HER MAJESTY.
NOW READY, SIXTY-SIXTH EDITION.

1 vol. royal 8vo. with the Arms beautifully engraved, 31*s*. 6*d*. bound, gilt edges.

LODGE'S PEERAGE AND BARONETAGE FOR 1897.

CORRECTED BY THE NOBILITY.

"That compendious and admirably printed guide to the peerage and baronetage of the British Empire has reached its sixty-sixth edition with the volume for 1897. The usefulness of this concise and carefully-edited book is enhanced by the excellent and stout paper on which it is printed."
Pall Mall Gazette, December 29, 1896.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MISTRESS BEATRICE COPE.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' &c.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s*.

"An exceedingly able story."—Scotsman.

"The plot of Miss Gardiner's novel is stirring and sensational enough. But it is well worked out, and the interest which it arouses at the very outset is cleverly maintained to the end."—Glasgow Herald.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Mrs. Herbert Martin has produced an excellent story of country life which loses nothing in interest from the fact that it has no heroine."—Scotsman.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

"We linger over it as we do over very few of the books that pass before us."—BOOKMAN.

TATTERLEY:

THE STORY OF A DEAD MAN.

By TOM GALLON.

In cloth gilt, 6*s*.

St. James's Gazette.

"'Tatterley' is, in a sense, an idyll such as Dickens himself might not have been ashamed to conceive. The author, it is true, possesses a style of his own—lucid, distinctive, forcible. In point of execution the book leaves nothing to be desired; it is in the sweetness, tenderness, and power displayed by the writer that a pledge of even better things to follow is revealed. Mr. Tom Gallon starts with a quaint idea, which he works out with admirable clearness and constantly increasing interest. Nothing, indeed, could be more beautiful or more sympathetically related than the love story of Donald Brett and Ella Tarrant. Once taken up, there is small likelihood that 'Tatterley' will be laid down until the last page has been turned. Originality and freshness are sufficiently rare qualities in these times to command appreciation. A writer who as his first essay can produce such excellent work should have no difficulty in making a public for himself."

Academy.

"We believe in 'Tatterley' through thick and thin; we believe every word of his story; and we are glad that the ranks of the novelists have been strengthened by so clearsighted and kindly and efficient a recruit as its author. We could not recommend a better story than 'Tatterley.'"

Pall Mall Gazette.

"A touching and charming story. The idea is distinctly unique and cleverly carried out to the end. The novel, written in bright, easy style, is decidedly a fresh and attractive one."

N.B. Daily Mail.

"A story of remarkable ability, pervaded by a sense of delicate humour and a power of pathos by no means common amongst living authors. To give a hint of the dénoûment would be unfair; it is as far removed from the regulation ending as the story itself is from the commonplace. From beginning to end the perusal of this story is pre-eminently refreshing."

New Saturday.

"Mr. Tom Gallon has accomplished a work which many experienced writers would be only too glad to acknowledge. It is refreshing to come across a book of this description. We shall look forward with interest to the next work with which the author may favour us."

Bookman.

"We have here a story so kindly, so pathetic, so able in its presentment of a difficult—some might even say an impossible—situation, that we linger over it as we do over very few of the books that pass before us."

Leeds Mercury.

"A book which is conceived in a powerful and touching way, not with life's little ironies, but its great. It is a beautiful book, and the man who wrote it is capable of making us all his debtors yet to a much greater extent."

Liverpool Daily Post.

"'Tatterley' is a novel of great power. In striking originality of plot and power of sketching character the novel is unique among modern productions."

 A SECOND EDITION has been immediately called for.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO.

SATURDAY, APRIL 3, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Jowett's Life and Letters	437
The Preaching of Islam	438
A Contemporary Account of Elizabethan Ireland Re-edited	439
The Life and Miracles of St. William of Norwich	440
Two Foreign Statesmen	441
New Novels (Lads' Love; Dinah Fleet; Equal Shares; The Mistress of Brae Farm)	441—442
Books of Travel	442
Short Stories	443
Our Library Table—List of New Books	444
An Undescribed Edition of Gray's 'Elegy'; The Recently Discovered Fragment of Ecclesiasticus in Hebrew; The Spring Publishing Season; The Rev. William Fulford; Haydon's Notes on Keats; 'Under the Circumstances'; Two Prothalamia	445—446
Literary Gossip	447
Science—Alternating-Current Machinery; The Spring Publishing Season; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	448—449
Fine Arts—Books of Reference; Notes from Athens; Sales; Gossip	450—451
Music—The Week; 'Les Troyens à Carthage'; Gossip; Performances Next Week	452—453
Drama—The Week; Gossip	453-454

LITERATURE

Life and Letters of Benjamin Jowett. By Evelyn Abbott and Lewis Campbell. 2 vols. (Murray.)

The fame of the late Master of Balliol must have at times perplexed those who only knew of it from the outside. Such knowledge about him as was accessible to the public at large did not seem to indicate him as a particularly likely subject for hero-worship. No doubt the flutter over his edition of the Epistles of St. Paul and over 'Essays and Reviews,' and the not very judicious attempt to make martyrs of some of the collaborators in that once-famous work, secured him a celebrity of a kind, kept alive by the rather unsportsmanlike way in which certain of the party opposed to him in theology, being unable to make a martyr of him, tried to "take it out" of him by resisting the proposals for adequately endowing the Greek professorship. But, after all, the world at large cares little for the strifes of theologians. The authorities of the sister university bestowed honorary degrees a few years ago on Jowett and Liddon on the same day, and those two eminent men—neither of whom, one may imagine, if the clock of time could have been put back three hundred years, would have felt any great compunction in inviting the secular arm to deal with the other—marched side by side in procession to the Senate House. In his own special line, Greek scholarship, no one would think of naming Jowett in the same day, one need not say with the Elmsleys and Gaisfords of a former generation, but even with several men of his own time in Oxford. His principal works, the translations of Plato and Thucydides, show far more capacity for writing English than for construing Greek, and, in the case of the former, the dissertations on the philosophy, even were they more adequate than some competent judges have found them, would not affect the question. A few witty sayings were ascribed to him, some genuine, others transferred, and he was credited with a faculty for neat and effective snubbing; but he can hardly be said to have enjoyed the reputation of a brilliant talker. Nor does he appear to have aroused any very strong enthusiasm—at least, in the days when his name was most widely known. Archdeacon Palmer held that his exposition of Greek in the early days of his tutorship was "the true foundation of his greatness in the eyes of Balliol men and of the Oxford world," and the first generation of his pupils—men not so very much younger than himself, and many of them distinguished in after life—are said to have been "devotedly attached to him." But in the fifties, as Prof. Campbell allows, he was not universally popular with the undergraduates. In the early sixties both Balliol men and others seem to have been impressed by him. Mr. Pater writes of him as one

> "whose fame among the youth, though he was then something of a recluse, was already established. Such fame [he continues] rested on his great originality as a writer and a thinker. He seemed to have taken the measure not merely of all opinions, but of all possible ones, and to have put the last refinements in literary expression."

The same idea strikes different people differently. An epigrammatist of later years also refers to Jowett's having "taken the measure of all possible opinions," but expressed it by making Jowett himself say, "What I know not is not knowledge."

During the period to which Mr. Pater refers, our recollection is that Jowett was not a great force in the college at large. Even in the days of his highest lustre he hardly seems to have got beyond "dear old Jowler"—an appellation denoting, perhaps, more affection than veneration—and to have exercised less influence over minds in statu pupillari than other men with whose methods he was not wholly in sympathy. And further it is to be said that, even in Oxford, a good many people, quite outside of theological bias, disliked him a good deal.

It cannot be said that this book makes the matter much plainer. The Jowett whom it shows us is a person who seems never quite to have known where he was. For instance, a conspicuous feature in his view of life is the great importance he attached to tangible success. With few exceptions, the friends to whom he adhered most closely and continuously were persons who had, as the phrase is, "made their mark in the world." "He was always disposed," writes the Warden of Merton,

> "to regard worldly success as a test of merit .....and in one of my early conversations with him he expressed a most earnest hope that his pupils would not, like those of another great teacher, 'make a mess of life.'"

He writes himself of his own "general prejudice against persons who do not get on in the world." Even in banter the same feeling shows itself, and he begs the wife of a physician not to let her husband go to church on weekdays too often, "for no one will imagine that he has a large practice if he does, and no one would go to Esculapius himself unless they thought he had a large practice." And this certainly is the general impression of Jowett's doctrine. In spite of, or it may be in consequence of, the fact that he was a recluse for the greater part of his life, he made much of notoriety, and held the "fallentis semita vitæ" in low esteem. Yet after his death an old pupil could say, "It was he, perhaps, as much as any one who taught me that work, not success, made life worth living"; while in writing of James Lonsdale, perhaps the finest classical scholar of his day (who declined a canonry one week and took a curacy the next), Jowett himself, not long before his own death, put the same idea even more fully: "No man is to be blamed for being without ambition. I cannot regard such lives as failures. I am thankful for the lesson which they leave behind them."

Or, again, what is to be said about his religious position? To the end of his days he remained a priest of the Church of England, performing priestly functions; that is to say, he continued an officer of an organized body, existing, among other purposes, for the observation of certain theological rules. About some of these there may be reasonable argument as to whether they are or are not essential elements of the general body of rules; some, on the other hand, are as undoubtedly fundamental. Let us see how Jowett dealt with one of these latter. Writing to Stanley in 1864, he says:—

> "The Bishops are fighting.....against the Conscience and moral perceptions of mankind; things which I believe to be invincible, even when arrayed against that figment of theologians, the Catholic Church."

Now either Jowett recited the Creed, or he did not. If he did, he announced formally his belief in a figment of theologians; if he did not, he deliberately violated a rule of the organized society in which he held office, by which every ordinary member is required to recite that formula at certain times, and every officer daily. This is quite apart from any question as to the abstract soundness of the opinion advanced by him. A man who held unfavourable views as to the memory of William III. ought not to feel easy as an officer of an Orange lodge. Running with the hare and hunting with the hounds is not characteristic of the highest life; and it is perhaps kinder to suppose that Jowett never thought out his position clearly. That there was a deep vein of genuine piety in him is obvious. On one occasion some of his pupils—one of them the late Speaker—had a narrow escape from being capsized in an open boat off Oban. They reached home, however,

> "and when they had changed their dripping garments, taken some food, and recounted their adventure, he said quietly, 'Don't you think we had better have prayers?' They knelt down, and he offered up an extempore thanksgiving for their deliverance."

On the subject of prayer, as might be expected, Jowett gives an uncertain sound. At one time he speaks of prayers for rain and the like in terms that would have satisfied Prof. Tyndall; at another we find him writing, doubtless in all sincerity, to a friend who was dangerously ill, "Let me beseech you....to offer up a prayer to God that He may spare you yet for a few years." The truth seems to be that Jowett, like Blougram, owed his fame very much to his "hitting the minute with a happy tact." He was, indeed, "felix opportunitate" all round. He is said to have at one time "hankered after" Trinity College, Cambridge. Had he followed the majority of old Paulines in that direction, it may be doubted if his life would ever have been written in two volumes. In the University where, as we have related above, he and Liddon could be welcomed together as a pair of distinguished Oxford theologians, differences of theological view have never been allowed to interrupt good-fellowship, and the number of 'Essays and Reviews' which would be required to bias any one's opinion as to the proper stipend of a Greek professor may be taken for practical purposes as infinite. Oxford, on the other hand, always more sensitive about these things, was, at the critical time for Jowett's career, in a state of acute "hyperæsthesia." The orthodox mass had been terribly disintegrated and weakened by recent events; new subjects for examination had extended the speculations of the younger men; and the not too daring heterodoxy of the work which first made Jowett's name a household word was calculated to give offence where offence could advantageously be given, and there only.

Again, in 1870, the only possible opponent that Jowett could have had for the Mastership among his own generation—a man to whom some, while not grudging them to Jowett, will think the epithets of Phædo at least equally appropriate—had been removed by a most untimely death; and when the appointment of Dr. Scott to the deanery cleared the way, as it was intended to do, "Jowett's election to the Mastership was a foregone conclusion."

Balliol had made Jowett, and he was not ungrateful. He had a keen understanding of practical matters, and he raised the college to a position it had never held before. The Master's Lodge and the College Hall were rebuilt—it is a little amusing to note that in earlier years Jowett had opposed the rebuilding of the chapel—and Balliol became a centre of hospitality, one may almost say of fashion. Distinguished personages stayed at the Lodge, and promising undergraduates were asked to meet them. If Carnot was the organizer of victory, Jowett was no less the organizer of success. The proportion of able men turned out by Balliol, as compared with other colleges, is doubtless high; but the proportion of "good" posts held by them in the Civil Service, compared with those held by men of other colleges, is perhaps higher. At Jowett's own funeral the pall was borne by seven Heads of Houses in the University—old Balliol men.

It is to be feared that the book has suffered by the current fashion which seems to make it almost an indignity to a man to write his life in less than two volumes. In the case of a man whose life has been full of variety, a great statesman, a great soldier, 900 or 1000 pages may be none too much. But Jowett had enjoyed no such opportunities of distinction. For nearly sixty years he lived in the same place and did the same work. He exercised little direct influence on contemporary thought, though he was extremely shrewd at judging its immediate drift and in taking advantage of it. Still, he was a conspicuous enough personage to deserve a biography in these days; but it is difficult to help feeling that all which was worth knowing about him might have been comprised in one volume. As it is, a good many trivialities and repetitions have contributed to swell the bulk. One could have dispensed, too, with the history of the Jowett family to the fourth generation; the more so that Jowett himself seems to have kept his family life very much in the background. He in no way neglected his relations, but his friends knew so little of them that Stanley used playfully to call him "Melchizedek."

The authors do not seem quite to discriminate between what is and what is not worth preserving. Thus the famous saying that logic "is not a science, nor an art, but a dodge," finds the place it well deserved; but what are we to say of the λόγιον which is coupled with it, "The efflorescence of art is the bloom upon decay"? On the whole, though there are several obiter dicta or private notes which impress one with a favourable notion of the writer's heart and head alike, there are fewer "good stories" than most people will expect to find. Dr. Abbott might have lightened the book a good deal by "dealing with the mythology," as some one put it, in a rather less austere spirit. After all, the impression left by his biographers is (to modify the old tag) "bonum virum libenter crederes, magnum nequaquam."

One or two small slips need correction in another edition. "Diaconate" is not a derivative of "dean," as Prof. Campbell seems to think. The letter printed on p. 95 of vol. ii. is wrongly dated by a year. It was in 1874 that the abortive Public Worship Regulation Act — Mr. Gladstone's opposition to which Jowett did not approve —went through Parliament. And we are fairly puzzled by a statement in a note at the beginning of chap. vii. That Mr. Lingen, as he then was, "in appointing Examiners and Inspectors [in the Education Department] relied on Jowett's recommendation more than on that of any other of the Oxford Tutors" we can well believe, and, indeed, the facts testify to it. But, adds the note, "W. H. Thompson, of Trinity, was similarly Lingen's mainstay at Cambridge." It may have been so, but considering that during the greater part of Mr. Lingen's secretaryship Thompson probably knew as little of the younger men as any one resident in the University, and that during the whole of that period, out of some seven Cambridge men who were appointed to the post of examiner, only two came from Trinity, it is difficult to feel that the suggested parallel between Thompson and Jowett in this respect is close. No doubt, when Thompson's life is written, other divergences between the two will appear.

The Preaching of Islam. By T. W. Arnold. (Constable & Co.)

In a most curious and interesting volume Prof. T. W. Arnold, of the Mohammedan College at Aligarh, has striven to gather together the widely scattered and often obscure evidences of the propaganda of Islamism not by the sword, but by the word. The professor has fitted himself for his subject by a wide course of reading. The list of authorities printed in an appendix amounts to a considerable library, and besides Arabic, in which he seems at home, he quotes freely French, German, Italian, and Dutch literature. He has followed the annals of Moslem missionary efforts not only down the stream of time from the Hegira to the nineteenth century, but across the continents of the world from Spain to Celebes, from the Mongols to the Hottentots. Throughout all these vast regions of time and space he seeks to sustain or to enforce the somewhat novel theses (at least to ignorant Western folk) that Islam is a religion originally preached and spread by persuasion; that the employment of force to convert unbelievers is formally forbidden by the Koran; even further, that as a matter of history this religion has been spread by missionaries and but rarely by conquerors; and that persecutions of other religions by the Moslem have been rare and exceptional. To support these propositions he brings together a mass of curious evidence, and perhaps the most conclusive is the existence of a great new missionary spirit in the Islam of this century, the rise of new religious orders, and the deepening and quickening of the faith among believers as well as the spreading of it among the heathen, and all this at a time when Islam is no longer a dominant religion, and when to propagate it by the sword has become in most places impossible. So false is the statement that Islam is a faith which can only live by conquest!

While allowing all due credit to Mr. Arnold's careful and sympathetic statement of the case, we cannot but think he has given a little too much weight to the theory of the Koran as distinguished from the practice of the faithful. We know but too well that a religion may preach tolerance and brotherly love for all mankind, and yet be propagated by authorized bloodshed and tortures. The Bulls of sundry mediæval Popes and the records of the Inquisitions in Spain and in Italy show but too plainly what men may persuade themselves is loyalty to the merciful teaching of Jesus Christ. So that the dicta of the Koran, and the many isolated cases quoted by Mr. Arnold where the book was upheld by Mohammedan doctors against the persecuting spirit in their own sovereigns, are indeed evidence of high and pure principles, but no guarantee that the violation of these principles has not been so frequent as to give a tone to the present mental attitude of Moslem people. Any one, for example, who knows the Turks of Stamboul knows that they are in general an orderly and humane population, living in marked contrast, morally, to the so-called Christians of Pera-Galata. But surely there is also in them a vein of contempt for Christian claims, a hatred of Christian doctrines and practices, which may be fanned easily into a total disregard of Christian lives. For together with the unaffected piety which makes the Moslem respectable in the eyes of all fair-minded observers, there is that uncompromising spirit which is impatient of the smallest contradiction, and supports the Porte's most sanguinary measures.

However, these observations are offered only by way of suggestion, and our readers ought certainly to make an independent study of the evidence. It will not be easy to find another statement so full and yet so brief on the side of Islam. Mr. Arnold's book teems with curious and out-of-the-way information. For instance, we may cite the effect of the Calvinistic tendencies of the Patriarch Cyril Lucar (early in the seventeenth century). Mr. Arnold points out (p. 140) that at no moment were the conversions from the Greek Church to Islam so numerous as when Cyril was put to death, and he suggests, not with good reason, that the persecuted Calvinizing Greeks found Islam nearer to Calvin than the Orthodox faith. What the Calvinists will say to such a statement is a different affair, but we commend it to the reader's attention. Here is another interesting detail. Any traveller who desires at the present time to penetrate from Egypt into the Libyan desert, or to go by land to Cyrene, is told that all the scattered oases in that inhospitable desert are controlled by one great religious head, a sort of Mahdi, without whose authority he cannot penetrate a mile, but with whose countenance he may pass through in perfect safety. Mr. Arnold tells us (p. 274) that the oasis of Jaghbub, between Egypt and Tripoli, where this personage resides, is the centre of one of the greatest missionary organizations in the world, from which emissaries are sent out not only over all Africa, but to India, Java, Borneo, and the Philippine Islands. Indeed, in the centre of Africa, on the Upper Niger and Congo, the Moslem influence has been the great engine of civilization. No Christian efforts have, as yet, had one tithe of its effect. This is all the more interesting as here the work is done among those lower races to whom a severe and spiritual religion is not usually attractive. Thus the Malays readily adopt it, while the Papuans in the same islands do not.

In an excellent summary at the close of his book the author has given the apparent reasons for the great missionary successes of Islam. Its simplicity of doctrine, its constant daily duties which bring it before the eyes of men, its preaching by laymen and women instead of by a professional clergy, its propagation by traders—with Christians "trader" and "missionary" are, or should be, contradictory terms—its rational character, even its religious toleration, are among the most obvious.

We mention, in conclusion, one most serious political consideration. The missionary schools or orders do not only seek to draw in strangers, they seek to make the faith deeper, purer, and more controlling in the masses of Mohammedan populations. They seem, at the same time, to promote a feeling of unity in all these nations as the citizens of one great religious empire under the Sultan or Khalifa of Constantinople. If a new military genius arose who could draw to his standard all the Mohammedans of Asia, and hold them together till Africa and the isles brought in their contribution, would not the upheaval be most serious for the European nations, who have ever stood aloof from this Oriental creed?

Pacata Hibernia; or, a History of the Wars in Ireland during the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, especially within the Province of Munster under the Government of Sir George Carew, and compiled by his Direction and Appointment. Edited by Standish O'Grady. Illustrated. 2 vols. (Ward & Downey.)

Mr. O'Grady has done much good work for students of Irish history, but none better than this reissue of a valuable and half-forgotten book, which furnishes the most complete record extant of Carew's administration of Munster.

The one fault of the 'Pacata' is the heaviness of its style. Interesting it is always, but scarcely ever entertaining. Its narrative is clear, but is lacking in light and shade. The judgment of its author is sound, yet he has no individuality, and his extreme self-effacement has an effect of dryness. Thus his record is aptly summed up by the editor as "veracious, but prosy." It is good honest bread of history, nourishing and sustaining, but without spice or pickle, savoury or sweet. Such as it is, 'Pacata Hibernia' must always remain valuable to the student and interesting to those who care to get at the heart of the matter; still it is the work of an able man devoid of literary gift — a record which would have been thrilling if narrated by a lively pen, but which is now rather tedious. In the first edition, published in 1633, the editorship only is claimed by Lieut. Thomas Stafford, one of Carew's officers, but there is little doubt that he was actually the author. Until the recent publication of the State papers for the later years of the sixteenth century laid bare the baseness of English statesmen and Irish chiefs, the 'Pacata' appeared a record of incredible villainies; but we now know that the leaders in both camps were in truth as treacherous as they were painted by this unknown observer, and his story, which will always have an historical importance, is particularly instructive and useful at this moment, as it takes up the history of Ireland almost at the point whereat the last published Calendar of State Papers lays it down.

'Pacata Hibernia' opens with the entry of Mountjoy and Carew into Ireland, and closes with Carew's return to England at the moment of Elizabeth's death. It is devoted, not, as it claims, to "the warres of Ireland," but wholly and solely to the Munster rebellion; and important though it is as a contemporary record, its chief value is, in the words of its editor,

"the light, often a most unwelcome light, which in a hundred ways it sheds upon the manners of the Irish nobility, chieftainry, gentry, and people of Ireland at this time, and upon the methods, policy, and personnel of Queen Elizabeth's Irish officials and military commanders, of whom Carew may be regarded as quite the ne plus ultra in certain directions. .....Slowly but surely the monstrous criminality of the men of this age, evidenced by testimonies gradually accumulating as one pores over the contemporary muniments — usually letters written by their own noble-ignoble hands—rises before the mind of the amazed reader.....Indeed, I believe that since the publication of our sixteenth century State papers all well-informed Irishmen have ceased to look for patriotism or any sort of public spirit in any of these sixteenth century insurgent lords, save only in the chief ones, Tyrone and Hugh Roe. But then, in their own way—which was a different way—the statesmen and officials were just as bad, or worse. We shall find Carew in the following pages writing decoy letters, crammed with such words as 'God,' and 'Christ,' and 'holy keeping,' hiring a man to assassinate the brave Sir John of Desmond, and generally holding a market for assassins. In his private correspondence with Mountjoy we find him relating with glee how his creature, James Blake, tracked the brave Hugh Roe O'Donnell into Spain, and there poisoned him under the guise of friendship."

Indeed, the treachery laid bare in these pages is all but universal, and only one figure which appears upon this stage is shown as an honourable and loyal gentleman, judged by our modern standard. Don Juan of Aguila is the sole person of consideration whom we find truthful, staunch, and single-minded, albeit a humble hero now and then brightens the murky record, and the courage of Maurice Stack and the heroism of MacGeoghegan show that good men and true fought under both banners.

Indirectly the 'Pacata' throws much light on the real nature of the Irish problem under Elizabeth, and Mr. O'Grady devotes a good part of his preface to unravelling the web of Irish internecine feuds. As often happens, these feuds and quarrels sprang from self-interest; the chiefs desired absolute power, their dependents unconditional freedom. Neither religion nor patriotism inspired the average loyalist or the average rebel; each fought for what he believed to be his temporal welfare. Nor

"when we read of the lord of a great territory being in rebellion, need we conclude that the hearts of his people were with him as he went into 'the action.' It was often very much the reverse. For his rebellion the lord had usually many excellent reasons, and went into action mainly in obedience to the great law of self-preservation; for it was certainly the fixed and settled, if unavowed policy of the State to drag down and destroy one by one all such potentates.....But though the chieftain had usually most excellent reasons for his rebellion, many of his subject gentlemen and freehold tenants had also on their side very excellent reasons for rebelling against him and for joining with the Crown to effect his overthrow.....Most of them had terrible private wrongs to avenge; all looked to escape from a position of uncertainty and insecurity, and to fling off a yoke which they regarded as intolerable.....The secret wish of all these small lords and gentlemen was to be quite free; but if they could not be quite free, as it soon became plain that they could not, then they had rather be under the Queen's Government than under that of Tyrone's new Earl of Desmond or his new Chief of ClanCartie, Florence, of whom we shall read so much in the ensuing pages."

The second book of the 'Pacata Hibernia' is taken up mainly with the reduction of O'Sullivan Bere, the last of the chieftains who held out against Carew:—

"O'Sullivan's country was a portion of the great seignory of MacCarty More.....His ancestors time out of mind had been feudatory to this lord. They paid him homage, they kept his peace and followed his war. They rendered him tribute, and the tribute was so great that the chieftain who paid it could be regarded as little better than a sort of land-steward.....The minor lords, ground down and tortured by such cruel rents and exactions as MacCarty More wrung from the O'Sullivans, hated the great ones, and co-operated with the State for their overthrow."

Desmond, MacCartie, and O'Sullivan are among the figures in the foreground, although Desmond is captured before we are more than half way through the first volume, and, finding himself betrayed, he in his turn betrayed others. True to the principles of his age, this hero —who, though "none of the bloodiest enemies," had raised the whole province to rebellion—at once

"began in some sort to extenuate, though not to excuse, his former faults to Her Majesty..... humbly praying that his life might be spared in policy of State; for whilst he lived his brother John could not make any pretext to the earldom; whereas, on the contrary, he being dead, it was very probable that the rebels would set him up for a new idol in his place; whereof what inconveniences might ensue was apparent. These reasons are subject to every man's understanding that hath common sense; and therefore no marvel that the Lord President should light on them."

Desmond dead could give no information to the Government; living, he might implicate and lead to the unmasking of others, and he did, in fact, betray the double-dealing MacCartie, with the result that the two firebrands were packed off to London together, and together were imprisoned in the Tower. Thus they disappear from the pages of the 'Pacata,' and O'Sullivan Bere comes to the front, to fall back in his turn when the invading Spaniards filled men's minds. Stafford writes quietly on through all these changes, and records crimes and meannesses unspeakable as incidents of the campaign, and he relates with apparent gusto how the President and the Lord Deputy stole the Spanish post-bag, after the composition and the delivery of hostages by Don Juan, by means of English soldiers disguised as Irish countrymen. News of the theft having reached the Spaniards,

"Don Juan de Aguila went immediately to the Lord Deputy, grievously complaining that the messenger had been robbed by soldiers (as he alleged). The Lord Deputy seemed no less sorry, 'but,' said he, 'it is a common thing for all armies to have debauched soldiers,' and he thought it to be rather done by some of the country thieves; but if the fact was committed by soldiers, it was most likely done by some Irishmen, who thought it to be a good purchase (as well as the money) to get the letters, to show them to their friends in rebellion that they might the better understand in what estate they were in. Don Juan, not being satisfied with this answer, desired the Lord Deputy to inquire of the Lord President (for of his intercepting of them he had a vehement suspicion) whether he had any knowledge of the matter, and so they departed. The next morning the Lord Deputy related to the President the complaint and his answers. Don Juan, eager in the pursuit of his letters, came to know of the Lord Deputy what the President had answered. The Lord Deputy answered him upon his faith that he was sure that the President had them not; which he might well do, for they were in his own possession. In conclusion, a proclamation was made, and a reward in the same promised for him that could discover the thieves, and a pardon for their lives granted to those that committed the deed if they would come in and confess it; with this Don Juan rested satisfied."

Stafford, who has told this adventure with a liveliness unusual to him, then proceeds to give the contents of the Spanish post-bag, without any sign of a doubt that all is not fair under a truce.

But the landing of the foreigners had so far undone Carew's work that it was difficult for his officers to regard the rights of the Spaniards:—

"Before the coming of these Castilians the province, as you have heard, was in so good conformity that the civil justice, without all contradiction, had as current passage as in any of the former years of peace, and every man's cattle, without loss or danger, lay day and night in the fields. But now the rebels and their hired bonoghs [professional soldiers] swarmed everywhere, and especially in Carberry, Beare, Desmond, and Kerry, insomuch that there was no place in them, or adjoining them, free from these caterpillars, who, beholding the grievousness of their offences, grew to be desperate, concluding themselves to be children of perdition, and not capable of Her Majesty's gracious mercy, whereby their obstinacy was increased. In the tract of land aforementioned there were no castles held for the queen but those which the Spaniards rendered.....and Castle Mange in Kerry.....All the rest were in the possession of the rebels."

The final book of the 'Pacata' tells of their reduction by Carew, until in December, 1602, "the present state of this province promised a present reduction and future quiet," and the Lord President, broken in health and weary of his exile, prepared to go home to reap the honours due to his devotion. But, owing to contrary winds, he was detained in Ireland until the 20th of March, and at Chester he met the news of the death of the queen he had served with such unscrupulous fidelity. "For whom, as he had good cause, he extremely mourned. But, two days following, being at Lichfield, he assisted the Mayor in the proclaiming of King James, which gave him new life."

As for the author, he, with amazing self-repression, takes leave of us without a word, and brings his work to a close with a summary of the events he has narrated at length. Fame does not seem to have tempted him, for his book remained unpublished till thirty years later, when he whom we must suppose its author laid claim to the lesser dignity of editor. 'Pacata Hibernia' has achieved but three editions: the London one of 1633, a reprint in 1810 by the Hibernia Press Company, and the handsome reissue now before us, wherein the "Seventeen Severall Mappes, for the better understanding of the Storie," are supplemented with more or less authentic portraits, which form the one detail of the reissue which it is impossible to admire.

The Life and Miracles of St. William of Norwich. Edited by Augustus Jessopp and M. R. James. (Cambridge, University Press.)

The unique manuscript in which is preserved the story of the boy-martyr of Norwich, by Thomas of Monmouth, was purchased, with several others, from the parish library of Brent Eleigh, Suffolk, in 1889, by the Cambridge University Library. It was there recognized, we gather, by Dr. James as the "long-lost" life of St. William, and Dr. Jessopp's invaluable knowledge of Norfolk history in the Middle Ages was successfully invoked for its illustration. The enterprise of the Cambridge University Press has enabled the two editors to present in worthy form what is not only, as they rightly claim, "a unique contribution to English hagiography," but a real, if small addition to our knowledge of a dark period, and a work eminently creditable to English scholarship.

It is, no doubt, as the starting-point in England of the well-known and persistent legend of ritual murders by the Jews that the tale of William's death claims its chief importance. One may, therefore, at the outset express regret that there is no bibliography of the subject appended, considering the amount of study and research it has long attracted. Assuming, however, that the alleged murder of this Norwich boy on March 22nd, 1144, is actually the first appearance of the tale, the editors are obviously justified in their minute investigation of the evidence, which is now rendered possible by the recovery of the original manuscript. From Dr. James's lucid explanation we learn that the work was probably composed in 1172–3, while the existing manuscript is slightly anterior to 1200. Thomas of Monmouth first appears as certainly an inmate of the Norwich monastery in 1150, when he received his vision concerning the boy-martyr, and cannot have entered it, we gather, before 1146. The earliest part of the story, in consequence, is told at second-hand. This is, no doubt, the cause of a certain confusion as to the years 1144 and 1145, as to which the editors admit their "difference of opinion." We have carefully considered the point, and can only say, with Dr. James, that Thomas "has made a bad blunder in one of his two accounts." Is it not possible that he was drawing on separate sources of information? The evidence as to the boy's death, of which a masterly analysis is presented, is obviously vitiated by being thus obtained at a later date; but we note that the editors, while rejecting the story of a deliberate ritual sacrifice, think it possible that the boy may have been done to death by a reckless or fanatic Jew. It is impossible, in the space at our disposal, to weigh evidence so meagre; but it must be remembered that the time was ripe for the appearance of such an accusation, and that similar charges have never been wanting in different countries and successive ages. One point might fairly be made: the Church was not to blame, nor was the persecution religious. The usurer has never been a lovely or a beloved figure; and he is still synonymous in popular estimation with the Jew, and the real source of the Judenhetze.

To those interested in the evolution of miracles, it will suggest comparisons even with modern times to learn that while the Bishop of Norwich was a staunch champion of the martyrdom, the prior by no means viewed it with favour. Nor was the popular enthusiasm at all pronounced at first; indeed, it was not, as Dr. Jessopp observes, till the final translation of William's remains into the cathedral itself that his sanctity and fame were really assured. Thomas, his biographer, espoused his cause as warmly as the bishop, and advertised his glory in the usual manner, by collecting in this treatise the miracles his agency had wrought.

Apart from the hagiographical interest of a work of this character, it affords some precious glimpses of twelfth century life —institutional, social, and religious. From Dr. Jessopp's facile pen we have here three charming studies on 'The Benedictine Priory at Norwich,' 'East Anglia in the Reign of Stephen,' and 'The Norwich Jews.' Mr. Hudson, as a specialist, treats of 'The Political Condition of Norwich in the Middle of the Twelfth Century, as likely to affect the Jews resident in the City,' and appends a most valuable plan of the East Anglian capital. Dr. James deals with the manuscript and text, the legend, and the cult and iconography of St. William, this last subject being illustrated by five photographs. It is rash, everybody knows, to differ from Dr. Jessopp, especially on Norfolk matters, but on a few points we have our doubts. It was not "a week," but three weeks, after the battle of Lincoln that "Matilda was recognized 'Lady of England' at Winchester"; the notion that "she was carried on a bier and wrapped about with grave clothes" is only, we venture to think, an old misconception; and, in spite of "the 31st Deputy Keeper's Report," Robert FitzWalter ceased to be sheriff of Norfolk in 1129, nor, so far as we know, was his alleged father "designated by the writers of the Domesday returns as Walter de Cadomo." Dr. Jessopp goes on to say that the name "de Caen" (de Cadomo) "assumes quite surprising varieties of form, from de Kayni to Caxineto and even more unrecognizable contortions," appearing on the Pipe Rolls as "de Caisneto, de Caisnei, and de Caisne." This would, indeed, be "quite surprising" were not the names wholly distinct. The family which took its name from Quesnai followed the Warennes to England, and settled under them in Sussex and Norfolk; it had nothing to do with Caen. John "de Caineto," the sheriff, who is prominent in this treatise, was doubtless the "John de Caineto, Querceto, or Cheyney," who founded, says Blomefield, Cokesford Priory about 1146. Dr. Jessopp may have been misled by Blomefield's account of Shelfanger, although the two names are not there identified. Again, Simon "de Nodariis," the bishop's knight, to whom the death of Eleazar the Jew was imputed, is styled throughout Simon "de Novers," though in 1166 he appears as "Noers" or "Nuers." Blomefield gives us the right forms, "Noiers" of "Swanton Noiers" (1346), the name being taken from Noyers. More serious is the question of the water ordeal, so indignantly denounced by Dr. Jessopp. We feel confident that the "juisa aquæ" of 1166 was not the ordeal "of boiling water," but that of sinking or swimming, though this may not be generally known. Lastly, an important question is raised by "decani" occurring in the story. Dr. Jessopp decides that these were laymen, exercising "some sort of magisterial sway," and representing "the Saxon tyenthe-heved." We are loth to question his verdict on the point, but the "decanus Norwicensis" who here summons the Jews to the bishop's synod is no mere tithing-man; and as he summons them for an offence against the "lex christiana," to be punished "ecclesiastice rigore justicie," he was clearly an ecclesiastical officer acting for a court Christian.

It should be evident from these suggestions that we have not lightly spoken of this work as one of which English scholars may be proud. It will, we believe, be appreciated abroad as well as in this country, for the pains lavished on the text and the elucidation of the tale. And praise is due to its tasteful production by the Cambridge Press.

Foreign Statesmen.—Maria Theresa. By J. F. Bright. (Macmillan & Co.)

Foreign Statesmen.—Joseph II. (Same author and publishers.)

Dr. Bright has condensed into some four hundred small octavo pages a lucid and attractive narrative of what is, perhaps, the most complicated period of European diplomatic history. For the fortunes of the great empress queen and her son are inextricably blended with the political permutations and combinations which finally resulted in the development of modern Europe, and an adequate treatment of the period in question desiderates an almost encyclopædic erudition. So far as his French and German sources serve him (though what these exactly are we can only conjecture, as there is not a suspicion of a note or reference throughout his pages) the author is on safe ground, and his judgment, acumen, and literary skill have enabled him to produce what, allowing for its narrow compass, is on the whole (with the considerable reservation to be mentioned presently) the most thorough English monograph on the subject. The cardinal fact of Austria's foreign policy during this period was, as he well insists, the cultivation, at the instance of Kaunitz, of the French alliance. This complete reversal of the diplomatic system of centuries was mainly dictated by the fear of the upstart and intrusive Prussian monarchy. The change was justifiable under the circumstances, and, but for the incalculable accident of Frederick II.'s genius, might well have served its purpose. The mistake of the Austrian ministers was in clinging to this alliance when its futility had become patent to all the world. Their most natural and profitable ally, from first to last, was certainly the rising young Russian empire, which, from the War of the Polish Succession onwards, had begun to play a more and more important part in the affairs of Europe. And here we touch upon the flagrant defect of Dr. Bright's monograph. He fully appreciates the immense influence of Russia on eighteenth century politics, yet, for all that, he has not taken sufficient trouble to "get up" this particular part of his subject, and the result is that his narrative is often inadequate, and consequently misleading. We should never guess from his pages that Russia held the key of the situation at the beginning of the War of the Austrian Succession, and that all the diplomatic machinery at the disposal of France was, therefore, set in motion to exclude her from any participation in the struggle. Thus, not one word is said about the Swedish invasion of Finland, 1741–43, the direct result of French intrigues, which alone prevented Russia from fulfilling her treaty obligations to Austria. There is also no hint of the subsequent fierce and far-reaching diplomatic duel between the Russian Chancellor Alexius Bestuzhev and the Court camarilla in the pay of France and Prussia, which resulted in the victory of the former, the best friend Austria ever had, and the dispatch of 30,000 Russian troops to the Rhine, to which intervention, far more than to the exhaustion of the combatants—the reason here alleged—was mainly due the conclusion of the Peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. Similarly, we are told nothing of the persistent hostility of Bestuzhev to Frederick II., which, even more than the vindictiveness of the philosopher of Potsdam's three female foes, was the main cause of Russia's participation in the Seven Years' War. It is only fair to add, however, that the omissions complained of are confined to the first volume; in the second Russia is given more of her due, though, characteristically, Panin, Catherine II.'s most influential minister, is mentioned only once, while Bezborodo, after Panin's death the soul of the Tsarina's Cabinet, whom Joseph II. himself felt bound to create a Reichsgraf, is not mentioned at all.

We are inclined to think that Dr. Bright, though by no means blind to the faults of Joseph II., somewhat overrates his capacity; but this, of course, is a matter of opinion. For the rest, his characterizations of some of the leading statesmen of the age—notably those of the noble empress herself, of her two sons, of Chancellor Kaunitz, and of the Duke de Choiseul—though necessarily brief, are most felicitous, and he displays throughout those supreme qualifications of an historian, judicial impartiality, a fine sense of proportion, and no ordinary power of concentration.

Finally, in parting with these pleasant volumes, we may note a few errors which call for correction. Hungary can scarcely be classed among the provinces of Austria; Catherine II. is made to say in 1771 that she would be satisfied with Azov, whereas that fortress had already been ceded to the Tsarina Anne thirty-two years before; Maria Theresa's liberal archbishop spelt his name Trautsohn, not Trautzen; and Czernichef is an impossible form.

NEW NOVELS.

Lads' Love. By S. R. Crockett. (Bliss, Sands & Co.)

"Lasses and lads, and the long courtships between the gloaming and the mirk"—these are the subjects which, as Mr. Crockett explains to his correspondents who remonstrate on various grievances from various standpoints, appeal to him most in summer. In winter he inclines more to raiding on the English border. Certainly the versatility which enables the author of 'The Grey Man' to give a lively epitome of the rustic loves and tragedies of a moorland countryside some fifty years since in itself goes far to reassure the many admirers who were beginning to fear their favourite had exhausted his vein. Further, it seems to us, there is in this latest product of that storehouse much of the realism of personal experience. However modified and disguised, it is hardly possible to think that the writer's personality does not present itself in Saunders McQuhirr, junior, the "braw wooer" of blythe Nance Chrystie, and the hero of many an adventure at "the canny hour at e'en." Rarely has the author drawn more truly from life than in the cases of Nance and "the Hempie," the eldest and youngest of the three graces of Nether Neuk; never more typical Scotsmen of the humble sort than the farmer Peter Chrystie, the Nabal who boasts himself the father of the winsome three; his friend, the hair-oiled packman, who has made himself a fortune by grinding the faces of the poor on this side of the Border; and his lazy herd, Rab Anderson, the last no "endeavouring" thruster in the battle of life, but half-gipsy, poacher, and vagabond, with a stern strain in his nature when his passions are aroused. When he hears of Nathan Murdoch's relations with his daughter the indolent giant turns vivacious enough. The miserable end of the packman, although it sets forth the humble fidelity of the girl he has tried to wrong, is less agreeable than the view we get of him at the outset. The scene in which, under Nance's inspiration, all the boys and girls of Whinnyliggate hoot the unscrupulous boaster with the refrain, "Did your mother leave the shillin'?" might be recommended to any modern Wilkie who would take the theme in hand. A good pair of foils to the young and lusty lovers of the "farm-touns" are the two ancient wooers and "bonnet lairds" or yeomen, called from their estates "Butterhole" and "Sourdubs" respectively. Much good fun of a practical nature turns on the wile by which Butterhole is led to "speer" the byrewoman in marriage instead of the daughter of the house:—

"It was Butterhole's hour. Never had fortune and the tricksome Nance proved so unexpectedly kind to him. He slipped his arm about the waist of the maiden on the doorstep. 'Ye are an awesome nice lass,' he said. 'I like ye maist as weel 's mysel'!' 'Ye think sae?' shyly came from under the shawl, in tones which might either indicate the embarrassment of extreme feeling or such mirth as hardly brooked suppression. 'Aye, lass, ye ken weel that I think sae; a' the world kens that,' said Butterhole. 'I aye said that there was never a lass to match ye for twenty miles roond.' 'Is that a' ye ha'e to say?' came softly and slyly from beneath the shawl. Meg Coupland was not new to the game of making reluctant love pin itself down to definite intention. Butterhole was staggered for a moment, but he faced the situation on the whole very gallantly. 'Weel, lass,' he said, 'I was hardly that far on. But since ye are sae fond o' me, I wull speer ye. Wull ye ha'e me, lass?' 'Aye, that wull I!' responded Meg, in her natural voice, dropping the shawl and looking up at him with a smile which a circumnavigator would have had difficulty in tracing round her broad but expressive features—so pervasive it was, and, as one might say, circumferential. 'Aye, that I will, laird Butterhole, and wi' pleasure. Ye can caa' in an' tell my mither the morn's mornin' when ye are gaun by.' 'What the de'il—Meg Coupland, as I 'm a leevin' sinner!' cried the astonished laird. 'I ha'e speered my ain cotman's dochter. Lord, I maun surely be desperate fu'. It 's time I was hame.'"

The subsequent adventures of the "laird" and his sardonic friend Sourdubs in the moss-hag are excellently illustrated by Mr. Warwick Goble, who throughout has much enhanced the reader's enjoyment. But the "sonsy" daughter of the moorland farm—essentially womanly and pure, but with a frank forwardness not usual in more cultivated beauties—is the rightful queen of her company, and has clearly been the favourite study of her author's practised pen.

Dinah Fleet. By John Hill and G. F. Bacon. (Downey & Co.)

The joint authors of this lively rendering of certain examples of modern London life at first raise no particularly pleasant anticipations, the early pages on Dick Rippon's extremely commonplace, not to say vulgar origin and upbringing promising little that is distinctive. Soon, however, they manage to interest the reader in the modest and manly young Philistine for his own sake, and in the maiden of his affections for the experiences of life she acquires, so nearly at a terrible cost, in the remarkable Brook Street establishment of Madame Jeanne. It is the well-founded opinion of the authors that a morbid ending to the affairs of the leading couple is now become as hackneyed as the old consummation of "living happily ever after"; and they therefore please themselves and their readers by enabling Dick's friend John Onslow ("liter'y man") and his arch and amiable confederate the Irish Miss Tully to re-establish healthy relations between the lovers, though, as John observes to Mary,

"by rights Miss Fleet ought to have gone on dress-making and gradually assumed the style and type normal to such persons, while Dick Rippon proceeded to forget her in due course and probably took up with a girl at an A. B. C. shop. They would each differentiate and become more vulgar and cockney as they grew older. He would in lapse of ages become a junior partner in Tea & Pepper, and he and the A. B. C. girl would live in an eight-roomed semi-detached at Clapham, while Miss Fleet would grow stout and become Madame Somebody and go to Brighton from Saturday to Monday, and some day they would meet at—say Victoria, but neither would know the other by sight."

Though the style of this story is rather too topical and vernacular, it has gleams of literary power.

Equal Shares. By David Worthington. (Digby, Long & Co.)

"David Worthington" may be plausibly conjectured to veil a feminine name, for the marks of feminine authorship pervade 'Equal Shares.' The audacity which brings a young American to search for a hidden treasure in a Derbyshire cave, and introduces him to the heroine "per favour" of an angry bull; the opulence of invention which can throw in almost at the outset—without, so far as can be seen, any intention of making use of it in the development of the story—an incident so serious as the amputation of two fingers from the hand of one of the prominent characters by means of a mowing machine; the reckless waste of "strong" situations; and last, but not least, the practice of writing in full the word which male authors usually indicate by "d—n"—all these are well-known manifestations of "das Ewig-Weibliche" in fiction. The story is, we should imagine, a first attempt. Possibly the writer may do better some day, but at present she is in a crude and rudimentary stage. There is only the vaguest attempt at anything like sequence of action, none whatever at realization of character; only a supplementing of a little apparently original, if not very unusual experience, with a good deal of incident rather unintelligently selected from the stock common to all fiction of a certain kind.

The Mistress of Brae Farm. By Rosa Nouchette Carey. (Bentley & Son.)

This is a very long novel, although it is in one volume. The story, so far as regards the plot and action, is exceedingly simple, but the details are multitudinous. In the first hundred pages (about a quarter of the book) not fewer than three dozen persons are mentioned, besides horses, donkeys, dogs, and cats. As the tale progresses fresh characters appear, and the difficulty of remembering who is who becomes intolerable. That the plot consists in Col. Trevor's falling gradually into an engagement with one woman and in love with another, and then getting extricated, is obvious at a very early stage, so that the interest of the book is not strong. It would, however, be unfair to omit to say that the author shows a great knowledge of village life and of the smaller squirearchy. The novel is of an old-fashioned kind, full of excellent sentiments and absolutely safe.

BOOKS OF TRAVEL.

The Letters from the Scenes of the Recent Massacres in Armenia of Mr. Rendel Harris and Mrs. Harris (Nisbet & Co.) were written while their authors were engaged in administering a relief fund subscribed by the Society of Friends. Although addressed to the Quaker committee, they are quite informal and intimate in style, and pervaded by a large spirit of religion very far from fanatical, but singularly practical and to the point. The reader, therefore, will find no fault even where Mrs. Harris (who writes two-thirds of the letters) accuses herself of becoming "discursive." Her many touching descriptions, for instance, of interviews with parties of Armenian women, whom she endeavours to help, console, and encourage, throw light on the native ways and character:—

"They receive us always in their despoiled homes with an outburst of tears, and generally Miss Bush is embraced as an old friend would be anywhere after such a calamity, and sometimes I am also. Then we all sit down in what remains of the 'seat of honour,' and they salaam us with great ceremony as if greeting us for the first time; others come in and do the same, and every one salutes every one else, and this takes a deal of time. Then, seated around us, they very soon give full play to their grief and anguish, and various terrible recitals follow each other in quick succession, emphasized by Oriental gesticulation. Then comes the weeping and wailing of many together, and then we put in our words, or Miss Bush does, exhorting to faith, patience, and hope, and then we close with Bible reading and prayer."

The Professor's letters, incisive and unconventional, have the additional interest of frequent historical and antiquarian illustrations, and classical allusions to the places visited, the philanthropic work being varied in his case by expeditions on a cherished hobby, the search for valuable old MSS., Armenian or Syrian—not very successful, for, owing to the state of the country, such treasures are mostly either dispersed or concealed. The administration of the funds seems to have been carried out with great judgment. One question of casuistry arose, viz., whether a number of Armenian prisoners should be ransomed. The bribe demanded was moderate, but the Turks said they must for appearance' sake retain four or five for trial, and as this seemed to imply the certain hanging of the remnant, the plan was abandoned. Among the Armenians society was entirely disorganized, and individuals so dazed by their recent calamity, that to relieve them "felt like putting together a clock which had been smashed." The quiet, restrained tone in which the facts are usually related adds to the impressiveness of the picture. Much, indeed, is left untold, for besides the writers' dislike of the sensational it was advisable to be reticent where letters might be intercepted. The first essential was gradually to persuade the surviving men to begin to rebuild their ruined houses. Materials—not money, which the Turks would have taken from them—were supplied. Stolen tools were repurchased for the artisans. The peasantry were provided with seed to sow the ground. The children were gradually got back into the schools, for they were "running wild about the streets, playing at massacre." The general apathy, in the anticipation of a renewal of outrage, was perhaps natural, but it is difficult to sympathize with a people who submitted so tamely. They may have been purposely disarmed, but arms could have been secreted. By their own account they had plenty of warning, even without accepting such stories as the special manufacture at Harpoot, "by order of the City Council," of one hundred axes for the purpose of massacre. Isolated villages, as the writers point out, were no doubt defenceless, but in many towns the Armenians were not so outnumbered that they could not strike a blow. Resignation is not a virtue per se, and (pace our authors' principles) the display of a little shaitan would have been more to the purpose. They speak of the American missions as a powerful agent for civilization among the Armenians, and draw pleasant pictures of their refinement and prosperity. No doubt the seed falls on congenial soil, but it may be remembered that much culture and refinement is to be found among Armenians quite unconnected with missions from without. A striking result, they tell us, of the massacres has been a strong religious revival, and a relaxation of the mutually intolerant antagonism of the Protestants and the old Gregorian Church. The Protestants, they observe, were always the chief objects of Turkish attack. As for the missionaries :—

"a bright American Western girl, with her hair just growing afresh on her head after the fever, and as full of enthusiasm.....as a whole platform of Exeter Hall people.....keen and active, as rapid as a rotifer, or whatever those little creatures are that dart about under the microscope," might conceivably be an object of apprehension to a Turkish official. There was no lack of devotion on the part of these ladies. Mr. Harris, however, with apparent unconsciousness, shows some of his friends in what seems to be a very unheroic light. A rich, influential Armenian,

"a graduate of Harpoot College,.....had long been an object of jealousy to some leading Turks, and was named to Mr. Gates, by the kaimakam, as the head of the (imaginary) revolutionary committee. When the kaimakam said this, it was very hard for our missionary friends not to deny it indignantly, knowing him to have ever been most loyal to the Government, and most opposed to any but constitutional methods of reform. (However, from prudential reasons they held their peace.) [!] He was killed most cruelly."

We need hardly insist on the courage and devotion, as well as energy, which could have alone enabled Mrs. Harris to face the dangers and fatigue, to say nothing of terrible scenes, which such an expedition involved, and to carry it through so successfully.

On the Nile with a Camera. By A. Wilkin. (Fisher Unwin.)—Mr. Wilkin's narrative of his six weeks' trip to Egypt is one of the best we have read, and it is published in such an attractive form that it deserves a better fate than that which usually overtakes works of this kind. Like most tourists nowadays, he wisely placed himself in the hands of Cook, and he performed his journey from Cairo to the Second Cataract in the beautiful steamer Rameses the Great. All that is usually seen in Egypt by the "rapid" traveller Mr. Wilkin saw, and of many of the best things which he saw he took excellent photographs, from which blocks have been made to illustrate his letterpress. These are well above the average of such productions, nd they show incidentally how useful a camera can become for such purposes when in the hands of a skilful manipulator ; views like that of the Rock of Abû Sîn are really first rate. Mr. Wilkin naturally has nothing new to tell, for most of his descriptions of places and antiquities are paraphrases of those given in the usual guide-books ; but every here and there he gives his own opinions on matters, and though he is often right, he is sometimes wrong. Thus on p. 81 he says that "the common people, man, woman, and child, are full of heartfelt gratitude to England for the great work she has done"! This is an optimistic view of the matter. They are grateful to England for reduced taxes and a fuller water supply, but the Mohammedan fellah, at least, longs to have his country to himself, and believes that he could flourish just as well under a national government as he does under the dominion of the Khedive's British advisers. Moreover, if Mr. Wilkin could hear some of the conversations which take place in the mosques between Mohammedans, his belief in the gratitude of the people would receive a shock. It is impossible to say much for Mr. Wilkin's style, still it is generally clear ; phrases, however, like the following mar the book : "A medley of modesty and conceit, affability and firmness, he cannot be described." And why the side of the book should be decorated with the hieroglyphics for "Beq," one of the rarest names for Egypt, it is hard to understand.

The Exploration of Australia from 1844 to 1896. By Albert F. Calvert. (Philip & Son.)—The general public are indebted to Mr. Calvert, who has proved his enthusiasm for Australian exploration by defraying the cost of an expedition for further discovery in that continent. This is alluded to with a modesty which will commend our author to his critics. Certainly the reading public will feel obliged to him for an excellent map of Australia, indicating the still unknown portions of it which he hopes now to develope. Large as this district is—consisting of 280,000 square miles, about five times the size of England—it is small in comparison with the tracts already known, and from the general similarity of the country immediately surrounding, we should infer that no great diversity of soil or capabilities is likely to be discovered. This somewhat bulky volume describes nearly forty expeditions made in the years between 1844 and 1896. It forms a sequel to a previous work by the same author, which contains an account of explorations up to the first-named year. The author supplies a condensation—or rather an epitome—of various journals, and we cannot help feeling that much of their interest is diminished by losing the original language and the descriptions of the hardships suffered by these heroes, some of whom lost their lives. The explorers well deserve this name who by their peaceful enterprise added a continent to the British Empire, and merited medals for facing danger on the plains of Australia at least as much as those who faced illness in the swamps of Ashanti. It is impossible to congratulate Mr. Calvert on his literary skill, to which, indeed, he makes no claim, but we can cordially commend his public spirit and devotion to the object he has so much at heart ; although recent information excites a fear that his sanguine hopes must be postponed. The expedition organized by him has proved to be a failure, and serious anxiety is felt regarding the safety of the explorers.

Sketches of Travel in Normandy and Maine (Macmillan) consists of some twenty-one articles by the late Prof. Freeman, reprinted from the Saturday Review and the Guardian, and illustrated by the writer's primitive sketches. They have the merits and defects of Mr. Freeman's contributions to journalism, and they will be useful to the tourist who is able to judge for himself. Mr. W. H. Hutton contributes, in the guise of a preface, a brief panegyric of the deceased historian.

Mr. Grant Richards sends us two volumes of Mr. Grant Allen's "Historical Guides"—Paris and Florence. Their aim is to help the tourist to the history and art of the cities he visits, while they leave details regarding hotels and omnibuses to the ordinary guide-books. They do not, therefore, come into competition with Baedeker's volumes, although they in some measure go over the same ground as Mr. Murray's handbooks. They seem, however, to deserve success with those who aspire to minuter knowledge than the ordinary tourist, as they naturally enter into fuller details than are possible to the red books of Albemarle Street. Mr. Grant Allen writes clearly and sensibly. Occasionally a too great reliance on such a treacherous authority as Morelli misleads him. The 'Apollo and Marsyas' in the Louvre should not be assigned to Perugino without any hint of a doubt as to the correctness of the attribution.

Mr. Heinemann publishes, under the title Romantic India, a translation by Mr. W. Marchant from the French of M. André Chevrillon. The volume is the record of a very short cold-weather tour in India ; but the author must have read up the Buddhistic and Hindu theological side of his subject before his journey or after his return. The work contains, among other clever passages, the best character sketch of a typical Englishman (or rather Anglo-Irishman) that we have come across. It is seldom, indeed, that a Frenchman shows so much power of describing a foreigner without partiality, but, at the same time, entirely without spite. The French author is thoroughly fair to British rule in India, although he does not express the extreme approval of all its developments which has marked the writings of some distinguished Frenchmen. Another interesting passage, though less novel, is one which describes the Hinduism of the minds of Shelley and of Amiel. One of the few mistakes which the book contains is the statement that the National Congress asks for an Indian Parliament. Some of the delegates may favour this dream, but it is not, we think, a Congress demand. The general attitude of M. Chevrillon towards the English of the missions and the English lower-class and middle-class residents in India may be expressed in a version of Kipling's well-known phrase—"Lord bless you! what do they understand!" The translator is, on the whole, competent, but over and over again uses "tent" for awning, with the most absurd results ; while "malediction" is not pretty, every-day English for a curse.

MM. Armand Colin & Cie. publish Dahomé, Niger, Touareg, by Commandant Toutée, an account of a journey on the Middle Niger, directed against the Niger Company by the French Government. The author claims for France the whole of the Middle Niger, to which the Niger Company asserts a right, and attacks the Company for habitual and universal violation of the stipulations of Berlin as to free navigation.

SHORT STORIES.

The Last Recruit of Clare's: being Passages from the Memoirs of Anthony Dillon, Chevalier of St. Louis, and late Colonel of Clare's Regiment in the Service of France. By S. R. Keightley. (Hutchinson & Co.)—The writer of historical romances could hardly find a happier hunting ground than the memoirs of the Irish Brigade, and it is strange that the adventurous and gallant soldiers of fortune have played so small a part in the fiction of the country which drove them forth—exiles for conscience' sake—into the arms of an enemy, to win her battles instead of ours ; and now that Mr. Keightley chooses a hero in Clare's famous regiment, he touches very lightly on its romantic history, and the adventures of Anthony Dillon owe their existence mainly to the writer's fertile imagination. The stories are all told by Col. Dillon, and are, in the main, well told, though he boasts too frequently of his descent from Irish kings. In the mouth of an O'Neill, an O'Donnell, an O'Brien even, such swagger is conceivable; but how can a Dillon, whose forefathers never saw Ireland until Strongbow's invasion, claim Milesian descent? As an exile and a soldier Anthony Dillon may be pardoned a certain vagueness in his country's history, but both he and Mr. Keightley must be aware that Anglo-Norman families never boast descent from Irish kings. We confess, too, that we are puzzled by the title of the story which gives its name to the book, for there were, surely, recruits to Clare's long after the sack of Rayonville; but the story (which is of the 'Bootles' Baby' order) is a pretty one, and as Mr. Keightley has doubtless read his O'Callaghan far more recently than we, our memory may be at fault. 'The Last Recruit of Clare's' is the sole pathetic story in the book; the others are thrilling, tragic, and bloodcurdling, and one, 'The Last Sacrament,' is revolting. The tales would have lost nothing by a little definiteness of detail. Mr. Keightley should remember that his readers are not newly steeped in the history of the Irish Brigade. Many will wonder when and why a French major was hunted for his life on Scotch moors, and later what was "this period" wherein the gallant officer was reduced to actual starvation. What had he done to fall so low that a candle should be "a luxury to which I had not once treated myself for six weeks" "on the last night—the thirty-first of December—of that most memorable year"? Again we ask, Which most memorable year? but nowhere is there to be found a date or a word of explanation, and we hope that when Mr. Keightley redeems his promise of collecting the further memoirs of his hero, he may remember that many possible readers have not the history of "Clare's" at their finger tips, nor O'Callaghan on their bookshelves wherewith to refresh a failing recollection.

"Tales of the Far East," the second title of Mr. W. Carlton Dawe's volume of stories called Kakemonos (Lane), is somewhat misleading, for there is little specifically or characteristically Eastern about them, except, perhaps, a certain air of burlesque improbability, the chief actors, in fact, being Europeans. There are one or two passable tales, lively enough, of masculine villainy and rollicking adventure, where the author is probably at his best, and others of commonplace intrigue or desertion, which might have been told of the slums of many countries besides the Far East.

In view of the title, In the Bight of Benin (Lawrence & Bullen), the contents of Mr. A. J. Dawson's volume are decidedly disappointing at the present time, when West Africa in general, and Benin in particular, are so much in evidence. The reader will probably look for some information concerning the Benin country and its people, their customs, history, religious ideas, &c., in place of which he is put off with a collection of very unreal and by no means amusing romances, the offspring of Mr. Dawson's imagination, written in a style by no means commendable. The author, who presumably has actually visited some of the places he professes to describe, has completely missed his opportunity. The knowledge he has gained of the inner life of the West Coast is rudimentary and imperfect. We cannot recommend him to try again.

Mr. W. Sharp's short stories, Madge o' the Pool and others (Constable & Co.), are excellent, and one of them is remarkable. 'The Gipsy Christ' is a horrifying adaptation of the old Kundry legend to modern times. The terrors of nature are utilized in a masterly fashion to prepare the reader's mind for a fit state of trepidation before the ghastly story is unfolded, and the end of the story itself, half expected as it is, is even then quite capable of producing a shock. The only fault to be found with the story is that the actual victim's narrative is somewhat overloaded with detail; by a little judicious arrangement and excision it might be made more direct and telling. In a different way 'The Coward' is also good; it is short and well told, and the effect is immediate. The title story of the book is the least effective; though the character of Madge is interesting, it seems rather hackneyed, and more that of a bookman's heroine than something quite genuine.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

We have received from Messrs. Macmillan & Co. The Statesman's Year-Book for 1897. We are happy to note the omission of some of the preliminary tables introduced last year for the first time, for example that of wine production. We still think that it would be well to retain certain tables for an annual appearance. Those of import and export markets which used to be given year by year were most valuable, and we greatly regret their disappearance. Some useful maps appear this year for the first time. Occasionally they make claims which are hardly to be sustained; British spheres, for example, are shown on the side of the Niger as extending far to the north-west of Say, and in the direction of Darfur as extending from the Nile almost to Wadai. The French have established posts within portions of the former; and our lease of the latter to the Congo State was denounced by France without any attempt on our part to maintain it, and the Belgian posts were withdrawn under French threats. The only error in the text which we had noticed since our review last year has been detected and corrected. The book appears to be this year as carefully revised as has been the case on previous occasions.

Vol. VI. of Eminent Persons: Biographies reprinted from the 'Times,' 1893–94 (Macmillan), contains excellent short memoirs of Mr. Blaine, M. Taine, Lord Derby, Sir Andrew Clark, Prof. Tyndall, Kossuth, and other well-known persons. That of Marshal MacMahon seems the least accurate, and should have been revised. For example, it says:—

"On his return to France after the close of hostilities in the East, Marshal MacMahon was ill at ease. Honours were showered upon him, including that of Senator, conferred in 1856, but he longed for a more active life. Refusing the highest command in France, he was at his own earnest solicitation sent back to Algeria, where he once more attacked the Kabyles, severely defeating them. Some years later, after his return to France, he cast his vote in the Senate against the unconstitutional Law for General Safety, which was brought forward at the instigation of Napoleon III., after the abortive attempt at his assassination by Orsini."

The Law referred to was passed, not "some years later," but in 1858.

Messrs. Service & Paton have added to their very cheap "Illustrated English Library" Ivanhoe and The Last Days of Pompeii, the former illustrated by Mr. C. E. Brock and the latter by Mr. Speed. It cannot be said that either artist is seen to advantage in these volumes. Where did Mr. Speed find authority for arming a legionary in the time of Titus with a spear?

Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Co.'s edition of Burns in "The Apollo Poets" is a worthy pendant to the other volumes at present issued. The glossary seems sufficient, but for the English reader it would be found more convenient in the margin of the text.

We have on our table Black's Guide to Bournemouth and the New Forest, edited by A. R. Hope Moncrieff (Black), — Thimm's Turkish Self-Taught, edited by Abu Said and Prof. G. Hagopian (Marlborough),—Pitt Press Series: Warren Hastings, by T. B. Macaulay, edited, with Introduction and Notes, by A. D. Innes (Cambridge, University Press), — History of Armenia, by N. Ter. Gregor (J. Heywood),—Armenia and its Sorrows, by W. J. Wintle (Melrose),—Aristophanes: Ranæ, edited by F. G. Plaistowe (Clive),—Pitt Press Series: Quand j'étais Petit, by L. Biart, adapted for Use in Schools, with Notes and Vocabulary, by J. Boielle, Part I. (Cambridge, University Press), — The Irish Catholic Directory and Almanac for 1897 (Dublin, Duffy),—An Outline of Psychology, by E. B. Titchener (Macmillan),—Education and Modern Secularism, by the Rev. C. W. Formby (Longmans),—Physics Note-Book, with Spaces for the Pupils' Drawings of Experiments (Macmillan), —A Few Chapters in Workshop Re-construction and Citizenship, by C. R. Ashbee (Guild and School of Handicraft, Essex House, Mile End Road), — Model Drawing and Shading from Casts, by T. C. Barfield (Chapman & Hall),—Dress Cutting and Tailoring, also French Pattern Modelling, by M. Prince Browne (Black),—The Daily Life of Women, by K. B. Sharman (S.P.C.K.), — A Bookworms' Birthday-Book (Dent), — Heroines of Mercy, by F. Mundell (S.S.U.), — Countess Helena, by M. Andrews (Gardner, Darton & Co.), — The Romance of Industry and Invention, selected by R. Cochrane (Chambers),—A Woman's Cross, by Mrs. A. M. Diehl (Digby & Long), — Abraham Lincoln, by W. G. Rutherford (S.S.U.),—The Pilgrim Child, by T. C. Elmslie (Ward & Downey),—Stories and Legends from Washington Irving (Putnam), — An Ill-Matched Pair, by Austin Clare (S.P.C.K.), — The Luckiest of Three, by F. C. Philips (White), —Ugly Idol, a Development, by Claud Nicholson (Lane), — Under the Naga Banner, by C. J. Mansford (Hogg),—The White Sledge, and other Tales, by F. M. Holmes (Sherlock), — Verses, Suggested and Original, by E. H. Lacon Watson (Innes),—Abraham Lincoln, a Poem, by L. W. Allen (Putnam),—Memories and Impressions, by F. Putnam (Chicago, published privately),—A Sunset Idyll, and other Poems, by Mrs. G. W. Paine (Hodder Brothers),—Posies out of Rings, by W. T. Peters (Lane),—The Royal Priesthood and its Offering, by the Rev. G. H. Whitaker (Ward & Downey),—The Kingdom of God on Earth, by R. Belaney, revised by the Rev. W. H. Eyre, S.J. (Baker), — The Arch of Titus and the Spoils of the Temple, by the late W. Knight (R.T.S.),—The Old Testament and Modern Life, by Stopford A. Brooke (Isbister),—A Sermon in a Children's Ward in a Hospital, by the Bishop of Wakefield (S.P.C.K.), — Rome and England; or, Ecclesiastical Continuity, by the Rev. Luke Rivington (Burns & Oates), — The Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges: Isaiah i.-xxxix., with Introduction and Notes by the Rev. J. Skinner, D.D. (Cambridge, University Press), —The Four Last Things, by the Rev. F. H. Carlisle (Stock),—Die Sprüche Jesu die in den kanonischen Evangelien nicht überliefert sind, by J. H. Ropes (Leipzig, Hinrichs),—Poèmes, by Lord Alfred Douglas (Paris, 'Mercure de France'), — Les Hors Nature, by Rachilde (Paris, 'Mercure de France'), — and Ueber fremde Einflüsse in der chinesischen Kunst, by F. Hirth (Leipzig, Hirth). Also the following Pamphlets: Robert Burns, by E. B. Nash (Paisley, Gardner),—On the Interpretation of Greek Music, by Cecil Torr (Frowde),—and Charity Organisation and Jesus Christ, by C. L. Marson (Scientific Press).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Bellars's (W.) The Essence of Christianity, Three Sermons, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Jones's (J. C.) Primæval Revelation, Studies in Genesis i.-viii., cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Moule's (H. C. G.) Philippian Studies, Lessons in Faith and Love, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Fine Art.

Hart's (Mrs. E.) Picturesque Burma, Past and Present, 4to. 21/ net, cl.

Jephson's (Lady) A Canadian Scrap-Book, Illustrations by the Author, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, sewed.

Robinson's (F. S.) The Connoisseur, Essays on the Romantic and Picturesque Associations of Art and Artists, 7/6 net.

Poetry.

Kersley's (G. H.) Nature Worship, and other Poems, 3/6 net.

Political Economy.

Bax's (E. B.) Outspoken Essays on Social Subjects, 2/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Nelson, Life of, by Capt. A. T. Mahan, 2 vols. 36/ net, cl.

Geography and Travel.

Rolfe's (E. N.) Naples in the Nineties, illus. cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Selous's (P.) Travel and Big Game, royal 8vo. 10/6 net, cl.

Philology.

Juvenal: Satires 11, 13, 14, ed. by A. H. Allcroft, 3/6 cl.; Satires 8, 10-16, a Translation, by A. H. Allcroft, 2/6 cl.

Science.

Crole's (D.) Tea, a Text-Book of Tea Planting and Manufacture, illus. royal 8vo. 16/ cl.
Evans (T. J.) and Pullen's (W. W.) A Treatise on Practical, Plane, and Solid Geometry, 8vo. 9/ cl.
Everitt's (N.) Ferrets, their Management in Health and Disease, illus. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hare's (H. A.) Practical Diagnosis, 8vo. 21/ net, cl.
Jones's (C.) A Course of Elementary Experiments for Students of Practical Inorganic Chemistry, 2/6 cl.
Kirby's (W. F.) A Handbook to the Order Lepidoptera, Vol. 5, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Sharpe's (R. B.) A Handbook to the Birds of Great Britain, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
System of Medicine, by Many Writers, edited by T. Clifford, Vol. 2, 8vo. 25/ net.
Thompson's (S. P.) Latest Dynamo-Electric Machines, 4/6

General Literature.

Akerman (P. B.) and Hurst's (N.) Triscombe Stone, a Romance of the Quantock Hills, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Brète's (J. de la) Fate's Fetters, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
British Golf Links, edited by H. Hutchinson, 21/ net, cl.
Bunner's (H. C.) Love in Old Cloathes, and other Stories, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Carey's (R. N.) Cousin Mona, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Clarke's (M.) Stories of Australia in the Early Days, 3/6 cl.
Davis's (H.) Angus Murray, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Dickens's Works, Gadshill Edition: Nicholas Nickleby, 2 vols. 8vo. 12/ cl.
Dougall's (L.) A Dozen Ways of Love, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Eldridge's (R. F.) The Kestwyns of Cather Castle, cr. 8vo. 6/
Gould's (N.) Horse or Blacksmith, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
Light thrown on a Hideous Empire, by an Oriental Widow, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Love of an Obsolete Woman, chronicled by Herself, 2/6 cl.
Mackinnon's (J.) Braefoot Sketches, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Marryat's (F.) In the Name of Liberty, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Marston's (R. B.) War, Famine, and our Food Supply, illus. cr. 8vo. 2/ sewed.
Moule's (M.) The Thirteenth Brydain, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Paull's (Mrs. H. B.) Knowing and Doing, Eight Stories, 5/ cl.
Phillips's (F. E.) The Knight's Tale, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Prevost's (F.) False Dawn, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Pryce's (R.) Elementary Jane, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Thorburn's (S. S.) His Majesty's Greatest Subject, 3/6 cl.
Wall's (A.) The Fall of Constantinople, an Historical Romance, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Wynne's (G. R.) Not Peace, but a Sword, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Yeats's (W. B.) The Secret Rose, illus. cr. 8vo. 6/ net, cl.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Catalogue Illustré du Salon de 1897, 3fr. 50.
Kohler (J.): Zur Urgeschichte der Ehe, Totemismus, Gruppenehe, Mutterrecht, 6m.
Molinier (É.): L'Histoire des Arts appliqués à l'Industrie du Cinquième à la Fin du Dix-huitième Siècle, Vol. 2, 60f.
Strassmaier (J. N.): Babylonische Texte: Part 12, Inschriften von Darius, König v. Babylon, 7m. 20.

Poetry.

Mistral (F.): Le Poème du Rhône, 3fr. 50.
Normand (J.): Soleils d'Hiver, 3fr.

Philosophy.

Brunschvicg (L.): La Modalité du Jugement, 5fr.
Dauriac (L.): La Psychologie dans l'Opéra Français, 2fr. 50.
Tarde (G.): L'Opposition Universelle, 7fr. 50.

Political Economy.

Brentano (L.): Agrarpolitik, Part 1, 3m.
Flaix (E. F. de): L'Impôt dans les Diverses Civilisations, Series 1, 2 vols. 15fr.

History and Biography.

Busolt (G.): Griechische Geschichte bis zur Schlacht bei Chaeroneia, Vol. 3, Part 1, 10m.
Grimme (F.): Geschichte der Minnesinger: Vol. 1, Die rheinisch-schwäb. Minnesinger, 6m.
Legras (J.): Henri Heine, Poète, 3fr. 50.
Maleissye (Gén. Marquis de): Mémoires d'un Officier aux Gardes Françaises, 1789-1793, 7fr. 50.
Pierret (É.): Les Amantes Célèbres, Correspondance Amoureuse, 1120-1874, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Bocher (C.): Lettres et Récits Militaires: Afrique et Armée d'Orient, 7fr. 50.

Philology.

Piper (P.): Denkmäler der älteren deutschen Litteratur: Vol. 1, Die altsächs. Bibeldichtg., Part 1, 10m.

Science.

Fischer (A.): Untersuchungen üb. den Bau der Cyanophyceen u. Bakterien, 7m.
Rebière (A.): Les Femmes dans la Science; Mathématiques et Mathématiciens, 5fr. each.

General Literature.

Bourguet (A.): La France et l'Angleterre en Égypte, 3fr. 50.
Laurenty (J.): Joie Morte, 3fr. 50.
Perret (P.): Madame Victoire, 3fr. 50.
Picard-Destelan (Comm.): Mon Droit! 3fr. 50.
Rameau (J.): La Demoiselle à l'Ombrelle Mauve, 3fr. 50.
Redelsperger (J.): Vérités bonnes à Dire, 3fr. 50.

AN UNDESCRIBED EDITION OF GRAY'S 'ELEGY.'

A curious and somewhat mysterious addition to the bibliography of Gray has to be recorded. At Messrs. Puttick & Simpson's there was sold three weeks ago a folio volume of eighteenth century pamphlets. Mr. Massey, acting for Messrs. Pickering & Chatto, was struck with one of these, and bought the volume at a speculative price. It was laid before Mr. Thomas J. Wise, the distinguished bibliographer, who has been kind enough to ask me to examine it. The hope was, it is only fair to say, that it might turn out to be a proof antecedent to the original quarto of 1751. It proves to be interesting, but certainly it is not so captivating a treasure as that would be.

The pamphlet consists of four leaves. There is not, and never has been, a proper title-page, but the recto of the first leaf contains the words:—

AN ELEGY
Wrote in a
Country Church-Yard,

and no others. The text begins high up on the recto of the second leaf (p. 3), and agrees in the main with the text of the first quarto, published by Dodsley on the 16th of February, 1751. In the absence of all external evidence, it will be important first of all to observe what discrepancies exist in the two texts. The editor's (Horace Walpole's) advertisement is omitted in the folio, and there are the following minute textual differences:—

Line 10, quarto, "mopeing"; folio, "moping."
Line 26, quarto, "they they"; folio, "they."
Line 33, quarto, "the Pomp and Pow'r"; folio, "the Pomp of Pow'r."
Line 64, quarto, "a Nation's Eyes"; folio, "a Nation's Eyes."
Line 65, quarto, "circumscrib'd"; folio, "unsubscrib'd."
Line 76, quarto, "noisless"; folio, "noiseless."
Line 84, quarto, "dye"; folio, "die."

In all other particulars the text of the folio agrees with that of the first quarto, even to the ridiculous misprint of "hidden" for kindred in line 96. It is to be remarked that of the seven instances of discrepancy which I have noted, three are nonsensical in the folio ("Pomp of Pow'r," full stop after "Eyes," and "unsubscrib'd"); these might be errors in a proof, afterwards corrected in the actual first edition, or they might be corruptions of a hasty copy of the same. They do not help us. But "noisless" is correctly spelt in Gray's Pembroke MS., and so is "dye." "Mopeing," on the other hand, was a peculiarity of Gray's. The first two of these, having been correctly given in a proof, would never have been altered back into error; nor is it likely that Gray would have gone the length of changing "moping," when once printed, to his eccentric "mopeing." But by far the strongest piece of internal evidence is the error in the quarto by which the word "they," in l. 26, has been duplicated. The non-existence of this in the folio seems to me to prove that the latter is the later.

There is, too, the strongest reason for questioning the possibility of Dodsley's having set up the poem in a folio form before the quarto. There was barely time for doing it. On the 11th of February Gray wrote from Cambridge to Horace Walpole giving the order; on the 16th the quarto was actually issued in London, for Gray had said, "If Dodsley do not do this immediately, he may as well let it alone." This would be quick work, even for to-day; in 1751 it left absolutely no time for experiments. The folio does not appear to me, either, to be struck off from any fount of type used by Dodsley; but of this I would not speak positively.

It would be delightful, of course, to be able to point to this folio pamphlet as to a sort of edition precedent to the princeps. But I am afraid that not a shadow of such a claim can be maintained. In my own mind I am convinced that what Messrs. Pickering & Chatto have bought is an extremely early piracy of the 'Elegy,' probably struck off within a few days of the publication of the first quarto, since it bears several of the familiar stigmata of that edition. But its text is wholly without independent value, and we must look at it merely as a literary curiosity of no intrinsic importance.

Edmund Gosse.

THE RECENTLY DISCOVERED FRAGMENT OF ECCLESIASTICUS IN HEBREW.

Trinity College, Cambridge.

Those who have studied this fragment, in the admirable edition lately published at the Clarendon Press, will probably admit that while it supplies much welcome information, it raises a considerable number of difficult questions. In spite of all the care and learning which the editors have lavished upon it, the text is sometimes extremely obscure, even where the words are quite legible. When to this we add that many passages are partially or wholly undecipherable, it will appear obvious that there is still abundant room for conjecture. In the hope of contributing, to some small extent, towards the elucidation of the document, I venture to offer the following brief suggestions.

Of particular interest, as throwing light upon the history of the MS., are the two notes in Persian, on pp. 6 and 24 respectively. The first is read by the editors, מי מאניד כו אין נא בינוסכתי אצל בוד איל[א] נאקול [מי]ז גופת, and rendered, "It is probable that this was not in the original copy, but it is used as a proverb." But the position of the negative נא in this sentence is very unusual; in the facsimile (facing the title-page) the word looks more like נ[י]ז, "also." Moreover, it may, I think, be doubted whether נאקול [מי]ז גופת can mean "it is used as a proverb." It seems more likely that נאקול is nākil, "copyist"; the use of ו to express i is certainly strange, but as the same sentence contains כו (where we should expect כי, see Lagarde's 'Persische Studien,' passim) we may suppose that this is due to some local variety of pronunciation. The note should therefore, as it appears to me, be translated, "It is probable that this also was in the older copy, but it was the copyist who said [i. e., composed] it." The second note in Persian is read אין נוסכת תא אורד בוד, "This MS. reached thus far." But whether we explain אורד as āwarad, "brings," or āward, "brought," the construction of the sentence is equally unintelligible. Probably we should read אודר or אידר, i. e., īdar, "here"; the word occurs repeatedly in the 'Shāhnāma,' e. g., p. 1748, l. 3, in Macan's edition. By this means the translation given by the editors may be completely justified.

In the Hebrew text, chap. xliii. 3, the word בהצהירו, which the editors render "by his shining," perhaps signifies rather "when he [i. e., the sun] is in mid-heaven," the verb being a denominative from צָהֳרַיִם, "noon"; this interpretation is supported by the phrase בצאתו, "when he rises," in the previous verse (marginal reading). Compare the use of azhara, "to be at the hour of noon," in Arabic (e. g., Koran, xxx. 17). In chap. xliv. 9 the words ויישבתו כאשר שבתו, "and have ceased as they have ceased," are very suspicious. Possibly ויישבתו may be a corruption of וַיִּשָּׁכְחוּ, "and they were forgotten." The Greek translator, who renders καὶ ἀπώλοντο, may have read וישחתו (i. e., וַיִּשָּׁחֲתוּ). In chap. xlv. 14 the context suggests that תמיד is a substantive rather than an adverb; תמיד, "daily burnt-offering," occurs in Dan. viii. 11, 13, xi. 31, xii. 11, and the omission of the definite article in the present case does not constitute a difficulty, as this is frequent in the poetical style.

In chap. xlvii. 12]'S can hardly be right. It would be a very slight change to read]'S, "how did there arise!" &c.

A. A. Bevan.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Messrs. Hurst & Blackett's spring list includes in the department of fiction 'A Flame of Fire,' by Mrs. H. R. Haweis,—'Broken Threads,' by Compton Reade,—'Without Issue,' by Henry Cresswell,—'Cousin Jem,' by L. Higgin,—'Camp and Cantonment,' by Mrs. Cuthell,—and a new novel by Dr. George Mac Donald. Messrs. Hurst & Blackett will also publish a volume of literary essays by Mr. H. D. Traill,—'An Old Soldier's Memories,' by Capt. S. H. Jones Parry,—a revised edition of 'Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson,' by Mr. Cordy Jeaffreson,—and a volume on 'Women Novelists of Queen Victoria's Reign,' by well-known writers.

Messrs. Skeffington's spring announcements include 'Six Original Sermons for the Queen's Commemoration, 1897,' specially written by Dean Farrar, Canon Hammond, the Revs. H. J. Wilmot-Buxton, J. B. C. Murphy, and J. Rooker,—'Hymns for Use during the Lambeth Conference and the Commemoration of St. Augustine,' by the Rev. S. J. Stone, Canon Bright, Mr. Chatterton Dix, Mr. G. Thring, &c., the tunes by Sir John Stainer, Dr. Wesley, Dr. G. C. Martin, and Prof. Bridge,—'Beginnings of the English Church and Kingdom explained to the People,' by the Rev. T. Moore,—'Everlasting Punishment: an Inquiry,' by Mr. J. R. Neilson,—'A Cornish Parish,' by Canon Hammond,—'The Book of Humbug,' by Mr. C. J. Willdey,—'The Dies Iræ: on this Hymn and its English Versions,' by the Rev. C. F. S. Warren,—'In Russet Mantle Clad,' by Mr. G. Morley,—several novels: 'As a Roaring Lion,' by Mr. R. Penderel; 'Sweet Irish Eyes,' by Mrs. Cuthell; 'God, Man, and the Devil,' by Mr. E. G. Henham; and 'Nell and the Actor,' by Lilian Street,—'Confidence, Enthusiasm, Determination,' a sermon preached at Sandringham Church in commemoration of General Gordon by the Suffragan Bishop of Thetford,—'Private Prayers for Boys, especially for those at Public Schools,' compiled by the Rev. H. L. Jones,—Vol. II. of 'The Life of Service before the Throne,' by the Bishop of Grahamstown,—'Parsons and Weavers,' by the Rev. F. B. Smith,—'The Holy Spirit of Promise,' by the Rev. J. F. Vallings,—'The Unveiling of the Eternal Word,' by the Bishop of Grahamstown,—and 'Comfort and Counsel for the Sick,' by the Rev. Giles Daubney.

THE REV. WILLIAM FULFORD.

The press has taken very little notice of the decease of Mr. Fulford, of whose literary surroundings H. B. F. gave the readers of the Athenæum an interesting account last week. Fulford was a true poet, and may some day be included among the dii minores of his age, therefore even a small bibliographical item about him, not alluded to in the above-named account, may be acceptable. In 1864 an advertising firm offered prizes of one hundred guineas for the best three poems received in commemoration of the tercentenary of Shakspeare. The subjects of the poems were left entirely to the authors, but half of the prize money was to be handed over to the Shakspeare Memorial Fund. The adjudicators, including Benjamin Webster, J. Stirling Coyne, Andrew Halliday, and others, awarded the first prize to Fulford, for twelve 'Sonnets' of great beauty. The selected poems were issued in pamphlet form, gratis, under the title of 'England's Bards,' and the acquisition of a copy of this now excessively rare publication first introduced the poetry of William Fulford to his admirer,

J. H. I.

HAYDON'S NOTES ON KEATS.

Castrics, Cockington, Devon, March 15, 1897.

The sale in London of Keats's original autograph of 'Endymion' adds greatly to the interest of the following notes made by his friend Haydon in my copy of the first edition of the poem, dated 1818, and still in its covers as issued. The incident occurred prior to publication. At that time Keats was just twenty-one years of age, and Haydon was about thirty-one years old.

My copy was first possessed by the artist, who wrote his autograph at the head of the title-page, "B. R. Haydon." Many passages he underlined, and at the commencement of the 'Address to Pan' on p. 14 he made a note, and wrote the following on the margins of pp. 14–15:—

"I was walking with Keats one summer evening in the Kilburn meadows, when he had just written the sublime Ode or Address to Pan. He repeated the whole in a trembling tone of feeling and nervous flush of cheek that kept me mute till he had done. I was impressed with its beauty, and I heard him, as Milton says of the angel, 'long after.' His manner and the music of his delivery affected me so touchingly, and still resounded in my ears.—Poor dear Keats! hadst thou never met Hunt, your fate would have been different!—B. R. H."

Against the lines on p. 8,

> Apollo's upward fire
> Made every eastern cloud a silvery pyre
> Of brightness so unsullied, that therein
> A melancholy spirit well might win
> Oblivion, and melt out his essence fine
> Into the winds,

he wrote:—

"How could Gifford be such a brute as to ridicule this exquisite passage?—B. R. H."

J. Russell Endean.

'UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.'

The author of 'Under the Circumstances' writes:—

"At the conclusion of an undeservedly kind notice of my novel 'Under the Circumstances' in the Athenæum of March 20, your reviewer refers to the title as being 'doubtful English.' Some of your contemporaries have not been so polite, and it has been termed 'ungrammatical,' which hardly seems the proper word to apply to it, and 'housemaid's English,' whatever that may be. But is it really bad, or even doubtful English? It is obvious that if the words are considered etymologically 'in the circumstances' is, at first sight, a more correct expression than 'under the circumstances.' But does that make 'under the circumstances' wrong? It seems to me that there are many perfectly good English phrases, such as 'under certain conditions,' 'under review,' 'under *sus*picion,' 'under notice,' a 'preacher under the Gospel' (Milton), in which 'under' has lost practically all sense of locality and means 'subject to.' This seems to be the view taken by Dr. Murray in the ample dictionary that he is editing for the Clarendon Press; for he says, 'Mere situation is expressed by "in the circumstances," action affected is performed "under the circumstances,"' and for the use of 'under' he cites as his authorities Dr. South (a seventeenth century divine), Steele, and Mr. Ruskin—not unpolished or slipshod writers. I myself, in the course of casual reading since the question has been raised, have found 'under' used by De Quincey, who uses it indifferently with 'in,' Carlyle, George Meredith (in the mouth of a character), and Charles Dickens (who I admit wrote 'Our Mutual Friend' and was not a purist), together with a host of other modern writers whose names carry less weight. I do not go into phrases in which 'circumstances' is used in other than a strictly etymological sense, but I note that in French Madame de Staël writes 'suivant les circonstances,' and I conclude by pointing out that if I sin, I sin in good company; by suggesting that I do not sin at all; and by asking for good authority before I admit that Steele, Ruskin, and De Quincey, not to mention the others, have written even 'doubtful' English."

TWO PROTHALAMIA.

Old Swan House, Chelsea Embankment, March 29, 1897.

As the writer of the article that appears to have given such extreme displeasure to Prof. Hales, I desire to make the following reply to his letter of March 22nd. The article stated—and quite correctly—that the only existing print of the 'Tale of Two Swannes' is to be found in the midst of Hearne's edition of Leland's 'Itinerary,' a work that to most people is inaccessible. Prof. Hales takes exception to the word "inaccessible," and says that even such an accessible volume as Murray's 'Handbook to the Eastern Counties' mentions Vallans's poem. Upon reading this I turned to Murray, expecting to find in it something about the poem, some remarks upon it, some passages quoted; but the handbook gives one no information, except that, in a short note, it states:

"The Lea, like the Thames, has had its swans—as appears by a 'Tale of Two Swans,' written by W. Vallans, temp. Eliz., and printed by Hearne in Leland's 'Itinerary.' The poem describes the voyage of two swans down the Lea, with the places by which they passed."

Beyond this, the handbook tells one literally nothing about the poem—not a word. It will be noted that the Professor does not question the correctness of the statement that the text of the poem is to be found only in the midst of Leland (vol. v.).

In the second paragraph of his letter the Professor—in undue haste to find fault—has fallen into a blunder, and a serious one. He commences, "It may be well to give the full title of Vallans's work: 'The Tale [it should be 'A Tale'] of Two Swans, wherein is comprehended,'" &c., and here he sets out a long passage of words that are not in the title at all! The full title of Vallans's work is simply 'A Tale of Two Swannes.' The words the Professor has tacked on to the title for the purpose of founding on them his portentous question, "Quid hoc ad Prothalamion?" are not Vallans's words. They were, in fact, not printed till nearly two hundred years after 1590, and then only by Hearne himself by way of introducing a copy of the poem into his own work. Surely Prof. Hales should have noticed that the words which he has added to the title, and which he has obviously taken from p. v of Hearne's work, were first printed at Oxford in the year 1769. "Oxford, Printed at the Theater, MDCCLXIX." is at the bottom of p. v. Hearne knew better than to alter the title, which is given correctly at p. viii of his book.

But as the question, "Quid hoc ad Prothalamion?" has been asked, let the poem itself answer it:—

> After a noyse in signe of passing joy
> A Swanne of Thames invites the King and Queene
> Upon a day prefixt, to see and celebrate
> The marriage of two Rivers of great name.

And the poem ends with the departure of the wedding guests when the marriage is over:—

> Which granted, everie one departes his way,
> The King and Queen again into their Lee,

just as the 'Prothalamion' ends with the words:

> Which at th' appointed tide
> Each one did make his bride.

The similarity of the expressions "Which granted" and "Which at th' appointed tide" is also not without significance, taken in connexion with the other facts of the case.

Next Prof. Hales refers to Leland's 'Cygnea Cantio,' which is a learned antiquarian treatise in Latin verse rather than a poem. Hearne himself says that it ought to be looked upon as part of the 'Itinerary.' It is certain, I think, that both Spenser and Vallans were well acquainted with it, and it is not improbable that the particular form of allegory they adopted was partly suggested to them by it.

The words in the opening lines (4 and 5) of the 'Cygnea Cantio'—

> Et spirat Zephyrus, novumque pictos
> Ver fundit vario colore flores—

have so close a resemblance to words that occur in the first stanza of the 'Prothalamion' and in the opening lines of 'A Tale of Two Swannes' that, judging from them alone, one can hardly doubt that both Spenser and Vallans knew them. That Vallans knew Leland's work well is pretty certain, for Hearne himself tells us that Vallans "was a man well versed in records (vir doctus ni fallor), an admirer of Mr. Leland," and he states that "our Bodleian copy" of Leland's 'Næniæ' belonged to him. But assuming that Spenser and Vallans both knew the 'Cygnea Cantio,' it is certain that the particular form of allegory adopted by Vallans, and afterwards by Spenser, is essentially different from that of Leland, as is the character of the two poems—the 'Cygnea Cantio' is a learned antiquarian treatise in the Latin language, not easy to be understood; 'A Tale of Two Swannes' and the 'Prothalamion' are poems in the English language of exceeding beauty, and both, so to speak, wedding hymns. Next as to what Prof. Hales terms the parallelisms. It would, of course, be idle to attempt to draw conclusions from any one or two of the parallels referred to. But the point that has to be dealt with is this, and it seems that the Professor fails to deal with it. Here is a form—a very beautiful form—of allegory introduced for the first time into the English language by Vallans's poem, and within five years of its publication another poet (Spenser) publishes a similar form of allegory, and one finds that in a number of passages, that need not be again repeated, Spenser has adopted the ideas and sometimes the actual words of the earlier poem.

It is not one or two things only, but the extraordinary combination that leads one to the belief that 'A Tale of Two Swannes' was wide open before Spenser when he wrote the 'Prothalamion,' and that, in accordance with a very common practice of the time, he founded his own work upon it—just as many, possibly most, of the greatest poems that have ever been written, have been founded upon the work of others who have gone before.

Prof. Hales refers to a well-known line of Horace, "Velut inter ignes Luna minores," as showing that the comparison of the brightness of the moon with the lesser brightness of the stars was no new thing. Of course not; one may go further back than that. Since the fourth of the days of creation the distinction has been apparent. The description of the "lesser" light of the moon and the stars is given us in the first chapter of Genesis, and it is not improbable that the description may have been in Vallans's mind when he wrote his poem. It is not because anything is supposed to turn upon the comparison between the light of the lesser stars and that of the moon that I referred to that passage in the two poems, but because the comparison by Vallans of the light of "Cynthia" with that of the "lesser stars," and the exactly similar comparison—in the same words—made by Spenser, appeared to me to point almost conclusively to the fact that Spenser had taken the idea from the earlier poem and its actual words. It would be interesting to know if it is possible to point out another instance in which any poet of a date anterior to Vallans has made use of that comparison—a comparison of the light of Cynthia with that of the lesser stars.

As to the charge Prof. Hales thinks I have made against Spenser, of appropriating without permission the work of another writer of his time, I have neither presumed nor would presume to make a charge of this kind. Upon this point I must content myself by quoting the opinion of one of the greatest of Spenser students and one of the most distinguished commentators upon his poetry who have ever lived, the late Dean of St. Paul's, Dean Church. "In the use of materials," says Dean Church, speaking of Spenser—"in the use of materials nothing comes amiss to him. He had no scruples as a copyist. He took without ceremony any piece of old metal—word or story or image—which came to his hand, and threw it into the melting-pot of his imagination, to come out fused with his own materials, often transformed, but often unchanged." These are the words of Dean Church; do they not seem exactly to apply to the use that appears to have been made by Spenser of Vallans's poem?

One word more, and I have done. Prof. Hales says that in his opinion the 'Prothalamion' certainly does not owe anything of importance to 'A Tale of Two Swannes,' and later he adds, Take away from Spenser all the things he is said to have appropriated; would the poem of the 'Prothalamion' suffer any appreciable loss? Well, let any one take the poem and run through all the passages in question with his pen, and then look at it and ask himself that question. In this and some other respects throughout his letter the Professor has gone quite beyond the mark. He protests much too strongly. His letter reminds one of the Queen's remark to Hamlet when—speaking of the performance of the Player Queen in the play—she says, "Methinks the lady doth protest too much." As to the date of the 'Prothalamion,' I stated that it was printed and published in 1596, and I had reasons for thinking that it was written, or partly written—except, of course, the reference to the Earl of Essex—in 1595; but the point is not material, and this letter is long enough.

Wickham Flower.

March 29, 1897.

Mr. Wickham Flower's letter in your issue of the 20th inst. on the resemblances between Vallans's 'Two Swannes' and Spenser's well-known poem is full of interest. It raises, however, a wider question than he could discuss, namely, the extent to which Spenser borrowed from his predecessors and his contemporaries. Of this, as with most great poets, there can be little doubt; and it is difficult to see why Prof. Hales should show so much annoyance when a further instance of it is discovered.

But is Vallans's poem as little known as Mr. Flower seems to suggest? Surely Leland's work is one with which most scholars are familiar; and it has been reprinted at least three times. Pace Prof. Hales, it seems to me Mr. Wickham Flower has proved his point. Nor is the Professor's criticism as to the date of publication of Spenser's poem correct. He forgets that the year 1596 began not on January 1st, but on March 25th.

A. B. B.-J.

University College, Bristol, March 29, 1897.

In the communications on the subject of Vallans's poem contributed by Prof. Hales and Mr. Harting to your issue of last Saturday I looked in vain for some notice of a very material question which I had confidently expected to find discussed in your columns on that day, and had, therefore, myself forborne to write to you about—the question whether Hearne, Warton, and Mr. Flower are not in error regarding the date of publication; have not, in fact, considerably antedated the poem. Doubtless the seeming conclusiveness of the evidence for 1590 blinded for the moment the critical faculty of your correspondents to the absolutely conclusive significance of a passage in the poem itself—a passage, too, that is given some prominence in the letters of both Mr. Flower and Prof. Hales—which, if a portion of the original composition, blows to atoms the whole structure raised by the former of these gentlemen, and shifts the indebtedness—if indebtedness there be in the business—from the illustrious poet to the obscure.

The passage is that which speaks of Hatfield. This passage must have been written when there was a Cecil who was not only Lord High Treasurer, but owner of Hatfield also, and when the transformation of the historic house from its earlier to its Jacobean form had progressed so far as to justify the writer in describing it as a "new and worthy seat." Now, no Cecil, unless I am egregiously mistaken, was owner of Hatfield till 1607, when King James gave it to Robert Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, in exchange for Theobalds; and no Cecil was both owner of Hatfield and Lord High Treasurer till 1608, when Salisbury was preferred to the office on the death of Dorset. It is clear, therefore, that the reference to Hatfield could not have been of earlier date than 1608. It is equally clear that it could not have been of later than 1612, for in that year the Earl of Salisbury died. The passage of the poem, then, that makes the reference must have been written twelve years at earliest after the appearance of the 'Prothalamion,' as was also, there can scarcely be a doubt, the whole of the rest.

What, then, is the date of the poem? I conceive it to be 1610. Considering that Cecil is represented to have begun the transformation of Hatfield immediately upon going into possession, this appears to be a more likely date than either of the two possible years that follow, and, considering that building operations were then comparatively slow, than either of the two that precede. And the simplest of all changes and safest (under the circumstances) of all corrections converts Hearne's and Warton's year into the one I am presumptuous enough to prefer. I have observed that no misprints are more common than those which arise from an interchange of position by two successive numerals; you have only to turn back a leaf or two from the note of Warton, vol. iii. p. 350 of the 1824 edition, which gives the date of the poem in question, to find p. 345 numbered 354. This note, taken from Hearne's 'Lel. Itin.,' gives MDXC. as the year of publication. Most of those, I am sure, that will take care to allow their due weight to all the facts I have stated above, will find as little difficulty as I have found in accepting MDXC. as a misprint for MDCX. made by the first printers of the poem.

It seems to me that there is but one conceivable way of escaping my conclusion and reinstating Vallans in the debatable dignity Mr. Flower has claimed for him—to prove that there was an earlier—by at least fifteen years—version of his composition than that which forms the text of Mr. Flower's disquisition.

James Rowley.

Literary Gossip.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish next month a biography of Gabriele von Bülow, whose husband, Heinrich von Bülow, was Prussian ambassador in London at the time of the Queen's accession. The book contains an interesting description of the Bülows' life in London, and Sir Edward Malet contributes a preface to the volume.

Messrs. Kegan Paul & Co. will bring out shortly after Easter a new work by Prof. Dowden, entitled 'The French Revolution and English Literature.' This work contains the substance of Prof. Dowden's lectures delivered at Princeton University during his American tour. It deals exhaustively with the subject, starting with a consideration of the precursors of revolution, and discussing the theorists for and against revolutionary measures, with especial reference to the attitude of Burke. Later chapters deal with the connexion of Southey, Coleridge, Wordsworth, Byron, Shelley, and the other master spirits of English literature with the French Revolution.

In the forthcoming number of the English Historical Review Mr. Edward Jenks discusses 'Fustel de Coulanges as an Historian'; Mr. F. Baring writes on 'Domesday and some Thirteenth Century Surveys,' and Mr. J. H. Round on 'The Earliest Fines'; Mr. James Gairdner concludes his article on 'The Divorce of Henry VIII.'; 'The Authorship of the "Book of Husbandry" and the "Book of Surveying"' is examined by the Rev. R. H. C. Fitzherbert; and Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Arthur Parnell has a critical paper on 'Macpherson and the Nairne Papers.'

The 'Romance of Isabel, Lady Burton: the Story of her Life,' told in part by herself and in part by Mr. Wilkins, will be published before long by Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. This book, as we have said before, will be the authorized biography of the late Lady Burton, and in it Mr. Wilkins has incorporated the fragment of autobiography which was cut short by her death. In addition to being a record of her life and adventures, it will contain a defence of Lady Burton's action in the matters of her husband's recall from Damascus, his alleged conversion to Rome, and the burning of the "Scented Garden," supported by documentary evidence now published for the first time. The book will also contain a large number of letters written by the late General Gordon to Sir Richard and Lady Burton.

The new scheme for the management of Doncaster Grammar School, which excludes Greek from the ordinary curriculum, and assigns six of the ten Corporation scholarships to boys from public elementary schools, also provides that the head master may be dismissed, "without assigning cause," by a two-thirds vote of the governors at two successive special meetings.

The Rev. J. E. Auden, of Tong, Shifnal, is compiling a Register of Shrewsbury School from 1798 to 1897, which will be published by Messrs. Woodall, Minshall & Co., of Oswestry and Shrewsbury.

Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen will shortly publish a translation, by Miss May Tomlinson, of Madame Darmesteter's 'Marguerites du Temps Passé.'

The Law Quarterly Review for April contains articles on 'Vacarius on Marriage,' by Prof. F. W. Maitland; 'Priorities in relation to Estoppel,' by Mr. J. S. Ewart, Q.C.; 'The New German Law of Unfair Competition,' by Mr. J. F. Iselin; and 'The Changing Status of a Married Woman,' by Mr. J. E. G. de Montmorency.

A reprint, from the originals in the possession of the New England Company, of some of the correspondence between the Governors of the Company in London and the Commissioners of the United Colonies in America, between the years 1657 and 1712, is announced as to be published very shortly by Mr. Elliot Stock.

The Publishers' Association had its first annual meeting last week, and congratulated itself warmly on the success of its efforts. It has discussed with the Society of Authors its proposed Bill for the amendment of the law of copyright, it has written to the Colonial Office to protest against Canada being allowed to infringe the Convention of Berne, it has prompted Messrs. Smith & Elder to obtain an injunction against Mr. Stead, and it has taken up the question of publication agreements. For the booksellers, however, it has done as yet practically nothing, and it is to be feared that in this matter the Association resembles the Concert of Europe. There is no real unity of aim among the publishers. Some of them, in fact, are afraid that the reduction of discount to the public will diminish the sale of their magazines, and are reluctant to make any effort to aid the bookseller to raise his prices. Consequently there is an obvious disposition to substitute for action expressions of sympathy, of which the bookseller has already had enough.

The author of the admirable translation of Shakspeare which is the standard in Denmark and Norway, Edvard Lembcke, died at Haderslev on the 21st of March at the age of eighty-two.

A Mädchengymnasium has just been established at Bremen, for which the necessary funds were provided by private individuals. At Munich, on the other hand, the Minister of Education has withheld his sanction from a similar institution, on account of the insufficiency of the funds.

The prolific Russian writer A. N. Maikow, born in 1821 at Moscow, has recently died at St. Petersburg. As the son of a painter of some eminence, he first devoted himself to art, but on account of short-sightedness exchanged this pursuit for a literary career. His first poems appeared when he was barely sixteen years of age, and since then his contributions to Russian literature have been numerous.

The Parliamentary Papers likely to be of the most general interest to our readers this week are the Annual Statistical Report of the University of Glasgow (2*d.*), and a Return showing the Extent to which, and the Manner in which, Local Authorities are applying Funds to the Purposes of Technical Education (1*s.* 6*d.*).

SCIENCE

Alternating Currents and Alternating-Current Machinery. By Dugald C. Jackson and John Price Jackson. (Macmillan & Co.)

As stated on the title-page, this constitutes a companion volume to the authors' work on 'Electro-Magnetism and the Construction of Dynamos,' being the outcome of a number of lectures given at Wisconsin University to the electrical engineering students. The volume is of a handy size (though it consists of 718 pages), and has a capital index. There are nearly 350 illustrations, all of the clearest description, and of a sort that are useful for the purpose of explaining principles rather than that of advertising machinery of this or that manufacturer. The style and letterpress of the book leave nothing to be desired. It is, in fact, a good specimen of Messrs. Macmillan's publications. Perhaps one of its greatest advantages consists in the manner in which the authors have given, in a complete form, all references to previous publications concerning each part of the subject. It is a matter of some wonder to us that any one has been able to furnish a complete résumé of all that is known concerning alternating currents and of everything that has been done in the direction of alternating-current machinery. The principal fault we find with the book is the unnecessary introduction of mathematics in some instances, though it may be urged that this defect is not nearly so marked as in certain English works bearing similar titles.

The first two chapters are excellent, and exhibit much pains in condensing a large amount of well-expressed matter in a small space. These are, respectively, on "The Electric Pressure developed by Alternators" and on "Armature Windings for Alternators." Then come two very lengthy and extremely heavy chapters—the one on "Self-Induction and Capacity," the other on methods of solving problems concerned with this subject, with numerous graphic illustrations, besides mathematical examples and proofs such as in several instances might have been turned to better account in an appendix. As at present placed they are well calculated to dishearten any non-mathematical reader at a comparatively early stage.

Chapter iv. is entitled "The Magnetic Circuit of Alternators," and deals at some length with Mr. Blakesley's method of working out alternating-current problems besides that of Steinmetz. Here, again, many numerical examples are given at full length—too much so, indeed. In this chapter, as well as in the preceding one, the authors seem rather to lose sight of the practical aspect of their subject, and in various places there are traces of mere theory rather than of facts based on experimental data. Moreover, unnecessarily complex instances are frequently introduced, such as probably never occur in actual practice. On the other hand, Profs. D. C. and J. P. Jackson do good work in bringing to light by graphical treatment the analogy existing between alternating-current vectors and mechanical forces or velocities.

The machinery introduced in the later chapters of the book is naturally of American type. Various tests of transformers are also given, besides a chapter on their design, and another on their efficiency and loss. Then follow chapters on "Polyphase Conducting Systems and the Measurement of Power in Polyphase Circuits"; one on polyphase transformers; and, finally, one on "Alternating-Current Motors." The last is not by any means exhaustive, but much important information may be gleaned from it.

The authors may be congratulated on their valuable treatise, though they sometimes evince a certain amount of childishness in unnecessarily rushing into elaborate mathematical proofs of special, if not unheard-of cases. However, as we have before said, they are not the first sinners in this direction, neither have they sinned so grossly as many other writers. Again, apart from this criticism, there is a great deal of matter in the volume to commend itself to the general reader and the student of electric light and power engineering.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

The scientific works in preparation at the Pitt Press include Vol. XII. of 'The Collected Mathematical Papers of the late Prof. Cayley,'—Vol. II. of 'The Scientific Papers of the late Prof. Adams,'—'The Foundations of Geometry,' by the Hon. B. Russell,—'A Treatise on Abel's Theorem,' by Mr. H. F. Baker,—'The Theory of Groups of a Finite Order,' by Mr. Burnside,—'A Treatise on Universal Algebra, with some Applications,' by Mr. A. N. Whitehead,—'A Treatise on Octonions,' by Mr. A. McAulay,—'A Treatise on Spherical Astronomy,' by Sir Robert Ball,—'A Treatise on Geometrical Optics,' by Mr. R. A. Herman,—'An Elementary Course of Infinitesimal Calculus,' by Prof. Horace Lamb,—'Theoretical Mechanics,' by Mr. A. E. H. Love,—'The Works of Archimedes,' edited in modern notation by Mr. T. L. Heath,—in the "Natural Science Manuals," 'Fossil Plants,' by Mr. A. C. Seward; 'The Vertebrate Skeleton,' by Mr. S. H. Reynolds; and 'Vertebrate Palæontology,' by Mr. A. S. Woodward,—'Handbook to the Geology of Cambridgeshire,' by Mr. Cowper Reed,—and in the "Physical Series," 'Electricity and Magnetism,' by Mr. R. T. Glazebrook; and 'Sound,' by Mr. J. W. Capstick.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—March 25.—The President in the chair.—A meeting for discussion was held; subject, 'The Chemical Constitution of the Stars,' introduced by Mr. J. Norman Lockyer with a communication 'On the Chemistry of the Hottest Stars.'

Society of Antiquaries.—March 18.—Dr. E. Freshfield, Treasurer, in the chair.—Mr. Read exhibited a silver dish with a figure of Dionysos, from the Hindu Kush.—The President also exhibited for comparison a silver dish of Persian work found in Persia, and a silver dish of Sassanian workmanship from India.—Mr. F. M. Nichols read some observations on a fresh correction of the date of the birth of Sir Thomas More. The discovery made in 1868 by Mr. W. Aldis Wright, in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge, of a book containing entries made by Sir John More concerning his marriage and the birth of his children, including Thomas More, led to a conclusion as to the date of the birth of that great man which admits of correction. When the date of the birth of Thomas More was compared with the calendar, it was found to involve a contradiction. The Friday following Candlemas, 17 Edward IV. (1478), was February 6th. Mr. Wright inferred that the child was born on the next day, Saturday, February 7th (in the early morning); and this has been accepted by subsequent biographers. There is another way in which the inconsistency may be set right. If the correction is made in the year of the king's reign, the birth took place on Friday, February 7th, in the sixteenth year of the king, that is A.D. 1477, and this error was one not unlikely to be made by John More if he omitted to enter his son's birth for some days after the event, as within a month (March 4th) a new regnal year had commenced. The dates of the birth of the other children show this to be the more probable correction. The second child was born, according to this corrected date, one year and eleven months after the first, and the third after a similar interval. According to the correction hitherto received the first interval was two years and eleven months, the second less than a year. The corrected date is confirmed by Erasmus. "When I first knew him," he says of More, "he was not more than twenty-three." If, as Mr. Nichols maintained, More was born on February 7th, 1477, he was in his twenty-third year in the summer of 1499. Upon Holbein's sketch of the More family (now at Bâle) is written "Thomas Morus anno 50." More was, as we now believe, in his fiftieth year from February, 1526, to February, 1527. Holbein left Bâle for England on or about August 29th, 1526, and probably he arrived in England about the end of September. Therefore the sketches for the More group may be attributed to the period between September, 1526, and February, 1527, when More, as we have now to reckon his age, was in his fiftieth year. Mr. Huth's picture, which is dated 1527, appears to be a reproduction of the sketch. The other inscriptions point to the same date. John More, the son, who was just thirteen years of age in the summer of 1521, would be in his nineteenth year in the winter of 1526, and that is the age attributed to him in the sketch. Ann Cresacre, his wife, who died December, 1577, in her sixty-sixth year, was in her fifteenth year in December, 1526, and is so described in the sketch. Margaret Roper may have been born between the summer of 1505 and February, 1506. She is described as in her twenty-second year in the sketch. All these inscriptions, therefore, either confirm or are not inconsistent with the date now attributed to the sketch. Mr. Seebohm cites an epigram of More in which he reckons his age at forty-one years. This epigram is not in the edition of 1518, but in that of 1520, a publication evidently consistent with its having been written between February, 1518, and February, 1519, and therefore with our corrected version of his age. One more confirmatory observation. Each correction of the birth date of More has made him older than before supposed, and therefore added to the probability of his authorship of the passage in the life of Richard III. reporting a conversation heard by the author in 1483, which formerly created a difficulty in the received attribution of that work.—Mr. Read read a paper on two hoards of bronze implements found in Essex and Middlesex, which were also exhibited.—Mr. Gowland added some interesting remarks on the results of an analysis of the metals found in the hoard.

Linnean.—March 18.—Dr. A. Günther, President, in the chair.—Mr. G. E. Lodge was admitted, and Mr. Wm. Martindale was elected a Fellow.—Mr. B. Arnold exhibited three contiguously-built nests of the chimney swallow, Hirundo rustica, having a continuous wall of mud as if built by one pair of birds; but from the evidence of the observer it appeared that there were two pairs of birds, and that one pair had made two of the adjacent nests.—Sir J. Lubbock read a paper 'On Stipules, their Forms and Functions,' supplementary to his previous papers (Linn. Soc. Journ., Bot., xxviii. 217 and xxx. 463). It was shown that while the usual function of stipules is to protect leaves in bud, in some cases they replace them, and in others serve to hold water. Instances were mentioned in which stipules developed into spines, and in other cases became glandular. Where stipules were absent, other arrangements for bud protection were found to exist. Attention was especially directed to the formation of the winter buds of certain common shrubs and trees, and some curious differences were noted even in nearly allied species. In the wayfaring-tree, Viburnum lantana, the author remarked that the young leaves are uncovered, but are protected by a growth of hairs; in the ash and thorn the outer scales of the bud consist of expanded petioles; in the willow the outer scales consist of leaves; in the poplar of stipules. The buds of the oak and beech were also described; and it was shown by the aid of lantern-slides that in the beech the outer scales of the bud consist of two pairs of stipules, that the twelfth pair are the first which have a leaf, and that the subsequent growth is between the leaves, while the portion of the shoot between the stipules scarcely elongates at all. As a consequence the seat of each winter bud is marked by a ring, and thus a series of successive rings, which remain visible for many years, indicate each year's growth.—In the discussion which followed, Mr. A. W. Bennett, Prof. Farmer, and Mr. A. B. Rendle took part.—Mr. W. C. Worsdell read a paper 'On the Origin of Transfusion-Tissue in Leaves of Gymnospermous Plants.' It was explained that "transfusion-tissue" is a special kind of conducting-tissue found chiefly in the leaves of conifers, in direct connexion with the vascular bundles. "Centripetal" xylem, hitherto only known to occur in the leaves of cycads among living plants, has been found well developed in the cotyledonary bundles of Gingko biloba. In these latter and in the cotyledonary bundles of Cycas revoluta a distinct transition was observed between the elements of the centripetal xylem and those of the tranfusion-tissue at the side of the bundle. In studying the structure of the vascular bundle in the leaves of conifers generally, a similar transition was also observed in a few genera between centripetal xylem and transfusion-tissue. These facts lead to the conclusion that transfusion-tissue, as universally found in recent coniferous leaves, has originally sprung from the centripetal xylem of the leaf-bundle of the ancestors of these plants.—In the discussion which followed, criticisms were made by Dr. D. H. Scott, Prof. Farmer, and Mr. G. R. Murray.

Institution of Civil Engineers.—March 30.—Mr. J. W. Barry, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'On Electric Lifts and Cranes,' by Mr. H. W. Ravenshaw.

Society of Arts.—March 29.—Lord Belhaven and Stenton in the chair.—Prof. Roberts-Austen delivered the third lecture of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On Alloys,' dealing especially with the alloys of iron and carbon in steel making.

March 30.—Sir G. Birdwood in the chair.—A paper 'On Lead Work' was read before the Applied Art Section by Mr. W. R. Lethaby.—A discussion followed.

March 31.—Mr. G. L. Hillier read a paper on 'Cycling, Historical and Practical.'—A number of cycles and cycle parts were shown in connexion with the paper.

Historical.—March 18.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff, President, in the chair.—Messrs. A. T. C. Pratt and J. Ballinger were elected Fellows.—Mr. Oscar Browning was elected a Vice-President; the Earl of Crawford, Mr. H. C. Maxwell Lyte, and Sir E. M. Thompson were elected Honorary Fellows.—Dr. S. R. Gardiner, the Rev. W. Hunt, Prof. Cunningham, Messrs. F. Harrison, J. Gairdner, and C. H. Firth were elected members of the Publication Committee.—A paper was read by Mr. Frewen Lord 'On Goree, a Lost Possession of England.'—A discussion followed, in which Major Hume, Messrs. Oscar Browning, C. R. Beazley, J. P. Wallis, and others took part.

Physical.—March 26.—Mr. S. Bidwell, President, in the chair.—Mr. R. Appleyard read a paper 'On Liquid Coherers and Mobile Conductors,' and showed various experiments.—Prof. Dalby exhibited five pieces of apparatus: (1) A kinematic slide; (2) An inertia apparatus with trifilar suspension; (3) A Wilberforce spring; (4) A Ewing's Reading telescope; (5) A kinematic hook-gauge.—Dr. Thompson exhibited two kinematic models depending upon the principle that any simple harmonic motion may be considered as the resultant of two oppositely directed motions.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Victoria Institute, 4½.—'Australian Aboriginal Art,' the Bishop of Ballarat.
— Society of Arts, 4½.—'Alloys,' Lecture IV., Prof. W. C. Roberts-Austen. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
— Engineers, 7½.—'The Rating of Engineering Undertakings,' Mr. P. M. Faraday.
— Aristotelian, 8.—'The Relation of Quantity to Number,' Hon. B. A. W. Russell.
— Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'London: an Appreciation,' Mr. W. Simms.
Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—'Animal Electricity,' Prof. A. D. Waller.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Recent Travels in Rhodesia and British Bechuanaland,' Mr. C. E. Fripp.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Electric Lifts and Cranes.'
— Biblical Archæology, 8.—'The Date of the Siloam Inscription,' Mr. E. J. Pilcher.
— Zoological, 8½.—'Myology of the Terrestrial Carnivora,' Drs. B. C. A. Windle and F. G. Parsons; 'Note upon the Minute Structure of the Teeth of Notoryctes,' Mr. C. S. Tomes; 'The Blue Bear of Tibet, with Notes on the Members of the Ursus arctus Group,' Mr. R. Lydekker; 'An Account of the Freshwater Fishes collected in Celebes by Drs. P. and F. Sarasin,' Mr. G. A. Boulenger.
Wed. Archæological Institute, 4.—'Inventory of Arms and Armour belonging to Thomas, Duke of Gloucester, in 1399,' Viscount Dillon; 'Aldermaston Church, Berkshire,' Mr. C. E. Keyser.
— Entomological, 8.—'Report of the Committee on the Protection of British Insects in Danger of Extermination.'
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Dairy Produce and Milk Supply,' Mr. M. J. Dunstan.
— Geological, 8.—'The Morte Slates and Associated Beds in North Devon and West Somerset,' Part II., Dr. H. Hicks; 'The Glacio-Marine Drift of the Vale of Clwyd,' Mr. T. M. Reade.
— British Archæological Association, 8.—'Notes on Middlesex Brasses,' Mr. A. Oliver; 'Notes on some Early Headstones,' Mr. J. T. Irvine.
Thurs Royal Institution, 3.—'The Relation of Geology to History,' Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins.
— Royal, 4½.
— Numismatic, 7.
— Electrical Engineers, 8.—'Recent Developments in Electric Traction Appliances,' Mr. H. A. Baylor.
— Mathematical, 8.—'On the Potentials of Rings,' Mr. A. L. Dixon; 'An Extension of a Certain Theorem,' Rev. F. H. Jackson.
— Antiquaries, 8½.—'Excavations on the Site of the Roman City at Silchester, Hants, in 1896,' Mr. W. H. St. John Hope.
Fri. Physical, 5.—'A Nickel Stress Telephone,' Messrs. T. A. Garrett and W. Lucas; 'Alternating Currents in Concentric Conductors,' Mr. W. A. Price; 'Effect of Capacity on Stationary Electrical Waves in Wires,' Mr. W. B. Morton.
— Astronomical, 8.
— Civil Engineers, 8.—'Poole Harbour,' Mr. H. Berridge. (Students Meeting.)
— Royal Institution, 9.—'The Limits of Audition,' Lord Rayleigh.
Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'Electricity and Electrical Vibrations,' Lord Rayleigh.

Science Gossip.

The contest for the Presidency of the Chemical Society has resulted in the election of Prof. Dewar.

The Chair of Natural Philosophy in Queen's College, Belfast, vacant by the retirement of Prof. Everett, has been filled by the appointment of Mr. W. B. Morton, of Queen's College, Belfast, and St. John's College, Cambridge.

Since the erection of the Lowell Observatory near the city of Mexico further searches have been made with its 24-inch refractor for southern double stars, and Dr. T. J. J. See has a paper in No. 396 of the Astronomical Journal, announcing the discovery of several new stellar systems. The most remarkable of these are α Phœnicis, μ Velorum, and η Centauri, discovered to be binaries, the first two on January 10th, and the third on the following day. The principal star of α Phœnicis is, according to the 'Uranometria Argentina,' of 2·4 magnitude, and it is of a deep orange or reddish colour; the small companion is of the thirteenth magnitude and purplish in hue. The magnitude of μ Velorum is 2·9; that of its companion is about 11, and its colour purplish; "this system," says Dr. See, "is one of the most extraordinary in the heavens, and is almost certain to have rapid orbital motion." The two stars of η Centauri are of 2·5 and 13·5 magnitude respectively; the colour of the large star is yellow, and that of the small companion (only to be seen with a very powerful telescope) purplish.—In Astronomische Nachrichten, No. 3412, the same astronomer communicates the discovery of three more close southern binaries, which have recently been found to be double, and are also of great interest as being probably in rapid orbital motion. The components of ψ Velorum (R.A. 9h 27m, N.P.D. 130° 2′) are both of the fifth magnitude; those of p Velorum (R.A. 10h 33m, N.P.D. 137° 42′) and of λ Lupi (R.A. 15h 2m, N.P.D. 134° 54′) are in each case a little above, and a little below, the fifth magnitude.

FINE ARTS

BOOKS OF REFERENCE.

A Descriptive Catalogue of the Maiolica and Enamelled Earthenware of Italy, &c., in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. By C. Drury E. Fortnum. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—Mr. Drury Fortnum's valuable work on maiolica was reviewed last year in the Athenæum (No. 3594), it is, therefore, unnecessary on the present occasion to do more than state that the introductory notice of the 'Descriptive Catalogue' epitomizes the historical matter contained in that volume. It supplies in brief form a considerable amount of information relating to the various wares represented in the museum, and will doubtless induce many of the visitors to the Ashmolean Museum to become possessed of the larger work. The actual cataloguing of the magnificent collection presented to Oxford by Mr. Fortnum is in all respects satisfactory; indeed, it may be truly said that it is compiled with loving care, as would naturally be expected from the eminent historian when dealing with a series of works of art, the collection of which has been for him the labour of a lifetime. All will admit that in producing the 'Catalogue' Mr. Fortnum has made Oxford doubly his debtor. Art of the high character which he has collected needs exposition in these days, even for university men. The 'Catalogue' will come into the hands of the directors and managers of the other provincial museums, and will surely induce them to furnish their own collections with similar useful aids to study. It is to the illustrated catalogue—and it cannot be too copiously illustrated—that we must look as one of the most efficient means of spreading a knowledge of sound art among our industrial classes.

The Art Schools of London, edited by Tessa Mackenzie (Sonnenschein & Co.), is a little book for which there must, we suppose, be a demand. It supplies brief notices of the principal art schools in the London district, and includes under that head all sorts of seminaries, from that in Burlington House, which supports itself, and of which the compiler rightly says that "to train pupils for the Academy Schools is an important object with most of the minor schools." It was humorously said by an eminent R.A., "There comes a time in the lives of ladies when they must decide whether they will go slumming to the East-End, or come to the Academy." But Burlington House is not to be entered in a hurry; accordingly, we have the Slade School and various establishments conducted by Miss This and Mrs. That, to say nothing of guilds and polytechnics in considerable numbers. The compiler has not by any means exhausted her subject, nor enumerated all the places of instruction in the metropolis. Nor has she supplied all the particulars which might have been given with regard to the Academy. She has, since the first issue of 'The Art Schools,' judiciously added notes on schools of music and dramatic and handicraft schools. If she thinks she can wisely continue this publication, it is possible it may be worth while to do so, but considerable additions are required.

NOTES FROM ATHENS.

The readers of my letters from Athens have had many opportunities for remarking the double character of the archæological movement in Greece, which deals on the one side practically with excavation, on the other, theoretically with a scientific comparison and explanation of the various finds. In both directions the efforts of native and foreign enterprise are united and displayed side by side. The General Ephorate of Antiquities, the Greek Archæological Society, the French, German, English, and American schools, and the various permanent or temporary archæological missions of nearly all the other countries of Europe are severally responsible for this international emulation in the discovery and investigation of the art treasures of antiquity in Greece.

The state of Greece almost directly after the country was delivered from the yoke of Turkey entered the lists. Already in November, 1829, under Kapodistrias, the learned Mustoxydis of Corfu was elected first Ephor of the National Museum founded in Ægina. One of the first acts of the Government somewhat later was to superintend the antiquities of the country, which by the decree of May 22nd, 1834, which also created the General Ephorate, were put systematically under the protection of the State. Three years later the Greek Archæological Society was founded, whose services cannot be over-estimated. The interest in archæological investigation in Greece now became general, and was not confined to Greeks alone. The first symptom of it was the foundation of the French School of Archæology at Athens in 1846, nine years after the formation of the Greek society. This is not the time to dilate on the merits of the French School, by whose side are now ranged as younger sisters the other foreign schools of archæology at Athens. The jubilee of the school, which is to be celebrated in April this year, will be the occasion for a retrospective record of its activity. Nothing, however, could show the vigour of this body better than the warm way in which native as well as foreign archæologists at Athens have responded to the invitation to an Archæological Congress there, and the interest they have shown in the proceedings.

To summon such a Congress was certainly a happy thought, if one may not rather call it a necessity. The invitations to take part in the convention rightly emphasize the reasons which led the undersigned to support it. The committee consists of M. Christomanos, the Rector of the University of Athens; M. Cavvadias, General Ephor of Antiquities; MM. Dörpfeld and Wolters, secretaries of the German Archæological School; Mr. Richardson, Director of the American School, and Mr. Smith, Director of the English School; MM. Wilhelm and Reichel, of the Austrian Archæological Mission; and M. Ouspensky, Director of the Russian Institute at Constantinople. The French School itself, which suggested the idea, is represented by its director, M. Homolle, and its member, M. Perdrizet. "Almost all sciences," so runs the invitation,

"have their international congresses. Classical archæology has none such, though the advantages a general and periodical convention offers are obvious. Information of new discoveries can be given; problems of method, teaching, the organization and division of the work can be discussed and generally agreed upon; no one can fail to feel all the advantages and pleasure which the learned will find in a mutual, personal, and intimate relation with one another."

No one can doubt the soundness of these reasons for the Congress. The only wonder is that no one ever thought of it before. To give justice where it is due, it must be remembered that some years ago it was proposed by the Greeks to hold such an Archæological Congress at Athens with the support of the State. M. Homolle is to be congratulated on successfully planning now what did not then get beyond a pious wish.

Athens was naturally honoured by being chosen as the first place of meeting for the Congress. "Athens seems by the superiority of her spirit, the beauty of her monuments, the learned activity of which she is the centre, to have been long marked out for such gatherings. The institutions and learned missions established there, together with the University and Archæological Society, represent, one may almost say, an international delegation."

The organizing committee of the gentlemen mentioned above has drawn up a plan of the Congress, which has been sanctioned by the Crown Prince of Greece, who is also at the head of the Greek Archæological Society.

The Congress will meet on the 26th, 27th, and 28th of April. Two sittings will be held every day. The place of meeting will be the French School or the University. There will only be full sittings if the Congress does not desire to divide itself into commissions. The register of the sittings, the reports, résumés of the discussions, &c., will form a separate volume.

The sittings will be of two sorts, devoted to learned expositions and technical discussions respectively. The following questions for technical discussions are suggested:—

I. On the investigation and preservation of ancient monuments.

1. Is it possible to arrange general directions for the methods to be followed in excavation?

2. What means can be suggested for the efficient preservation and protection of the relics of antiquity brought to light by excavation? On the propriety of refilling with earth the ground which has been opened up.

3. In what sense and how far is the restoration of the Parthenon and other antique monuments proper?

II. On the best means to lighten archæological work, and to expedite and make use of the same.

1. Plan of a yearly international report of archæological bibliography.

2. Plan of a Greek Ephemeris Epigraphica. Plan of a general Greek collection of inscriptions to be published in small size and at a moderate price. Plans for a collection of Greek inscriptions of Christian and Byzantine date.

3. Inquiry into the best means of publishing and reproducing epigraphical texts.

4. Plan for an international archæological nomenclature.

5. Attempt at a common designation of vase forms, or at a representation of the same by typographical signs.

6. Plan for a unified system of abbreviations and quotations.

III. Archæological instruction. In what degree and by what means can archæology and the history of art be introduced into intermediate education (lycées and Gymnasien)? What is the method now followed and what are the results it has yielded in the countries where this new instruction has already been attempted?

The above shows that the programme of the Congress is ample indeed; it is not, however, definitely decided, for the organizers reserve the right to alter and add to it. They may announce more time for the sittings, if three days are not enough. Application by those who wish to take part in the proceedings should be forwarded to the French School at Athens.

It is to be hoped that the Congress may give an incalculable impetus to archæological study, and it promises to be a source of genuine pleasure. The distractions which, after the manner of all congresses, will be combined with it, are not yet decided. It is not, however, difficult to imagine that a congress of archæologists on Greek ground, and at the best season of the year, under the genial sky of Greece, will afford the best possible opportunity for viewing the historical and archæological relics of Greece under the most trustworthy guidance. This promising return to Greek antiquity will also be enlivened by the revival of the reminiscences of the old theatre. The Comédie Française have already undertaken to play the 'Œdipus Rex' of Sophocles in the theatre of Dionysus at Athens, which is to be restored provisionally for the purpose. M. Mounet-Sully is to be Œdipus. Beautiful plans of peace are these, which will collect the enthusiastic admirers of old Greece in Athens if modern Greece does not continue to shed its blood to save its own honour and the fortunes of its brothers who are languishing in slavery.

Spyr. P. Lambros.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 25th ult. the remaining works of Bartolozzi from the Bessborough Collection, the property of the Hon. Ashley Ponsonby: A St. James's Beauty, and St. Giles's Beauty, after Benwell, 36*l.* The Months, after W. Hamilton, 73*l.* The Hours of the Day, after W. Hamilton, 25*l.* A Lecture on Gadding, after J. R. Smith, 32*l.* The Elements, after Albano, 31*l.* An Album, containing 150 Portraits, &c., 52*l.*; ditto, containing 100 Plates, 31*l.*; ditto, containing 150 Plates, 54*l.*; ditto, containing 100 Plates, including Bartolozzi's 'Elements of Drawing,' 33*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 27th ult. the following, from various collections. Drawings: D. Cox, A Hayfield, 95*l.* C. Fielding, A Sea Piece, with gulls off St. Michael's Mount, 81*l.* Birket Foster, A Landscape, with children at a stile with sheep, 111*l.*; A River Scene, with ducks, and children driving cows over a bridge, 162*l.*; A Lock Scene, Moonlight; A View of Cologne; and Cows Watering (three in one frame), 106*l.*; Children fishing from a Rustic Bridge, 86*l.*; Surrey Cottages, the china vendor, 58*l.* Sir J. Gilbert, Scene from 'Twelfth Night,' Act II. sc. iii., 60*l.* A. C. Gow, The Chess-Players, 174*l.* J. Holland, La Festa, Venice, 131*l.* W. Hunt, A Chaffinch's Nest and White May, 105*l.*; A Hedge-Sparrow's Nest and Primroses, 117*l.* J. Israëls, A Sailor reading a Letter, 73*l.* F. Tayler, The Blind Piper, 54*l.* R. Thorne Waite, A Harvest Field, with a church, 58*l.* Pictures: H. W. B. Davis, Scotch Cattle, 278*l.*; Cows and Calf in a Landscape, 215*l.* T. Faed, O Nannie, will ye gang wi' me? 180*l.* F. Goodall, The Holy Mother, 210*l.* J. C. Hook, Seaside Ducks, 525*l.*; The Thorn, 451*l.*; Market Girls on a Fjord, 262*l.* Sir E. Landseer, Hinds Alarmed, 525*l.* R. Madrazo, Coming out of Church, 325*l.* G. Morland, A Landscape, with two boys and a girl fishing, 168*l.* P. Nasmyth, A River Scene in Hampshire, 388*l.* E. Nicol, Amongst the Perch, 115*l.* A. Schreyer, Hungarian Peasants, 304*l.* C. Stanfield, H.M.S. the Victory (with the body of Nelson on board) towed into Gibraltar, 252*l.*; On the Maas, 162*l.* B. W. Leader, A Summer Flood, 288*l.*; Whittington Church, 210*l.* E. W. Cooke, Dutch Boats in a Breeze on the Dollart, 215*l.* E. Long, Peccados e Peccadillos, 126*l.* P. van Schendel, The Market-Place, Antwerp, candle and moon light, 136*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

We are sorry to hear that it is now extremely improbable Sir E. Poynter will be represented in the approaching Academy Exhibition by the picture we described as "probably" to be sent by him. Many and diverse occupations have frustrated the intentions of the President.

On Tuesday next, the 6th inst., there will be a private view in Guildhall of the City's Loan Collection of Pictures of the British School painted during the current reign.—During the present month there will be on view at Mr. Clifford's Galleries, 21, Haymarket, a "Collection of Pictures of Spring-Time" by Mr. W. H. Bartlett.

From the present time till the 8th of May inclusive may be seen at 2A, Melbury Road, Kensington, a number of accomplished water-colour drawings of views in Scotland, Wales, and Switzerland, and on the coasts of Europe, as well as flower pieces. They are the works of Miss Helen Thornycroft, and include a tender and luminous 'Poolewe, Ross-shire,' 'Pink Mallow and Harebells,' 'Orchids,' 'Field Poppies,' a broad and strong example, 'Lower Glacier, Grindelwald,' and 'Gloppen Fiord, Norway.'—Mr. E. J. van Wisselingh has invited all admirers of the art of Mr. Legros to visit, at the Dutch Gallery, 14, Brook Street, Hanover Square, an exhibition of pictures and drawings by that artist, including 'Femmes en Prière.'—Messrs. Hacon & Ricketts court inspection of fifteenth century woodcut illustrations at 52, Warwick Street, Regent Street.—Messrs. Shepherd Brothers exhibit early English and other modern paintings at 27, King Street, St. James's Square.

The names of Mr. Walter Crane, Mr. Campbell Dodgson of the Museum Print Room, Mr. G. Frampton, Mr. Bernard Partridge, and Mr. Frank Short have been added to the committee of the Dürer Society. The secretary is Mr. S. M. Peartree, 12, Chalcot Gardens, Haverstock Hill. The first portfolio will contain, among other reproductions, portions of the triumphal arch of Maximilian, the so-called Imhof from the Prado, the famous 'Memento Mori' from the Malcolm Collection, and of non-Dürer work, plates after Jacopo dei Barberi and Andrea Mantegna.

In the autumn the Berlin Photographic Company will publish a large photogravure of Rossetti's masterpiece at Liverpool, the very noble and highly characteristic picture called 'Dante's Dream,' to produce which the Company has special permission from the Corporation of Liverpool.

A portrait of Charles Dickens by Henri Scheffer (signed and dated 1856) has been discovered at Florence by Mr. W. C. Spence. It originally belonged to Dr. Beggi, who once resided in London and afterwards removed to Florence, where he died. The portrait, the identity of its subject being unknown, was purchased at his death by a dealer in second-hand articles. It was recognized by Mr. Spence when passing his shop.

The Hon. John Collier is to paint portraits of the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker of the House of Commons for the Benchers of the Inner Temple.

A grant has been made by the Essex Archæological Society for excavating the remarkable Roman building recently discovered on Mersea Island, south of Colchester. Circular in shape, and about 70 feet in diameter, this structure is apparently unique in character. West Mersea Church is believed to stand on the site of a Roman villa, and there seem to have been others about the mouth of the Colne.

The decease is announced of Dr. Sparrow Simpson, the amiable and learned librarian of St. Paul's Cathedral, to the illustration of the annals of which so much of his time was devoted. In 1873 he printed a quarto volume containing the 'Registrum Statutorum et Consuetudinum' of his cathedral; and he edited for the Camden Society 'Documents illustrating the History of Old St. Paul's.' In 1881 he published 'Chapters in the History of Old St. Paul's,' and eight years later 'Gleanings from Old St. Paul's,' and in 1894 he brought out yet another volume, 'St. Paul's Cathedral and Old City Life,' completing, as he termed it, "a trilogy." He also bestowed much attention on the history of the City parishes of which he was rector. 'The History and Legend of St. Vedast' he published ten years ago, and, in conjunction with his daughter, he privately printed another learned monograph on the same subject only last year. The volume overflows with matters of antiquarian interest.

It is proposed to form an antiquarian society for Nottinghamshire, to be called the "Thoroton Society," after Robert Thoroton, who published his history of the county in 1677. The society will endeavour to print ancient records relating to the county and an annual volume of transactions. Four dukes (including the Lord Lieutenant), two earls, one bishop, four barons, three baronets, besides the Dean of St. Paul's, the Mayor and Sheriff of Nottingham, and many of the local clergy and gentry, have agreed to join, and when two hundred members have been secured, an entrance fee is threatened. Lord Hawkesbury and Mr. W. P. W. Phillimore are the provisional honorary secretaries.

The French journals record the death of M. Edmund Charles Yon, the able and sympathetic painter in water colours of many brilliant and delicate landscapes, who was born in 1843 at Montmartre, Paris, and began life as an engraver, but contributed to not fewer than thirty Salons capital views of the Seine and Oise and similar themes. For these he obtained a Medal of the Third Class in 1875, one of the Second Class in 1879, the Legion of Honour in 1886, and a Gold Medal in 1889. He was a pupil of Pouget and Lequien, and, besides his productions in water colours, painted much in oil, e. g., his 'L'Eure à Acquigny,' in the Luxembourg till 1889, when it was replaced by 'Le Pont Valentré à Cahors,' which is there now. To the last Salon he sent 'Le Port de Cassis-sur-Mer' and 'Automne, vallée de la Somme.' Some of his works were exhibited in London.

The death is announced of M. Henri Guérard, a very accomplished etcher of still-life, fans, bric-à-brac, orfèvrerie, and the like, besides pictures. He was born in Paris, obtained a Third-Class Medal in 1882, and the Legion of Honour in 1893. Many of his plates have enriched the Gazette des Beaux-Arts. He was president of the Society of Peintres-Graveurs.

News from Crete reports that the museum of the Greek Syllogos at Candia is in serious danger owing to the present disturbances. Amongst its last acquisitions there are some archaic terra-cotta pithoi with figures in relief of mythological character, being the most remarkable pieces of this kind which have been found on Greek soil. They are still unedited, and their destruction would be a loss for archæological science.

At Konjica, in Herzegovina, the discovery has been made of a sanctuary of Mithras, the first which has come to light in the Balkan peninsula. In the middle of it is an altar of common stone, bearing on its larger surfaces two reliefs, which give us an interesting specimen of the Roman imperial art in this remote province. The scenes represented are the bull going to the sacrifice on one side, and the ritual banquet on the other.

We are indebted to Mr. Lefèvre for an opportunity of correcting an error common in France as well as in this country, to the effect that the birthday of Mlle. R. Bonheur is the 22nd of March. On her own authority it should be given as the 16th of March, 1822. The error is due to the neglect of the illustrious artist's parents, who omitted to notify the event in question to the Maire of the village in which she was born until six days afterwards. Our readers will be glad to hear that Mlle. Bonheur is in the enjoyment of excellent health, and works with unabated zeal.

The Museum of Bari has recently acquired a remarkable example of antique silver work in the form of a circular dish, having in the centre a group of two figures—a man standing with one foot raised on a rock and facing a seated female figure; they are in high relief. Round the edge of the plate are arranged eighteen masks. The underside of the dish is covered with scroll ornament of an elegant pattern, the ornament, together with the figures, being plated with gold. The art is that of Magna Græcia and of a period probably earlier than the objects of the Bosco Reale find.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Queen's Hall.—Lamoureux Concerts.—Promenade Concerts.—Herr Felix Mottl's Concerts.

Resuming our record of last week's Lamoureux Concerts, we have first to speak of that of Thursday afternoon. In this French music was solely represented by Berlioz's Overture to 'Benvenuto Cellini,' which, of course, was brilliantly played. There was nothing remarkable about the interpretation of Schumann's Symphony in D minor; and Wagner's Prelude to 'Parsifal' and the "Forest Murmurs" from 'Siegfried' went somewhat tamely. Weber's 'Invitation à la Valse' as orchestrated by Berlioz concluded the concert.

The second and most important of the novelties in the past series of concerts, a Pianoforte Concerto by M. Saint-Saëns, in F, No. 5, was produced on Friday evening. It was composed at the commencement of last year, when the composer was in Egypt, and was first played on June 2nd at the Paris Salle Pleyel to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the musician's first appearance as a pianist. It will, of course, be wise to speak with caution concerning an elaborate new work by such a master as Saint-Saëns, but it may be said with safety that there is much to admire in the Concerto in F, particularly in the middle movement, the description of which shall be given in French in the composer's own words:—

"La seconde partie est un façon de voyage en Orient, qui va même, dans l'épisode en fa dièse, jusqu'en Extrême Orient. Le passage en sol est un chant d'amour nubien que j'ai entendu chanter par les bateliers sur le Nil alors que je descendais le fleuve en dehabieh."

This section is charming, and the others show cleverness of no ordinary kind. We will not venture to say more at present. Perhaps it is not too much to hope that M. Saint-Saëns may at no distant date revisit London, and let us hear the concerto from his own fingers. The executant on the present occasion was M. Louis Diémer, who played with the utmost refinement and delicacy, evidently understanding all that was required of him. The symphony was Beethoven's in F; and after a familiar selection from 'Die Meistersinger,' an extraordinarily exhilarating performance of the Marche Hongroise from Berlioz's 'Faust' brought the concert to an end.

The final performance for the present took place on Saturday afternoon, French music being somewhat strongly represented. M. Vincent d'Indy's 'Wallenstein's Camp,' the first movement of a symphony, is undoubtedly exceedingly clever, but somewhat rhapsodical. The Serenade from M. G. Charpentier's suite 'Impressions d'Italie' grows upon acquaintance. It is a delicious piece of writing, and the viola obbligato part was played—as it was last year—to perfection by M. Bailly. Surely at no distant date the public should be permitted to hear the entire suite. The prelude to the scene "The Flight into Egypt" from Berlioz's unaccountably neglected oratorio 'The Childhood of Christ' was also introduced, but it is ineffective without the context. Weber's Overture to 'Der Freischütz,' Wagner's Prelude to 'Tristan und Isolde' with Hans von Bülow's ending, and the Bayreuth master's rather feeble 'Philadelphia Centennial March' completed the programme. It is pleasant to learn that Mr. Robert Newman has arranged for another series of Lamoureux Concerts, to take place in November next.

The novelty at last Saturday's Promenade Concert was the Prelude to an opera called 'Evanthia' by Paul Umlauft, a composer born at Meissen in 1853, and musically educated at the Leipzig Conservatorium, where he took high honours. We believe some of his songs have been heard here, but 'Evanthia' appears to be his most important work to the present time. The prelude shows Wagnerian tendencies and is somewhat loosely constructed, but the themes are not wanting in melodic attractiveness, and the scoring is tasteful. There was much that was good in the performances under Mr. Henry Wood of Dvoràk's fiery 'Carnaval' Overture, Mozart's to 'Die Zauberflöte,' and Ambroise Thomas's to 'Mignon,' and also of Liszt's 'Rhapsodie Hongroise' in F, No. 1, and the 'Walkürenritt.' To-night's concert will be the last of the season.

The popular success of Herr Felix Mottl's concert on Tuesday evening was in a measure unexpected. A programme illustrating "The Development of the Overture" could not fail to be instructive and interesting to students; but that the general public should assemble in numbers sufficient to fill the Queen's Hall for the purpose of hearing ten overtures, from Handel to Wagner, was at once surprising and gratifying. Commencing with Handel's Overture to 'Agrippina,' Herr Mottl passed to Gluck's 'Iphigenie en Aulide,' Mozart's 'Die Zauberflöte,' and Beethoven's 'Leonora,' No. 3. He then turned to the modern romantic school, and introduced in succession Weber's 'Der Freischütz,' Mendelssohn's 'Hebrides,' Berlioz's 'King Lear,' and Wagner's 'Der Fliegende Holländer,' 'Tannhäuser,' and 'Die Meistersinger.' This is a fairly good list, but it is by no means perfect. It is difficult to perceive why three overtures of Wagner should have been included, and Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms left out in the cold. But as the concert was so successful, perhaps Herr Mottl will see his way to give another of a similar kind next season, but with a revised programme. The performances on Tuesday were for the most part of a really high degree of excellence. There were a few slips, but only of a trifling character. At the next concert, on April 13th, Beethoven's Choral Symphony will be performed, with a contingent of two hundred singers from Leeds.

'LES TROYENS À CARTHAGE.'

The performance of 'Les Troyens à Carthage,' under the conductorship of Mr. F. H. Cowen, at the twelfth subscription concert of the Liverpool Philharmonic Society on Tuesday evening, March 30th, reminds musicians of a composer who, during his lifetime, was never properly appreciated, and of his music-drama 'Les Troyens,' which, with the exception of its production, under Herr Felix Mottl, at Carlsruhe, has been most unduly neglected. If it had been weighed in critical, we may perhaps say Wagnerian, balances and found utterly wanting, then there would be some excuse for ignoring it; but such has not been the case. Only a few enthusiasts went from London to Carlsruhe to attend the performances both in 1890 and 1893; thus the work is practically unknown here. It was a happy thought on the part of Mr. Cowen to give the last three acts, known as 'Les Troyens à Carthage,' for even a concert performance shows how interesting much of the music is on its own account; while many a page less attractive leads one to suspect that it only needs the stage to give it life and meaning. I cannot for a moment conceive that any reasonable objection will be raised to this form of presenting the work, for are not Wagner's music-dramas every day exposed to similar or even worse treatment — since only excerpts are given? Let us take what we can get, and be thankful for it. As to playing only the second part, or, if one must be precise, the last three acts, of 'Les Troyens,' that need cause no uneasiness, for the slight connexion between the two parts is made good by means of the famous Trojan March, connected with the bringing within the walls of Ilium of the moles equi which caused such dire calamity. Thus are explained the sounds of the Trojan March, dans le mode triste, which are heard as Æneas and his shipwrecked comrades present themselves before Queen Dido. Berlioz himself, for the production of 'Les Troyens à Carthage' at the Théâtre Lyrique in 1863, even wrote a special brief prologue, giving, in addition to the march, a picture of the dreadful scenes after the Greeks had taken possession of the doomed city. The music drama was curtailed in Paris by M. Carvalho, partly on account of the difficulty and expense of mounting the whole work, and partly, no doubt, lest it should weary an audience unaccustomed to such high-class dramatic music. At Liverpool length may have had something to do with the curtailment, but the thoroughly dramatic character of the music, as necessitated by the action, which renders it unsuitable for the concert-room, was probably the real reason for omitting the first two acts.

Act III. (first of 'Les Troyens à Carthage') opens with a stately chorus sung by the populace in praise of their queen. The music reminds one somewhat of Gluck, somewhat of Handel. It is broad and massive, and the Liverpool Carthaginians rendered full justice to it. After an interesting duet between Dido and sister Anna, in which the accompaniment plays an important part, the Trojan warriors present themselves before the queen and offer gifts. Ascanius hands over precious relics — the "jewelled crown of Hecuba" and the "veil of Helen." Announcement is made that Iarbas (despectus Iarbas) is approaching at the head of a large army. Æneas dons his helmet and is ready to fight for the queen. The music is exciting, especially the hero's war song, which is afterwards taken up by the chorus.

At the return of the victorious chief a fête is held in his honour. Here we have two delicious airs de ballets, containing delicate themes, wonderfully varied rhythms, and sparkling orchestration. These are followed by a strange, quaint "Pas d'Esclaves Nubiennes," with Eastern tonality and Eastern colouring; the composer has wisely made it very short. Before the fête is over Dido has fallen in love with Æneas, and he with her. After a clever quintet showing power of characterization follows the septet, which, even when the work practically failed as produced at the Théâtre Lyrique, caused a favourable impression. It is simply lovely: the tender, mournful melody of the voices is supported by most delicate orchestration. The composer is here in fine dramatic vein: he does not dwell on the situation (the voices are singing of gentle night and of the faint distant sound of ocean), but passes on without break—thus preventing any vulgar disturbing applause—to another gem, the love duet between Dido and Æneas. This could be transplanted to the concert-room and yet make good effect; the admirable manner in which it is led up to, and the dramatic way in which the soft sounds are interrupted by the appearance and solemn voice of Mercury, would, however, be lost.

The celebrated "Chasse Royale," an orchestral movement depicting first the sounds of nature in her gentlest mood, and then a terrific storm, during which Dido and Æneas are seen seeking shelter in a grotto,

> Speluncam Dido dux et Trojanus eandem is an astonishing piece of programme music. When heard recently in the concert-room at the Queen's Hall at a Colonne concert, and as a single excerpt, it seemed to produce very little effect. Here, however, at Liverpool, where it was admirably interpreted by the orchestra in its proper place, it seemed far more attractive. Nevertheless, it loses; with stage effects the music is quite wonderful. The quaint sailor's song "O peaceful valley" deserves mention. The closing scene between Dido and Æneas ere he leaves her is of great dramatic interest, and so, too, is the closing scene of her death, so impressive on the stage.
> Deveniunt,

The solo vocalists were Madame Marie Duma (Dido), Mrs. K. Fisk (Anna), Miss G. Izard (Ascanius), and Mr. Lloyd (Æneas), while Mr. Douglas Powell and Mr. H. Jones doubled some of the less important parts. The gentlemen entered far more into the spirit of their parts than the ladies, Mr. Lloyd singing magnificently. The chorus was excellent; orchestra and conductor deserve all possible praise. The work was thoroughly well received.

Musicus.

Musical Gossip.

Dr. Hubert Parry's splendid Gloucester oratorio 'Job' was performed for the first time at the Albert Hall by the Royal Choral Society on Thursday evening last week. The composer conducted in person, and an excellent performance was secured. Mr. Henschel, as may be supposed, did the fullest justice to the part of the patriarch, his efforts being equal to his impersonation of the titular part in the same composer's oratorio 'King Saul.' Two of the artists, namely Miss Anna Williams and Miss Ada Crossley, were unfortunately unable to appear, but their places were adequately filled by Miss Esther Palliser and Madame Emily Himing. Mr. Iver McKay was Satan, Mr. Daniel Price the Narrator, and Miss Hilda Foster the Shepherd Boy. Spohr's 'Last Judgment' was performed previous to 'Job.' The rendering, under Prof. Bridge, was exceedingly good.

A Schubert programme was arranged for the concert of the Royal Artillery Band at the Queen's Hall on Friday afternoon last week under Cavaliere L. Zaverthal. The scheme consisted entirely of works by Schubert, including the Unfinished Symphony and a selection from the 'Rosamunde' music. The band was quite up to its usual level of excellence.

Among the concerts of last week was one given by Miss Doris Dalton in St. James's Hall on Friday afternoon. Miss Dalton is an accomplished violinist with a good tone and a refined style.

A strong programme was provided at last Saturday's Popular Concert. It included Beethoven's String Quintet in C, Op. 29, and Bach's Double Concerto in D minor for violins, played, as on many previous occasions, by Lady Halle and Herr Joachim. Beethoven's Sonata in A for piano and violin, Op. 30, No. 1, concluded the scheme, Miss Fanny Davies being the pianist. She chose as her solo three of Couperin's clavecin pieces. Mr. Hugo Heinz was the vocalist.

Monday's scheme was not quite so attractive. The concerted items were Mendelssohn's Quartet in D, Op. 44, No. 1, and Mozart's masterly Divertimento in E flat for string trio, dating from the year 1788, when he wrote his three last and greatest symphonies. Miss Muriel Elliot gave a neat and refined rendering of Beethoven's not very interesting Sonata in F sharp, Op. 78, and Mrs. Hutchinson was heard to advantage in Nos. 4 and 5 of Cornelius's interesting 'Brautlieder.'

Mr. René Ortmans would seem to have a mission to produce the works of the French composer César Franck. At his concert a year ago he introduced a Pianoforte Quintet in F minor, and last Saturday his programme in the Queen's Small Hall was headed by a String Quartet in D from the same source. The general tone of this work is gloomy and restless, though it shows the hand of a first-class musician. There was nothing in the interpretation to call for remark. Schumann's Pianoforte Quintet in E flat, Op. 44, was included in the programme.

The second vocal recital of Madame Blanche Marchesi took place in St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon. This almost incomparable artist sang in three languages, among the composers represented being Gluck, Charpentier, Chaminade, Brahms, Schumann, Fauré, Widor, and Wagner. It is not the quality of her voice that makes the singing of Madame Marchesi so delightful, for, sooth to say, the timbre is not absolutely pure. But her method is irreproachable, and her singing affords an invaluable lesson to students. Further, she possesses the rare art of varying the "colour," as it is termed, of her tones, in accordance with the significance of the words. Her recitals are at once educational and enjoyable.

That sound and conscientious pianist Madame Frickenhaus played, perhaps, better than on any previous occasion at her recital at St. James's Hall on Wednesday afternoon. She gave an excellent performance of Brahms's early but fine Sonata in F minor, Op. 5, and a number of smaller pieces by various other composers. Madame Aimée Ferdinand and Miss Lilla Harrison contributed songs.

The first concert this season of the Westminster Orchestral Society on Wednesday evening was a distinct success, although the programme did not contain any novelties. Goetz's Symphony in F is now too well known to need any further words of eulogium, and what is meant by the statement in the book of words that, except for a performance by the Philharmonic Society in 1891, the work "has been apparently unheard of in the English metropolis," it is difficult to say. An admirable rendering of Max Bruch's beautiful Violin Concerto in G minor, No. 1, was given by M. Duloup. Mr. Walter Macfarren conducted his Overture to 'Othello,' and the concert ended with Schubert's Overture to 'Alfonso and Estrella.' Miss Jessie King was the vocalist. Mr. Stewart Macpherson's orchestra is now in capital condition, and capable of undertaking any music, however difficult.

The Carl Rosa Company has made arrangements with Messrs. Ricordi for the production in English of Puccini's highly successful opera 'La Bohème,' and it will probably be heard for the first time in Manchester very shortly.

It will be noted that there will be an orchestral concert at the Queen's Hall next Friday evening, at which M. Paderewski will play Schumann's Concerto and Liszt's in E flat. Orchestral items will be rendered by the Queen's Hall band under Mr. Henry J. Wood.

To judge by report—but, of course, too much reliance should not be placed upon it—Mr. Isidore de Lara's new opera 'Moina,' to which we recently referred, has proved highly successful at Monte Carlo. Whether it will prove acceptable to the English public remains to be seen.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Queen's Hall Orchestral Concert, 3.30.
—	National Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall String Quartet Concert, 7.30.
Mon.	M. J. A. Hugo's Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Rosa Green's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Stock Exchange Orchestral Society's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
Tues.	Concert at Trinity College, 3
—	Mr. Edwin Holland's Matinée Musicale, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Bach Choir Festival, 'St. Matthew' Passion Music, 7.30, Queen's Hall
Wed.	Mr. Philip Cathie's Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
Thurs.	Bach Choir Festival, Miscellaneous Programme, 8, Queen's Hall.
Fri.	Mr. W. C. Pepper's Concert, 8, Steinway Hall.
—	Paderewski Orchestral Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
Sat.	Bach Choir Festival, the Mass in B minor, 2.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Mozart Society's Historical Recital, 3, No. 26, George Street, Hanover Square.
—	Crystal Palace Concert, 3.
—	Popular Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Criterion.—'The Physician,' a Comedy in Four Acts. By Henry Arthur Jones.

St. James's.—'The Princess and the Butterfly; or, the Fantastics,' a Comedy in Five Acts. By A. W. Pinero.

That serious plays by the two dramatists to whom we are told to look for the regeneration of our stage should, in these days of farce and musical drama, have been produced within a week at West-End theatres must be regarded as of happy significance. In spite of the anxiety of a large section of playgoers to be amused rather than stirred, a taste for dramatic situation and contrast is inherent in human nature, and the apparent indifference exhibited of late to the highest class of work is attributable rather to inadequacy of supply than to infidelity or flagging interest on the part of the public. It remains true as heretofore that

> Quand on n'a pas ce qu'on aime
> Il faut aimer ce qu'on a.

Neither Mr. Jones, however, nor Mr. Pinero is seen in his latest play quite at his best. 'The Physician' probes our nature less dexterously than did 'Michael and his Lost Angel,' and 'The Princess and the Butterfly' has not the literary aroma of 'The Benefit of the Doubt.' Nothing is, however, further from our wishes than to crab the efforts of our younger dramatists by comparing their present with their past, and of other work of the class there is little or none to set up against them. The worst thing with which 'The Physician' is to be charged is that it is sombre and even a little painful. Mr. Jones has so far yielded to the general craving for the music of the carillon as to provide a happy termination. Had he done otherwise, who would rebuke him for bringing before us the serious aspects of life, and forcing our attention to grim and, it may be, unanswerable problems? The moral disease Mr. Jones depicts is dipsomania. He shows us a youth not intrinsically too worthy or estimable, with every conceivable motive to conquer his infirmity, sinking, in spite of himself, into a shameful and dishonoured grave. With this man he contrasts a physician whom accident converts into his counsellor and his rival. Both men, the drunkard and the physician, love the same woman, a girl who is betrothed to the former, and is in complete ignorance of his weaknesses or delinquencies. Two questions, moral and social—to one of them a recent cause célèbre assigned a painful publicity—are thus raised. The latter is, of course, What are the obligations of secrecy involved in the relation between physician and patient? the former, which, though more dramatic in aspect, is practically identical, What is the moral responsibility between the same men? If left to himself the diseased young reprobate Walter Amphiel will die. Is it the duty of Dr. Lewin Carey, his attendant, to hide his condition and to sustain him in so much vitality as will enable him to marry Edana Hinde, wreck her life, and leave probably by her a corrupt and tainted progeny? So far as regards the more serious aspects of this problem the answer may be left to others. The dramatist has painted the physician as himself burning for the possession of the woman who stands between the pair, and has made him loyal to the patient. This is well: the struggle that is presented is edifying and dramatic. Chance, who has no moral responsibility, disposes of matters. The girl learns of her lover's baseness, the lover himself dies, and the doctor wins his bride without any forfeiture of etiquette or of honour. On this painful theme, for painful it is, Mr. Jones has written a powerful play, which is likely to retain possession of the boards, and may stand beside all but his very best work. It is admirably played by Mr. Wyndham, Miss Marion Terry, and Miss Mary Moore, and constitutes, from the dramatic and the histrionic standpoint, a fine exhibition.

In the opening scenes a social satire, in the closing a work of pure fantasy, Mr. Pinero's new play at the St. James's is stimulating rather than convincing. It is not too shapely, moreover, the early action or absence of action being out of proportion with what follows. Not quite sure are we that the whole would not gain in significance as well as symmetry if the first two acts were compressed into one, and the exhibition of the follies of our gilded youth were excised. It is difficult to accept these as faithful pictures of any society, or to resist the conviction that they impart to the work an aspect of caricature which other portions do not present. Mr. Pinero's introduction is as long proportionately as that to a novel of Balzac's, and the space ordinarily sufficient for the entire action of a play is occupied by him before his audience has a glimmering of his purpose or meaning. In mentioning these things we are indulging in no complaint. Always bright, caustic, original, and interesting, Mr. Pinero never allows us to be dispirited or dull. Long he may be, long we are sensible that he is, but he is never tedious. "What did you think of my sermon?" asked, according to a venerable "chestnut," a light-hearted curate of his new vicar. "It was short," was the reply. "Yes, I am determined not to be tedious," continued the youth, only to be met with the growl, "But you were tedious." The revival of this long-slumbering joke, if such it be, serves to uphold the theory that length and tedium are not interchangeable terms. There was not a moment when a sense of weariness was felt. It speaks, indeed, volumes for Mr. Pinero's talent that we were sorry when his play, long as it was, was ended. Still it is not his best work. Its advocacy is ingenious rather than convincing, and it maintains a thesis rather than educes a lesson. So far as it deals with the question of years in love affairs, it puts forward views that we accept for the sake of the argument, but for that sake only, and it all but gives to exceptions the force of rules. It may be, and often is, the case that a ripe, courteous, reflecting man of middle age will win the love of a woman whom the vaunting, cavalier, self-complacent proceedings of adolescence fail to please. There is a tendency, we are told, though on dubious authority, on the part of the woman of forty years to pine for the energy and passion of youth. Mr. Pinero shows us the marriage of the matron of forty with the youth of twenty-seven. He does not thereby disprove the wisdom of Orsino's counsel—

> Let still the woman take
> An elder than herself.

The marriage of Mr. Pinero's hero, a staid, somewhat cold-blooded man of forty-five, with an impulsive gipsy of nineteen is a more familiar experiment, not necessarily unwise, but seldom unattended with risk. Before the opinion apparently held by the dramatist is established we want a sequel, and the best thing we can say is that we should be content to have it. Should Mr. Pinero say that he is upholding no view, the defence would not be quite satisfactory, since the entire action seems to point the moral that "youth is vain" and frivolous and selfish, and that, in a sense other than that intended by Molière,

> Du côté de la barbe est la toute puissance.

Still, we have no quarrel whatever with Mr. Pinero, and are quite content to take what he gives. In saying that the work is not his best we are judging him by the highest standard, himself. We can credit him, however, with no greater accomplishment in this instance than having given us an agreeable, intellectual, disputacious, and rather nondescript entertainment, which is so good we would fain have it better. His fourth act is quite delightful, and stirs the pulses of the public. There is a very obvious lesson in that which we commend to Mr. Pinero. The acting is creditable to English art. Four performances stand out conspicuous in excellence, though in one case at least the author is, perhaps, more responsible than the exponent. These are the Sir George Lamorant of Mr. Alexander, the Mr. St. Roche of Mr. Esmond, the Lady Ringstead of Miss Rose Leclercq, and the Fay Zuliani of Miss Fay Davis. Other parts are prettily played, and the mise en scène constitutes an attraction in itself. Miss Neilson as the Princess of Pannonia is not quite at her best. It is, perhaps, scarcely fair to call on her to play a woman of forty.

Dramatic Gossip.

In 'The Seats of the Mighty,' with which on the 28th of April it is hoped Her Majesty's Theatre will open, Mr. Tree will repeat his performance of Doltaire given in America. Mrs. Tree will play the part of Madame Cournal, first taken by Miss Janette Steer, who will now appear as Madame de Pompadour. Mr. Lewis Waller will be once more Capt. Moray, and Mr. Lionel Brough, Gobard.

Soon after the opening of Her Majesty's Theatre Mr. Tree will produce at an afternoon representation ''Chand d'Habits,' a one-act musical play without words by M. Catulle Mendès, with M. C. Séverin in his original part of Pierrot, Madame Zanfretta as the heroine, a leading dancer at the Opera, Mr. C. Lauri as the Marchand d'Habits (Old Clo'), and M. Zanfretta as the Vicomte.

The performance of 'Madame Sans Gêne' at the Lyceum is now fixed for next Saturday. It is to be hoped that no further postponement will be rendered necessary.

Miss Julia Arthur, who in consequence of a sprain has been absent from the bill at the Lyceum, has resumed her part of Lady Anne, taken during her absence by Miss Lena Ashwell.

An appearance of abrupt stoppage was presented by the withdrawal of 'Nelson's Enchantress' from the Avenue. In fact, however, Mr Forbes Robertson's engagement at Dublin (where he has since appeared) had long been fixed, and if the representations of the play had continued another Nelson would have had to be found.

The Avenue Theatre will, it is said, reopen shortly with a farcical comedy by Mr. G. Mayer.

Mlle. Jeanne May promises a four weeks' season at the Royalty, to begin next month. Her repertory will include 'Pauvre Enfant,' a comedy of her own composition.

An attempt is being made to secure a London theatre for the presentation of the Manchester revival of 'Antony and Cleopatra.'

On April 17th the Strand Theatre will witness the reproduction, by Mr. Arthur Bourchier, of 'The Queen's Proctor,' first seen at the Royalty. Miss Violet Vanbrugh will resume her original part of Stella.

The programme put forward by Mr. Benson for what is called the Shakspeare week at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, consists of 'The Tempest,' 'The Merry Wives of Windsor,' 'As You Like It,' 'Henry V.,' and 'Romeo and Juliet.'

'The Daughters of Babylon' will be withdrawn on Saturday next from the Lyric, and the house will remain closed until the 17th, to reopen with 'The Manxman.'

'Lost, Stolen, or Strayed,' a piece by Mr. Cheever Goodwin, which has been favourably received in America, is in rehearsal at the Duke of York's.

The centenary of the birth of Alfred de Vigny was celebrated at the Comédie Française by the recital of various verses of his, and a performance of a one-act trifle by him, 'Quitte pour la Peur.'

Mr. Fairman Ordish writes:—

"The announcement of Sir Walter Besant's forthcoming plea for a Shakspeare celebration chimes in very happily with a scheme which has been initiated with a similar object. It is proposed that the committee which is reorganizing the London Topographical Society should, after the election of the Council of the new society, be formed into a special committee for making arrangements for a celebration of Shakspeare's connexion with London. Hitherto the intimate relation between Shakspeare and London, where he lived and accomplished the work of his life, has been singularly overlooked. The committee will consider steps to be taken (a) to secure the erection of a suitable Shakspeare memorial in London, (b) to organize a yearly commemoration of the poet's birthday in London. Should these objects commend themselves to Sir Walter Besant, we may, perhaps, hope that he will confer the power of his name and pen upon this movement. London is, in a sense, the centre of the English-speaking race, and it may be suggested that a successful celebration here might call into existence similar movements in Britain beyond the seas. This offers itself as a practical means towards a simultaneous celebration in all parts of the world."

Mr. Ordish's book, we may add, on 'Shakspeare's London' is now in the printer's hands. The book is an account, not only of London in Shakspeare's time, but of the Elizabethan stage.

A Correspondent writes:—

"I notice in your 'Dramatic Gossip' you mention that Phelps played in 'Julius Cæsar' in 1846. May I mention that Phelps also played the character of Brutus in 'Julius Cæsar' during his season at Sadler's Wells, 1856-57, and that I am one of the few that saw him enact that character?"

To Correspondents.—G. E.—C. E. S.—W. T. W.—received.

F. L.—No review has appeared.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

IMPORTANT NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

MR. HORNUNG'S NEW NOVEL.

MY LORD DUKE, by E. W. HORNUNG, Author of 'The Rogue's March,' &c., will be published shortly, price 6s.

NOTICE.—ILL-GOTTEN GOLD: the Story of a Great Wrong and a Great Revenge, by W. G. TARBET, will be published during April, price 6s.

NOTICE.—ROGUES of the "FIERY CROSS," by S. WALKEY, Author of 'In Quest of Sheba's Treasure,' &c., will be shortly issued, price 5s.

MR. STOCKTON'S NEW WORK.

A STORY-TELLER'S PACK, by FRANK STOCKTON, Author of 'The Adventures of Captain Horn,' 'Rudder Grange,' &c., will be ready shortly, price 6s.

THIRTY-FIFTH THOUSAND, price 6s.

SENTIMENTAL TOMMY.

By J. M. BARRIE.

The St. James's Gazette says:—"Exceedingly fascinating and delightful."

The Academy says:—"We have laughed, we have wept; we have on occasion hardly known whether to laugh or to weep; we have been captured at the beginning, and held to the end."

The Daily Chronicle says:—"Mr. Barrie's new contribution to the annals of Thrums comprises some of his finest imaginings of human life and ironical destiny, and some of the most charming studies of boy-nature and girl-nature to be found in English fiction."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Little Minister (Illustrated). 6s.

THIRD EDITION, price 6s.

A PURITAN'S WIFE.

By MAX PEMBERTON.

The British Weekly says:—"'A Puritan's Wife' is without question Mr. Pemberton's best story. The descriptions of plague-stricken London remind us of the vivid pictures of Defoe. The heroine, Lady Marjorie, wins the reader's affection from the beginning. Israel Wolfe is the most original and powerful character which Mr. Pemberton has ever drawn."

OTHER WORKS BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Impregnable City. 6s.
The Sea Wolves. 6s.
The Iron Pirate. 5s.
The Little Huguenot. 1s. 4d.

SECOND EDITION, price 6s.

WHAT CHEER!

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"There is something always fresh and invigorating about Mr. Clark Russell's sea stories, and his latest contribution to fiction of that class has all his best characteristics, and cannot fail to attract a wide circle of readers."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

List, ye Landsmen! Cheap Edition. 3s. 6d.

SECOND EDITION, price 6s.

THE ROGUE'S MARCH.

By E. W. HORNUNG.

Mr. James Payn in the Illustrated London News says:—"We have had, so far as I know, no one on whom the mantle of Charles Reade can be said to have fallen. In the author of 'A Rogue's March' we seem to have found him. He has similar thoughts and virtues; the same vigour and earnestness, the same contempt for probabilities when a dramatic situation seems desirable, the same belief in good in everybody, and the same absence of humour."

Sketch.—"'The Rogue's March' may be commended without the least reservation as a most spirited and interesting story, admirably told and without a dull page from cover to cover."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Tiny Luttrell. 6s.

WORKS BY STANLEY WEYMAN.

THE MAN IN BLACK.

Price 3s. 6d.

"A short story which we cannot but think must have charmed Victor Hugo himself."—Saturday Review.

THE STORY OF FRANCIS CLUDDE.

Price 6s.

"There is one book among all these new books which kept a weary reviewer from his bed. That book is 'Francis Cludde.'"—Mr. Andrew Lang in the New Review.

FROM THE MEMOIRS OF A MINISTER OF FRANCE.

Price 6s.

"A most agreeable and fascinating book, worthy of the author of 'The Gentleman of France,' than which there can be no higher praise."—Scotsman.

CHEAP EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.

THE REPUTATION OF GEORGE SAXON, and other Stories.

By MORLEY ROBERTS.

Price 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Roberts possesses a vigorous pen, a lively imagination, and a crystallization of idea, which augur well for his future as well as his present success. No one will regret making the acquaintance of Mr. Roberts, and most people will desire to renew it."—Daily Telegraph.

THE ADMIRABLE LADY BIDDY FANE.

By FRANK BARRETT.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations. Price 3s. 6d.

"A tale of adventure than which we have read few more thrilling, and it may possibly rank even above 'Alan Quatermain.'"—Athenæum.

POMONA'S TRAVELS.

By FRANK R. STOCKTON.

Illustrated. Price 3s. 6d.

"Written with the happy blending of quaint naïveté and saturnine humour that is a familiar and ever-entertaining characteristic of Mr. Frank Stockton's fictional works."
Daily Telegraph.

LIST, YE LANDSMEN!

A Romance of Incident.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

Price 3s. 6d.

"Never has he more cunningly contrived a tale full of romance and adventure. The breeze in which he delights rushes through his descriptions of wild plotting."—Globe.

"The new edition of Dr. Brewer's 'Dictionary of Phrase and Fable' was, in a manner, his legacy to posterity, and he spared no pains with it, and made it virtually a new work on the old lines. The indispensable companion of every writer, reader, and lover of books."
Daily News, March 8th, 1897.

ENTIRELY NEW AND REVISED EDITION, GREATLY ENLARGED.

DICTIONARY OF PHRASE AND FABLE.

Giving the Derivation, Source, or Origin of Common Phrases, Allusions, and Words that have a Tale to Tell. To which is added a Concise Bibliography of English Literature.

By the late E. COBHAM BREWER, LL.D.

(103rd Thousand.)

Complete in 1 vol. 1440 pp. cloth, price 10s. 6d.

CHEAP EDITION now ready, price 5s.

CASSELL'S CONCISE CYCLOPÆDIA.

With about 600 Illustrations.

"Marked success has attended the first attempt made to produce in a single volume a cyclopædia embracing all classes of subjects. In the 1340 pages of which 'Cassell's Concise Cyclopædia' consists, nearly 12,000 articles are given on mythological, historical, biographical, geographical, topographical, scientific, and technical matters. The 'Cyclopædia' places within reach of the people a really first-class book of reference on subjects of general interest."
Daily Chronicle.

CHEAP EDITION now ready, cloth, price 10s. 6d.

THE STORY OF THE HEAVENS.

By Sir ROBERT STAWELL BALL, LL.D. F.R.S. F.R.A.S.,

Lowndean Professor of Astronomy in the University of Cambridge.

Illustrated by Chromo Plates and Wood Engravings.

COMPLETION OF THE POPULAR EDITION OF CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY.

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Edited by P. MARTIN DUNCAN, F.R.S.

With about 2,000 Illustrations.

CHEAP EDITION.

Three Double Volumes, containing 2500 pages, extra crown 4to. bound in cloth, 6s. each.

 A Special Feature of this CHEAP EDITION is a series of Plates prepared from Photographs of latest examples in the Zoological Gardens, London, expressly taken for this issue.

NOTICE.—The Sixth and Concluding Volume of SOCIAL ENGLAND, embracing the Period from the Battle of Waterloo to the General Election of 1885, will be published shortly, price 18s.

THE NEW IMPORTANT ILLUSTRATED WORK ON THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.
Volume I. ready shortly, price 6s.

The CHURCH of ENGLAND. A History for the People. By the Very Rev. H. D. M. SPENCE, D.D., Dean of Gloucester. Beautifully illustrated throughout with Copies of celebrated Pictures by Great Artists, Photographic Views and Sketches of Places connected with the History of the Church, Facsimile Copies of MSS. and Documents, and Reproductions of Objects of Historic Interest, Original Illustrations expressly prepared by well-known Artists of the day, and Maps, &c. [To be completed in Four Volumes.

CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited, London, Paris, and Melbourne.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

OUIDA'S NEW NOVEL.

THE MASSARENES.

SECOND EDITION.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

FIRST NOTICE.

Mr. W. L. Courtney in the DAILY TELEGRAPH, March 31, 1897:—

"Ouida has written an extremely interesting narrative.....She has chosen to depict modern society as it has come to be in its latest phases.....In one sense the novel is a satire on the new plutocracy; in another sense it is a brilliant picture of a contemporary mania.....Apart from the main thread of the narrative there is a wonderful variety of scenes and characters, each with an attractiveness of its own.....Ouida's hand has not lost its cunning."

The WORLD, April 1, says:—

"Ouida has done nothing better on the old lines."

READY NEXT FRIDAY, APRIL 9.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

The LIFE of NELSON the EMBODIMENT of the SEA POWER of GREAT BRITAIN. By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N., Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

Full Prospectus post free on application.

OF ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

WAR, FAMINE, and our FOOD SUPPLY. By R. B. MARSTON. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.; boards, 2s.

TRUTH says:—"I can only hope the book will be widely read."

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

THE HANDSOME HUMES.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of this Popular Writer's Books.

LOW'S LIBRARY OF TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

TWO NEW VOLUMES.

Crown 8vo. fully illustrated, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

HAUSALAND; or, Fifteen Hundred Miles through the Central Soudan. By the Rev. C. H. ROBINSON, M.A. With Map, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations.

TWO KINGS of UGANDA; or, Life by the Shores of the Victoria Nyanza. By the Rev. R. P. ASHE, M.A. With Map and Illustration.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

FIRST EDITION ALL SOLD.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

THOMAS HARDY'S NEW NOVEL,

THE

WELL-BELOVED.

In One Volume, uniform with the AUTHOR'S FAVOURITE EDITION.

WITH FRONTISPIECE ETCHING.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"It is impossible to imagine any story by Thomas Hardy lacking the distinction that has won him the position of the greatest novelist of the time."—Black and White.

"Now, we have always contended that Mr. Hardy, by the natural bent of his genius, is called to describe not sordid things, but what is noble and gracious, and we therefore record at once, as an element of importance in considering 'The Well-Beloved,' that it is permeated with the instinctive passion of beauty. No book which Mr. Hardy has ever written is more intimately concerned with personal and local and sentimental comeliness; the action of exquisite form and colour on a nature of hyper-sensitive perception is the central theme of the story, and however fantastic and however remote the action may be judged, there can be no question of its pre-occupation with beauty. Mr. Hardy, therefore, has come back to his own province of the imagination."
Saturday Review.

"It is a visionary and yet curiously real book. The descriptive passages are as beautiful and vivid as any Mr. Hardy has written. The atmospheric effects, woven of the salt airs of the ocean, coloured with the brilliancy of that white land, linger on the memory as things seen, not read of."—Daily News.

"Every one knows that besides plot, there is always in Mr. Hardy's stories a wealth of attraction in qualities that are rare in other writers. That he is a master in the use of language is acknowledged even by his detractors, and that he has detractors we are bound to admit, though probably of those who most loudly proclaim their dissent few would be found who had not broken through their once-formed resolution to boycott his books. It is not an unmixed evil for a novelist to have detractors. The very fact sets other people upon inquiry, and makes them the more eager to see for themselves what there is so objectionable in a much-talked-of book. Who knows how many have been led by dinner-table censure to read 'Tess' and 'Jude the Obscure'!"—Literary World.

"It is absorbing in interest and set forth with all the old composure and distinction."—Academy.

"Mr. Hardy has not written many novels more marked by the subtle charm of his genius."—Scotsman.

"The reader will have gathered that 'The Well-Beloved' is a somewhat sardonic book. It is not, however, by any means a disagreeable book. There is nothing squalid or violent about it, the writing is subdued and skilful, and there is abundant charm in the descriptions of the island and the island people. Through a great part of it we feel ourselves back with the writer of the older Wessex novels; and we delight in the complete assimilation of the material, the richness, fulness, and simplicity of the narrative. There is a certain sophistication in the idea which belongs to the Hardy of a later period, but the book as a whole has more in common with 'Life's Little Ironies' than with 'Tess' or 'Jude.' 'The Well-Beloved' will not please every reader, but its interest is unfailing, and in the skill with which it treats a whimsical subject full of pitfalls and difficulties it is altogether admirable."—Westminster Gazette.

"His new novel, though less elaborate than 'Tess' or 'Far from the Madding Crowd,' proves that his hand has lost none of its cunning. It is a book which intelligent readers cannot afford to miss; and we are glad that its publication affords us an opportunity to call attention to the completion of an edition of Mr. Hardy's works which will rejoice the hearts of book-lovers."—Publishers' Circular.

THOMAS HARDY'S NEW NOVEL,

THE

WELL-BELOVED.

In One Volume, uniform with the AUTHOR'S FAVOURITE EDITION.

WITH FRONTISPIECE ETCHING.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

London: OSGOOD, McILVAINE & CO.
45, Albemarle-street, W.

NOTICE.

MR. GEORGE GISSING'S NEW NOVEL,

THE WHIRLPOOL,

ONE VOLUME,

Price SIX SHILLINGS,

Will be published on the 5th inst.

MR. GEORGE GISSING'S NOVELS.

IN the YEAR of JUBILEE. 6s.
The ODD WOMEN. 6s.
The UNCLASSED. 6s.
EVE'S RANSOM. 6s.
DENZIL QUARRIER. 6s.
The EMANCIPATED. 6s.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, Limited,
16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

AUTHORIZED EDITIONS OF MAURUS JOKAI'S POPULAR NOVELS.

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. By MAURUS JOKAI. With Engraved Portrait of Author, 6s. [Fifth Edition.

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."
Pall Mall Gazette.

Mr. Courtney says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly an astounding book. In force and fire and prodigal variety he reminds one of the elder Dumas."

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JOKAI. 6s. [Third Edition.

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special knowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that we never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. There are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the book.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and treatment."—Daily Chronicle.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. By MAURUS JOKAI. 5s. [Second Edition.

"One of the best of his historical romances. Who can resist reading the book? We can promise that the most rapacious and exacting reader shall not be disappointed."
Black and White.

PRETTY MICHAL. By Maurus JOKAI. 5s. [Second Edition.

"It is part of the high art of the story that the author has kept the whole atmosphere free from the complexity, the subtle motives of a later and more sophisticated age. Maurus Jókai's novel is a book to be read."—Saturday Review.

NEW "GREENBACK" NOVELS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ALLANSON'S LITTLE WOMAN. By EASTWOOD KIDSON.

The THIRTEENTH BRYDAIN. By MARGARET MOULE, Author of 'Wingrove's Ways,' 'Dick's Wife,' 'Miss Maidment,' &c.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C. At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

GARDNER, DARTON & CO.

MONASTICISM, ANCIENT and MODERN: its Principles, Origin, Development, Triumphs, Decadence, and Suppression. With an Enquiry as to the Possibility of its Revival. By the Rev. F. C. WOODHOUSE, M.A. Large crown 8vo. cloth boards, 7s. 6d. net.

"A useful book for those who have little time for extended reading." Guardian.

PASTOR in PAROCHIA. By the Right Rev. W. WALSHAM HOW, D.D. Twenty-fourth Edition, with Additions, fcap. 8vo. cloth circuit, 3s. 6d.; morocco or calf, 10s. 6d.

The XXXIX. ARTICLES and the AGE of the REFORMATION: an Historical and Doctrinal Exposition in the Light of Contemporary Documents. By E. TYRRELL GREEN, Lecturer in Theology and Hebrew, St David's College, Lampeter; sometime Scholar of St. John's College, Oxford. Demy 8vo. cloth boards, 10s. 6d.

"Excellent as they are from various standpoints, the [other] works on the XXXIX. Articles of the Church of England by no means preclude the necessity for such a work as this, which supplies new information from new sources....The text of the Articles is given in Latin and in English, with valuable explanatory and historical notes....In dealing with the wording of the Articles Mr. Green is eminently successful.... The work, moreover, occasionally introduces mediæval customs and ceremonies not generally known....The student of Anglican divinity will find in this volume much valuable information not to be found in similar treatises."—Morning Post.

LOOKING UPWARD: Papers Intro- ductory to the Study of Social Questions from a Religious Point of View. By the Rev. the Hon. JAMES ADDERLEY, M.A., Author of 'The New Floreat.' Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.
[Second Edition.

"A volume of papers on the attitude of the clergy towards social reform which is of real value."—Athenæum.

"A vigorous treatment of what may be termed Christian sociology, from one who certainly has a moral right, derived from hard experience and self-denial second to none, to speak on this theme." Daily Chronicle.

The LIFE of the WAITING SOUL in the INTERMEDIATE STATE. By the Rev. Canon R. E. SANDERSON, D.D., Author of 'What is the Church?' Large fcap. 8vo. cloth, bevelled boards, red edges, 2s. 6d. [Third Edition.

"Dr. Sanderson's nine brief addresses have pleased us very much. They are plain, thoughtful, earnest, and catholic, declaring all that is known or that may reasonably be held....and the plain man who wants to know what he may safely believe on the state of the waiting souls and our relation to them has here all that he needs."—Church Times.

WORK in GREAT CITIES. Lectures on Pastoral Theology, delivered in the Divinity School, Cambridge. By the Rev. A. F. WINNINGTON INGRAM, M.A., Head of the Oxford House, and Rector of Bethnal Green. With Introductions by the Rev. HERBERT E. RYLE, D.D., Hulsean Professor of Divinity, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.
[Third Edition

"We unhesitatingly tell all young workers, lay and clerical, that they are doing themselves and the work great injustice so long as they remain unacquainted with Mr. Ingram's epigrammatic, sensible, experienced talk."—Church Times.

"It is most earnestly to be desired that these lectures should be obtained and read through by all candidates for Holy Orders."—Spectator.

SINTRAM and his COMPANIONS and UNDINE. An Illustrated Edition of the Masterpieces by DE LA MOTTE FOUQUÉ. With Introduction by CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, and numerous Illustrations by Gordon Browne, R.I. Large crown 8vo. printed on superfine paper, cloth boards, gilt top, 6s.

"A better present for a thoughtful lad or lass could hardly be." Church Times.

SECOND EDITION.

THREE GIRLS in a FLAT. By Ethel F. HEDDLE. Illustrated by Gordon Browne, R.I. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"One of the brightest bits of recent fiction....Her adventurous maids are delightful company....The book is one to be read again and again." Dundee Advertiser.

THE NATIONAL CHURCHES SERIES.

Edited by P. H. DITCHFIELD, M.A. F.R.Hist.S.

"The general idea of the series is excellent."—Guardian.
"The scheme excites our interest."—Saturday Review.

1. GERMANY. By the Rev. S. BARING-GOULD, M.A. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"Mr. Baring-Gould's contribution is excellent....One of the best accounts in English of the German Reformation, its real meaning and real effects, that we have ever come across."—Guardian.

2. SPAIN. By the Rev. Frederick MEYRICK, M.A., Prebendary of Lincoln. With Map. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"It is a really valuable work."—Manchester Examiner.

3. IRELAND. By the Rev. Thomas OLDEN, M.A., Vicar of Ballyclough. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"Seldom has the student of Irish history the good fortune to encounter work so learned and so simple, so instructive and so entertaining, as this brilliant epitome of the history of the early Irish Church." Athenæum.

4. The NETHERLANDS. By the Rev. P. H. DITCHFIELD, M.A. With 2 Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

5. SCOTLAND. By the Very Rev. H. M. LUCKOCK, D.D., Dean of Lichfield. With 2 Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"His pages are packed with facts from which you are at liberty to draw your conclusions, and which he never garbles or distorts with a view to bolstering up his own. He displays a really surprising comprehension of affairs peculiarly Scottish."—National Observer.

6. ITALY. By the Rev. A. R. PENNINGTON, M.A., Canon of Lincoln. With Map. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

7. FRANCE. By the Rev. Richard TRAVERS SMITH, D.D., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, and Canon of St. Patrick's, Dublin. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

8. AMERICA. By the Right Rev. LEIGHTON COLEMAN, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop of Delaware, U.S.A. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"Tells its story in a simple and unassuming way, which is pleasant and instructive, and puts together in a handy form just the information that the general reader most wants to have."—Guardian.

London: GARDNER, DARTON & CO.
3, Paternoster Buildings, E.C.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER'S NEW BOOKS.

THIS DAY, with Portraits and Illustrations, cloth, price 1s.

LADY BLANCHE BALFOUR.
A Reminiscence.

By Rev. JAMES ROBERTSON, D.D., Whittinghame.

This short sketch and study from memory of the mother of Mr. A. J. Balfour and the sister of Lord Salisbury will be read with interest by both followers and opponents of these eminent men.

THIS DAY, in post 8vo. gilt top, price 5s.

A MAN'S VALUE to SOCIETY.
Studies in Self-Culture and Character. By NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS.

"The Science of Living with Men" and "Making the Most of One's Self" are two chapter headings which express the main scope of this book. The author is an American, who writes with great freshness and vigour on these and kindred topics.

NEW BOOK OF MISSIONARY LIFE AND ADVENTURE.
THIS DAY, with Portrait and Illustrations, price 3s. 6d.

IN the TIGER JUNGLE, and other
Stories of Missionary Work among the Telugus of India. By Rev. JACOB CHAMBERLAIN, M.D. D.D. With Introduction by Rev. F. E. CLARK, D.D.

FAMOUS SCOTS.—New Volumes.
Price 1s. 6d. each; or cloth extra, gilt top, 2s. 6d.

FLETCHER of SALTOUN. By G. W. T. OMOND. [This day.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT. By Oliphant SMEATON.

The Sheffield Telegraph says:—"Mr. Smeaton presents a very interesting pen-and-ink picture of one of the most remarkable figures in English literature."

JAMES BOSWELL. By W. Keith LEASK.

The Morning Leader says:—"The defence of Boswell in Mr. Leask's delightful study is one of the finest and most convincing passages that have recently appeared in the field of British biography."

NEW EDITION, completing Tenth Thousand, of

SIR JAMES Y. SIMPSON. By Eve BLANTYRE SIMPSON.

The Daily Chronicle, under the heading of "The Prince of Pain-Killers," says:—"It is indeed long since we have read such a charmingly written biography.....There is not a dull, irrelevant, or superfluous page."

List of the "FAMOUS SCOTS" Series post free.
TWELVE VOLUMES ARE NOW READY.

The TIMES says of 'A Cycle of Cathay':—"It is, perhaps, the most valuable contribution that has been made to our knowledge of China in recent years."

A CYCLE of CATHAY: China, South and North. With Personal Reminiscences. By the Rev. W. A. P. MARTIN, D.D. LL.D., Ex-President Emeritus of the Imperial Tungwen College, Pekin. With Map and numerous Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

DR. WHYTE'S NEW BOOK.

BIBLE CHARACTERS — ADAM to ACHAN. By the Rev. ALEXANDER WHYTE, D.D., Author of 'Bunyan Characters,' 'Lancelot Andrewes,' &c. In post 8vo. gilt top, 3s. 6d.

NOW READY, NEW AND UNIFORM 3s. 6d. EDITIONS OF THE FOLLOWING

FAVOURITE NOVELS BY ANNIE S. SWAN.
In Handsome Cloth Bindings.

SHEILA.	3s. 6d.
The GATES of EDEN.	3s. 6d.
The GUINEA STAMP.	3s. 6d.
MAITLAND of LAURIESTON.	3s. 6d.
BRIAR and PALM.	3s. 6d.
ST. VEDA'S.	3s. 6d.
WHO SHALL SERVE?	3s. 6d.
A LOST IDEAL.	3s. 6d.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
21, Paternoster-square, E.C.; and Edinburgh.

EFFINGHAM WILSON'S LIST.

Just published, demy 8vo. price 7s. 6d. net.

The MARITIME CODES of SPAIN and PORTUGAL. Translated and Annotated by F. W. RAIKES, Q.C. LL.D.

Just published, crown 8vo. price 3s. 6d. net.

OUR CLEARING SYSTEM and CLEARING HOUSES. Third Edition. By W. HOWARTH, F.R.Hist.S. F.S.S.

"A very interesting description of clearing in London as well as the leading provincial towns, Paris, Berlin, and New York."—Daily Chronicle

Just published, demy 8vo. price 5s. net.

The LAW RELATING to FACTORS.
Mercantile Agents who Sell on Commission Goods entrusted to their care, and who Buy Goods on Commission. By P. T. BLACKWELL, B.A.

"A concise and clearly written treatise on a very important branch of commercial law.....Cannot fail to be useful to business men as well as to lawyers."—Manchester Guardian.

Just published, crown 8vo. price 2s. 6d. net.

MERCANTILE PRACTICE. By GEO. JOHNSON, F.S.S. A.I.S.

"It is not often that we come across a handbook which gives information on such a multiplicity of subjects. The author knows how to marshal his facts and figures in a concise and intelligible form." Star.

BOOKKEEPING by DOUBLE ENTRY: Explaining the Science and Teaching the Art. Second Edition. By ASTRUP CARISS. Price 6s.

A MONEY MARKET PRIMER and KEY to the EXCHANGES. Second Edition. By GEORGE CLARE. Price 5s.

A SKETCH of the CURRENCY QUESTION. By CLIVE CUTHBERTSON, B.A. Price 2s. net.

"An admirable résumé of the controversy between monometallists and bimetallists."—Times.

THEORY of FOREIGN EX- CHANGES. By the Right Hon. G. J. GOSCHEN. Price 6s.

PRINCIPLES of BANKING: its Utility and Working. With Remarks on the Working and Management of the Bank of England. By THOMSON HANKEY, formerly Governor of the Bank of England. Price 2s. 6d.

The LAW of BANKER and CUSTOMER. New and Revised Edition. By JAMES WALTER SMITH, LL.D. Price 5s.

Third Edition, Revised, crown 8vo. price 2s. 6d. net.

The SOLICITOR'S CLERK: the Ordinary Practical Work of a Solicitor's Office. By CHAS. JONES.

Crown 8vo. price 2s. 6d. net.

COMPANION to the SOLICITOR'S CLERK; embracing Magisterial and Criminal Law, Licensing, Bankruptcy Accounts, Bookkeeping, Trust Accounts, &c. By CHAS. JONES.

"When we noticed Mr. Jones's work 'The Solicitor's Clerk,' we ventured to predict a prosperous career for that little treatise. We have no doubt that those who have derived assistance from Mr. Jones's first essay will find his supplementary efforts equally useful."—Athenæum.

Just published, Second Edition, Revised, price 2s. 6d. net.

The BUSINESS MAN'S COUNTY COURT GUIDE. A Practical Manual, especially with reference to the Recovery of Trade Debts. By CHAS. JONES.

EFFINGHAM WILSON, 11, Royal Exchange, E.C.

MR. ARTHUR A. SYKES'S NEW BOOK NOW READY.

WITHOUT PERMISSION: a Book of Dedications. Art canvas 3s. 6d. post free, or may be ordered through any Bookseller.

The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contained Articles on

PROF. MAX MÜLLER'S CONTRIBUTIONS to MYTHOLOGY.
MR. CARMAN'S POEMS.
The PHILOSOPHY of THEISM.
The MUNICIPAL LIFE of GLASGOW.
A MEMOIR of DR. HARPER.
A FRENCH TRAVELLER on TIMBUCTOO.
NEW NOVELS: A Matter of Temperament; Sebastiani's Secret; Hilda Strafford; A Pinebeck Goddess; All in All; Margot; A Devotee; The Dunthorpes of Westleigh; Partie du Pied Gauche.
ENGLISH PHILOLOGY.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
TWO PROTHALAMIA—The DESTRUCTION of the SPANISH ARMADA—The REV. WILLIAM FULFORD—The SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON—'ENGLISH SCHOOLS at the REFORMATION'—TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Botanical Literature; M. Antoine d'Abbadie; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—Gardner on Greek Sculpture; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.

The ATHENÆUM for March 20 contains Articles on

DR. DONALDSON SMITH'S AFRICAN TRAVELS.
REPRINTED PAPERS of PROF. SKEAT.
A HEBREW FRAGMENT of ECCLESIASTICUS.
A BOOK on the SPORTING DUKES of RICHMOND.
NEW NOVELS—Clarissa Furiosa; Under the Circumstances; The Speculators; Out of the Darkness; A Modern Judas.
BOOKS on GREEK LITERATURE.
SCOTTISH FICTION.
BOOKS on ENGLISH LITERATURE.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
'The CENTENARY BURNS'—TWO PROTHALAMIA—SALE—The SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON—ST. PATRICK.

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Elementary Mathematical Books; Prof. Sylvester; Astronomical Notes; Prof. H. Drummond; Societies; Meetings.
FINE ARTS—The Institute of Painters in Water Colours; The Serangeum in the Piræus; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Porfomances Next Week.
DRAMA—Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY, price THREEPENCE, of John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—Browning's Maternal Ancestors—Beckford Family—Sans Souci Theatre—"Maligna lux"—"Between the shrine and the stone"—Burning Christmas Decorations—George Anne Bellamy—London's Directory—Fit = Fought—Curious Notice—Slavonic Place-names—"Wheelman"—Lewisham—30th Foot—Field-Marshal Hodgson—Miss Rosa Bathurst—"Tongue-Batteries"—Statue of William III.

QUERIES:—Durham Coat Armour—Ballad—"Burs"—"Sitting Bodkin"—Stocqueler—Lieut.-Col. Sturgeon—Chelmsford Murder—Longfellow's Address at Harvard—Miss Fairbrother—McGillicuddy—Peppercorn Rent—Inscription—Hand of Glory—MacKirdy Family—Louis Panormo—Bishops of 1660—Botanical Name—Beau Brummell—Flora Macdonald—Authors Wanted.

REPLIES:—Pronunciation of Pepys—"Handicap"—Bishops' Wigs—Wilkes—Dr. Johnson's Teapot—Carved Adders—"Rummer"—Scrimshaw Family—"Li maisie hierlekin"—"Alphabet-man"—Gascoigne—Fontack's—"Shott"—Provincial Pronunciation—"Here 's to the Mayor of Wigan"—Blencard—"Rule the Roost"—The Suffix "well"—Gent—Hanwell Church—Chalking the Unmarried—Court Martial—Theodosius the Great—Earls of Derwentwater—Historical Rhymes—B. R. Faulkner—Amelia Opie—Coronation of James I.—Scottish University Graduates—Age of Yew Trees—Landguard Fort—"Old parliamentary hand"—Novelists' Blunders—Chaworth—Chinese Folk-lore—Objects used in Nineteenth Century—"Harpy"—"Hand-flowerer"—'Cries of London'—"Hamel-tree"—Wart-curing—Breton Folk-Music—R. Perrean.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Le Gallienne's Walton's 'Compleat Angler'—'Naval and Military Trophies,' Parts V. and VI.—Plummer's 'Venerabilis Baedae Historia Ecclesiastica'—'English Catalogue.'

Notices to Correspondents.

LAST WEEK'S NUMBER (March 27) contains—

NOTES:—Escallop-Shell—Casanoviana—Lilies of the Valley at Canterbury—'The Untrodden Ways'—"Cawd for nowt but iverrything"—"A large order"—Canon Elleton—Dr. Beaumont—"Gite"—"Under the weather"—"Swellness"—The Evil Eye—Epitaph—Egg-berry.

QUERIES:—"By" in the Dialects—"Handicap"—"Harbour"; "Arbour"—'Il Penseroso'—"Pugalug"—Blanckenhagen—Nordhaven—Sutton, Earl of Dudley—"Day's work of land"—Cherry Blossom Festival—Breton Folk-music—Best Ghost Story—Napoleon on the Bellerophon—Gost House—"Your Worship" and "Your Honour"—Graham, Lord Esdale—Calendar Letters—Wilkes—"Lead, kindly Light"—Ploughwoman—Record of Clergy—Authors Wanted.

REPLIES:—'Sir A. Shirley, Author of Shakspeare's Plays'—'Mag-astromancer'—"Cast for death"—Modern Jacobite Movement—Squire's Coffee-house—"Came in with the Conqueror"—Literary Blunder—Bishops' Wigs—Baptisteries—"Come, let us be merry"—Sir M. Costa—Exploded Tradition—Author Wanted—Divining-rod—Tapestries from Raphael Cartoons—Cartwright's 'Royal Slave'—"Dear knows"—Earldom of Radnor—"Eye rhymes"—Pearls—S. Duck—Peacock Feathers Unlucky—Wayzgoose—Abergavenny Parish Registers—Midsummer Fires—"Enchatted"—Classon Brighton—"Fighting like devils, &c."—'Old Mortality'—Haddon Hall—Carrick Family—Shelta—Fullerton of Graighall—Owen Brigstocke—Horace, 'Sat.' I.—White's Sonnet on 'Night'—Bevis de Hampton—Rev. Dr. Oldys—French Prisoners of War—Incident in Sicily—Grote MSS.—Handmaid—Author Wanted.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Maitland's 'Domesday Book and Beyond'—Macalister's 'Ecclesiastical Vestments'—Du Bois's 'African Slave-Trade.'

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d*.; by post, 4½*d*.

Published by John C. Francis, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24*s*.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."
Illustrated London News.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."
Bookseller.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."
Manchester Examiner.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore, NOTES AND QUERIES."
Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."
Quarterly Review.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d., of all Booksellers,

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY,
Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY,
Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY,
More especially of English Authors, with Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE,
Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY,
With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,
Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY,
Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY,
Including Histories of Old Families, completion of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES,
On points of ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPOGRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MISCELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATICS, PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and Newsvendors.

ROYAL STATISTICAL SOCIETY'S JOURNAL.

Now ready, Part I. Vol. LX. MARCH, 1897. Price 5*s*.

Contents.

The INTERPRETATION of CRIMINAL STATISTICS. By the Rev. W. D. Morrison. With Discussion.

LOCAL DEATH-RATES in ENGLAND and WALES in the TEN YEARS 1881-90. By T. A. Welton. With Discussion.

SILVER PRICES in INDIA. By F. J. Atkinson.

A MEASURE of CIVILIZATION. By Marcus Rubin.

MISCELLANEA:—1. Report of a Committee with Reference to the Proposed Universal Synchronous Census in 1900.—2. Commercial History and Review of 1896.—3. Prices of Commodities in 1896.—4. Fires in London and the Metropolitan Fire Brigade in 1896.—5. English Literature in 1896.—6. Notes on Economical and Statistical Works.—7. Quarterly List of Additions to the Library.—8. Periodical Returns.

London: E. Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

Price 2*d*; by post, 3*d*. Yearly Subscription (including Supplements), 2*s*. 8*d*.

THE LITERARY GUIDE: a Rationalist Review.

Devoted mainly to Books and Publications which deal with Religion, Philosophy, Science, and Ethics from a Rationalist standpoint.

No. 10, APRIL, 1897, contains:—

CHRISTIAN ORIGINS.
An INDICTMENT of LATTER-DAY IRRATIONALISM.
MARTIN LUTHER.
ARISTOTLE'S PSYCHOLOGY.
VARIED ESSAYS of an EVOLUTIONIST.
The NEW "ANTE-NICENE" VOLUME.
MR. LAING CRITICIZED.
A SKETCH-BOOK from CARLYLE.
RANDOM JOTTINGS.
OUR LIBRARY SHELVES: Salter's 'First Steps in Philosophy.'
IN MEMORIAM: DR. E. COBHAM BREWER.
MORALITY on STILTS.
SIGNS and WARNINGS (gleaned from the Religious Press).
RATIONALISM in the MAGAZINES.

Also Four-Page Supplement, containing SUMMARY of HERBERT SPENCER'S 'DATA of ETHICS.'

 Nos 2 to 9 still in stock.

London: Watts & Co. 17, Johnson's-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

COSMOPOLIS:

An International and Tri-Lingual Monthly Review.

Edited by F. ORTMANS.

Contents for APRIL.

Slaves of the Lamp. Rudyard Kipling.—Unpublished Letters to Gustave d'Eichthal. John Stuart Mill.—Pompey's Pillar. Professor J. P. Mahaffy.—A Poll of the People. J. St Loe Strachey.—Notes on New Books. Andrew Lang.—The Theatre in London. Arthur B. Walkley.—The Globe and the Island. Henry Norman.—Voyageuses: V. Odile. Paul Rourget.—Le Spiritisme de M. Victorien Sardou. Napoléon Ney.—Lettres Inédites. Ivan Tourguéneff.—Les Conférences d'Aix-la-Chapelle, d'après la Correspondance inédite du Duc de Richelieu. R. de Cisternes.—Le Livre à Paris. Émile Faguet.—Le Théâtre à Paris. Jules Lemaitre.—Revue du Mois. F. de Pressensé.—Lästige Schonheit. Ludwig Fulda.—Die Kulturbestrebungen der türkischen Frauen. H. Vambéry.—Das Schlaraffenland. Erich Schmid.—Deutsche Bücher. Anton Jlettelheim.—Das Theater in Berlin. Otto Neumann-Hofer.—Politisches in deutscher Beleuchtung. "Ignotus." Price 2*s*. 6*d*.

London: T. Fisher Unwin, Paternoster-square, E.C.

SHERBORNE ABBEY.

Views; Large Ground-Plan and Descriptive Article.

The BUILDER of April 3 contains above, being No. 21 of the Series—"The ABBEYS of GREAT BRITAIN."

Price 4½*d*. (post free).

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

In imperial 8vo. Vol. II. (1-2) pp. 888,

MODERN ENGLISH BIOGRAPHY. By

FREDERIC BOASE. Containing nearly 6,200 Concise Memoirs of Persons who have died since 1850. With an Index of the most interesting matter. 30*s*. net, carriage free. "As a work of reference the book is just what it should be."—Times, April 14, 1892.

Some copies of Volume I. are still on sale at 30*s*.

Netherton & Worth, Truro.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2*s*., or free by post, 2*s*. 3*d*.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1*s*. 4*d*.; or free by post, 1*s*. 6*d*.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

PROF. HENRY DRUMMOND.

By the Rev. W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, LL.D.

SEE

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

APRIL. Price Half-a-Crown.

WHICH ALSO CONTAINS—

A COMMON CITIZENSHIP for the ENGLISH RACE. By Prof. Dicey.
CRETAN STRUGGLES for LIBERTY. By J. Gennadius.
The CRETAN IMBROGLIO. By Sir M. E. Grant Duff, G.C.S.I.
REFORM the HOUSE of LORDS! By Goldwin Smith.
HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ. By Edmund Gosse.
The LAW of LIBERTY. By Emma Marie Caillard.
AFTER the FAMINE in my GARDEN. By Phil Robinson.
JOANNES SCOTUS ERIGENA. By William Larminie.
The RELIGIOUS ORDERS in the ROMAN COMMUNION. By the Rev. Philip Limerick.
The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE of EUROPE. By W. T. Stead.
MONEY and INVESTMENTS.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

No. 242. APRIL, 1897.

The BOER INDICTMENTS of BRITISH POLICY. By Henry M. Stanley, M.P.
The ETHICS of EMPIRE. By H. F. Wyatt (Hon. Secretary of the "Seeley" Lecturers).
The ENCROACHMENT of WOMEN. By Charles Whibley.
HOW I BECAME POPE. By Pius II. Translated by Alfred N. Macfadyen.
A TURKISH "YOUNG PRETENDER." By Lady Currie.
AGRA in 1857: a Reply to Lord Roberts. By Sir Auckland Colvin, K.C.S.I. K.C.M.G. C.I.E.
MR. HERBERT SPENCER and LORD SALISBURY on EVOLUTION. Concluded. By His Grace the Duke of Argyll.
RONSARD and his VENDOMOIS. By J. J. Jusserand.
1. HOW POOR LADIES LIVE: a Reply. By Miss Eliza Orme.
2. HOW POOR LADIES MIGHT LIVE: an Answer from the Workhouse. By Miss Edith M. Shaw.
GOETHE as a STAGE MANAGER. Walter Shaw Sparrow.
SOME CHANGES in SOCIAL LIFE DURING the QUEEN'S REIGN. By the Right Hon. Sir Algernon West, K.C.B.
MR. LAURIER and MANITOBA. By J. G. Snead Cox (Editor of the Tablet).
"The INTEGRITY of the OTTOMAN EMPIRE" as a DIPLOMATIC FORMULA:—
1. By Sir Wemyss Reid.
2. By the Rev. Dr Guinness Rogers.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

THE FORUM.

1*s*. 6*d*. APRIL, 1897. 1*s*. 6*d*.

HAS the SENATE DEGENERATED? Senator George F. Hoar.
RETRENCHMENT or RUIN? Hon. J. Sterling Morton, Ex-Secretary of Agriculture.
The UNITED STATES and CUBA. Henri Rochefort, Editor L'Intransigeant.
The FUTILITY of the SPELLING GRIND. Dr. J. M. Rice.
SUCCESS of WOMAN'S ENFRANCHISEMENT in NEW ZEALAND. Hon. Hugh H. Lusk, Ex-Member of the New Zealand Legislature.
SOME OPENED TOMBS and THEIR OCCUPANTS. The Very Rev. F. W. Farrar, Dean of Canterbury.
The FUR SEAL as an ANIMAL. David Starr Jordan, Chief of the Bering Sea Commission for 1896, and George Archibald Clark, Secretary to the Commission.
ARBITRATION the ONLY SOLUTION of the FINANCIAL PROBLEM. Allen Ripley Foote.
EMERSON and THOREAU. F. B. Sanborn.
SHALL NEVADA BE DEPRIVED of HER STATEHOOD? William E. Smythe.
The DRAMATIC CRITIC: his Work and Influence. E. A. Dithmar.
The IMPERIALIZATION of GERMANY. Prof. Thomas Davidson.

London: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 24, Bedford-street, Strand.

THE HUMANITARIAN.

Edited by VICTORIA WOODHULL MARTIN.

APRIL.

The LOVE of PLATO: a Discussion. By Oscar Browning, Helen Mathers, Sir George Douglas, and Ella Hepworth Dixon.
AFFINITIES. (A Play.) By Zula Maud Woodhull.
The HAPPY LIFE. By the late Jules Simon.
The WOMEN of the PIT. By John Pendleton.
The PRESENT POSITION of WOMEN SUFFRAGE. By N. Arling.
The NEED of a STATE LIFEBOAT SYSTEM. By G. A. Koek.

Also Special Articles on The SUPREMACY of the AVERAGE; IS a BELIEF in the SUPERNATURAL NECESSARY to PROGRESS? The REIMPOSITION of the C.D. ACTS, and other subjects of interest.

Price SIXPENCE.

London: Hutchinson & Co. Paternoster-row.

NOTICE.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL,

UNDER LOVE'S RULE,

IN ONE VOLUME,

Price Six Shillings,

Will be ready TUESDAY, April 6th.

London: Simpkin & Co., Limited.

MEMORY.

PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.

Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading. Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10*s*. 6*d*. English, post free.

Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.

Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.

NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.

Founded 1797.

HEAD OFFICE: NORWICH—Surrey-street

LONDON OFFICES { 50, Fleet-street, E.C.; 10, King William-street, E.C.; 195, Piccadilly, W.; and 1, Victoria-st., S.W.

Amount Insured £330,000,000
Claims Paid £11,600,000

Agents Wanted in Metropolitan District.—Applications to be made to either of the above London Offices.

Norwich, March 25th, 1897.

LIVERPOOL and LONDON and GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Invested Funds £9,067,182

FIRE. LIFE. ENDOWMENTS. ANNUITIES.

Fire Insurances effected on most favourable terms.

LIFE BONUSES LARGE, either in Cash or Additions to Sum Assured.

Policy holders incur no Liability of Partnership, and may so insure as to participate in NINE-TENTHS OF THE PROFITS of their Class.

EQUITABLE RATES. MODERATE EXPENSES.

Head Offices:
1, DALE-STREET, LIVERPOOL; 7, CORNHILL, LONDON.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS

(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.

Established 1849.

Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10*s*. 6*d*., 16*s*. 6*d*., and 25*s*. each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.

A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins 7½*d*. and 1*s*. 1½*d*., labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN,
HEADACHE, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

LONDON LIBRARY,

ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G. President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

Vice-Presidents—The Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, The Very Rev. the DEAN of LLANDAFF, HERBERT SPENCER, Esq., Sir HENRY BARKLY, G.C.M.G. K.C.B. F.R.S.

Trustees—Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart., M.P., F.R.S., Right Hon. EARL of ROSEBERY, K.G., Right Hon. Sir M. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I.

Committee—Rev. Canon Ainger, Dr. J. H. Bridges, Sir F. W. Burton, Prof. Lewis Campbell, R. Copley Christie, Esq., J. W. Courthope, Esq. C.B., Earl of Crewe, K.P., Austin Dobson, Esq., Sydney Gedge, Esq. M.P., Edmund Gosse, Esq., Mrs. J. R. Green, Frederic Harrison, Esq., Sir C. P. Ilbert, K.C.S.I., Sir C. M. Kennedy, C.B. K.C.M.G., W. E. H. Lecky, Esq. D.C.L. M.P., Rev. Stanley Leathes, D.D., Sidney J. Lee, Esq., W. S. Lilly, Esq., Sidney Low, Esq., Frank T. Marzials, Esq., St. George Mivart, Esq. F.R.S., Sir F. Pollock, Bart., Rev. Dr. Rigg, H. R. Tedder, Esq.

The Library contains about 175,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in Various Languages. Subscription, 3*l*. a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country, and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room Open from Ten to Half-past Six. CATALOGUE, FIFTH EDITION, 2 vols. royal 8vo. price 21*s*.; to Members, 16*s*.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW AND FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

SIXTH THOUSAND.

CECIL RHODES: a Biography and Appreciation.

By IMPERIALIST.

WITH PERSONAL REMINISCENCES BY DR. JAMESON.

Two Portraits of Mr. Rhodes and a Map of South Africa. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW for April, in an article written by the Editor of the Johannesberg Standard and Diggers' News (a Krugerite organ), says:—"Whoever Imperialist may be, there can be no denying that in his 'Cecil Rhodes: a Biography and Appreciation' he has succeeded in lifting the whole South African question out of the mire of vindictive controversy and placing it upon a level altogether loftier and more lasting.....There are in South Africa not one great man, but two great men—Cecil Rhodes and Paul Kruger.... It has been left to Imperialist to put the fact forward forcibly, to make it clear, to exalt both men, to indicate the essentially imperial vein running through the composition of the one, and to emphasize the statesmanlike characteristics of the other.....In a volume of some four hundred pages there is presented, in language always vivid and vehement, as good a portrait of Rhodes, the man and his motives, as it is perhaps possible to draw in black and white. Under Imperialist's hand Cecil Rhodes stands out not, perhaps, in a new light, but certainly in the best light in which the public has so far been permitted to behold him—stands out a strong central figure, a man with large views and a large way of putting them into execution, with every feature of his life clear cut.....It is because of its merits, because of its force, because of the strength of its statements, that it is dangerous and cannot be allowed to pass wholly unchallenged."

The TIMES says:—"For the first time the theory and practice of Mr. Rhodes's career have been brought together, compared, and put before the public in a readable narrative which covers the whole of his active life.....Few readers, we fancy, will come to the end of the book without feeling that they have gained an insight into the causes of the extraordinary influence exercised by Mr. Rhodes."

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"It is a distinctly much-needed work.....and should be read by every one who wishes to know the true inwardness of the South African problem. .....The mass of attractive details.... is admirable reading.....The facts that it embodies.....are essential to the right understanding of the South African problem. For that reason, if for no others, the book should be read, marked, and digested by all Englishmen."

The MORNING POST says:—"A very welcome appreciation of a great man's work, and one which accurately expresses the feelings of all who have the welfare of their country at heart, and whose views are not biassed by party politics or prejudiced by petty jealousy.....It is quite time the public had the 'truth about Mr. Rhodes' told in a collected manner and by one who has some right to speak. The present book supplies the want, and is at once an interesting narrative and a faithful record of facts."

The GLOBE says:—"The important work 'Cecil Rhodes,' by Imperialist.....comes as a welcome change.....Imperialist's book is a timely and valuable work, and will do much towards spreading a juster view of South African matters among the great mass of indifferent Englishmen."

NEW BOOK BY W. S. LILLY.

ESSAYS and SPEECHES. By W. S. Lilly, Author of 'Ancient Religion and Modern Thought,' 'A Century of Revolution,' &c. Demy 8vo, 12s. [Now ready.

The Contents of the Volume are:—ALEXANDER POPE—PROF. GREEN—JOHN HENRY NEWMAN: a Memoir—The TEMPORAL POWER of the POPE, with a Rejoinder to SIGNOR CRISPI—The MAKING of GERMANY—LITERATURE and NATURAL LIFE—The NEW SPIRIT in HISTORY.

A NEW WORK ON THE SULTAN AND THE TURKS.

The SULTAN and his SUBJECTS. By Richard Davey. With Portraits, Maps, and Plans. 2 vols. demy 8vo. [In a few days.

This work embodies the results of an earnest attempt to set forth the chief characteristics of those heterogeneous nationalities which have, in process of time and by virtue of conquest, fallen under the dominion of the Sultans. It deals with the Turkish people generally, but chiefly with the Turks of Constantinople.

A NEW WORK ON IBSEN.

IBSEN on his MERITS. By Sir Edward R. Russell and Percy Cross Standing. Crown 8vo. [Shortly.

'Ibsen on his Merits' is an earnest endeavour by two qualified men of letters, Sir Edward Russell and Mr. Cross Standing, to examine closely and critically into the reasons for one of the most curious literary and dramatic phenomena of the day, viz., the extraordinary hold which has been obtained by the dramas of Ibsen, a remote provincial playwright, over the most thoughtful circles of Great Britain, the Continent, and the United States. The work is criticism of the higher and rarer kind. It is appreciation.

NEW WORK BY COL. G. B. MALLESON.

The RIVERS and LAKES of AUSTRIA, BAVARIA, and HUNGARY. With a Sketch of the Ambleve and Lingenville in Rhenish Prussia. By Col. G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I. With Map. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Now ready.

This book is, above all things, a handbook to the rivers, lakes, and places indicated in the title. It is specially a guide for anglers, but useful for travellers of all classes. An efficient guide has long been needed to these districts, and Colonel Malleson's book aims at supplying the want.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD.'

WHITE MAGIC: a Novel. By M. McD. Bodkin, Q.C., Author of 'Lord Edward Fitzgerald: an Historical Romance.' Crown 8vo. 6s. [This day.

A NEW BOOK ON MECHANICAL ENGINEERING.

FIRST PRINCIPLES of MECHANICAL and ENGINEERING DRAWING. A Course of Study adapted to the Self-Instruction of Students and Apprentices in Mechanical Engineering in all its Branches, and for the Use of Teachers in Technical and Manual Instruction Schools. By H. HOLT BUTTERFILL, M.E., formerly a Member of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers and Institution of Naval Architects. With upwards of 350 Diagrams in Illustration of the Principles of the Subject. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d. [Ready.

A NEW TREATISE ON PRACTICAL GEOMETRY.

PRACTICAL PLANE and SOLID GEOMETRY. A Treatise containing Solutions to the Honours Questions set at the Examinations of the Science and Art Department (1887-1896, inclusive). By T. J. EVANS and W. W. F. PULLEN (S.W. London Polytechnic Institute). Demy 8vo. 9s. [Ready.

NEW VOLUME OF CHAPMAN'S "DIAMOND LIBRARY."

ENGLISH SONNETS. Collected and Edited by A. T. Quiller-Couch. With Introduction and Notes and Full Index, and 3 Woodcut Portrait Illustrations by Simon Harmon Vedder. Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth and gilt top, 2s.; limp calf, 4s. [Now ready.

NEW VOLUME OF THE "CENTENARY" EDITION OF CARLYLE.

OLIVER CROMWELL'S LETTERS and SPEECHES. With Elucidations. By Thomas Carlyle. With an Introduction by H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L. Vol. II. With 3 Photogravure Portraits. Square crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Next week.

(Forming Volume VII. of the "Centenary" Edition of Carlyle's Works.)

NEW VOLUMES OF THE "GADSHILL" EDITION OF DICKENS.

LIFE and ADVENTURES of NICHOLAS NICKLEBY. 2 vols. with an Introduction and Notes by Andrew Lang. 89 Illustrations by Phiz, and a Portrait of Charles Dickens by Maclise, engraved by Findon. Square crown 8vo. 12s. [This day.

Forming Volumes IV. and V. of the "Gadshill" Edition of Dickens's Works.

CHAPMAN & HALL, Limited, London.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by John Edward Francis, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by John C. Francis at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, April 3, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3624. SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

THE DÜRER SOCIETY.

Provisional Committee.

WALTER CRANE.	MISS BERTHA NEWCOMBE.
CAMPBELL DODGSON.	J. BERNARD PARTRIDGE.
GEORGE J. FRAMPTON, A.R.A.	FRANK SHORT.
G. PERCIVAL GASKELL.	EDWARD F. STRANGE.
SELWYN IMAGE.	GLEESON WHITE.
H. C. MARILLIER.	MISS ALICE B. WOODWARD.

FREDERICK WHELEN, Hon. Treasurer.

This Society is being formed for the purpose of issuing Facsimile Reproductions of the Works of Albert Dürer and his Contemporaries. The Annual Subscription is One Guinea, and the number of Members will be limited to two hundred and fifty.

Further particulars can be obtained on application to the Hon. Sec.

SID. M. PEARTREE.

12, Chalcot-gardens, Haverstock-hill, N.W.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)

Arrangements are made to provide Members with seats to view the QUEEN'S PROCESSION on the line of route at moderate prices.—For terms, &c., apply Secretary's Offices, 60, Haymarket, S.W.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)

The Committee propose (prior to entering on New and Larger Premises) to elect FIVE HUNDRED NEW TOWN MEMBERS and ONE THOUSAND NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS at the Original Subscription of 3*l.* 3*s.* and 1*l.* 1*s.* per annum respectively.

The Subscription for Future Members will then be raised to 5*l.* 5*s.* (Town) and 2*l.* 2*s.* (Country).

For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY,

PALL MALL CLUB OFFICES, 60, HAYMARKET, S.W.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE (1897).

President—The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.

The Conference will be held in LONDON on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of existing libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Organizing Committee will be glad to receive offers of Papers. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to invitations to all functions and entertainments.

J. Y. W. MACALISTER, Honorary General Secretary.

20, Hanover-square, W.

ROYAL LITERARY FUND.

LORD LISTER, President R.S., will preside at the ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY DINNER of the ROYAL LITERARY FUND, on WEDNESDAY, May 5 at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLE, S.W., at 7 for 7.30 P.M. precisely.

FIRST LIST OF STEWARDS.

John Anderson, Esq., M.D., LL.D., F.R.S.	George W. Mackenzie, Esq., F.R.C.S.
Robert Barnes, Esq., M.D. F.R.C.P., F.R.C.S.	Frederick Macmillan, Esq.
R. S. Fancourt Barnes, Esq., M.D., F.R.S.E.	Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B., K.C.V.O.
Richard Bentley, Esq.	N. Story Maskelyne, Esq., F.R.S.
Sir Henry Bessemer, F.R.S.	Prof. Henry A. Miers, F.R.S.
William Blackwood, Esq.	C. Lloyd Morgan, Esq.
B. Edward Brodhurst, Esq., F.R.C.S.	John Murray, Esq., F.S.A.
Henry W. Cave, Esq.	Dr. John Murray, Sc.D., LL.D., F.R.S.
Professor John Cleland, M.D., D.Sc., F.R.S.	Edward Nettleship, Esq., F.R.C.S.
The Rev. the President of Corpus.	John W. Ogle, Esq., M.D., F.S.A.
George Cowell, Esq., F.R.C.S.	Prof. Thomas Oliver, M.D., F.R.C.P., F.R.S.E.
The Lord Davey, F.R.S.	Herbert W. Page, Esq., F.R.C.S.
Clinton T. Dent, Esq., F.R.C.S.	J. C. Parkinson, Esq.
Francis Elgar, Esq., LL.D., F.R.S.	Sir Richard Quain, Bart., M.D., LL.D., F.R.S.
Hon. Arthur D. Elliot.	Thomas Raleigh, Esq.
Sir John Evans, K.C.B., F.R.S.	Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, M.P.
Wickham Flower, Esq.	Sir William Roberts, M.D., F.R.S.
J. P. Gassiot, Esq.	The Rev. the Master of St. John's, Cambridge.
F. W. Gibbs, Esq., C.B. Q.C.	Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P.
Sir Robert Giffen, K.C.B., LL.D., F.R.S.	W. Domett Stone, Esq., M.D., F.R.C.S.
I. Gollancz, Esq.	J. Wilson Swan, Esq., F.R.S.
A. Pearce Gould, Esq., F.R.C.S., M.B.	The Lord Walsingham, F.R.S.
W. E. Green, Esq.	The Rev. Dr. Wace.
Jonathan Hutchinson, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.S., F.R.S.	C. Knight Watson, Esq., F.S.A.
Dr. Henry Jackson, Litt.D.	Hermann Weber, Esq., M.D., F.R.C.P.
The Lord Kelvin, F.R.S.	Henry Wilde, Esq., F.R.S.
John Leighton, Esq., F.S.A.	C. Theodore Williams, Esq., M.D., F.R.C.P.
J. Norman Lockyer, Esq., C.B., F.R.S.	E. Perceval Wright, Esq., M.D.
T. Norton Longman, Esq.	Prof. Sydney Young, D.Sc. F.R.S.
Frank McClean, Esq., LL.D. F.R.S.

Gentlemen invited to be Stewards are requested to be so kind as to reply as soon as possible to the Secretary.

A. LLEWELYN ROBERTS.

7, Adelphi-terrace, W.C.

YOUNG LADY (experienced) wishes post as SECRETARY. Has had sound English education. French and German acquired abroad. Shorthand, Type-writing; used to reading aloud. Good references. Address A. L. P., care of Messrs. Reynell & Son, Advertisement Offices, 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

SECRETARIAL or LITERARY WORK WANTED by Intermed. B.A. (Lond.) reading for final. Fair knowledge of Classics, English Literature, French, and Philosophy. Many years' practical experience of the Printing and Bookselling businesses. Proofs and MSS. Revised.

C. D., Library, 440, New Cross-road, London.

TO PUBLISHERS.—LITERARY ADVISER to one of the oldest London Publishing Firms for the last 7½ years NOW AT LIBERTY. Letters to S. G., care of C. B. Ward, Solicitor, 5, Bedford-row, W.C.

SUB-EDITOR REQUIRED. Must be methodical, terse, and a good tabulator of facts; a practical knowledge of building.—Apply, with particulars of qualifications and salary, to the Builders' Journal, Effingham House, Arundel-street, Strand, W.C.

PRINTER'S READER REQUIRED in large London Office. Must have had previous experience in Reading for Press, and be a thoroughly practical Printer.—Apply, stating age, salary required, and experience, to READER, at Horncastle's, 61, Cheapside, E.C.

TRAVELLER WANTED to represent large PUBLISHING HOUSE. Salary 300*l.* per annum, with good Expenses and Commission on rates over a fixed amount. Experience with a good House and first-class credentials indispensable.—Address C. S., care of T. B. Browne's Advertising Offices, 163, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

CITY OF CHESTER.

FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A LIBRARIAN WANTED. Salary 120*l.* per annum.—Applications, in Candidate's own handwriting, stating age (not under 25 nor more than 45) and qualifications, with three testimonials, to be addressed to me at the Town Hall, Chester, on or before the 15th instant.

Experience in a Public Library indispensable.

The Librarian will be required to devote the whole of his time to the duties of the office.

Personal application must not be made to Members of the Free Library Committee or the Town Council.

By order, SAML. SMITH, Town Clerk.

Town Hall, Chester, April 2, 1897.

CITY of LONDON SCHOOL, Victoria Embankment, E.C.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT MASTER to teach about Thirty Hours per Week in the Modern Third Class and elsewhere. Thorough German (Literary and Colloquial) and Mathematics. A good knowledge of French a recommendation.

The salary will be 250*l.* a year. Candidates for the appointment are requested to forward their applications, accompanied with a copy of testimonials as to qualification and character, not later than Saturday, April 24 next, to the SECRETARY, at the School, Victoria Embankment, E.C. Selected Candidates will be duly communicated with. Forms of application can be obtained of the Secretary. A Gentleman not over 30 years of age will be required.

ROYAL UNIVERSITY of IRELAND.

NOTICE.

The Senate will at their next meeting take into consideration the appointment of TWO EXAMINERS in HISTORY.

All applications should be lodged with the Secretaries by May 1, 1897.

For information as to salaries, duties, &c., application should be made to the Secretaries.

J. C. MEREDITH, J. M'GRATH } Secretaries.

Royal University of Ireland, Dublin, April 4, 1897.

CENTRAL WELSH BOARD for INTERMEDIATE EDUCATION.

EXAMINATION OF SCHOOLS, 1897.

APPOINTMENT OF CHIEF EXAMINERS.

The Executive Committee of the Central Welsh Board will shortly proceed to the appointment of FIVE CHIEF EXAMINERS.

Candidates must have special knowledge of at least one of the following Departments:—

1. CLASSICS.
2. MATHEMATICS.
3. ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE.
4. WELSH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE.
5. HISTORY.
6. MODERN LANGUAGES.
7. PHYSICS.
8. CHEMISTRY.
9. BOTANY.

Candidates are requested to send in their applications not later than April 30 next to the undersigned, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

OWEN OWEN, Chief Inspector.

Oswestry, March 25, 1897.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE,

Cooper's Hill, Staines.—The Course of Study is arranged to fit an Engineer for Employment in Europe, India, and the Colonies. About 40 Students will be admitted in September, 1897. The Secretary of State will offer them for Competition Twelve Appointments as Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department, and Three Appointments as Assistant Superintendents in the Telegraph Department.—For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, at the College.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

THE SCHOOL of LITERARY ART, Conducted by FLORENCE MARRYAT. For instruction in Composing and Writing Fiction, Journalism, and the Drama.—Apply to SECRETARY, 26, Abercorn-place, N.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON (for WOMEN), York-place, Baker-street, W.

Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.

The EASTER TERM, 1897, BEGINS on THURSDAY, April 29. Special Classes for Students who matriculated in January.

Dr. DRYSDALE will begin a Course on BACTERIOLOGY.

Two Entrance Scholarships will be offered for competition in June.

LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

NOTICE.—FRIDAY NEXT being GOOD FRIDAY, the ATHENÆUM will be published on THURSDAY, at 2 o'clock.—ADVERTISEMENTS should be at the Office not later than 10 o'clock on WEDNESDAY Morning.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

INFORMATION respecting WORKS by Mr. RUSKIN and others, published by Mr ALLEN, of Orpington and 156, Charing Cross-road, W.C., will be found on p. 465 of this paper.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on MAY 3. The work is arranged so that a Student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then.

Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned.

A. E. BARKER, F.R.C.S., Dean of the Faculty.
J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL and COLLEGE.

The SUMMER SESSION will BEGIN on MAY 1, 1897.

Students can reside in the College within the Hospital walls, subject to the collegiate regulations.

The Hospital contains a service of 750 beds. Scholarships and Prizes of the aggregate value of nearly 900*l.* are awarded annually.

The Medical School contains large Lecture-Rooms and well-appointed Laboratories for practical teaching, as well as Dissecting-Rooms, Museum, Library, &c.

A large recreation-ground has recently been purchased.

For further particulars apply, personally or by letter, to the WARDEN OF THE COLLEGE, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, E.C.

A Handbook forwarded on application.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL, PADDINGTON, W.

The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on MAY 3.

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS in NATURAL SCIENCE.—One of 144*l.*; Two of 78*l.* 15*s.*; One of 52*l.* 10*s.*; Two of 57*l.* 15*s.*, will be awarded by Examination on September 22 and 23.

Students who enter in May are eligible to compete for these Scholarships.

The RESIDENTIAL COLLEGE is at present at 33 and 35, Westbourne-terrace, W. Students received at a charge of 75*l.* for the academic year. Careful supervision of evening studies is given. Preparatory Classes are provided for the various Examinations, and also for the Preliminary Scientific Examination.

CLARENCE MEMORIAL WING.

Arrangements are now being made to build (1) a New Out-Patients' Department; (2) a Residential College for Students; (3) New Special Wards; (4) a Nurses' Home; and (5) well-isolated Wards for Lying-in Women. This will add One Hundred Beds to the Hospital. The Out-Patient Department, commenced in November, 1894, will be finished shortly.

CLASSES FOR PRELIMINARY SCIENTIFIC M.B.

Students attending these Classes can reside in the College at a charge of 90*l.*, which includes the fee for the Lectures and Demonstrations both at the Medical School and in the College.

SPECIAL CLASSES for the HIGHER EXAMINATIONS are held.

The Medical, Surgical, and Obstetric Tutors assist the Students in preparing for the final examinations.

The School Secretary, MR. F. H. MADDEN, will forward the Prospectus on application.

GEORGE P. FIELD, Dean.
A. P. LUFF, M.D., Sub-Dean.

GUY'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL.—The SUMMER SESSION will BEGIN on MAY 3, and Students then entering will be eligible to compete for ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS of the combined value of 360*l.* in the following September, as well as for the numerous Medals, Scholarships, and Prizes awarded during the period of Studentship.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has intimated his intention of formally opening, early in the Session, the recently-erected Laboratories, Lecture Theatre, and Class-Rooms, which will form a most valuable addition to the teaching resources of the School.

The number of patients treated in the wards during last year exceeded 6,000, and the Governors have announced that between 30 and 40 additional beds will be immediately provided for the reception of Maternity cases and of patients suffering from Diseases peculiar to Women.

The appointments tenable by Students have recently been increased by more than 150 a year, chiefly by the addition of Clerkships and Dresserships in the Departments of Ophthalmology, Gynæcology, and Otology.

To augment the teaching of Special Subjects, Registrars and Tutors have been appointed in the Ophthalmic and Obstetric Departments.

All Hospital Appointments are open to Students without charge, and the holders of Resident Appointments are provided with board and lodging.

The College accommodates 60 Students under the supervision of a Resident Warden.

The Dental School provides the full curriculum required for the L.D.S. England.

The Clubs' Union Athletic Ground is easily accessible.

A Handbook of information for those about to enter the Medical Profession will be forwarded on application.

For the Prospectus of the School, containing full particulars as to fees, course of study advised, regulations for Residents in the College, &c. apply personally or by letter to the DEAN, Guy's Hospital, London Bridge, S.E.

ASSISTANT SCHOOLMISTRESSES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can recommend University Graduates, Trained and Certificated High School Teachers, Foreign Teachers, Kindergarten Mistresses, &c.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Testimonials in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—Hon. Sec., 22, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations, at home or abroad. A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, Mr. J. Brooks, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—26, Sackville-street, W.

THE EDITOR of the PRODUCE WORLD (Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, E.C.) is open to PURCHASE ORIGINAL ARTICLES on the Planting, Growing, and Preparation of all Classes of Colonial Produce for the British Markets.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER.—Authors' MSS. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Circulars, &c., by Copying Process. Authors' references.—Miss Sykes, West Kensington Type-writing Agency, 13, Wolverton-gardens, Hammersmith, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—Authors' MSS. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Inclusive charges. Large quantities by arrangement. Examination Questions &c. Reduplicated. Dramatic work a speciality.—Fanny Dawson, 88, Iverson-road, West Hampstead, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms. Shorthand or Type-writing. Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. Farran, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

TYPE-WRITING, MANUSCRIPTS, PLAYS, &c., COPIED. Terms 1*d.* per folio (72 words), or 5,000 words and over, 10*d.* per thousand, in two colours, 1*s.*, paper included.—Miss Nightingall, Springfield, Walkern-road, Stevenage.

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,

49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,

WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.

SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Specialty—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Specialty—Medical Indexing.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. Taylor, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY, Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. Burghes, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. Burghes, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

9, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, London.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6*d.*, by Horace Cox, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

TO AUTHORS.—Messrs. DIGBY, LONG & CO. (Publishers of 'The Author's Manual,' 3*s.* 6*d.* net, Eighth Edition), INVITE AUTHORS to FORWARD their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.—Address 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

THE TRUTH ABOUT STAMMERING.—Any one interested will receive the latest information, and important Books on the CURE, on loan post free without charge, from Hinrtel, Messrs. Deacon's, 154, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

REPRODUCTIONS IN PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHY

(the Carbon process) of the Chief Treasures of the Great Continental Galleries, including

The PUBLIC and PRIVATE GALLERIES of ROME.

The UFFIZI and PITTI GALLERIES, FLORENCE.

The ROYAL MUSEUMS of BERLIN and DRESDEN.

The MUSEUM of the LOUVRE, PARIS.

The PICTURE GALLERIES of HOLLAND and BELGIUM.

The MUSEO del PRADO, MADRID.

&c. &c. &c.

This almost exhaustive series of Autotypes includes nearly every work of Art of interest to the Artist, to the Historical Student, and to the Lover of Pictures. The selection of Works to be reproduced has, in every instance, been made under the advice of eminent Authorities and of the Official Directors of the respective Collections. By the aid of the most recent improvements in Photographic Science, absolutely faithful and Permanent Copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the Original Paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments, on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A.
SIR EDW. BURNE-JONES.
DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.

A large series of the Chief Works of these Masters, reproduced in various sizes, at prices ranging from 3*s.* 6*d.* to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of the Collection of Autotype Reproductions of the Works of Old and Modern Masters will be sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

Catalogues.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth, Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—Walter T. Spencer, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

BOOKS relating to Art, Astronomy, Banking, Birds, Campaigns, Dramatic Biographies, Fishes, French Revolution, Napoleon, Natural History, Parliament, Pictures, Theology, Science, Sports, and other subjects are offered in Bell's Catalogue, No. 117, 1,250 entries.—W. J. Smith, 63, North-street, Brighton. Free on application.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts and Engravings.
NEW CATALOGUE, No. 85, OF CHOICE BOOKS AND MANUSCRIPTS,
Including a Remarkable Collection of RARE BOOKS on MUSIC,
now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—Wm. Ward, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London, 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh, and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO., 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors, old and modern.—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.
CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3*d.* post free.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

INTERESTING and SCARCE BOOKS on Archæology—Topography—History—Drama—Angling—Sport—Africa—Alpine—Art—Book-Plates—Scarce Books on Ireland—First Editions—and fine Illustrated Books at bargain prices. NEW CATALOGUE free.—Address T. Methuen, 15, Park-lane, Leeds.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—Gilbert & Field, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.

All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

BRANCH OFFICES:—

241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

LONDON LIBRARY,
ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.
Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.
Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.
Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.
The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription, 3*l.* a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo. price 21*s.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS speedily procured. Acknowledged the most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants to BAKER'S Great Bookshop, Birmingham.—Books Bought, Lent, or Exchanged.

MAGAZINES WANTED One Month after date of publication. Please report any. Architecture, Architectural Review, Artist, Art Journal, Magazine of Art, The Home, Studio, Portfolio.—MAWSON, SWAN & MORGAN, Grey-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

FOR SALE, PALMER'S INDEX to the TIMES Newspaper, from 1830 to 1895.—P. S. KING & SON, 12, King-street, Westminster.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c., ON SALE by FRANK T. SABIN, 118, Shaftesbury avenue, W.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD.
(The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

R. L. STEVENSON.—SKERRYVORE, BOURNEMOUTH.—Bijou Residence, which was for many years the property and favourite home of Robert Louis Stevenson, TO BE SOLD PRIVATELY. Well-wooded grounds, Stabling, &c.—Full particulars from the Owner, H. LEWIS, Skerryvore, Bournemouth.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, April 12, the REMAINING WORKS of the late LAKE PRICE and LOUIS FALERO.

On TUESDAY, April 13, a COLLECTION of ORIENTAL ARMS and ARMOUR, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, deceased; also the COLLECTION of EUROPEAN ARMOUR and ARMS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; and ARMS and ARMOUR from various private sources.

On WEDNESDAY, April 14, MODERN PICTURES, the Property of a LADY and from different sources.

On WEDNESDAY, April 14, PORCELAIN, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, and FURNITURE.

On THURSDAY, April 15, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, the Property of the late GEORGE HERRING, Esq., and others.

On FRIDAY, April 23, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS of the late J. ROBSON, Esq., THOMAS CHAMBERS, Esq., W. E. BISCOE, Esq., and (by order of Mr. Justice Stirling, in the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division) re Morgan Settled Estates.

On SATURDAY, April 24, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, the Property of the late A. J. W. BIDDULPH, Esq.

On MONDAY, April 26, the REMAINING WORKS of E. K. JOHNSON, R.W.S., deceased.

On TUESDAY, April 27, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS after LANDSEER of the late Sir GEORGE JOHNSON, and the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS of the late GEORGE JAMES, Esq.

On THURSDAY, April 29, the COLLECTION of MEZZOTINTS after Sir J. REYNOLDS of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A., and the REMAINING WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A.

On FRIDAY, April 30, CHOICE WINES, the Property of the MARQUIS of WORCESTER; a large CELLAR of OLD VINTAGE PORTS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, deceased; and other fine Wines.

On SATURDAY, May 1, the WORKS and COLLECTION of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A.; the WORKS and COLLECTION of the late Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A.; and a few High-Class Modern Pictures from different sources.

On MONDAY, May 3, the WORKS of the late J. F. LEWIS, R.A.

On WEDNESDAY, May 5, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, the Property of the late Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A.

On SATURDAY, May 8, important EARLY ENGLISH PICTURES from MULGRAVE CASTLE, and other famous Collections.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 150 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues will be ready shortly, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

A Collection of Roman Coins, the Property of a Gentleman, and other Small Collections.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 12, at 1 o'clock precisely, SMALL COLLECTIONS of COINS, the Properties of the late Prof. MIDDLETON, Litt.D., D.C.L., V.P.S.A., the late W. BEESLEY, Esq., of Banbury, &c., comprising Early British Stater AN of Antedrigus—Quarter Stater AN of Tasciovanus—Pennies AR of Harthacanute, Henry I., and Stephen—Peninsular War Medal, with clasp for "Maida"—Silver Medal of the Worlingworth Volunteers, 1789—Abyssinian Gold Decoration granted to General Charles Kirkham, 1863, and various other Foreign Orders, &c.—Coin Cabinets and Numismatic Books.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the late J. MEDMER GOODWIN, Esq., of Bath.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 13, and Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a Portion of the Library of the late JOHN MEDMER GOODWIN, Esq., of Bath, comprising Modern Illustrated French Works—Books on Architecture—Archæological Publications—Works on Art, &c.; the Property of the late Rev. PECKLETON POWER, including Theological Works—Biography—Architecture—Poetry, &c.; the Property of Mrs. CLUTTERBUCK, comprising First Editions of the Writings of W. A. Maxwell, C. Lever, J. H. Jesse, Charles Dickens, &c.—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Leech, H. K. Browne, Tenniel, Millais, and others; the Property of a LADY, including Pierce Egan's Life of an Actor, First Edition—Dickens's Works, Edition de Luxe, 30 vols.—Scarce Sporting Works, &c; and other Properties, comprising Horæ Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, MS. on Vellum, Sæc. XV.—First Editions of Lever, Dickens, Thackeray, Keats, &c.—Harvey's Phycologia Britannica, 3 vols.—Greville's Scottish Cryptogamic Flora, 6 vols.—Curtis's Botanical Magazine, 67 vols.—Surtees's Durham, 4 vols., &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 13, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, CHINA, SILVER and PLATED GOODS, and FURNITURE, including the Property of the late E. P. BROCK, Esq., F.S.A. (by order of the Executors).

Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Books, including the Remaining Portion of the Library of the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 21, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, amongst which will be found Shaw's Dresses, 2 vols. Large Paper—Bryan's Dictionary of Painters—Boccaccio's Decameron, by Payne—Dobson's Horace Walpole, Large Paper—Heptameron, 5 vols. 1894—Johnson's Works, 12 vols.—Pope's Works, by Warton—Fielding's Works, by Murphy—Inman's Ancient Faiths—Archæological Journal—Neale's Westminster Abbey, 2 vols. Largest Paper—Turner Gallery—Waring's Masterpieces—Richardson's Local Historian's Table Book, 8 vols.—Brönte's Jane Eyre, First Edition—Laing's (S.) The Heims Kringla, First Edition—Lamb's Album Verses—Freeman's Norman Conquest and William Rufus—Books with Autographs of William and Mary Howitt—Works on India—Early Printed Herbals, with Woodcuts—Old MS. Collections relating to English Counties—Autograph Letters, &c., including an interesting Contemporary Document relating to Napoleon, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of two stamps.

TUESDAY NEXT.

A Further Portion of the Collection of Birds' Eggs formed by LEOPOLD FIELD, Esq., and the Collection of Eggs formed by the late Rev. GREGORY SMART, a fine Egg of the Great Auk, Cabinet, Cases, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY NEXT, April 13, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

THURSDAY NEXT.

Special Sale of Photographic and Electrical Apparatus, Scientific Instruments, and Miscellaneous Property, from various Private Sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will hold the above SALE by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on THURSDAY NEXT, April 15, at half-past 12 o'clock.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Valuable Law Books, including the Library of a Barrister.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 13, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE LAW BOOKS, comprising the New Law Reports, 1865-6 to 1895, 262 vols.—Cases in Equity, Bankruptcy, Nisi Prius, Common Pleas, King's and Queen's Bench, &c.—Fisher's Common Law Digest, 7 vols—Chitty's Collection of Statutes, 6 vols—Revised Statutes, and other Modern Text-Books—MSS. Journals of the Lords and Commons from the Earliest Period to Queen Anne—Rolls of Parliament, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books, including an Old Country Library.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 14, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Sir R. C. Hoare's North and South Wiltshire, in 3 vols.—Record Publications, 16 vols.—Dugdale's Origines—Du Cange and Spelman's Glossaries—Works of Raffaelle, Poussin, &c., 5 vols. Large Paper—Higgins's Celtic Druids—Penn's Original Letters, 5 vols.—Chauncy's Hertfordshire, 2 vols. Large Paper—Chalmers's English Poets, 21 vols., and Dictionary, 32 vols.—the Works of Swift, Dryden, Spenser, Addison, Johnson, Ford, and other English Authors—French and German Books, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

RAMSAY'S LATIN PROSE VERSIONS.—Large-Paper Edition—A SLIP of ERRATA in this Edition will be forwarded to any one possessing a copy who will apply to CLARENDON PRESS, Amen Corner, London, E.C.

"THE CHURCH of BROU," Illustrations of its Architecture and Monuments. The Report of the Works Committee, L.C.C. The "Dépôt Centrale des Postes et Télégraphes," Paris. Architecture in Relation to the Craftsman &c.

See the BUILDER of April 10, post free, 1½*d.*

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

Price 1*s.* net (post free, 1*s.* 2*d.*).
Subscription price, 14*s.* per annum, post free.

THE INVESTORS' REVIEW.
Edited by A. J. WILSON.

Contents of APRIL Number.

WAR CLOUDS, EAST and SOUTH.
NOTES on HOME RAILWAY ACCOUNTS for 1896.
HIGHER TARIFF and a GOLD SCRAMBLE in AMERICA. By Francis H. Hardy.
The HERO, LIMITED. By Carlyle, jun.
The "HONOURABLE" J. G. WARD.
The "VENTURE" GROUP.
The FOLLY of JAPAN.
APOLLINARIS and JOHANNIS, LIMITED.
MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL.
COMPANY NOTES.
BALANCE-SHEET FACTS and INFERENCES.
NEW INVESTMENTS of the MONTH—March, 1897.
&c. &c. &c.

Price 2*s.* net (post free, 2*s.* 2*d.*).
Subscription price, 8*s.* 6*d.* per annum, post free.

THE INVESTMENT INDEX.
A QUARTERLY SUPPLEMENT TO THE INVESTORS' REVIEW.

Contents of the APRIL Number.

LIST of INTEREST and DIVIDEND BEARING SECURITIES, with their YIELDS CLASSIFIED.
SUSPENDED ANIMATION in MARKETS.
BANK of CALCUTTA, LIMITED.
BREWERS' SUGAR CO.
GENERAL HYDRAULIC POWER CO., LIMITED.
LONDON and SOUTH WESTERN BANK.
LONDON and WESTMINSTER BANK.
TELEGRAPH CONSTRUCTION CO.
TEMPERANCE PERMANENT BUILDING CO.
THOMAS WALLIS & CO., LIMITED.
&c. &c. &c.

INVESTORS' REVIEW and INVESTMENT INDEX, 21*s.* per annum, post free.

London:
CLEMENT WILSON, 29, Paternoster-row, E.C.

DAVID NUTT,
270-271, STRAND.

THE CLASSICAL REVIEW.
Vol. XI. APRIL, 1897. No. 3. Net, 1*s.* 6*d.*

Contents.

H. RICHARDS. Critical Notes on the Minor Works of Xenophon VI. and VII. ('The Constitutions').
A. SOUTER. Greek Metrical Inscriptions from Phrygia. (Continued.)
M. W. HUMPHREYS. Notes on Greek Grammar.
E. H. MILES. Notes on the Dative of the Possessor.
E. W. FAY. Contested Etymologies.
K. LAKE. Notes on 'Didache' 1, 2, and 'Acts' 15, 20, 29.
E. B. LEASE. On Instances of Diaeresis at every foot in Latin Metres.
C. L. MULVANY, R. C. SEATON, and A. PLATT. On the Fourth Thesis of the Homeric Hexameter.
G. B. GRUNDY. On Pylos and Sphacteria.
M. L. EARLE. Note on Plato, 'Symp.' 179 C.
H. A. STRONG. Notes on Ter. 'Ad.' 415 and Plaut. 'Most.' 805.
Brenous's 'Hellénismes dans la Syntaxe Latine. F. D. ALLEN.
Recent Editions of Hippocrates. T. C. ALLBUTT.
Ludwich's Edition of the 'Batrachomachia.' T. W. ALLEN.
Postgate's Edition of Lucan, Book VII. S. G. OWEN.
Hauvette on the Epigrams of Simonides. H. STUART JONES.
Babelon's 'Les Origines de la Monnaie.' PERCY GARDNER.
MONTHLY RECORD—SUMMARIES—BIBLIOGRAPHY.

JUST OUT.

The CELTIC CHURCH of WALES.
By J. W. WILLIS BUND. A handsome demy 8vo. volume of viii-533 pp. Cloth, uncut, 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

The SCOTSMAN says:—

"Mr. J. W. Willis Bund's painstaking history of 'The Celtic Church of Wales' sets its subject in a light in which it is too seldom seen. Nearly all ecclesiastical histories treat the story of the Welsh Church from the point of view of Latin Christianity. They seek to explain the early Welsh Church by reference either to Roman or to Anglican institutions. Mr. Bund goes about his work in a more impartial spirit. He examines the history of the Welsh Church in the light of early Welsh laws and in the light of such existing customs as show a scientific observer what the institutions of the Celtic race were in early periods of history.....From whichever point of view its subject is regarded—that of the antiquarian, or that of the ecclesiastical politician—the book is valuable and instructive, and deserves to be widely read."

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

BY THE LATE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

CYPRIAN:

HIS LIFE, HIS TIMES, HIS WORK.

By EDWARD WHITE BENSON, D.D. D.C.L.,

Sometime Archbishop of Canterbury.

8vo. 21*s.* net.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Full of rare and recondite learning, and written in a concise and engaging style. No person certainly can read it, or, indeed, any chapter of it, without edification."

FIFTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.

With 10 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.

Demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.

BY THE LATE EDWARD A. FREEMAN.

SKETCHES of TRAVELS in NORMANDY and MAINE. By EDWARD A. FREEMAN. With Illustrations from Drawings by the Author, and a Preface by W. H. HUTTON, B.D. Crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The book abounds with historical research and antiquarian erudition."

1897 ISSUE NOW READY.

The STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK. A Statistical and Historical Annual of the States of the Civilized World for the Year 1897. Thirty-fourth Annual Publication. Revised after Official Returns. Edited by J. SCOTT KELTIE. With Maps. Crown 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.*

SPECTATOR.—"It is, as usual, the most important of all the books of reference for the politician and the statistician."

NEW NOVEL BY CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The PILGRIMAGE of the BEN BERIAH. By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

SCOTSMAN.—"The hand of Miss Charlotte M. Yonge has not lost its cunning with the burden of years.....It is a book one feels glad to have read."

VOLUME VI. NOW READY.

EMINENT PERSONS. Biographies Reprinted from the Times. Vol. VI., 1893–1894. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.* Containing, amongst others, Prof. JOWETT, Sir SAMUEL BAKER, LORD COLERIDGE, the TSAR ALEXANDER III.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"Models of accurate knowledge, concisely expressed in dignified and polished prose, rounded off with temperate and judicious criticism."

SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The DOCTRINE of the PROPHETS. The Warburtonian Lectures for 1886–1890. By A. F. KIRKPATRICK, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, &c.

VOLUME II. NOW READY.

A NEW SYSTEM of MEDICINE. By Many Writers. Edited by THOMAS CLIFFORD ALLBUTT, M.A. M.D. F.R.S. Vol. II. Containing INFECTIONS (continued); INTOXICATIONS and INTERNAL PARASITES. 8vo. 25*s.* net.

BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE.

ANCIENT VOLCANOES of GREAT BRITAIN. By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, F.R.S., &c. With 7 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. 36*s.* net.

MACMILLAN'S ENGLISH CLASSICS.—New Volume.

BUNYAN'S PILGRIM'S PROGRESS in MODERN ENGLISH. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by JOHN MORRISON, M.A. B.D. Globe 8vo. 1*s.* 9*d.*

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

NOW READY, with Illustrations, 8vo. 18*s.*

SOME UNRECOGNIZED LAWS OF NATURE.

An Inquiry into the Causes of Physical Phenomena, with special reference to Gravitation.

By IGNATIUS SINGER and LEWIS H. BERENS.

This is an entirely new and original work, the result of long study and independent experiment and research. By a close examination of the conditions under which various phenomena are manifested, an attempt has been made to throw light on the Laws of Nature to which such manifestations are due.

NEXT WEEK, with Maps and Illustrations, 8vo. 14*s.*

PHILIP AND ALEXANDER OF MACEDON.

Two Essays in Biography.

By DAVID G. HOGARTH, Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford;

Author of 'A Wandering Scholar,' &c.

2 vols. demy 8vo. 32*s.*

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF BENJAMIN JOWETT, M.A.,

Master of Balliol College, Oxford.

By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., and the Rev. LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D.

With Portraits and other Illustrations.

"A most agreeable impression of his own personal character is left upon us by this biography, one to make those who read it realize what a privilege it was to be intimate with him, and to account for the almost religious respect with which he was regarded by successive generations of Balliol men."—Standard.

The First Edition being exhausted, a Reprint is ready to-day.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 18*s.*

NOTES from a DIARY, 1851–72. Kept by the Right Hon. Sir MOUNTSTUART E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I., sometime Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, Governor of Madras, 1881–86.

"This is a charming book, full of good things. It consists of the lighter reminiscences of a singularly accomplished man of the world, who in the course of a varied and active life has come in contact with a vast number of distinguished people in many countries."—St. James's Gazette.

With Portrait, fcap. 4to. 10*s.* 6*d.*

LORD BOWEN: a Biographical Sketch. With Selections from his Unpublished Poems. By Sir HENRY STEWART CUNNINGHAM, K.C.I.E.

"Every one who knew Lord Bowen well must be grateful to Sir Henry Cunningham for writing, and to Lady Bowen for empowering him to publish, this brilliant sketch of one of the most brilliant men of our century."—Spectator.

Demy 8vo. 18*s.*

The DAWN of MODERN GEOGRAPHY. A History of Travel and Geographical Science from the Conversion of the Roman Empire to 900 A.D., with an Account of the Achievements and Writings of the Early Christian, Arab, and Chinese Students and Explorers. By C. RAYMOND BEAZLEY, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford. With Reproductions of the Principal Maps of the Time.

"Mr. Beazley has devoted to his difficult task an amazing amount of diligent and painstaking research.....and his literary skill in condensing such a mass of material has enabled him to make a very interesting volume."—Times.

Crown 8vo. 9*s.*

EUROPE in the MIDDLE AGE. By Oliver J. Thatcher, Ph.D., and FERDINAND SCHWILL, Ph.D.

This work has been written, by men who have had long experience in teaching, to supply the want of a compendious History of Mediæval Europe, from the middle of the fourth to the close of the fifteenth century, which has been long felt in Universities and Schools. A distinguished Professor of Modern History in one of our leading Universities, to whom a copy has been sent, writes: "The book covers ground on which it has always been hard to get a suitable book for educational purposes, and, so far as I can judge—I have as yet only examined the German History of the tenth century—it is thoroughly sound and clear."

With Maps, 8vo. 14*s.*

The NAVY and the NATION. By James R. Thursfield, M.A., and Lieut.-Col. Sir GEORGE SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G. F.R.S.

"We have called this volume a text-book, it is therefore, perhaps, needful to add that there is not a dry or a dull page in it. Whether it is Mr. Thursfield dealing with the statistics of our seaborne commerce, or Sir George Clarke explaining the relation of submarine mines to war, the subject is so dealt with that not only is it made intelligible to any average Englishman, but attention is riveted by the charm of literary style."—Times.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION. Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

STUDIES in the ART of RAT-CATCHING. By H. C. Barkley, Author of 'Between the Danube and the Black Sea,' 'My Boyhood,' &c.

"Should the reader know of a schoolboy fond of ratting, the proud possessor possibly of a sharp terrier, and, may be, of a few ferrets, and wish to bestow a present upon him, the memory of which would last throughout his life, we could not do better than advise him to spend half-a-crown in the purchase of this most pleasantly written book and bestow it upon him."—Field.

NEARLY READY.

Crown 8vo.

The STORY of a GREAT AGRICULTURAL ESTATE: an Account of the Origin and Administration of the "Beds and Bucks" and "Thorney" Estates. By the DUKE OF BEDFORD.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

GEORGE ALLEN'S PUBLICATIONS.

BY JOHN RUSKIN.

FORS CLAVIGERA:

Letters to the Labourers and Workmen of Great Britain.

A NEW CHEAP EDITION, with all the Illustrations. In 4 vols., each with an Index, crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.* each; roan, gilt edges, 8*s.* 6*d.* each.

LOVE'S MEINIE. Lectures on Greek and English Birds. The ROBIN, the SWALLOW, the DABCHICKS. With Preface, Appendix, and Index. A New Edition, uniform with the Small Edition of 'Sesame and Lilies,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 250 pp. 5*s.*

JUST OUT.

The TREASURE of the HUMBLE. By Maurice Maeterlinck. Rendered into English by ALFRED SUTRO. With an Introduction by A. B. WALKLEY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.* net.

Contents: Silence—The Awakening of the Soul—The Pre-destined—Mystic Morality—On Women—The Tragical in Daily Life—The Star—The Invisible Goodness—The Deeper Life—The Inner Beauty.

"This exceedingly interesting book."—Bookman.

"Apart from its intrinsic interest and value it lets us into the secret of the ideas upon which M. Maeterlinck has based his compositions for the theatre."—Globe.

The RIVIERAS. By Augustus J. C. Hare. Uniform with 'Florence' and 'Venice.' Illustrated with 67 Woodcuts from Drawings by the Author. Fcap. 8vo. cloth limp, 3*s.*

"The finest guide-book to these favourite resorts yet produced, and is amply and prettily illustrated."—Black and White.

NEW EDITIONS

JUST ISSUED OF AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE'S

WALKS in ROME. Fourteenth Edition, Revised. In 2 vols. complete with Map, fcap. 8vo. cloth, 10*s.*

"The best handbook of the city and environs of Rome ever published."—Pall Mall Gazette.

FLORENCE. Fourth Edition, Revised. Fcap. 8vo. with 22 Illustrations, cloth limp, 3*s.*

VENICE. Fourth Edition, Revised. With 23 Illustrations. Fcap. 8vo. cloth limp, 3*s.*

ALSO BY SAME AUTHOR.

The GURNEYS of EARLHAM: Memoirs and Letters of the Eleven Children of John and Catherine Gurney of Earlham, 1775–1875, and the Story of their Religious Life under many different forms. Illustrated with 33 Photogravure Plates and 19 Woodcuts. 2 vols. crown 8vo. 25*s.*

The STORY of TWO NOBLE LIVES. CHARLOTTE COUNTESS CANNING and LOUISA MARCHIONESS of WATERFORD. In 3 vols. of about 450 pages each. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.* With 32 Plates in Photogravure from Lady Waterford's Drawings, and 32 Woodcuts.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES: being Memorial Sketches of Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, Dean of Westminster; Henry Alford, Dean of Canterbury; Mrs. Duncan Stewart; and Paray le Monial. Illustrated with 7 Portraits and 17 Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. cloth, 8*s.* 6*d.*

The STORY of MY LIFE, 1834 to 1870, together with Recollections of Places, People, and Conversations extracted chiefly from Letters and Journals. With 18 Portraits in Photogravure and 144 Woodcuts. In 3 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

DAYS NEAR ROME. Third Edition. 2 vols. with more than 100 Illustrations by the Author, crown 8vo. cloth, 12*s.* 6*d.*

WANDERINGS in SPAIN. Seventh Edition. With 17 Full-Page Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Here is the ideal book of travel in Spain; the book which exactly anticipates the requirements of everybody who is fortunate enough to be going to that enchanted land."
Spectator.

CITIES of SOUTHERN ITALY and SICILY. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10*s.* 6*d.*

"Mr. Hare's book is one which I should advise all future travellers in Southern Italy and Sicily to find room for in their portmanteaus."—Academy.

CITIES of CENTRAL ITALY. Second Edition. With Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12*s.* 6*d.*

CITIES of NORTHERN ITALY. Second Edition. With Illustrations. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, 12*s.* 6*d.*

BY THE REV. ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, D.D.

THROUGH the DOLOMITES, from Venice to Toblach. A Practical, Historical, and Descriptive Guide-Book, with 42 Full-Page Illustrations and a Map of the District. Also an Appendix giving Tables of Railway and Diligence Stations, Times, Fares, Carriage Tariffs, Charges for Guides, Hotels, &c. Small crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

This is the only guide-book of the kind dealing with the great highway through that beautiful mountain district which is becoming more and more the resort of travellers.

BY JOHN RUSKIN.

MODERN PAINTERS. In 5 vols. With all the Woodcuts, 1 Lithograph, and the 89 Full-Page Steel Engravings. The Text is that of the 1873 Edition, with Notes, and a new Epilogue. Cloth, 6*l.* 6*s.* the 5 vols. imperial 8vo.

The STONES of VENICE. Complete Edition. (Imperial 8vo.) 3 vols. with the 53 Plates and the Text as originally issued, and Index. Cloth, 4*l.* 4*s.* the 3 vols.

EXAMPLES of the ARCHITEC- TURE of VENICE. With the Text and the 16 Plates as originally published. Cloth cover (unbound), atlas folio (about 25 in. by 17 in.), 2*l.* 2*s.*

The SEVEN LAMPS of ARCHI- TECTURE. With new Preface and Aphorisms, and the 14 original Plates. Sixth Edition. Imperial 8vo. 21*s.*

The POETRY of ARCHITECTURE; or, the Architecture of the Nations of Europe considered in its Association with Natural Scenery and National Character. With Frontispiece in Colour, 14 Plates in Photogravure, and 9 Full-Page and other Woodcuts. 4to. cloth, 21*s.*

VERONA, and other Lectures. Delivered principally at the Royal and London Institutions between 1870 and 1883. With Frontispiece in Colour, and 11 Photogravure Plates. Medium 8vo. cloth, 15*s.*

ON the OLD ROAD: a Collection of Miscellaneous Pamphlets, Articles, and Essays (1834–84). In 3 vols. 8vo. cloth, 30*s.* (not sold separately).

ARROWS of the CHACE: being a Collection of the Scattered Letters of John Ruskin (1840–80). With Preface. In 2 vols. cloth, 8vo. 20*s.* (not sold separately).

PRÆTERITA: Outlines of Scenes and Thoughts perhaps Worthy of Memory in my Past Life. Vols. 1 and 2 of this Autobiography now ready, in cloth, 13*s.* each, medium 8vo.

The ART of ENGLAND: Six Lectures delivered at Oxford in 1883. With Appendix and Index. Cloth, 6*s.* 4to.

SELECTIONS from RUSKIN. 2 vols. crown 8vo. each with Index and Portrait (sold separately), cloth, 6*s.* each; roan, gilt edges, 8*s.* 6*d.* each.

UNTO this LAST: Four Essays on the First Principles of Political Economy. Tenth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3*s.*; roan, gilt edges, 4*s.*

FRONDES AGRESTES: Readings in 'Modern Painters.' Fifteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.*; roan, gilt edges, 4*s.*

Crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.* each; roan, gilt edges, 10*s.* each; half-parchment, gilt top, 9*s.* each, with all the Plates.

The SEVEN LAMPS of ARCHI- TECTURE. The 14 Plates for this Edition have been specially prepared from the larger work. Sixth Edition.

ARATRA PENTELICI. Seven Lectures on the Elements of Sculpture. With 1 Engraving on Steel and 20 Autotype Plates.

VAL D'ARNO. Ten Lectures on Art of the Thirteenth Century in Pisa and Florence. With 1 Steel Engraving and 12 Autotype Plates.

ARIADNE FLORENTINA. Six Lectures on Wood and Metal Engraving, and Appendix. With 4 Full-Page Facsimiles from Holbein's 'Dance of Death,' and 12 Autotype Plates.

LECTURES on ARCHITECTURE and PAINTING. Delivered at Edinburgh in November, 1853. With 15 Full-Page Illustrations drawn by the Author.

The HARBOURS of ENGLAND. With the 12 Illustrations made expressly for the Work by the late J. M. W. Turner, reproduced in Photogravure, and an Introduction by T. J. WISE.

London: GEORGE ALLEN, Ruskin House, 156, Charing Cross-road, W.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

The following NEW and CHEAPER EDITIONS will be published on April 14th.

The MASTER CRAFTSMAN. By Sir WALTER BESANT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

MR. JERVIS. By B. M. Croker. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

LIFE on the MISSISSIPPI. By Mark TWAIN. (Uniform with the other Volumes of the New Collected Library Edition.) With 312 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3s. 6d.

ACADEMY NOTES, 1897, with Illustrations of the Principal Pictures at Burlington House, will be published as usual on the OPENING DAY of the ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION. Price ONE SHILLING.

NEW and CHEAPER EDITIONS of the following are now ready.

GHETTO TRAGEDIES. By I. Zangwill. With 3 Illustrations by A. S. BOYD. Long fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. net.

A LEVANTINE FAMILY. By Bayle St. John. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A POINT of CONSCIENCE. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The WHITE VIRGIN. By G. Manville FENN. Post 8vo. boards, 2s.

The HARDING SCANDAL. By Frank BARRETT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

FIFTY YEARS OF THE QUEEN'S REIGN.

FIFTY YEARS AGO. By Sir Walter BESANT. With 144 Plates and Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

LOVICE. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"In 'Dolly' and the rest we recognize the old, light, humorous touch which is distinctly Mrs. Hungerford's own....'Lovice' will not fail of widening the popularity of its author."—Glasgow Herald.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. Lynn LINTON. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

"A strong and impressive story."—Daily Telegraph.

CAVALRY LIFE and REGIMENTAL LEGENDS. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. A New Edition, the Two Series in One Volume. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. CLARK RUSSELL. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

"Mrs. Croker's knowledge of Irish life and character is revealed in its strength and fulness in this capital story. It is the Ireland of to-day....The minor characters are as well and truly drawn as the important, and the story over-brims with life, and is the best told of Irish stories we have read for many a day."—Daily Chronicle.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL. THIRD EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s.

"Like Mrs. Croker and Mr. Anthony Hope, Mr. William Westall must be counted of the tribe of benefactors whose aim is to cheer, to amuse, and to entertain, rather than to harass, to harrow, and to horrify their readers....A rattling tale of military adventure, with a pleasant undercurrent of romance....A tale brim-full of exciting incident."
Spectator.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. Illustrated by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"A bright love tale, with two charming heroines."—Black and White.
"A novelist who failed to make an exciting tale out of such weird material would be lacking in the first principles of his craft."
Daily Telegraph.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank BARRETT, Author of 'The Sin of Olga Zassoulich.' With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"It interests us from the very starting-point."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.
BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir WALTER BESANT.
AT MARKET VALUE. By GRANT ALLEN.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By ALLEN UPWARD.
LADY PATTY. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.

THE NEW LYCEUM DRAMA.

MADAME SANS-GENE. (Founded on SARDOU and MOREAU'S Play.) By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

POPULAR NOVELS

FOR

EASTER HOLIDAY READING.

NINTH EDITION.

HILDA STRAFFORD and the REMITTANCE MAN. Two Californian Stories. By BEATRICE HARRADEN, Author of 'Ships that Pass in the Night,' 'In Varying Moods.' Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Its charm is of the subtle and delicate order which cannot possibly be described."—Graphic.

SECOND EDITION.

A SPOTLESS REPUTATION. By DOROTHEA GERARD (MADAME LONGARD DE LONGGARDE), Author of 'Lady Baby,' 'The Wrong Man,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"A most fascinating and certainly a most powerful contribution to fiction."
Manchester Courier.

TWELFTH EDITION.

MONA MACLEAN, Medical Student. By GRAHAM TRAVERS. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The cleverest novel we have read for a long time."—Spectator.

THIRD EDITION.

FELLOW TRAVELLERS. By GRAHAM TRAVERS, Author of 'Mona Maclean.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Is marked by a freshness of idea and an individuality of treatment which place the stories very much above the ordinary level."—Globe.

SECOND EDITION.

AN UNCROWNED KING: a Romance of High Politics. By SYDNEY C. GRIER, Author of 'His Excellency's English Governess,' 'In Furthest Ind,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"For daring originality of plot, and graphic style of narrative, 'An Uncrowned King' is excelled by few."—Queen.

CHEAPER EDITION.

IRAS: a Mystery. By Theo. DOUGLAS, Author of 'A Bride Elect.' Crown 8vo. in specially designed paper cover by Womrath, 1s. 6d.

"An extremely clever tale."—Daily Telegraph.

A STORY OF THE COMMUNE.

The KNIGHT'S TALE. By F. EMILY PHILLIPS, Author of 'The Education of Antonia.' Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

AN IRISH ROMANCE.

A PRINCE of TYRONE. By CHARLOTTE FENNELL and J. P. O'CALLAGHAN. Crown 8vo. 6s.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

A NEW CYCLING MAP.

MESSRS. GEORGE PHILIP & SON beg to bring under the special notice of the Public their NEW MAP of ENGLAND and WALES, in 40 Sheets (size 17 by 21 in. each), which is the most detailed large-scale General Map issued by private enterprise since CARY published his half-inch Map at the beginning of the Century.

Although having for its original basis the New one-inch Ordnance Survey, PHILIPS' TOPOGRAPHICAL MAP is in no sense a mere copy or slavish reproduction, but, under the experienced direction of Mr. E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S., an enormous amount of additional information has been gathered from the Admiralty Charts and other Official Sources, whilst the Spelling and relative sizes of names have been based on the latest Census reports. In order to make this Cycling Edition as complete and perfect as possible, the delineation of the various main and cross roads has received special attention, and in addition to being carefully revised by the County Surveyors, all new information and the routes described in the valuable Road Books published by the C.T.C. have been made use of, with the result that for the first time a really new and trustworthy Road Map of England and Wales at an extremely moderate price is placed within the reach of the ever-increasing army of Cyclists.

The following Sheets and Districts will be published this Month, to be followed by others at short intervals:—

18. PETERBOROUGH and BOSTON.
19. NORWICH.
24. CAMBRIDGE.
25. IPSWICH.
29. OXFORD and READING.
30. LONDON.
31. RAMSGATE and MARGATE.
35. SOUTHAMPTON.
36. BRIGHTON.
37. DOVER and HASTINGS.

Detailed Prospectus and Index on application.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

SKEFFINGTONS' BOOKS FOR EASTER HOLIDAYS.

THIS DAY. By ERNEST G. HENHAM.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

GOD, MAN, AND THE DEVIL. A New Novel.

This new and striking Novel deals with the Marriage Question, Divorce, &c.

The GLASGOW HERALD says:—"Has dramatic scenes and striking situations."

THIS DAY. By RICHARD PENDEREL, Author of 'Wilfrid Waide, Barrister and Novelist,' 'Dick Wylder,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

AS A ROARING LION. A Romance.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"This very well-told story flows smoothly and interests one from beginning to end."

THIS DAY. By LILIAN STREET, Author of 'The Little Plain Woman,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

NELL AND THE ACTOR. A New Novel.

By EDITH E. CUTHELL, Author of 'Only a Guardroom Dog,' 'A Baireuth Pilgrimage,' &c.—THIS DAY, elegant cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

SWEET IRISH EYES: a Charming Story of Society Life.

The GENTLEWOMAN says:—"Characterized by much brightness and vivacity.....Singularly reminiscent of the late Mrs. Hungerford's style."
The SHEFFIELD DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"The way of telling this story has brought new beauty to an old theme."
The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"A bewitching heroine whose love story is spirited and amusing. A very pretty, fresh, well-written, and attractive novel."

THIS DAY. By C. J. WILLDEY.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

Translator of that successful Book, OLIVEIRA MARTIN'S 'The ENGLAND of TO-DAY.'

THE BOOK OF HUMBUG; wherein certain Little Images appear just as they are.

The humorous and clever sarcasm of this book cannot fail to obtain for it a very wide circle of readers.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"The author writes with success and caustic humour."
The GLASGOW HERALD says:—"'The Book of Humbug' is worth reading."
The PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR says:—"The author has abundance of humour, and his book will amuse a large circle of readers."

SECOND EDITION JUST OUT, crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

HELEN MATHERS' NEW BOOK 'THE JUGGLER AND THE SOUL.'

A startling and striking New Story by the AUTHOR of 'COMIN' THRO' THE RYE.'

FORTY-THIRD THOUSAND JUST OUT, crown 8vo. cloth, price 5*s.*

MARIE CORELLI'S BOOK 'THE MURDER OF DELICIA.'

NEARLY READY, crown 8vo. price 5*s.*

New and Important Work by the Rev. T. MOORE, M.A., Author of 'The Englishman's Brief,' 'The "Dead Hand" in the "Free Churches" of Dissent,' &c.

Dedicated to the memories of St. Augustine and King Ethelbert.

BEGINNINGS OF THE ENGLISH CHURCH AND KINGDOM,

EXPLAINED TO THE PEOPLE.

This day, Dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty the Queen.

HYMNS FOR THE QUEEN'S COMMEMORATION.

By the most Eminent Authors and Composers. The ROYAL EDITION, complete with Music, printed on superfine paper and bound in cloth, with gold lettering, price 1*s.* net. Cheap Editions for Congregations, Schools, &c., with Music, 2*d.*; the Words separately, ½*d.*

THIS DAY, crown 8vo. cloth, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

ORIGINAL SERMONS FOR THE QUEEN'S COMMEMORATION.

Specially written by the Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D., Dean of Canterbury. The Rev. CANON HAMMOND, LL.B., Vicar of St. Austell, Author of 'Church or Chapel,' &c. The Rev. H. J. WILMOT BUXTON (Two Sermons). The Rev. J. B. C. MURPHY, Chaplain to the Forces, Author of 'Homely Words for Life's Wayfarers.' The Rev. J. ROOKER, M.A., Vicar of Coldharbour, Dorking.

This volume also contains a TABLE of the CHIEF EVENTS affecting Religion, the Church of England, Education, &c., from 1837 to 1897.

IN PREPARATION, price 10*s.* 6*d.* By GEORGE MORLEY, Author of 'Leafy Warwickshire,' 'In Rustic Livery,' 'Sweet Audrey,' &c.

IN RUSSET MANTLE CLAD. Scenes of Rural Life in Warwickshire.

Dedicated by special permission to the Right Hon. the Countess of Warwick.

IN PREPARATION, demy 8vo. cloth, with many Illustrations, price 10*s.* 6*d.* By Rev. CANON HAMMOND, Author of 'Church or Chapel,' &c.

A CORNISH PARISH: being an Account of St. Austell—Town, Church,

District, and People. By JOSEPH HAMMOND, LL.B., Vicar.

London: SKEFFINGTON & SON, 163, Piccadilly, W.

Publishers to H.M. the Queen and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

GARDNER, DARTON & CO.

MONASTICISM, ANCIENT and MODERN: its Principles, origin, Development, Triumphs, Decadence and Suppression. With an Inquiry as to the Possibility of its Revival. By the Rev. F. C. WOODHOUSE, M.A. Large crown 8vo. cloth boards. [In the Press.]

"A useful book for those who have little time for extended reading."—Guardian.

PASTOR in PAROCHIA. By the Right Rev. W. WALSHAM HOW, D.D. Twenty-fourth Edition, with Additions. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, cut flush, 3s. 6d.; morocco or calf, 10s. 6d.

The XXXIX. ARTICLES and the AGE of the REFORMATION: an Historical and Doctrinal Exposition in the Light of Contemporary Documents. By E. TYRRELL GREEN, Lecturer in Theology and Hebrew, St. David's College, Lampeter, sometime Scholar of St. John's College, Oxford. Demy 8vo. cloth boards, 10s. 6d.

"Excellent as they are from various standpoints, the [other works on the XXXIX Articles of the Church of England by no means preclude the necessity for such a work as this, which supplies new information from new sources. The text of the Articles is given in Latin and in English, with valuable explanatory and historical notes. . . . In dealing with the wording of the Articles Mr. Green is eminently successful. . . . The work, moreover, occasionally introduces mediæval customs and ceremonies not generally known. . . . The student of Anglican divinity will find in this volume much valuable information not to be found in similar treatises."—Morning Post.

LOOKING UPWARD: Papers Introductory to the Study of Social Questions from a Religious Point of View. By the Rev. the Hon. JAMES ADDERLEY, M.A., Author of 'The New Floreat.' Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

[Second Edition.

"A volume of papers on the attitude of the clergy towards social reform which is of real value."—Athenæum.

"A vigorous treatment of what may be termed Christian sociology, from one who certainly has a moral right, derived from hard experience and self-denial second to none, to speak on this theme."—Daily Chronicle.

The LIFE of the WAITING SOUL in the INTERMEDIATE STATE. By the Rev. Canon R. E. SANDERSON, D.D., Author of 'What is the Church?' Large fcap. 8vo. cloth, bevelled boards, red edges, 2s. 6d.

[Third Edition.

"Dr. Sanderson's nine brief addresses have pleased us very much. They are plain, thoughtful, earnest, and catholic, declaring all that is known or that may reasonably be held. . . . and the plain man who wants to know what he may safely believe on the state of the waiting souls and our relation to them has here all that he needs."—Church Times.

WORK in GREAT CITIES. Lectures on Pastoral Theology, delivered in the Divinity School, Cambridge. By the Rev. A. F. WINNINGTON INGRAM, M.A., Head of the Oxford House and Rector of Bethnal Green. With Introductions by the Rev. HERBERT E. RYLE, D.D., Hulsean Professor of Divinity, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

[Third Edition.

"We unhesitatingly tell all young workers, lay and clerical, that they are doing themselves and the work great injustice so long as they remain unacquainted with Mr. Ingram's epigrammatic, sensible, experienced talk."—Church Times.

"It is most earnestly to be desired that these lectures should be obtained and read through by all candidates for Holy Orders."—Spectator.

SINTRAM and his COMPANIONS and UNDINE. An Illustrated Edition of the Masterpieces by DE LA MOTTE FOUQUÉ. With Introduction by CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, and numerous Illustrations by Gordon Browne, R.I. Large crown 8vo. printed on superfine paper, cloth boards, gilt top, 6s.

"A better present for a thoughtful lad or lass could hardly be."—Church Times.

SECOND EDITION.

THREE GIRLS in a FLAT. By Ethel F. HEDDLE. Illustrated by Gordon Browne, R.I. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"One of the brightest bits of recent fiction. . . . Her adventurous maids are delightful company. . . . The book is one to be read again and again."—Dundee Advertiser.

THE NATIONAL CHURCHES SERIES.

Edited by P. H. DITCHFIELD, M.A., F.R.Hist.S.

"The general idea of the series is excellent."—Guardian.
"The scheme excites our interest."—Saturday Review.

1. GERMANY. By the Rev. S. BARING-GOULD, M.A. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"Mr. Baring-Gould's contribution is excellent. . . . One of the best accounts in English of the German Reformation, its real meaning and real effects, that we have ever come across."—Guardian.

2. SPAIN. By the Rev. Frederick MEYRICK, M.A., Prebendary of Lincoln. With Map. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"It is a really valuable work."—Manchester Examiner.

3. IRELAND. By the Rev. Thomas OLDEN, M.A., Vicar of Ballyclough. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"Seldom has the student of Irish history the good fortune to encounter work so learned and so simple, so instructive and so entertaining, as this brilliant epitome of the history of the early Irish Church."—Athenæum.

4. The NETHERLANDS. By the Rev. P. H. DITCHFIELD, M.A. With 2 Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

5. SCOTLAND. By the Very Rev. H. M. LUCKOCK, D.D., Dean of Lichfield. With 2 Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"His pages are packed with facts from which you are at liberty to draw your conclusions, and which he never garbles or distorts with a view to bolstering up his own. He displays a really surprising comprehension of affairs peculiarly Scottish."—National Ob erver.

6. ITALY. By the Rev. A. R. PENNINGTON, M.A., Canon of Lincoln. With Map. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

7. FRANCE. By the Rev. Richard TRAVERS SMITH, D.D., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, and Canon of St. Patrick's, Dublin. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

8. AMERICA. By the Right Rev. LEIGHTON COLEMAN, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop of Delaware, U.S.A. With Maps. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

"Tells its story in a simple and unassuming way which is pleasant and instructive and puts together in a handy form just the information that the general reader most wants to have."—Guardian.

London: GARDNER, DARTON & CO.
3, Paternoster Buildings, E.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., Quartermaster-General. With 20 Maps.

"This brilliant and fascinating little book."—Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Evelyn Wood is to be congratulated on his excellent book. The service may also be congratulated that amongst its Field-Marshals and General Officers on the active list are so many who can emphasize their leading in the field by their literary counsels in peace. Among that band of able writers the Quartermaster-General to Her Majesty's Forces well holds his own."—Times.

"Will be read with interest and profit both by soldiers and by civilians interested in military history."—Scotsman.

FOR EASTER.

Pott 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SILVER CROSS. A Selection of Poems for the Sick and Suffering. Edited by HELEN DOUGLAS, with an Introduction by the LORD BISHOP OF ST. ANDREWS. Pott 8vo. printed in red and black on antique paper at the Chiswick Press.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GOLF in THEORY and PRACTICE: some Hints to Beginners. By H. S. C. EVERARD. A Practical Manual. With 22 Illustrations from Life.

"We have read the book 'right off,' as the saying goes, and this because, as in the case of a witching tale, it was difficult to stop.....The book is enjoyable and instructive, it is attractive in appearance, clear in its printing, valuable in its contents, and we hope it will have a wide circulation in the world of golf."—Golf.

"One of the very best books of its class."—Referee.

Crown 8vo. 600 pages, 3s. 6d.

ELOCUTION and the DRAMATIC ART. By DAVID J. SMITHSON. New Edition, Revised by the Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, Professor of Elocution at King's College, London.

New and Revised Edition, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15s.

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT: a Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang. With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

ALDINE POETS.

Completion of Reissue. 81 Volumes, 2s. 6d. net, each.

JAMES THOMSON. Revised Edition, with a New Memoir and Critical Appendix, by the Rev. T. C. TOVEY, M.A., Author of 'Gray and his Friends,' &c. 2 vols. fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net, each.

NEW VOLUME OF THE ALL-ENGLAND SERIES.

With 100 Illustrations, 1s.

GYMNASTIC COMPETITION and DISPLAY EXERCISES Set at various Open Competitions and Displays during the Last Twelve Years, and Voluntary Exercises shown by Winners of Open and Championship Gymnastic Competitions. Compiled by F. GRAF.

The book also contains an Illustrated Glossary of the Principal Gymnastic Terms, and Exercises for the Second and Third Class Badge of the A. G. and F. A. (illustrated), 42 Exercises for Developing Muscles, and an Article on TRAINING for COMPETITIONS, by A. BARNARD.

NEW VOLUME OF BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

HORACE. A New Literal Prose Translation. By A. HAMILTON BRYCE, LL.D., Translator and Editor of 'Vergil,' &c. 3s. 6d.

READY NEXT WEEK. EDITION LIMITED.

Pott 4to. printed on antique laid paper at the Chiswick Press. Price to Subscribers, 15s. net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896: containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Indexes of Names and Subjects, and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

The Publishers reserve to themselves the right of raising the price after publication. A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15s. net, each.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York-street, Covent-garden.

MR. GRANT RICHARDS'S NEW BOOKS.

READY ON MONDAY.

BY "NATHANIEL GUBBINS."

CAKES and ALE: a Memory of Many Meals; the whole interspersed with various Recipes, more or less Original, and Anecdotes, nearly veracious. By EDWARD SPENCER ("Nathaniel Gubbins"). With Cover designed by Phil May. Small 4to. cloth, 5s.

THE BRITISH RESIDENT AT PAHANG.

IN COURT and KAMPONG: Tales and Sketches of Native Life in the Malay Peninsula. By HUGH CLIFFORD, British Resident at Pahang. Large crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

BY MR. G. B. BURGIN.

"OLD MAN'S" MARRIAGE: a Novel. By G. B. BURGIN, Author of 'The Judge of the Four Covers,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

READY APRIL 26.

BY LADY TROUBRIDGE.

PAUL'S STEPMOTHER: a Novel. By LADY TROUBRIDGE. With Frontispiece by Mrs. Adrian Hope. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

BY VERNON LEE.

LIMBO, and other Essays. By Vernon LEE, Author of 'Althea,' 'Renaissance Studies,' &c. With Frontispiece. Fcap. 8vo. buckram, 5s. net.

NOW READY.

BY MR. GRANT ALLEN.

GRANT ALLEN'S HISTORICAL GUIDES.

THE FIRST TWO VOLUMES.

PARIS and FLORENCE.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each, net.

TIMES.—"Good work in the way of showing students the right manner of approaching the history of a great city. .....These useful little volumes."

PUNCH.—"In all these places Mr. Grant Allen will give you, in the pleasantest manner possible, a fuller account of the art treasures and of the history of each place than can be found in the necessarily limited space of a 'common or garden' guide-book.....It may be with certainty affirmed of both these historical guide-books to Paris and to Florence that they will be most useful companions to the traveller, and will afford delightfully instructive entertainment to those who, in consequence of the 'res augusta domi,' or for any other reason, can only make the grand tour in their own comfortable armchair at home."

SCOTSMAN.—"Those who travel for the sake of culture will be well catered for in Mr. Grant Allen's new series of historical guides.....There are few more satisfactory books for a student who wishes to dig out the Paris of the past from the immense superincumbent mass of coffee-houses, kiosks, fashionable hotels, and other temples of civilization, beneath which it is now submerged. Florence is more easily dug up, as you have only to go into the picture galleries, or into the churches or museums, whither Mr. Allen's guide accordingly conducts you, and tells you what to look at if you want to understand the art treasures of the city. The books, in a word, explain rather than describe. Such books are wanted nowadays.....The more sober-minded among tourists will be grateful to him for the skill with which the new series promises to minister to their needs."

BY MR. EDWARD CLODD.

PIONEERS of EVOLUTION, from THALES to HUXLEY. By EDWARD CLODD, Author of 'The Story of Creation,' &c. With Portraits in Photogravure of Charles Darwin, Prof. Huxley, Mr. Herbert Spencer, and Mr. A. R. Wallace. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. net.

TIMES.—"We are always glad to meet Mr. Clodd. He is never dull; he is always well informed, and he says what he has to say with clearness and incision.....We commend the book to those who want to know what evolution really means."

POLITICS in 1896. With Contributions by H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L., H. W. MASSINGHAM, G. BERNARD SHAW, G. W. STEEVENS, H. W. WILSON, Capt. MAUDE, R.E., and others. Small crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. net.

MORNING POST.—"Not only does it constitute a handy work of reference that besides merely enumerating the political events of the past year, shows also the light in which they are regarded by various shades of public opinion, but it calls for appreciation as a record of the development of political thought that, if regularly issued, will be of value to the future historian. Further, by its summaries of the political progress of 1896 from different points of view, the book has attractions for those who wish to understand the various ideas actuating contending parties, and such readers will certainly find entertaining matter in the several contributions."

MR. GRANT RICHARDS,
9, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

A'BECKETT'S COMIC HISTORIES.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE FORTHCOMING PUBLICATION OF AN ATTRACTIVE EDITION OF

GILBERT ABBOT A'BECKETT'S

COMIC HISTORIES

OF

ENGLAND AND ROME.

WITH NEARLY 400 ILLUSTRATIONS BY JOHN LEECH,

Of which Thirty will be from the Steel Plates and Coloured by Hand.

To be published Monthly in Numbers, price ONE SHILLING each.

MR. A'BECKETT'S COMIC HISTORIES—displaying the lively wit of a brilliant writer—are deservedly held in high repute, to which JOHN LEECH'S peculiar genius as an Artist of Character provided an effective help by associating them with some of the very happiest efforts of his skill.

The present Edition, to be issued in Monthly Numbers, will appear in an attractive form, exhibiting the Author's Text with all the effectiveness which the printer's art can give; whilst the Artist's Illustrations, in new Electrotypes from the Wood-blocks, will faithfully reveal the humorous conception, the bold and ready touch, the elastic vivacity of the original sketches.

Each Number, in a handsome wrapper, will consist of 64 pages, medium 8vo. in size, printed from a large old-faced type on a laid antique paper, with uncut edges, and will contain one and sometimes two Hand-coloured Engravings, in addition to the Illustrations given in the Text.

The 'COMIC HISTORY of ENGLAND' will be in 14 Numbers, of which the first will appear on May 10, and the 'COMIC HISTORY of ROME' in 7 Numbers, of which the first will appear on November 1; so that the entire issue, in Three Volumes, will be completed by the middle of next year.

 On May 10, No. I. of the COMIC HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

Price ONE SHILLING.

 Prospectuses, with Specimen Pages, showing the Type and the Illustrations, can be had from any Bookseller; or from the Publishers free by post.

London: BRADBURY, AGNEW & CO., Limited, 8, 9, and 10, Bouverie-street.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

SEVENTEENTH EDITION READY THIS DAY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36s.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes contain Portraits on Steel and Copper of Sir JAMES OUTRAM, General NICHOLSON, Sir HENRY LAWRENCE, Sir ABRAHAM ROBERTS, Sir COLIN CAMPBELL, Sir WILLIAM MANSFIELD, LORD NAPIER of MAGDALA, Sir DONALD STEWART, Sir SAMUEL BROWNE, the AMIR of AFGHANISTAN, Sir ARTHUR HARDINGE, and Field-Marshal LORD ROBERTS.

A NEW NOVEL

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NEAR NEIGHBOURS.'

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD,

Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

THE CHEAP EDITIONS OF MRS. HENRY WOOD'S NOVELS.

Each complete in One Volume, crown 8vo. Sold separately, in red cloth, gilt lettered, price 2s. 6d.; or in green cloth, price 2s.

SALE OVER TWO MILLION COPIES.

EAST LYNNE. 430th Thousand.
The CHANNINGS. 160th Thousand.
MRS. HALLIBURTON'S TROUBLES. 120th Thousand
The SHADOW of ASHLYDYAT. 90th Thousand.
LORD OAKBURN'S DAUGHTERS. 90th Thousand.
VERNER'S PRIDE. 65th Thousand.
ROLAND YORKE. 115th Thousand.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. First Series. 50th Thousand.
MILDRED ARKELL. 68th Thousand.
ST. MARTIN'S EVE. 68th Thousand.
TREVLYN HOLD. 54th Thousand.
GEORGE CANTERBURY'S WILL. 65th Thousand.
The RED COURT FARM. 60th Thousand.
WITHIN the MAZE. 85th Thousand.
ELSTER'S FOLLY. 50th Thousand.
LADY ADELAIDE. 50th Thousand.
OSWALD CRAY. 52nd Thousand.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series. 33rd Thousand.
ANNE HEREFORD. 45th Thousand.
DENE HOLLOW. 45th Thousand.
EDINA. 40th Thousand.
A LIFE'S SECRET. 48th Thousand.
The HOUSE of HALLIWELL. 15th Thousand.
POMEROY ABBEY. 40th Thousand.
COURT NETHERLEIGH. 22nd Thousand.
The MASTER of GREYLANDS. 30th Thousand.
The STORY of CHARLES STRANGE. 15th Thousand.
ASHLEY. To appear April, 1897.
BESSY RANE. To appear May, 1897.

The FOLLOWING STORIES are now issued in red cloth ONLY, price 2s. 6d. each.

ADAM GRAINGER.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. Third Series.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. Fourth Series.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. Fifth Series.
LADY GRACE.
ORVILLE COLLEGE.
PARKWATER.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7s. 6d.

The TAME FOX, and other

Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now ready at all Booksellers'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6s.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR

SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

COUSIN JEM. By L. Higgin.
Author of 'A Cornish Maid,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le
CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' 'Mistress Beatrice Cope,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"It is in the background and details, in the incidental sketches of character, in the freshness of the atmosphere, that the chief charm of this story lies."—Globe.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By
V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"The story depends more on its all-round literary merit than upon variety of incident, though in this regard it is by no means poor; it is sure to be read with warm appreciation by discreet lovers of good fiction."—Scotsman.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce.
1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'All in All' is melodramatic, but not without interest and attraction."—Athenæum.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda
GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6s.

"An excellent story of a well-imagined mystery, skilfully expounded and wrought out.....Has many light and pleasant passages and is readable throughout."—Globe.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By
GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By
AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.
"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story
without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NEW STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DIANA TEMPEST.'

A DEVOTEE.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY,
Author of 'Diana Tempest,' 'The Danvers Jewels,' &c.
Cloth, 3s. 6d.

Daily Chronicle.—"An extremely clever presentment of a foolish, egoistical, sentimental, and narrow-minded young woman. Each one of the characters is drawn with masterly skill."

Westminster Gazette.—"The many readers and admirers of that fine novel 'Diana Tempest' will welcome a new book by Miss Cholmondeley with interest and high expectation, and it is pleasant to be able to inform them that they will not be disappointed. A most original and truthful sketch."

DR. DONALDSON SMITH'S IMPORTANT NEW WORK.

THROUGH UNKNOWN AFRICAN COUNTRIES.

The First Expedition from Somaliland to Lake Rudolf and Lamu. A Narrative of Scientific Exploration and Sporting Adventure. By A. DONALDSON SMITH, M.D. F.R.G.S. With nearly 30 Full-Page Plates and numerous Smaller Illustrations by A. D. McCormick, Charles Whymper, &c., and detailed Maps of the Countries Traversed. Super-royal 8vo. One Guinea net.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Will be of the greatest interest to sportsman, traveller, and man of science."

Daily Telegraph.—"Since the publication of Stanley's 'Across the Dark Continent' there has been no work of African travel equal, in scientific importance and thrilling interest, to Dr. Donaldson Smith's book. As a book of exciting sport, apart from its geographical and ethnological usefulness, it deserves to stand alongside the best experiences of the toughest Anglo-Indian shikaris."

St James's Gazette.—"While to the large class of people interested in African exploration this book is indispensable, sportsmen will find in its pages a wealth of exciting incidents rarely equalled in similar works."

SOLDIERING and SURVEYING in BRITISH EAST AFRICA, 1891-1894. By Major MACDONALD, R.E. Fully illustrated, with Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"No country in the world has had greater need of an impartial historian than Uganda, and, strange to say, though the bitter feelings engendered by the struggles of the past ten years have not had time to cool, one has been found among the actors in these stormy scenes, Major Macdonald.....No one who reads this exciting book of adventure can regret that we are spending 3,000,000*l.* on the railway. Major Macdonald writes with considerable literary and historical skill, and his sketches and maps are all excellent."

Daily Chronicle.—"The illustrations from photographs and sketches are better than any we have seen of this part of the Dark Continent, and the maps are distinctly good."

The First Edition having been entirely exhausted a SECOND will be ready on TUESDAY NEXT.

ON VELDT and FARM: in Cape
Colony, Bechuanaland, Natal, and the Transvaal. By FRANCES McNAB. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Globe.—"A delightful book, and we can confidently recommend it as far more worth a reading than many a work of infinitely greater pretensions."

The BEGGARS of PARIS (PARIS
QUI MENDIE). Translated from the French of M. LOUIS PAULIAN by LADY HERSCHELL. Paper boards, 1s.

Times.—"Not only contains a great many amusing and instructive anecdotes, but formulates a definite scheme for the entire suppression of begging as a trade."

BOOKS FOR THE COUNTRY HOUSE.

The PLANT-LORE and GARDEN-
CRAFT of SHAKESPEARE. By HENRY N. ELLACOMBE, M.A., Vicar of Bitton, and Honorary Canon of Bristol. With nearly 100 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo. handsomely bound, 10s. 6d.

IN a GLOUCESTERSHIRE GARDEN.
By HENRY N. ELLACOMBE, M.A. Second Edition, with 8 Full-Page Illustrations and Designs of the Months, 6s.

NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITIONS.

A BOOK ABOUT ROSES. By Dean
HOLE. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations by G. S. ELGOOD, R.I., and a Sketch by John Leech, never before published. 3s. 6d. Large-Paper Edition, with 4 Coloured Plates in addition by H. G. Moon, 10s. 6d.

A BOOK ABOUT the GARDEN and the GARDENER. By DEAN HOLE. Second Edition, with Steel Plate Frontispiece by John Leech. Crown 8vo. tastefully bound, 6s.

CYCLING for HEALTH and PLEA-
SURE. Edited by F. W. SHORLAND, for Three Years Amateur Champion. Illustrated, cloth, 2s. 6d.

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Mr. Hardy's The Well-Beloved	471
The Buddhist Praying-Wheel	471
Prof. Croom Robertson's Lectures	472
Prof. Ker on Epic and Romance	474
A History of Ancient Greek Literature	475
Papal Rome of the Renascence	476
French Novels	476
Romantic Tales	476
Military and Naval Literature	477
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	477—478
The Verlaine Monument; An Obscure Point in English History; Tennyson Bibliography; 'Under the Circumstances'; The 'Dictionary of National Biography'; Sale of Book-plates; Two Prothalamia	479—480
Literary Gossip	482
Science—Munk's Life of Sir Henry Halford; Sale; Societies; Meetings; Gossip ...	482—483
Fine Arts—Egyptological Literature; Mr. Hook's Pictures; Pompey's Pillar at Alexandria; Sales; Gossip	484—485
Music—The Week; Johannes Brahms; Gossip; Performances Next Week	486—488
Drama—Gossip	488

LITERATURE

The Well-Beloved. By Thomas Hardy. (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)

"Problems" seem to be going out, "temperaments" to be coming in. Of course, in one sense the two are almost inseparably associated, for it is most often upon the temperament that the existence of the problem depends. That is to say, given a particular concurrence of circumstances, the course of action to be adopted will appear to one person in the form of a problem, while another, like Col. Hay's hero, will "see his duty.....and go for it there and then." "Je trouve ça tout simple; c'est son devoir," said a French officer to us once, in discussing some point of conduct. As a rule, it will be found that most of the "problems" of recent fiction could have been readily solved by the application of this calculus; and nothing but reluctance to apply it has caused difficulties to arise. Mr. Hardy's line has usually been to recognize this fact, not without some suggestion of a want of finish in the constitution of things, under which temperaments have been so compounded that duty and inclination but too rarely point the same way. In his present "Sketch of a Temperament," however, he takes a somewhat different line. There is no implied conclusion, no "moral," as we call it, whatever. It is really a sketch or study. But temperament may be studied in two ways for the purposes of fiction. You may take a case of some abnormal, or, at any rate, ususual, mental or moral configuration, and trace the course of conduct to which in stated circumstances it will give rise. This is the easier form, and that which is most affected by less experienced writers of fiction. It is not easy to predict how abnormal temperaments will behave, so you are not so likely to be caught tripping in the development of your events as you are if you people your story with persons actuated by motives—or, in other words, governed by temperaments—of a kind well known to the average observant person. But when a familiar type of character (as we also call it, though temperament of course, strictly speaking, precedes character) is taken and allowed to display itself in conduct which the reader feels to be consistent, then perhaps the highest triumph of the novelist's art is attained.

In his present story Mr. Hardy has adopted a sort of intermediate method. He has imagined a temperament which we believe to be that of the great majority of male human beings—nay, of male beings of every species. "We have not yet rounded Cape Turk," says Mr. Meredith somewhere; not instinct—or temperament if you like to call it so—but hard reason, aided in certain cases by the policeman, alone can persuade the normal man to monogamy. It is all very well to talk about the pursuit of the "Well-Beloved," to sublimate the elementary instinct into a fantasy of a "Beloved One" who does not usually "care to remain in one corporeal nook or shell for any great length of time, however he [the pursuer] may wish her to do so"; our forefathers were quite familiar with the idea, but they called it being off with the old love before you were on with the new. But conscious as most people must be of possibilities of this kind in themselves, "it is," as Mr. Hardy's hero says, "a sort of thing one doesn't like to talk of," and, indeed, it has usually exhausted itself before a man reaches the age when he finds out that after all people are for the most part built very similarly, and therefore does not mind talking of anything. The great majority of "professionizing moral men" bring this sort of thing to an end by marriage, usually selecting their partner for life from motives of course not necessarily excluding that of her form being the temporary residence of "the Beloved," though by no means so frequently including this claim as a social convention would have the world believe. The mediæval people knew all about it, and laid terrible snares for the modern matter-of-fact interpreters of their writings, as a short perusal of recent Dante literature will show.

Where Mr. Hardy's hero differs from the mass of mankind is not, therefore, as he himself supposes, in the fact that his "Beloved" has had many incarnations. His practical painter friend hits the real peculiarity when he says, "Essentially, all men are fickle, like you; but not with such perceptiveness." It is no use for Pierston to protest against the word, and plead that he has always been "faithful to the elusive creature whom I have never been able to get a firm hold of." We are all like that. It is only another version of amare amabam, et quærebam quod amarem. The peculiarity of Pierston's temperament lies really in its refinement. "You are," says his friend, "in practice as ideal as in theory." Of the physical side of passion he knows as little as any man so susceptible can do. As a result, he retains his youth, and the pathos of his wooing at sixty is hardly disturbed by any such suggestion of the ludicrous as a similar spectacle would ordinarily arouse. The effect is perhaps helped by the out-of-the-world air which Mr. Hardy's skill is able to throw over the isle of Portland, in which the really critical episodes of the story take place. Whether it be really the isolated corner of the earth which the story represents we do not know, but as portrayed here it is a background which helps one not to be surprised at any of the action.

The following passage perhaps shows the "temperament" as well as any one extract could do. The second Avice, it must be premised, holds a somewhat lower social station than her mother had done, her father having been unsuccessful in the world. Pierston—with the most honourable intentions, be it understood—has succeeded in getting her up to London as a kind of "lady-help" in his sculptor's establishment. Of course he comes to the point before long, and, to his surprise, meets with a repulse. Ultimately it appears that the lady has a husband, quite recently acquired, but has already quarrelled with him:—

"'Then I saw a soldier; I never knew his name, but I fell in love with him because I am so quick at that! Still, as it was wrong, I tried not to think of him.....I was then very miserable, and you asked me to come to London. I didn't care what I did with myself, and I came.'

"'Heaven above us!' said Pierston, his pale and distressed face showing with what a shock this announcement had come. 'Why have you done such extraordinary things? Or rather, why didn't you tell me of this before?.....I have nearly brought scandal upon us both by your letting me love you. Really, you are a very wicked woman!'

"'No, I am not!' she pouted.

"Still, Avice looked pale and rather frightened, and did not lift her eyes from the floor. 'I said it was nonsense in you to want to have me!' she went on, 'and even if I hadn't been married.....I couldn't have married you after you told me that you was the man who ran away from my mother.'

"'I have paid the penalty!' he said sadly. 'Men of my sort always get the worst of it somehow.'"

Then he sets to work to repair the breach between husband and wife, and adheres manfully to that duty, even though before the journey back to the island is over this counterpart of himself has admitted that she would have taken him had he not come too late.

On the whole, the book is a more pleasing sample of Mr. Hardy's later manner than some we could name. We would not give Geoffrey Day, or Gabriel Oak, or John Loveday for a wilderness of Pierstons, nor Fancy or Bathsheba for twenty generations of Avice Caros; but this is an agreeable book to peruse. It must be in assertion of the great principle that so much is said about the "island custom," for though doubtless interesting from an anthropological point of view, it has really no influence on the action of the story, and need not have been even alluded to. It would appear, indeed, that 'The Well-Beloved' was written before some of Mr. Hardy's more recent developments. One can only hope that the fact of his now bringing it out in book form indicates a desire to renew those pleasant relations with his readers that should never have been interrupted.

The Buddhist Praying-Wheel: a Collection of Material bearing upon the Symbolism of the Wheel and Circular Movements in Custom and Religious Ritual. By William Simpson. (Macmillan & Co.)

Nothing shows more clearly than a book like this how far the application of the historic method to certain branches of research has revolutionized our ideas as to the kind of subject worthy of historical treatment and investigation. Carlyle's contemptuous definition of the Buddhist praying-wheel as a "rotatory calabash" is characteristic of the attitude towards such things of a mind unfamiliar with science and ignorant of comparative methods of study. The idea that every custom, however trivial, absurd, or unintelligible it may seem, is of significance in the history of humanity is a product of those wider conceptions of the universe which the intellectual development of recent years has done so much to foster.

The aim of Mr. Simpson's work is to show, by means of data gathered in different countries, that the Buddhist praying-wheel in Tibet, the wheel symbolism in the Buddhist and Brahminical religions, and the circular movements common to the ritual of so many different countries in Europe and Asia, have a solar origin. That he makes out a plausible case there can be but little doubt. The difficulty lies in our inability to reconstruct from the materials at our command the primitive forms in which these ideas existed, or to trace the steps by which they have reached their present development.

The author's contribution towards the solution of these and other problems suggested by the subject is, as he frankly admits, tentative, and makes no pretension to finality. The truth of his main theory seems, however, fully established by the facts he has collected about the symbolism of the wheel, and the universality with which a sunwise direction has been associated with circular movements in religious ritual or ceremonial from time immemorial.

After India and Tibet it is the western extremity of Europe that yields most instances of these remnants of primitive sun-worship. Here, too, it is the Celtic branch of the Aryan race that has preserved customs most nearly allied to those of the East. This fact tends to support the migration theory of the dissemination of belief and custom, at one time held so largely by scholars. While not committing himself to such a view, Mr. Simpson seems inclined to adopt it in the present case, where it is strikingly confirmed by the identity of the Indian rite of pradakshina and the Keltic deisul, an identity which extends even to the etymology of the words. Mr. Simpson's chapter on circular movements and wheel ceremonies among the Gauls, Teutons, and Celts is full of interesting matter. Some idea of the continuity of human history, and of the conservatism of human nature, is brought home to our minds when we reflect that our passing of the wine sunwise at table is, in all probability, a survival of an act invested by our prehistoric ancestors with a religious significance. It is to be regretted, as much in the interests of research as from the point of view of the picturesque, that so many of these old-world customs are dying out, since the study of their development and distribution is indispensable to a correct solution of many of the problems connected with the past history of mankind.

Mr. Simpson's researches extend over a wide range, the literature and traditions of various countries having been laid under contribution for the illustration of his theme. He makes no claim, however, to have exhausted the sources of information open to the explorers in this somewhat untried field. His object has been rather to show by examples what results may be expected from a wider and deeper study of the subject, to point out the direction this should take, and to suggest some of the points on which it may throw light. The numerous illustrations, supplied in many instances from sketches made by the author himself, add greatly to the interest of the book.

Elements of General Philosophy. By George Croom Robertson. Edited, from Notes of Lectures delivered at University College, London, 1870–1892, by C. A. Foley Rhys Davids, M.A. (Murray.)

Elements of Psychology. By George Croom Robertson. (Same editor and publisher.)

It has happened more than once that the oral teaching of a philosopher, taken down by pupils and put into form by editors, has become more widely known than the literary work he had himself published. This may easily happen in the case of Prof. Croom Robertson's lectures. His writings, except the volume on Hobbes, consisted of scattered papers, the chief of which are collected in his 'Philosophical Remains.' Though the thought there is essentially systematic in character, readers have to find the system for themselves, whereas in these volumes the systematic arrangement was already made under the exigencies of exposition to students. The 'Psychology' has more strictly the character of a text-book, but lends itself less to review, except of a technical kind. The 'Philosophy,' besides being an exceedingly good text-book on a small scale, possesses also special interest as a statement of what is, to some extent, a new point of view in English philosophy. The novelty of this point of view does not seem to have been as yet fully recognized by those who have had occasion to speak of Croom Robertson's work. An excellent statement of it is supplied by Mrs. Rhys Davids in the introductory note. "Limits of space," she says,

"made it imperative that I should select, and the choice was determined less by the nature of my materials than by what seems to me to have been a salient standpoint in my master's critical philosophy. Holding by an enlightened Experientialism, he was repelled by the Individualism prevailing in Experiential doctrine from Locke till the present century. Advance in biology has rendered in philosophy, as he says, for ever impossible the older Experientialist position, that knowledge, with its objectivity, its universality, its necessity, can be acquired by every individual for himself, in the course of his own experience, from the beginning. Close and sympathetic study of the great Rationalist thinkers, from Plato to Kant, enabled him to discern what they, burdened by faulty method and the then scanty store of the fruits of scientific research, were groping after in their insistence on the innate function of the mind, namely, the predetermination, the collective endowment of the individual by the race, as a prius to whatever his own experience can teach him. Adjusting his own philosophy, on the one hand, to take account of every advance in scientific theory, he was careful, on the other, to bring out the continuous evolution of philosophic thought, history of human error though it might be. And he held that the Experientialism even of the present day needed to be widened and deepened, not only by frankly adopting the evolutionary standpoint, but also by being brought face to face at all points with the best teaching of Rationalist thought, including especially the critical standpoints of Kant. Hence it is that I have selected the Cartesian school and the 'Kritik' rather than lectures on Bacon, Locke, Hume, and others."

The selection here mentioned has reference to a number of "special lectures" by which the course on general philosophy is followed; but recognition of the work of those who were above all speculative metaphysicians comes out very clearly even in the first part of the volume. The permanent character of the problems of philosophy proper in its oldest meaning is frequently insisted on. Thus although, according to Robertson's view, the approach to philosophy should be made through psychology as a positive science, yet psychology by itself will never solve philosophical problems. Psychology deals with mind only as phenomenal, and while ontological questions may be difficult or impossible to solve, "no human mind that works fairly can exclude ontological any more than phenomenal questions." All philosophy is, however, in a sense "philosophy of mind." Things are for us only as they are known. This is the distinctively modern point of view. The distinctively English point of view is that the theory of knowledge, which thus precedes the theory of being, must itself be preceded by psychology; that is to say, we must learn all we can about the origin of our knowledge before trying to decide questions about its validity. Any decision of these last questions at the same time decides the ontological question.

The method of treatment adopted in the first series of lectures is, after dealing quite generally with the history of philosophy, to treat in more detail the history of three great questions with which philosophic thinkers have been mainly occupied. The history of philosophy is not really a history of "motion without progress," though even if it were no more than the story of the errors through which men have passed in trying to get at the truth, it "would yet be valuable for what it reveals of the growth of the human mind in its deepest thought respecting itself confronted by the universe." It is more than this, however. In philosophy, as in science, results of permanent value have been attained. And the history of philosophy has an importance in relation to philosophy which the history of science has not in relation to science. The special sciences

"are adequately taught as bodies of established doctrine without necessarily involving any reference to past theories; at any rate, their teaching does not at all depend upon knowledge of their history. False scientific teachings have to be forgotten; inadequate scientific teachings, while leading to better, need not be remembered. Interest in them is mainly antiquarian. Or if it is not felt for the teachings as such, but for them as illustrative of scientific method, this is to have taken them out of the special sciences, and to have brought them into the domain of philosophy, which has a property in the older forms, the cast-off garments of the sciences, which these no longer possess for themselves. On the other hand, philosophers of all schools are for ever throwing backward glances at past thinkers and the results they elicited. The history of philosophy is a recognized part of philosophic discipline. The reason for this difference from what we find in science lies in the nature of philosophy, in its being always concerned with ultimate, not with immediate explanation, not with ways of re-expressing the facts of nature, or giving an explanation of them relative to other and more general facts or conceptions—resolving sound, e. g., into a mode of motion—but with the explanation that is demanded with reference to the mental nature of man, to man, i. e., as a thinking being."

An interesting point brought out in the general history is the shortness of the time during which the human race has been effectively thinking. Of the twenty-five centuries over which Western philosophy extends, only seven or eight, it is remarked, are really important, viz., two or three centuries of Greek philosophy, about two of Scholasticism, and modern philosophy from 1600 onwards. The importance of Scholasticism for the right understanding of modern thought was a point on which Robertson always insisted; and the case for assigning one of the chief places to the Scholastic period is here very well put against objections:—

"It is easy to abuse Scholasticism. No new or striking conception, like those we find in ancient or in modern philosophy, penetrating to the heart of things, sprang from any one of the Schoolmen."

When at the last they incurred discredit through comparison with Greek philosophy, revealed more fully to the West,

"they were found to have established no alternative claim to modern respect by taking up any branch of thought which the Greeks had neglected, or in which they had failed. And their very acuteness, through being turned on to a fatally narrow circle of subjects, had led to subtleties that were doomed to be the occasion of some of the bitterest reproaches since heaped upon them. On the other side it should be noted that the Schoolmen were not responsible for their circumstances, determined by a great and uncontrollable course of events. It was something that, after so great a dissolution, there should have been so considerable an attempt at reconstruction. It was not a little wonderful that they should have applied all the enlightenment handed down to them to rationalize faith, and that they struggled as they did against the conservatism of ecclesiastical authority until official recognition of one newly rationalized doctrine after another was extorted. Theirs became entitled Church philosophy, yet the Church did nothing but accept, did nothing to encourage their philosophizing, witness the case of Scotus Erigena. Often and often was Aristotle solemnly banned before he came to be considered (in the thirteenth century) as 'the forerunner of Christ in the things of Nature as John Baptist was in the things of Grace.' No, we must not speak only of the servility of the Schoolmen; they showed not only wisdom but also courage in their appeal to heathen Aristotle. And it is more becoming at this time of day, and more important besides, that their wisdom and their courage should not remain unacknowledged."

The three questions with which philosophers have chiefly been occupied are these:

"1. The question of Universals—i. e., of the relation of the Universal to the Particular—known also as the doctrine of the One and the Many. This is predominant in the Scholastic period, and was also prominent in the Ancient period. 2. The Relation of Reason to Experience, in explaining the Nature or Import of Knowledge. This dominates all modern philosophy. 3. The Reality of a Material World, or Perception of an External World, and the Nature of Mind in relation to it. This has been raised especially by British philosophers."

The first of the three questions is regarded as practically decided, though not decided with full theoretical cogency for every type of mind. Realism in the Platonic sense—which is the same thing as Platonic Idealism—has been overthrown by the growth of positive science, which can get on with Conceptualism or Nominalism, but not with Realism:—

"Or we may say that modern science has sprung up because the philosophical problem of Realism was fought out. The Realist despises the things of sense as vain shows with no reality. The man of science says they do exist and are worth investigating.....Any one may now be a Platonic Realist, but he must then give up the modern science of nature. In fact, there always have been Realists, and always will be.....Carlyle was a Realist; so also is Ruskin—great men, though not philosophers. And the standpoint, consistently developed, leads to an ascetic doctrine of morals. Carlyle and Ruskin recognize the hostility between modern science and Platonism, and this is why they decry the former. Carlyle hated science, but he excepted mathematics, as did Plato, who said that if a man could not geometrize, he could not philosophize. From their point of view science cannot but be absurd.....No person who is at heart a Realist can have that kind of interest in particular things upon which thoroughgoing science rests. In external nature we must start from the concrete particular; hence we have in the modern period an anti-Realistic philosophy, instead of an antagonism between our philosophy and our science."

On the second of the two questions Robertson adopts a modified Experientialism. "I hold," he says,

"that we should not in the least hesitate to allow, in addition to experience as a source of knowledge, the assumption of some general principles, before or apart from experience, though never to be held independent of verification."

This is very clearly worked out in relation to the uniformity of nature, which, it is shown, must be accepted as an assumption science cannot get on without. Mathematical axioms are dealt with in a somewhat different manner, and here, perhaps, Robertson was most original. In the lectures, however, his way of meeting Kant's theory of mathematical truth is only indicated. It is more fully explained in the article "Axiom" contributed to the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' in 1875, and included in 'Philosophical Remains.'

To the discussion of the third question Robertson's special contribution was in the way of psychological preparation. Berkeley's philosophical theory of matter and his psychological theory of vision he holds to be both alike true, but incomplete. The theory of vision needs supplementing by a more exact analysis of "tangible object" than Berkeley was able to furnish. This has been made possible by the modern discovery of "muscular sense," which has an equally important bearing on Kant's theory of space and of mathematical truth. Robertson's contribution towards the application of this theory is in his cogent demonstration that by the psychologist body must be taken as historically the prius of space, and not vice versâ. "Space is body attenuated rather than body is space filled in." This is more fully worked out in the 'Elements of Psychology.' In philosophy, according to Robertson, Berkeley came short by not taking account of the metaphysical problem, which after all forces itself upon us in regard to matter. We admit a subjective correlate of external perceptions in the case of other human minds which we suppose to accompany bodies like our own. So we do also in the case of animal minds and bodies. Why then should we draw the line at "inanimate" matter, and say that this has no real or subjective correlate for itself, but exists only as a certain order of perceptions in self-conscious "spirits"? The solution Robertson himself found in Leibnitzian monadism. This, it is made plain by the lectures—as it was not in any of his previously published writings—was his philosophic faith:—

"Mind exists everywhere, and must be carried down to explain any true reality."

"Monadology is the ultimate philosophical analysis of the universe, with its fundamental postulate of real beings, immaterial, unextended, having power to act, of which conscious activity is a higher phase."

The "special lectures" that form the second part of the volume deal with Plato, Aristotle ('De Anima'), Descartes, Spinoza, Leibnitz, and Kant. They are full of interest for students of philosophy, but only a few points can be mentioned. One important remark is that in Aristotle's psychology "animism" has completely disappeared. It was long before this advance became fixed. Later philosophic schools—such as the Epicureans—and some of the early Christian fathers still retained the notion of the soul as a kind of finer matter diffused through the body; but from this Aristotle is perfectly free. For him, as for modern science, mind is subjective. Not till Descartes was the "animistic" notion destroyed for philosophy. Other interesting passages are the contrast drawn between Descartes's and Mill's views about "discovery" and "proof"; the account of Descartes's remarkable psychological theory of "wonder" as the emotion in which knowledge has its origin; the discussion of mathematical method in Descartes and Spinoza, and in philosophy generally; and the tracing of the modern doctrine of "parallelism" between mind and body to Spinoza. The view taken about the present importance of Kant in relation to English thought is characteristic. Kant, in Robertson's view, must be pronounced, "man for man," a far greater thinker than any of his English predecessors; but it does not, therefore, follow that he was on the right track and they were on the wrong. This was probably the view that Croom Robertson took of the great Rationalist or Intellectualist thinkers generally. Of Descartes's system in particular he remarks that "in reach and all-comprehensiveness it stands, perhaps, unique in the history of human thought."

The 'Elements of Psychology,' although the original points of theory in it had already found expression in Croom Robertson's collected writings, offers again the advantage of systematic presentation. In smoothness and polish the already published essays have no doubt the advantage, as Mrs. Davids points out. If, however, the style of the lectures often seems abrupt and unfinished, the same might be said of Aristotle's 'De Anima,' which perhaps came into existence under similar conditions, and the proper point of view for criticizing a psychological text-book is, after all, the scientific rather than the literary. This point of view is cleverly put by Mrs. Davids in her introductory note.

In the 'Psychology,' as in the 'General Philosophy,' there is a marked effort to do justice to those who are not of the author's way of thinking. To some recent writers, indeed, perhaps a little more than justice is done. One evidence of the specially scientific character of psychology, it may be noted, is the slight extent to which history comes into this as compared with the companion volume. The few historical paragraphs contain interesting information in small compass, but are almost as unessential to the general exposition as similar notes would be in a physical text-book. The most distinctive point in the way of doctrine is the stress laid on "muscular sense." This is regarded not as a sense that can be realized separately, as to some extent the "passive" senses can, but as a sort of "coefficient," which by union with data of sight or touch forms the compound described as "active sense."

The view expressed here is not to be met with precisely in that form in any previous writer; and generally the teaching of the book evinces great independence. It is certainly not "sensationalism" as usually understood. "Sensation" itself is regarded as an abstraction. Pure sensation does not actually exist as "perceptions" do, but is a hypothetical element assumed by psychologists for the scientific explanation of perception. There is in mind, however, what may be called a "stage of sense." In the earlier part of its course mental experience passes through this stage. Here already there may be observed each of the three phases modern psychologists discriminate in mature mind, viz., feeling (primarily pleasure and pain), knowing or intellection, and willing or conation. The general problem of psychology is to explain the phenomena of adult consciousness as arising out of the sense-experience of early life. Under "Intellection" we have first to explain the percept as connected with sense; then the image and representative imagination; lastly, the concept. A percept is "an intellectual construction on occasion of sense together with present consciousness of activity exerted"; or, as it is otherwise put, "a combination of so much active touch and active sight, &c., held together by certain laws of intellection." Psychology has to indicate the laws according to which the construction comes to pass. This cannot be done adequately without proceeding to consider the flow of representative, as distinguished from presentative, consciousness. For in perception there is really more "representation" than "presentation." The flow of imagery takes place according to certain laws known as the laws of association by contiguity and by resemblance. These two laws Robertson accepts as irreducible to one another; but he now prefers the name "suggestion" to that of "association" for the second. On the border between perception and pure representation lie illusions. Here we get the neat definitions, "Perception is verifiable imagination on occasion of sense-stimulation, illusion is unverifiable." The concept—to pass on to the last stage of intellection—"so far as it is a definite fact of consciousness, comes to us as a deposit of resemblances." In perception discrimination predominates, in conception assimilation. Thinking is "intellection by way of concepts." A discussion of the function of language in relation to thought here comes in, the conclusion of which is, "Without speech no effective thought." "Generic images" of a kind may be formed without language, but for the higher degrees of abstraction and generalization language is indispensable. From intellection we pass to feeling and then to conation, which in its highest stage becomes will, as intellection becomes thought. These two remaining phases of mind are somewhat briefly discussed; but their psychology is in itself less determinate than that of intellect, and when they are treated on the same scale the result probably is, as Robertson suggests, an attempt to accomplish the impossible. The most distinctive point under the last head is the stress laid on the idea of personality as a means of explaining the higher modes of volition without unscientific assumptions.

From this very brief sketch some idea may be gained of the general lines of the book. Though here taken second, it is intended as an introduction to the 'Philosophy.' We may now easily see in what way it prepares for the distinctively philosophical problems. The psychology of conception is evidently preliminary to the philosophical question of "universals," as the psychology of perception is to the question about the reality of the external world. And the whole of psychology has more or less bearing on the second of the three great historical problems distinguished, namely, the relation of reason to experience in knowledge. The justification of taking psychology first in the order of teaching thus seems complete. In reviewing we have adopted the opposite order, because it is the philosophical questions that give their general interest to the psychological ones. If it were not for the peculiar relations of these to philosophy, they would be merely questions for scientific experts.

Epic and Romance: Essays in Mediæval Literature. By W. P. Ker, Professor of English Literature in University College, London. (Macmillan & Co.)

Prof. Ker's 'Epic and Romance' is a notable and highly interesting contribution to the history of Middle Age literature, and with the exception of one weak spot, also noticeable, of which we shall speak later on, it leaves little room for criticism. Howbeit, the subject is an exceedingly wide one, and would hardly admit of treatment in a single volume of some four hundred odd pages unless the author had already fixed upon a certain point of view. This Prof. Ker has done, and with considerable decision. In his excellent introductory chapter he draws the distinction often insisted on in these columns between what may be called the genuine or heroic epic and the epic of sophisticated days, the epic of Virgil, Tasso, or Milton; and then he points out how Aristotle, when speaking of the Greek drama, seems to lay most stress upon the story, while in treating of Homer it is before all things the human action that strikes him—what we should call the dramatic element. Aristotle sums up the story of the Odyssey, and his summary, but for the reference to Poseidon, might, as Mr. Ker says, be that of a modern realistic novel:—

"A man is abroad for many years persecuted by Poseidon and alone; meantime, the suitors of his wife are wasting his estate and plotting against his son. After many perils by sea he returns to his own country and discovers himself to his friends. He falls upon his enemies and destroys them, and so comes to his own again."

And following this example the author of 'Epic and Romance' constructs a summary of the Iliad which should present it in a light "quite different from the common fashion of literary epics." It might go in this way:—

"A certain man taking part in a siege is slighted by the general, and in his resentment withdraws from the war, though his own side is in great need of his help. His dearest friend having been killed by the enemy, he comes back into the action, and takes vengeance for his friend, and allows himself to be reconciled."

Now, though these summaries are introduced half humorously, they do represent the point of view—a very interesting and largely original one—from which Mr. Ker has throughout treated the heroic epic of Europe. He quotes, again, with a good deal of approval a criticism of Bossu on the Odyssey, that while the main part of the story is the history of the personal and human adventures of the hero, the history told by Odysseus in the hall of Alcinous must be looked upon rather as romance than as epic: Circe, the Sirens, and Polyphemus are romantic imaginings, belonging rightly enough to the story in the mouth of the wanderer, but not to the main stream of the epic narrative.

Judged by this canon, the old German heroic poems are seen, so far as regards their subject-matter, quite to fall into line with the Homeric. In these, as in those, the personal element—the actual fight, murder, vengeance, and so forth recorded—is the essential; the story or the history of which this personal action is a part is secondary. 'Hildebrand,' 'Beowulf,' the 'Fight of Finnesburg,' 'Bryhtnoth,' the Eddic poems of the Nibelungen cycle, have all this element in common, the personal, the dramatic element. It makes no difference between 'Beowulf' and the 'Atlakvidha' that the former cannot and the latter can be remotely associated with an historic personage; nor between 'Hildebrand' and 'Bryhtnoth' that we know not in the least where Hildebrand fought with Hadubrand, and know quite well where Bryhtnoth met his death. Nor, again, to pass to quite a different cycle of literature, does it take anything away from the literary merit of the Sagas that the field of their action was a remote corner of Europe, and that the rest of the world knew nothing of their heroes' doings and sufferings. We have said that this is a point of view. It does not exhaust all that can be said on the subject. When we seek to apply it to the Chansons de Geste it is less satisfactory.

Here the personal element has diminished; what we may, for want of a better word, call the ethnic element has come to the fore. True, the Chansons as we have them are late. But it does not seem satisfactory to account for the difference, as Mr. Ker seems rather disposed to do, by merely considering the Chansons as epic in decay.

Any one who treats of the branches of literature with which Prof. Ker has to deal —first, the old German and Anglo-Saxon poems, 'Hildebrand,' 'Beowulf,' and the like; next, the old Norse literature of both classes, the Eddic poems and the Sagas; thirdly, the Chansons de Geste — has the disadvantage, notably in the case of the first three orders, that he can assume little or no previous knowledge on the part of his reader. Some chapters, therefore, of Mr. Ker's book have too much the appearance of catalogues—catalogues of a high quality, comparable to the almost incomparable 'Catalogue of Romance MSS.' of Mr. Henry Ward, but still too detailed, too much attempting the encyclopædic, for chapters of literary history. However, there is very little in this portion of the book (and it is the longest portion) which is open to criticism.

There remains only the one weakness which marks Mr. Ker's book throughout, of which a hint has been given. We confess that we had read nearly the whole of the volume conscious of, but never clearly discerning this defect, until we came to a passage in the beginning of the final chapter, in which the author classes under the head of romance "the fairy interludes of the Odyssey" (we have seen to what portion of the epic this expression is designed to apply) and "the similes of the winds, clouds, and mountain waters in the Iliad." But as it is just in these similes and metaphors, and, in fact, in the whole mythological setting, that the elements of poetry as distinct from prose come out, one is led to question whether the essentially poetic element in literature has not been more or less absent from the mind of the author throughout all his treatment of this subject. Then looking back, and taking account not only of the author's starting-point, but of his procedure from that starting-point, this is found to be the case. It would not be true to say that Prof. Ker is insensible to poetry; but he seems to be insensible to those elements in poetry which are, so to say, of its very essence. The Icelandic Sagas, for instance, are richer in the human element than any other branch of literature which goes to make up Mr. Ker's history of epic in the Middle Ages. But, after all, the Sagas are prose, extremely fine prose, but prose for all that—prose in their narrative, in their point of view, with few exceptions in all things. The old Norse poetry is poetry of a very high order, and the most poetic parts of it are the least dramatic, such as the 'Völuspâ.' Of course, Prof. Ker speaks of the 'Völuspâ,' but it hardly finds a place in his scheme. Still less do such old Norse poems as 'Skirnisför' or 'Eric's Dirge.' Then, again, the Chansons de Geste have an immense charm of style: a peculiar effect is produced by the long succession of assonances which is especially perceptible in the pathetic passages — say, in Roland's last speech to Oliver. Mr. Ker has little or nothing to say about the versification of these poems. He does not seem to contemplate them from that point of view. Nor, except as a test of date, does he consider much the versification of the Eddic poems. He does not say whether he prefers them from this point of view to the old English or the reverse. In sum, he is almost wholly occupied by the subject-matter. And the limitation of view becomes more marked when we come to the final chapter on romance. Of course there must be limitations. Non omnia possumus omnes. Still, this is one. It is necessary to notice it as dependent in some measure upon the point of outsetting, which we have been not less particular to make clear to the reader.

Short Histories of the Literatures of the World. —A History of Ancient Greek Literature. By Gilbert Murray. (Heinemann)

One of the De Goncourts declared that Providence had allowed the Greeks to exist in order that schoolmasters might make a living, and this class have certainly wearied the world by their persistent and dull republication of old classical material of all sorts. This history of ancient Greek literature, the first of a number of similar histories, is a very different matter, and Mr. Gosse (who, as general editor of the series, writes a graceful little introduction) may be congratulated on having secured so able an expositor of Greek life and thought as Prof. Murray. The book is brilliant and—what is more important—stimulating; while its freshness of treatment and recognition of the latest German research amply justify its existence. Prof. Murray has made these old Greek bones live.

No doubt there is much here which is debatable and appears to be accepted without question; but the author gains a good deal of space by "concealing," as he says in his preface, "all the laboratory work"; and Prof. Wilamowitz-Moellendorff, whose original, if somewhat hazardous work and results will seem strange to readers of the old-fashioned histories, certainly deserves a fuller recognition in England than scholars have hitherto accorded him.

The account of Homer is satisfactory, but perhaps too philological in view of the special declaration of the editor that the history of literature is to be recalled from the company of that somewhat heavily weighted science, whose laws seem in a constant state of flux. But once in the golden time of Athens, from Æschylus to Plato, Prof. Murray is at his best, and certainly succeeds in bringing us nearer to real Greece than others have done, though his limit of one volume renders his task difficult. In the important matter of proportion there is, too, with one reservation to be mentioned later, little to object; but here it is well to point out that Prof. Murray is at times too brief, too epigrammatic, too modern in the presentment of his matter. All must recognize the greater freedom of style and language which in the last quarter of this century has increased the possibilities of English; but that does not justify the free use of "slang," often with no saving inverted commas, where other words would do as well. Such modern restatements are often apt to put things in a false focus, and have done so notably in Mr. Benecke's 'Women in Greek Poetry.' On Euripides, who has of late quite revived from the depreciations of Schlegel to be clad in all the glamour of the realist, Prof. Murray writes:—

"There are in the world things not of reason, but both below and above it; causes of emotion, which we cannot express, which we tend to worship, which we feel, perhaps, to be the precious elements in life. These things are Gods or forms of God: not fabulous immortal men, but 'Things which Are,' things utterly non-human and non-moral, which bring man bliss or tear his life to shreds without a break in their own serenity. It is a religion that most people have to set themselves in some relation to; the religion that Tolstoi preaches against, that people like Paley and Bentham tried to abolish, that Plato denounced and followed."

Very clever and epigrammatic, but hardly the thing for a history such as this. And, again, Ibsen is brought into the estimate of Æschylus and Euripides; but Ibsen, even if his claims to be a classic were generally recognized, is so much of our own time that it is not possible as yet soberly to estimate his place or meaning in literature, and sobriety is the one essential for a history of this sort. With Sophocles Prof. Murray does not seem much in sympathy, yet mention should have been made of his "dramatic irony," on which Thirlwall's famous essay, written years ago, is still worth reading.

The account of Plato is, as it should be, a prominent feature of the book, and extremely well done: his delicacy and depth, his charming inconclusiveness, have never been better dwelt upon. But was he a man-hater? and will Mr. Gosse, when he comes to write on English literature, endorse the verdict that Shakspeare was even "perhaps" a hater of his fellow men? We hardly think his plays, except in a brief and troubled period, will support this view, and Prof. Murray should not spoil his talent "Hellenisch zu empfinden" by forcing English names into his comparisons. His work is quite vivacious enough without them. We wish, too, that the importance of the Sophists, as the first professors of "higher education" who regularly took fees for their courses, had been clearly pointed out. And if any of the Platonic letters are to be regarded as genuine, may we not also believe with Diogenes that this same philosopher Plato wrote poetry in his youth, and attribute to him that handful of brief epigrams—peu de choses, mais roses—which, though unmentioned in this book, are some of the most exquisite things in Greek? The Greek 'Anthology' generally, with its sadness, its transient gaiety, its note—even then—of Weltschmerz, is so characteristic of the Greek spirit that it deserved to be treated at much greater length. Meleager's was a voice unique and distinguished in any company, and most scholars will, we think (against Prof. Murray), prefer Callimachus to Apollonius of Rhodes: if the latter wrote some of Virgil, it is by far his best work, and Callimachus cannot fairly be blamed for not writing like Homer or Sophocles.

We have left ourselves no space to quote the many passages we had noted as admirable in insight and expression. A modern touch is the description of the sausage-seller of the 'Knights' as an "abnormally characteristic costermonger." His wealth of impromptu audacity and ready innuendo, his unabashed methods of business, make the parallel really striking. The pieces of translation inserted are well chosen and executed, though οὐ φροντὶς Ἱπποκλείδῃ (Herod. 4, 129) should surely be rendered "Hippoclides does not care." The printing is clear and satisfactory. In another edition Prof. Murray should do away with the tiresome method of indicating the books of the Iliad and Odyssey by Greek letters, and give Gorgo's friend in Theocritus's fifteenth idyl her right name, which is Praxinoe, not "Praxithea."

Moines et Papes: Essais de Psychologie Historique. Par Émile Gebhart. (Hachette & Cie.)

M. Gebhart, whose charming volume 'L'Italie Mystique' we reviewed some years ago, is chiefly known to the general reader as the author of an historical novel, 'Autour d'une Tiare.' This title applies, in fact, not only to his solitary essay in romance, but to almost every one of M. Gebhart's studies in historical psychology. The dome of St. Peter's dominates his canvas. With half his erudition, an English or a German writer would have undertaken a history of the Papacy. M. Gebhart prefers to turn the lantern of his criticism on some one or another of the curious and almost unexplored byways of old Rome. And the more curious, the more unexplored, so much the more effective his revelation. Thus, in the present volume, while the cultivated reader will find in the essays on the Borgias and on St. Catherine of Siena little that is not known to the student of even such mundane and accessible authorities as J. A. Symonds, Ludwig Pastor, or even Mrs. Butler, the first essay, on Raoul Glaber, is as valuable and almost as new to the historian as to the psychologist.

We have compared M. Gebhart with Mr. Symonds, and the comparison is a contrast. The period, and, to a great extent, the fundamental authorities are the same—but what a difference in the spirit! Condemned to the ennui of a small provincial neighbourhood, Mr. Symonds let his impatient imagination run riot in all that was excessive, extraordinary, monstrous, or simply pageant-like and magnificent, in the past. He saw it all, as it were, projected in the sharpest possible relief against the snows of Davos or the placid downs of Clifton; and his books on the Renascence have the lyric quality of a personal outpouring. Hence their weakness, hence their charm. M. Gebhart, on the other hand, is much more the dispassionate psychologist than the picturesque historian. Nothing delights him more than to find, mislaid among the terrible or splendid relics of a tragic epoch, some little humdrum, ordinary trait of human nature. His picture of the Borgias is thus below his usual level, his calm, ironic, philosophic mind being, after all, at a loss to explain that brood of monsters. But what an excellent portrait he gives us of that conscienceless Saint-Simon of Renascent Rome—the Papal chaplain Burchard! Mr. Symonds merely used his 'Diarium' as a palette, whence he fetched his deepest tints of lake and carmine. M. Gebhart gives us a picture of the man himself—bewilderingly, atrociously, ironically like a dozen of our fellow citizens. He bids us mark the absence of indignation with which the Clerk of Pontifical Ceremonies sets down the most outrageous enormities of a Cæsar of Valentinois or an Alexander VI., such details appearing to him infinitely unimportant by the side of the smallest variation of ritual or protocol: matters of lasting moment these, resuming and begetting a long tradition, and essentially free from the transitory and fluctuating quality of mere human action. All idealists are, perhaps, at heart a little immoral, what one does appearing to them so far inferior to what one thinks. But that rarely-failing stimulus, personal interest, could arouse even the conscience of a Burchard from its slumbers. 'Twas on the invasion of Rome by Charles VIII. of France. The Clerk of the Ceremonies found one night, on his return home, his own mules and horses ranged out in the street in the pouring rain, while the ultramontane interlopers occupied his stables. "Fenum meum consumebant," writes the good man in his wrath, with a touching sentiment of "meum" and "tuum." An appeal to high quarters soon set the matter straight. The French coursers were ignominiously ejected; but their brief passage through John Burchard's stableyard evoked in his soul a sincerer indignation than all the atrocities of all the Borgias. So true is it that our own pot is bigger than our neighbour's cauldron.

Burchard has inspired his historian with a very living page; but, as we have hinted, we prefer the essay on Raoul Glaber. In this M. Gebhart has skilfully opposed two main currents of mediæval Christianity: on the one hand, Raoul Glaber, the disorderly, vagabond monk, almost completely unlettered although himself half chronicler, half hagiologist, loose of life, but firm of faith, especially in demons and the devil; and, on the other hand, Sylvester II., man of culture, humanist, reformer of learning, Pope: a lucid and penetrating spirit, one of those rare channels through which the springs of antique wisdom and philosophy, still unobstructed, continued to fertilize the Christian world. Pope Sylvester—the Latinist, the student of Lucretius, scrutinizing the heavens nightly in his astronomic mirror—was, for all his tiara, an object of some suspicion to the orthodox. The loose-lived Brother Ralph appeared on a safer track. For too much learning was a dangerous thing, a scant grace in a prelate; and there was less to fear in a Pope like John XVI., who took Virgil and Plato for enchanters or diviners, capable of soaring at will through the clouds or plunging through the waters. Brother Ralph is well aware of the privilege of ignorance. None is surer than he of his safety in the fold; Lucretius, for certain, never led him far astray. And yet it is Brother Ralph who, all unconscious, is the heretic, and a heretic of the first water, a Manichee! And M. Gebhart has some pregnant phrases on the singular, the epidemic obsession which, bred of an atrophy of the reason and fostered by some mysterious current of Asiatic mysticism, was to bind many generations in a sort of charmed terror — an involuntary homage to the Prince of Darkness—him who, coexistent with the Divine Principle, is also coeternal and coequal, and, according to a wide-spread mediæval heresy, no less god than God himself. The fear of the devil, rising to a maniacal panic, was to infect and to paralyze the religious spirit of Europe. Monks of holiest life, appalled at the evil of their times and incapable of any effort of abstract reasoning, were to assist in shuddering at the fancied decline of the soul, at the triumph of the Enemy and the defeat of Heaven. These doctrines, which were to spread, with the Albigeois, throughout the brilliant scenery and cultured courts of Southern France like a blight of pessimism, were already rife at Orleans so early as 1022. In the pages of Raoul Glaber M. Gebhart studies, with that tolerant and disimpassioned tranquillity of soul which he brings into the obscurest and most fevered recesses of the past, this first infection of the East, this mysterious invasion of the doctrine of the Manichees, brought from Lombardy, like the plague-germ it was, in the folds of a wayfaring woman's mantle.

FRENCH NOVELS.

Ramuntcho. Par Pierre Loti. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

In his new novel "Loti" is at his best, as he was at his very worst in 'Les Trois Dames de la Kasbah.' A smuggler-boy of the frontier near St. Jean de Luz goes to be a soldier, and returns a sergeant from Madagascar to find his love a nun. That is the whole story, but the poetry with which it is felt and told is as exquisite as are its Basque surroundings.

Les Deux Rives. Par Fernand Vandérem. (Paris, Ollendorff.)

The novel before us, which has had its success in the pages of a popular French review, gives us of the society on the right bank of the Seine only glimpses of the world of second-class finance, but contains a close and admirable study of the professorial world of the quartier Latin. Characters of a professor at the Collège de France, of his "clerical" wife, of his atheist brother, and of his hard-working daughter are excellent. As we are giving praise where praise is due, we ought to add that 'Les Deux Rives' is not suitable for young ladies.

ROMANTIC TALES.

The Ivory Queen. By John Pendleton. (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)—Central Africa, recent publications notwithstanding, is still a tolerably safe place in which to localize an improbable romance. And even supposing that Mr. Pendleton's readers should hold pronounced views as to whether or no a "white race attended by curious dwarfs" exists in the heart of this country, it is unlikely that they will be sufficiently carping to consider the matter seriously in the present instance. Rather, if the extravagance of the tale does not wholly disarm criticism, a question will arise in their minds as to whether the men in Bayard's caravan would not have been a great deal more disgusted than pleased by the discovery of Markham's secret. Still harder will it be to reconcile them to the idea of an English girl linking her fate with that of an African monarch, however civilized, or of the caravan as a whole caring to settle itself permanently in such a far country. Those, however, whose taste is for adventure and romance somewhat in the style of the 'Arabian Nights,' will derive amusement from the perusal of a volume that has no pretensions to literary merit or to pedantic accuracy.

The Garden of Romance: Romantic Tales of All Time. Chosen and edited by Ernest Rhys. (Kegan Paul & Co.)—This is a charming book, and many will be glad to possess it; but we are not quite sure that Mr. Rhys has "chosen" his title as well as he has chosen his stories, for the stories are not all romance, at least as romance is defined in modern taste. Edgar Allan Poe's weird story of 'The Fall of the House of Usher,' Hawthorne's 'My Kinsman Major Molineux,' and Sterne's 'Story of Le Fevre' are examples of the range which Mr. Rhys has allowed himself in the matter of selection. As specimens of fiction they are delightful in the new setting given to them; but then romance is, after all, a special department of fiction and not the equivalent of fiction itself. If we are careful to state this objection to Mr. Rhys's book, we do so in the interest of literary history. All such books are, or should be, landmarks in that history. They can interest the general reader, serve to improve the taste of the young and to refresh the memory of the older generation, and yet, by the accuracy of their classification in a special department of literature, be an immense boon to students of English literary history. But Mr. Rhys's book falls short of this position by reason of the fact that he has chosen charming specimens of English story without reference to the department to which they severally belong. Some students have long been of opinion that a comparative study of the development of the story from its literary side would be of immense interest to contrast with the many studies which have been given to it from its traditional side, and we look to men like Mr. Rhys for help in this direction. Sir Thomas Malory, Sir Walter Scott, Hans Christian Andersen, and Washington Irving are the authors who, in addition to the three already mentioned above, have been laid under contribution, and there are also stories from 'The Arabian Nights,' 'The Decameron,' and 'Don Quixote.' No one can read these masterpieces again without feeling glad to have them in their present form of good print, wide margins, and pretty binding. It is essentially a book to place in the hands of those who are likely to be influenced by the best examples of English story literature.

MILITARY AND NAVAL LITERATURE.

Of late years many books have appeared about the Indian Mutiny. In 1894 Mr. Forrest's 'Selections from the Records of the Government of India' (Athen. No. 3456), Mr. Forbes Mitchell's 'Reminiscences of the Great Mutiny' (Athen. No. 3460), and Col. Maude and Mr. Sherer's 'Memories of the Mutiny' (Athen. No. 3464) were reviewed, and it was remarked that the time had not yet come when a satisfactory history of the events of that crisis could be written. The materials were accumulating, but evidence was incomplete and partly unverified, whilst the susceptibilities of surviving actors in the scenes or of their relatives made an impartial narrative difficult if not impossible. Since that was written, further contributions have been added, amongst which 'Lucknow and Oude in the Mutiny,' by General McLeod Innes (Athen. No. 3521), formed a valuable addition to our sources of information, and now the same author, in The Sepoy Revolt (Innes & Co.), has produced a small volume dealing with the Mutiny as a whole. Though we adhere to the opinion above expressed that the attempt to produce a satisfactory general history of the scenes in India during 1857-58, with portraits of the chief actors, is premature, and impossible, indeed, without an amount of study and research of which there is no evidence in the book before us, yet much will be found in it to repay perusal and consideration. Optimists and those who consider our present civil administration as the embodiment of stereotyped perfection may study with advantage what is said about the chronic discontent which exists, and always will exist, in India; others less utopian may profit by a consideration of the remarks on the care needed to prevent that feeling from becoming acute; whilst those to whom in time of danger the rest turn for protection may learn that the sword should never be allowed to rust, nor our military superiority to be challenged with a chance of success. These views altogether justify the appearance of this work, for which otherwise sufficient warrant might not be found. Readers may advantageously compare its contents with the parts of Lord Roberts's 'Reminiscences' which deal with the question of whether another mutiny is probable or possible, and they will find a good deal of corroborative testimony. General Innes's book is well furnished with maps, and there is a sufficient index; paper and type are fairly good, but the binding will scarcely stand hard usage.

In a volume entitled War, Famine, and our Food Supply, published by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co., Mr. R. B. Marston puts forward his well-known views in favour of a storage of wheat. We are inclined to think that, as a precaution additional to other measures, some of which are even more important, a certain storage of food may be desirable; but as between expenditure on strengthening the navy, or upon providing the navy with cable communication in our own hands to the coaling stations which it would use in war, and the expenditure proposed, we favour the former rather than the latter. Mr. Marston's view, however, is not so much that our food supply would be captured in time of war (though that comes into his account) as that the United States and Russia—not, in his opinion, likely to be friendly Powers—control our wheat supply. It is, however, probable that the strong interest of the United States in neutrality in time of war would prevail, and that they would continue to feed us; and the increase of their navy, as well as their great reserve strength, would make them such dangerous opponents for our enemies that they would probably be able to maintain a very high view of the right of neutrals. That food, and especially wheat, would rise in price in time of war there can be no doubt. Mr. Marston thinks that bread riots would be the immediate result, but it is probable that means would be found of checking the effect of a rise of price upon the poorer classes; and it must be remembered that a dangerous war would mean high bounties upon enlistment and a large expenditure at home, the bulk of which would go into the hands of the working class, so that wages, as well as the price of food, would rise rapidly. If our enemies were so strong at sea as to be able to create anything like a blockade they would be in a position to invade, and would certainly do so, and invasion is a more real danger than starvation. Mr. Marston tries to support his views by a most vigorous picture of the rioters attacking the Carlton Club, and another of "The fight at the corner of Wellington Street, Strand"; the latter of which makes us glad that we have built our new offices in Bream's Buildings.

Mr. Edward Stanford has issued a pamphlet of considerable importance by Field-Marshal Sir Lintorn Simmons, under the title of Military Organization: an Attempt to remedy the Defects of the Present Linked-Battalion System. Without discussing the changes proposed, which would carry us too far into detail for a non-service paper, we may say that Sir Lintorn Simmons has in the first part of his pamphlet given a powerful exposition of the defects of the present system.

Messrs. Clowes & Sons publish The Federal Defence of Australasia, by Mr. George Cathcart Craig, a work which is better in design than in execution. The author, for example, asserts that in the event of war with Russia "it would be necessary for Canada to support the North Pacific fleet of Admiral Stephenson, with a military force to capture and destroy the hostile port of Vladivostock." Now such a statement somewhat puts Mr. Craig out of court. It is possible that, as matters stand, Japan or the United Kingdom, or both together, could capture the Russian arsenal and naval base on the Pacific; but to suggest that Canada could take it or to suggest that Canada could take it with the support of the British squadron alone is absurd to those who know the number of troops which Russia has available for service at the point. Canada, indeed, owing to her lack of strength and the constant decline in numbers of her organized militia, is a weak point in imperial defence, and could with difficulty defend the Government establishments at Esquimalt in her own territory, even against light attack. Then the author upbraids General Goodenough for having in the Army Book failed "to grasp the naval idea," and he quotes a long paragraph from General Goodenough to the effect that the Australian colonies could not be seriously attacked in time of war, although they might have to face little descents by cruisers. Now this statement by General Goodenough, so far from being opposed to "the naval idea," was based on the opinion of the Admiralty; and when the author says that "steam and electricity" are changing this idea, by which he means not "the naval idea," but General Goodenough's idea, we have to say that the Admiralty are advised that the doctrine stated by General Goodenough, instead of being less true, is as true to-day as it was when it was published. The duty of Australia in time of a great war would be to capture New Caledonia, and we trust that the Australian forces may be kept in a state of efficiency which would enable them to perform that duty. The author is on safer ground when he shows that under certain circumstances Australia might be both willing and able to afford support to the Empire in the defence of India. This is a really practical and valuable idea, and it is to be hoped that the author may use his influence in Australia to foster it. The style of the book is not altogether to be commended, as, for example, in such a passage as "the foreigner having become ingrateful, and entering into a base concert of action against British interests....." "De Moulinari" is a curious form of the name Molinari.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

In Tarrigal; or, Bush Life in Australia (Gay & Bird), Mr. E. T. Hooley—not the well-known millionaire, but an unpretending practical squatter in Victoria—has described several scenes, which, he tells us, are principally founded on facts. These he has woven into a tale, rather unconnected, without much plot, which he relates in an easy, natural, unconventional style. Those who know the immediate locality in which most of the events occur will easily recognize names and places which clearly prove the personal knowledge of the author. The remainder of the work, we suspect, is not so authentic, more especially the "treasure trove."

MM. Plon, Nourrit & Cie. are responsible for the publication of L'Émigration Française, by M. Eugène Poiré, the author of a good book on Tunis which appeared some five years ago. French emigration is a little like snakes in Ireland, and the author has some difficulty in establishing the importance of the question which he surveys. Tunis has been an extraordinary success, but there is not much emigration to it; and there is hardly any, if any, other French possession or protectorate to which it would be anything but cruelty to invite Frenchmen to go with the idea of settlement. The author is under the usual French difficulty as to the spelling of British names, and talks, for example, about "Lord Roseberry."

Municipal Reform in the United States, by Mr. Thomas Devlin, published by Messrs. Putnam's Sons, is sufficiently explained by its title, and does not require further comment, except that, from the English point of view, there are some curious words in it; for example, "Whitechapel" used as a descriptive adjective in the phrase "white-chapel section of a city."

The Government Printer at Sydney publishes the sixth issue of Mr. Coghlan's excellent Statistical Account of the Seven Colonies of Australasia.

The New Zealand Official Year-Book for 1896 does not appear to differ much in form from previous issues. It is published by Mr. John Mackay, Government Printer, at Wellington; and in London by Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode.

Rhoda Fleming fills vols. ix. and x. of the collected edition of Mr. Meredith's novels which Messrs. Constable & Co. are publishing. Their fine typography lends new charms to an old favourite, which in October, 1865, we declared to possess abundance of unaffected humour, much vigorous writing, and "genuine poetic insight into human nature," while the weaknesses of the story, which then appeared of moment, are now obliterated by our enjoyment of the pictures of Southern yeomen.

Messrs. Downey & Co. are to be congratulated on the appearance of the first volume of their handsome reprint of "The Novels of Charles Lever," edited by his daughter. They have wisely called in the aid of Messrs. T. & A. Constable, of Edinburgh, and the well-known skill of those printers has produced a clear and not over-crowded page, refreshing to the eye of the hardened novel-reader. The etchings of Phiz are excellently suited to the rollicking fun of The Confessions of Harry Lorrequer, and we are glad to see them again. The good-humoured, confident, and somewhat hubristic temper which the Peninsula and Waterloo fostered among the travelling British, Saxon and Celt alike, was never better described than by Lever. He was, however, a more careless proof corrector even than Cervantes, and his daughter has done well to remedy his failings in this respect.

Miss Friswell has reprinted some essays by her father, the late Mr. Hain Friswell, under the title of The Burden of Life (Fisher Unwin). —Messrs. Geddes & Co. (or, as they absurdly style themselves, Colleagues), of Edinburgh, have issued three volumes of reprints of stories by Miss Fiona Macleod, Spiritual Tales, Barbaric Tales, and Tragic Romances.—Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Co. have included a wonderfully cheap edition (well suited for the poor man's library) of the Poetical Works of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in their "Apollo Poets."

We have received catalogues from Mr. Baker (theology), Mr. Edwards (three catalogues, playbills and posters, fine arts, and theology), Messrs. George & Son, Messrs. Maggs Brothers (first editions, interesting), Messrs. Maurice & Co., Mr. May (good), Mr. Menken, Messrs. Myers & Co. (interesting), Mr. Nutt (folk-lore, Celtic and Basque books), Mr. Quaritch (fine bindings), Mr. Spencer, Messrs. Suckling & Co., and Mr. Watkin (occult sciences). From Birmingham we have the catalogues of Mr. Downing and Mr. Thistlewood; from Bournemouth of Messrs. Bright & Son; from Bristol of Messrs. Fawn & Son; from Edinburgh those of Mr. Baxendine, Mr. Brown, Mr. Grant (good), Mr. Johnston, and Mr. Thin (interesting); from Leeds those of Mr. Goldie (good) and Mr. Milligan; and from Liverpool that of Messrs. Young & Sons (books and portraits, good). Mr. Ward, of Richmond, Surrey (engravings and prints, good), and Mr. Jones, of Streatham, have also sent us their catalogues. Catalogues from abroad have reached us from Mr. Nijhoff and Messrs. Van Stockum & Son (portraits and engravings), of the Hague; Messrs. Baer & Co., of Frankfort (memoirs); Mr. Lissa, of Berlin (rare books); and Mr. Hoepli, of Milan (works on Rome).

We have on our table A Short Life of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII., translated from the Italian by C. Dawson (Dublin, Eason),—Crags and Craters, Rambles in the Island of Réunion, by W. D. Oliver (Longmans),—Soudan, '96: the Adventures of a War Artist, by H. C. Seppings Wright (Cox),—Little Journeys to the Homes of American Authors, Second Series (Putnam),—The Maritime Codes of Spain and Portugal, translated and annotated by F. W. Raikes, LL.D. (Wilson),—Wood Carving, by J. Phillips (Chapman & Hall),—Demon Possession and Allied Themes, by the Rev. J. L. Nevius (Redway),—Home Brewed from the West Country, by Osgood and Mary Hartier (Simpkin),—The Persuasive Hand, and other Sayings and Essayings, by the Author of 'Times and Days' (Chiswick Press),—A Dangerous Conspirator, by G. Norway (Jarrold),—A Widow Well Left, by R. Manifold-Craig (Roxburghe Press),—Adventures of Roger L'Estrange, an Autobiography, translated from the Spanish by D. Daly (Sonnenschein),—Wulfric the Weapon-Thane, by C. W. Whistler (Blackie),—Fantasies, by Mabel Nembhard (George Allen),—Musa Medica, by J. Johnston, M.D. (Savoy Press),—A Selection from the Poems of George John Romanes, with an introduction by T. H. Warren (Longmans),—The Scales of Heaven, by F. Langbridge (Stock),—The Upanishads, translated into English by G. R. S. Mead, Vol. II (Theosophical Publishing Society),—The Book of Judges in Greek according to the Text of Codex Alexandrinus, edited by A. E. Brooke and N. McLean (Cambridge, University Press),—The Bible its Own Witness, by Chagab (Stock),—Pistis Sophia, a Gnostic Gospel, originally translated from Greek into Coptic, edited by G. R. S. Mead (Theosophical Publishing Society),—Sermons on the Pentateuch, by the late Rev. Robert Payne Smith (S.P.C.K.),—Gautama, by H. Blau (Wohlleben),—and Saphyr, by C. Buet (Paris, Lévy). Among New Editions we have First Lessons in Bookkeeping, by J. Thornton (Macmillan),—A Bimetallic Primer, by H. C. Gibbs (Wilson),—The Children, by F. Warner (Hodgson),—The Garden-Craft Series: The Nursery-Book, by L. H. Bailey (Macmillan),—Noqu Talanoa, by "Sundowner" (European Mail, Limited),—Macaulay's Essays on English History (Blackie),—Jeanne Darc, sa Vraie Mission, by J. E. Choussy (Orléans, Herluison),—and The Pilgrimage of Strongsoul, and other Stories, by J. Davidson (Ward & Downey).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Badham's (F. P.) St. Mark's Indebtedness to St. Matthew, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Clare's (J.) The Science of Spiritual Life according to the Spiritual Exercises, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Farrar (Rev. F. W.) and others' Sermons for the Commemoration of Queen Victoria, 1837–1897, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Gamble's (E. B.) The God Idea of the Ancients, or Sex in Religion, royal 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Gifford's (E. H.) The Incarnation, a Study of Philippians ii. 5-11, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hort's (F. J. A.) The Christian Ecclesia, a Course of Lectures, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Liddon's (H. P.) Explanatory Analysis of St. Paul's First Epistle to Timothy, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Medaille's (Père) Meditations on the Gospels, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Primitive Christianity, Vol. 1, containing the Lost Lives of Jesus Christ and the Apostles, royal 8vo. 10/6 net, cl.
Tyrrell's (G.) Nova et Vetera, Informal Meditations for Times of Spiritual Dryness, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Westcott's (Right Rev. B. F.) Some Lessons of the Revised Version of the New Testament, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Law.

Gunter's (Lieut.-Col. E.) Outlines of Military Law, 7/6 cl.
London Heath Laws, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Macy's (J.) The English Constitution, cr. 8vo. 8/6 net, cl.

Fine Art.

Facsimiles from Early Printed Books in the British Museum, 32 Plates, 7/6 in portfolio.

Poetry and the Drama.

Burns's (R.) Selected Poems, arranged by A. J. George, 3/6
Rushton's (W. L.) Shakespeare an Archer, 8vo. 2/6 net, cl.
Spenser's Faerie Queen, Book 1, ed. by W. H. Hill, 2/6 cl.

Bibliography.

Fortescue's (G. K.) A Subject Index of Modern Works added to Library of British Museum, 1881–90, royal 8vo. 40/ cl.

Political Economy.

Life and Labour of the People in London, ed. by C. Booth, cr. 8vo. 7/6 net, cl.

History and Biography.

Burnet's History of my Own Time. Part 1, The Reign of Charles II., ed. by O. Airy, Vol. I. 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Davey's (R.) The Sultan and his Subjects, 2 vols. 8vo. 24/ cl.
Gibbs's (M. E.) Napoleon's Military Career, 2/ cl. in box.
Hogarth's (D. G.) Philip and Alexander of Macedon, Two Essays in Biography, cr. 8vo. 14/ cl.
Story of a Busy Life, Recollections of Mrs. G. H. Paull, 3/6

Geography and Travel.

Golfer's and Sportsman's Holiday Guide to Ireland, 2/ swd.
Parkes's (H.) An Emigrant's Home Letters, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Philology.

Moulton (Rev. W. F.) and Geden's (Rev. A. S.) A Concordance to the Greek Testament, 8vo. 25/ net, cl.

Science.

Brunwell's Atlas of Clinical Medicine, Vol. 3, folio, 42/ net.
Davenport's (C. B.) Experimental Morphology, Part 1, 8vo. 9/ net, cl.
Geikie's (Sir A.) The Ancient Volcanoes of Great Britain, 2 vols. royal 8vo. 32/ net, cl.
Mathematical Questions and Solutions from the 'Educational Times,' Vol. 66, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Millar's (W.) Plastering, Plain and Decorative, 18/ net, cl.
Myrick's (H.) Turkeys, and How to Grow Them, illus. 5/ cl.
Peabody's (E. H.) Steam Boilers, 8vo. 17/ cl.
Singer (I.) and Berens's (L. H.) Some Unrecognized Laws of Nature, illustrated, 8vo. 18/ cl.
Wetterstrand's (O. G.) Hypnotism and its Application to Practical Medicine, royal 8vo. 10/ cl.
Wright's (C. H.) The Designing of Draw Spans, 8vo. 10/6 cl.

General Literature.

Allan's (E. F.) Two Women and a Man, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Barrett's (F.) The Harding Scandal, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Batson's (S.) The Earth Children, cr. 8vo. 2/ swd.
Besant's (W.) The Master Craftsman, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Bon Mots of the Eighteenth Century, edited by W. Jerrold, 2/6 net, cl.
Cahan's (A.) Yekl, a Tale of the New York Ghetto, 2/6 net.
Carr's (Mrs. C.) Cottage Folk, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
City of London Directory, 1897, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Fennell (C.) and O'Callaghan's (J. P.) A Prince of Tyrone, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gamble's (G.) A Farrago of Folly, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Garran's (R. R.) The Coming Commonwealth, an Australian Handbook of Federal Government, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Gissing's (G.) The Whirlpool, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield, ed. by M. Macmillan, 2/6 cl.
Hatton's (J.) The Dagger and the Cross, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hocking's (J.) The Birthright, the Adventurous History of Jasper Pennington, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
House of Dreams, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
India List and India Office List, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Macaulay's Works, Edinburgh Edition, Vol. 8, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Mackenzie's (F.) Sprays of Northern Pine, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
McNeill's (Rev. J.) Some One is Coming, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Maeterlinck's (M.) The Treasure of the Humble, translated by A. Sutro, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Mason's (F.) The Tame Fox, and other Sketches, cr. 8vo. 7/6
Prescott's (E. L.) Scarlet and Steel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Quine's (J.) The Captain of the Parish, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Riddell's (Mrs.) Did He Deserve It? cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Roberts's (M.) Maurice Quain, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Shaler's (N. S.) American Highways, a Popular Account of their Conditions, &c., cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Shinn's (C. H.) The Story of the Mine, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Smith's (J. C.) Fierceheart the Soldier, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
South African Boy, Schoolboy Life in Natal, by Natalian, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Stephens's (R.) Mr. Peters, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Under Love's Rule, by Author of 'Lady Audley's Secret,' 6/
Warung's (Price) Tales of the Old Régime, 12mo. 2/ bds.
Watson's (K.) Litanies of Life, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Milas (N.): Das Kirchenrecht der morgenländischen Kirche, 10m.
Ratner (B.): Seder Olam Rabba, die grosse Weltchronik, nach Handschriften u. Druckwerken hrsg., 4m. 50.
Sauerland (H. V.): Sancti Clementis, Primi Mettensis Episcopi, Vita, Translatio ac Miracula, 1m.
Schaefer (R.): Das Herrenmahl nach Ursprung u. Bedeutung, m. Rücksicht auf die neusten Forschgn. untersucht, 6m.
Schenkl (C.): Sancti Ambrosii Opera, Part 1, 12m. 80.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Dayot (A.): Journées Révolutionnaires, 1830–48, Part 1, 0fr. 60.

Drama.

Vacquerie (A.): Théâtre Inédit, 3fr. 50.

Music.

Lavignac (A.): Le Voyage Artistique à Bayreuth, 5fr.

History and Biography.

Agent Secret (Un) de Richelieu, les Aventures du Comte de Rochefort, 3fr. 50.
Jeanne d'Arc et ses Récents Historiens, 4fr.
Pontbriand (Colonel de): Mémoires sur les Guerres de la Chouannerie, 7fr. 50.
Turquan (J.): Napoléon Amoureux, 3fr. 50.

Science.

Levat (É. D.): L'Or en Sibérie Orientale, 2 vols. 32fr.
Moissan (H.): Le Four Électrique, 15fr.

General Literature.

Annuaire de l'Armée Française pour 1897, 12fr.
Bazin (R.): De toute son Ame, 3fr. 50.
Busy (B. de): Sœur Petite, 3fr.
Castellane (Marquis de): Histoire d'un Imbécile et d'un Homme d'Esprit, 3fr. 50.
Champol: Le Roman d'un Égoïste, 3fr.

Daudet (Madame A.): Notes sur Londres, Illustrations de Henri Lanos, 2fr.
Dieulafoy (J.): Déchéance, 3fr. 50.
Georget (A.): Rêve Brisé, 3fr. 50.
Gué (P.): Cruelle Méprise, 2fr.
Hugny (E.): Les Mères Pratiques, 3fr. 50.
Octon (P. V. d'): Cœur de Savant, 3fr. 50.

THE VERLAINE MONUMENT.

Rome, March 30, 1897.

The committee for the erection of a monument to Paul Verlaine has asked me to announce in England that subscriptions will be gladly received by the treasurer, M. Clerget, 17, rue Guénégaud, Paris. Among the members of the committee are MM. François Coppée, Stéphane Mallarmé, Auguste Rodin, Catulle Mendès, Maurice Barrès; and the sculptor who has undertaken the monument is M. Niederhäusern. I hope that England, which was hospitable to Verlaine during his lifetime, will be not less ready to help in this commemoration of his fame, now that he is dead.

Arthur Symons.

AN OBSCURE POINT IN ENGLISH HISTORY.

One of the obscure problems connected with the war between the York and Lancaster factions is the story of Warwick, the king-maker, having been refused admittance into Calais, of which he was the Governor, by one Vauclerc, a Gascon, in 1470.

The story is taken from Comines, a contemporary historian, who writes as follows under the above date:—

"Le Comte de Warwic, se trouvant le plus foible, advertit bien ses amis secrets de ce quils avoient a fare, et se mit en la mer a son beau loisir avec le Duc de Clarence, qui avoit espousé sa fille et tenoit son party nonobstant quil fust frere dudit Roy Edouard, et menerent femmes et enfans, et grand nombre de gens, et se vint trouver devant Calais, et dedans estoit son Lieutenant en la dite ville de Calais appelle Monseigneur de Vaucler, et plusieurs de ses serviteurs domestiques, qui en lieu de le recueiller luy tireunt de grands coups de canon," &c.

And he adds lower down:—

"Le Roy d'Angleterre fut fort content dudit Seigneur de Vaucler de ce refus quil avoit fait a son capitaine, et luy envoya lettres pur tenir l'office en chef, car il estoit sage chevalier et ancien, et portoit lordre de la Jartière."

It will be observed that Comines never speaks of Vaucler as a Gascon, and I think it can be shown clearly that the lieutenant at Calais who refused admittance to Warwick was John, Lord Wenlock.

Warwick and George, Duke of Clarence, were proclaimed traitors by Edward IV. on March 23rd, 1470. In April they took shipping at Dartmouth, and, after an ineffectual attempt to cut out a large vessel at Southampton, sailed for Calais. Edward was at Southampton on May 1st, where he executed twenty of the retinue of Warwick who had been taken prisoners in the attempt to cut out the Trinity; and by letters patent, dated May 23rd, he appointed John, Lord Wenlock, to be Lieutenant of the Town and Marches of Calais. Comines's description of Warwick's lieutenant as a "Chevalier ancien, qui portoit lordre de la Jartière," applies very well to Lord Wenlock, who had been made a Knight of the Garter in the reign of Henry VI., and there is no known knight of that order whose name resembles in any way that of Vauclerc, and the succession to the vacant stalls is given very fully and completely in Beltz's 'History of the Garter.' The origin of the mistake seems to be this: the name in the early editions of Comines is written Vaucloe, and I have no doubt Comines wrote it as Vancloc, for the letters u and c cannot be distinguished from n and c in early handwriting. Later editions of Comines changed the name to Vaucler, and one of the old English chroniclers (Hall, I believe), finding a French name as he thought, jumped to the conclusion he was a Gascon.

George Wrottesley, Major-General.

TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Part I.—Contributions to Periodical Literature, &c.

25.

'The Victoria Regia,' edited by Adelaide A. Procter (London, Victoria Press, 1861), pp. 13-14.

The Sailor Boy. ("He rose at dawn and flushed with hope.")

Also printed separately in pamphlet form, as follows: "The Sailor Boy. | By | Alfred Tennyson, D.C.L. | Poet Laureate | [Publishers' design.] | London: | Emily Faithfull & Co., Victoria Press. | 1861." Fcp. 8vo., pp. 8, in cream-coloured paper wrappers, with the title-page (enclosed within an "Oxford" frame) reproduced upon the front cover, the words "25 Copies for the Author's Use" being added at foot, below the rule. The pamphlet is of the highest rarity.

Reprinted in 'Enoch Arden,' &c., 1864, pp. 155-156.

26.

"Helen's Tower, | Clandeboye. | [Vignette of the Tower.] | Privately Printed." Post 4to., pp. 8, in paper wrappers. No date, but printed in 1861. The whole of the title-page, including a double-ruled frame, is engraved upon steel. Lord Tennyson's poem (which consists of twelve lines only) occupies p. 8.

Helen's Tower.

Helen's Tower, here I stand
Dominant over sea and land.

Reprinted in Good Words, January, 1884, p. 25. Afterwards included in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, p. 190.

In Mr. J. H. Slater's 'Early Editions,' 1894, 'Helen's Tower' is included among the list of first editions of Lord Tennyson's writings, and its value is amusingly appraised at "25*l.* or 30*l.*"! The pamphlet is not a Tennyson princeps at all, but merely a book contributed to by Lord Tennyson; and its value cannot be more than a fourth at most of the sum Mr. Slater suggests. No doubt the entry will be corrected in a future edition of Mr. Slater's most useful work.

27.

Fraser's Magazine, vol. lxv. No. 390, June, 1862, p. 803.

Ode: May the First, 1862.

Uplift a thousand voices full and sweet,
In this wide hall with earth's invention stor'd.

Sung at the opening of the International Exhibition. An inaccurate, and unauthorized, version appeared in the Times, and was widely copied by the contemporary press. The version printed in Fraser was official, and the text agrees with that of the author's pamphlet, then in the press.

One of the errors which crept into the Times version is thus accounted for. The copy from which it was printed was marked for music, and before the word "art," in the line

And shapes and hues of art divine,

a large P was affixed, signifying Piano. The word, consequently, was printed Part, neither compositor nor reader having sufficient astuteness to detect the error. This misprint was repeated in all the unauthorized reproductions of the 'Ode.'

Printed in pamphlet form as follows: "Ode | For the Opening of | The International Exhibition. | By | Alfred Tennyson, P.L., D.C.L. | London: | Edward Moxon & Co., Dover Street. | 1862." Foolscap 8vo. pp. 8.

Reprinted in the Library Edition of Tennyson's 'Works,' 1872, pp. 200-202.

28.

The Cornhill Magazine, vol. viii. No. 48, December, 1863, pp. 707-709.

Attempts at Classic Metres in Quantity.

The 'Attempts' are as follows:—

(a) Translations of Homer — Hexameters and Pentameters.

These lame hexameters the strong wing'd music of Homer!

(b) Milton. Alcaics.

O mighty-mouth'd inventor of Harmonies.

(c) Hendecasyllabics.

O you chorus of indolent reviewers.

(d) Specimen of a Translation of the Iliad in Blank Verse (Iliad, viii. 542-561). Prefaced by a prose note, omitted from later appearances of this 'Specimen.'

He ceased, and sea-like roar'd the Trojan host.

In the 'Enoch Arden' volume the first line of this 'Translation' reads:—

So Hector said, and sea-like roar'd his host.

In later editions the line was still further amended, as follows:—

So Hector spake; the Trojans roar'd applause.

The above 'Attempts' were first reprinted as follows:—

(a) In the Library Edition of Tennyson's 'Works,' 1872, vol. iii. p. 291.

(b) In 'Enoch Arden, and other Poems,' 1864, pp. 174-175.

(c) Ibid., pp. 175-176.

(d) Ibid., pp. 177-178.

29.

The Court Journal, No. 1835, March 19th, 1864.

Epitaph on the late Duchess of Kent.

"Her Children Rise up and call her Blessed."

Long as the heart beats life within her breast,
Thy child will bless thee, guardian, mother mild,
And far away thy memory will be blest
By children of the children of thy child.

This epitaph was inscribed on the statue by Theed at Frogmore. It has not been included in any of the authorized editions of Tennyson's collected works. From the page of the Court Journal it was copied extensively by the contemporary press.

30.

Good Words, January, 1868, pp. 17-18.

The Victim. ("A Plague upon the People fell.") With a full-page illustration by A. B. Houghton. This plate has never been reproduced.

Also privately printed in pamphlet form, by Sir Ivor Bertie Guest (Lord Wimborne) at Canford Manor, as follows: "The Victim. | By | Alfred Tennyson, D.C.L., Poet Laureate. | Canford Manor, | 1867." 4to. pp. 9.

Reprinted in 'The Holy Grail, and other Poems,' 1870, pp. 193-198.

31.

Once a Week, vol. i. New Series, part i., January 4th, 1868, p. 13.

On a Spiteful Letter.

Here, it is here, the close of the year.

Reprinted, under the amended title of 'The Spiteful Letter,' in the Library Edition of Tennyson's 'Works,' 1872, vol. iii. pp. 262-263.

32.

Macmillan's Magazine, vol. xvii. No. 100, February, 1868, p. 271.

Wages. ("Glory of warrior, glory of orator, glory of song.")

Reprinted in 'The Holy Grail, and other Poems,' 1870, pp. 199-200.

33.

Good Words, March, 1868, p. 144.

1865–1866.

I stood on a tower in the wet,
And New Year and Old Year met,
And winds were roaring and blowing;
And I said, "O years, that meet in tears,
Have ye aught that is worth the knowing?
Science enough and exploring,
Wanderers coming and going,
Matter enough for deploring,
But aught that is worth the knowing?"
Seas at my feet were flowing,
Waves on the shingle pouring,
Old Year roaring and blowing,
And New Year blowing and roaring.

Printed in the centre of the page, surrounded by a grotesque design. Facing p. 144 is a full-page illustration engraved by T. Dalziel.

These lines have not been included in any authorized edition of Tennyson's collected works.

34.

Macmillan's Magazine, vol. xviii. No. 103, May, 1868, pp. 1-9.

Lucretius. ("Lucilia, wedded to Lucretius, found.")

Also printed in Every Saturday, New York, May, 1868.

Reprinted privately in book form, as follows: "Lucretius | By | Alfred Tennyson | Poet Laureate | Cambridge, Mass. | Printed for Private Circulation | 1868." Small 4to. pp. 27. This little volume, although a Transatlantic production, is of considerable importance, as its pages contain some most interesting variations from the text of the London editions of the poem. Afterwards included in 'The Holy Grail, and other Poems,' 1870, pp. 205-222.

35.

The Contemporary Review, vol. xix. New Series, December, 1871, pp. 1-22.

The Last Tournament.

Dagonet, the fool, whom Gawain in his moods
Had made mock-knight of Arthur's Table Round.

'The Last Tournament' had already, during the autumn of 1871, been set up in type with the view to a separate issue, but withdrawn before publication. The work, which is by no means one of the least important of the series of Tennysonian "trial-books," is a foolscap 8vo. volume with the following title-page: "The | Last Tournament | By Alfred Tennyson, D.C.L. | Poet Laureate | Strahan and Co. 56, Ludgate Hill, London | 1871 | [All rights reserved]" Foolscap 8vo. pp. 51. Some interesting textual variations are to be found in the pages of this cancelled volume.

Reprinted in 'Gareth and Lynette,' 1872, pp. 89-136.

36.

The Times, No. 27,944, March 7th, 1874, p. 5.

A Welcome to H.R.H. Marie Alexandrovna, Duchess of Edinburgh.

The son of him with whom we strove for power.

Also printed separately in pamphlet form, 4to. pp. 4.

Reprinted in the Library Edition of Tennyson's 'Works,' 1872, vol. iii. pp. 205-208.

THOMAS J. WISE.

'UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.'

King's College, April 5, 1897.

IT may be some satisfaction to the author of the novel 'Under the Circumstances,' and of some interest to your readers in general, to be reminded of the fact that the literal translation of "under the circumstances" is more frequently employed in German than that of "in the circumstances," since we commonly say "unter den (diesen, solchen, &c.) Umständen," and occasionally only "in den Umständen." We thus adopt somewhat the same shade of meaning between unter and in as, according to Dr. Murray's 'Oxford Dictionary,' exists between under and in. It is a matter of course that the phrase "under the circumstances" is just as little a Germanism as "unter den Umständen" is an Anglicism, but the use of the phrase in the one language confirms its correctness in the other, the affinity between the two languages having given rise to a number of phrases and expressions formed in both of them independently of each other. C. A. BUCHHEIM.

THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

WE begin to-day the publication of the final list of names which it is intended to insert in the 'Dictionary of National Biography.' It may be worthy of note that we have already published at half-yearly intervals twenty-eight lists, covering the names between Baalun and Wayte. The publication of the list of names in B was commenced in these columns on the 9th of June, 1883. The final list, of which the first part appears below, includes the names between Weale and the end of the alphabet. Cross-references are excluded. When one date is given, it is the date of death, unless otherwise stated. An asterisk is affixed to a date when it is only approximate. The editor of the 'Dictionary' will be obliged by any notice of omissions addressed to him at Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.'s, 15, Waterloo Place, S.W. He particularly requests that when new names are suggested, an indication may be given of the source from which they are derived.

Weale, John, publisher and architect, 1791-1862
Wearg, Sir Clement, Solicitor-General, 1686-1726
Weatherhead, George Hume, medical writer, 1790-1853
Weaver, Edmund, politician, fl. 1650-1660
Weaver, John, regicide, fl. 1650
Weaver, John, dancing-master, 1760
Weaver, Robert, antiquary, 1852
Weaver, Thomas, poet, 1616-1663
Weaver, Thomas, F.R.S., geologist, 1773-1855
Webb, Mrs., actress, 1794
Webb, Benjamin, ecclesiologist, 1819-1885
Webb, Daniel, author, fl. 1760-1795
Webb, Francis, miscellaneous writer, 1735-1815
Webb, Sir John, Director-General of Ordnance Medical Department, 1772-1852
Webb, John, historian and antiquary, 1776-1869
Webb, John Richmond, general, 1724
Webb, Jonas, agriculturist, 1796-1882
Webb, Matthew, swimmer of the Channel, 1848-1883
Webb, Philip Barker, botanist, 1773-1854
Webb, Philip Carteret, legal antiquary, 1700-1770
Webbe, Edward, traveller, fl. 1590
Webbe, George, Bishop of Limerick, 1641
Webbe, John, architect, 1611-1672
Webbe, Joseph, author and translator, fl. 1620
Webbe, Samuel, musician, 1740-1816
Webbe, William, 'Discourse of English Poetrie,' fl. 1586
Webber, John, R.A., landscape painter, 1752-1793
Weber, Henry William, author and amanuensis to Scott, 1783-1818
Weber, Otto, water-colourist, 1832-1888
Webster, Alexander, Scots writer, 1707-1784
Webster, Mrs. Augusta, poet, 1894
Webster, Benjamin Nottingham, actor, 1800-1882
Webster, John, dramatist, 1580-1625*
Webster, John, 'Displaying of Witchcraft,' 1610-1682
Webster, Moses, water-colourist, 1792-1870
Webster, Thomas, geologist, 1773-1844
Webster, Thomas, painter, 1800-1886
Webster, William, divine, 1649-1703
Weckherlin, George Rodolph, Milton's assistant in the Foreign Secretaryship, fl. 1654
Weddell, James, 'Voyage towards the South Pole,' fl. 1827
Weddell, John, sea captain, fl. 1625
Wedderburn, Sir Alexander, Scottish politician, 1676
Wedderburn, Alexander, 1st Earl of Rosslyn, 1733-1805
Wedderburn, David, Latin poet, 1570-1646*
Wedderburn, James, Scottish poet, 1565
Wedderburn, James, Bishop of Dunblane, 1585-1639
Wedderburn, Sir John, physician, 1599-1675
Wedderburn, Sir John, Jacobite, 1704*-1746
Wedderburn, Sir Peter, Scottish judge, 1620*-1679
Wedge, John Helder, colonial statesman, 1792-1872
Wedgwood, Josiah, potter, 1730-1805
Wedlocke, Walter, 'The Image of Idlenesse,' fl. 1559
Weekes, Henry, sculptor, 1807-1877
Weelkes, Thomas, madrigal writer, fl. 1595-1614
Weemse, John, theologian, 1636
Weever, John, antiquary, 1576*-1632
Weguelin, Thomas M., soldier, 1828
Wehnert, Edward Henry, water-colourist, 1824-1878
Weir, William, editor of the Daily News, 1802-1858
Weiss, Willoughby Hunter, vocalist, 1820-1867
Weist-Hill, Thomas Henry, musician, 1827-1891
Welby, Henry, 'The Phœnix of these Late Times,' 1553-1636
Welch or Welsche, John, Scottish divine, 1568-1622
Welch, Joseph, 'Alumni Westmonasterienses,' 1805
Welchman, Edward, divine, 1665-1739
Weld, Charles Richard, miscellaneous writer, 1813-1869
Weld, Sir Frederick Aloysius, colonial statesman, 1823-1891
Weld, Isaac, traveller, 1774-1856
Weld, Thomas, cardinal, 1773-1837
Weldon, Sir Anthony, Court chronicler, 1609
Weldon, John, composer, 1736
Weldon, Walter, Weldon's chlorine process, 1832-1885
Wellbeloved, Charles, Unitarian divine, 1769-1858
Welles, Adam de, Baron Welles, 1275*-1311
Welles, Lyon de, 6th Baron Welles, 1406-1461
Welles, Sir Robert, rebel, 1470
Welles, Thomas, Governor of Connecticut, 1598-1660*
Wellesley, Arthur, Duke of Wellington, soldier and statesman, 1769-1852
Wellesley, Garrett, Earl of Mornington, 1736-1781
Wellesley, Henry, Baron Cowley, 1773-1841
Wellesley, Henry, virtuoso, 1792-1866
Wellesley, Henry Richard Charles, Earl Cowley, 1804-1884
Wellesley, Richard Colley, 1st Baron Mornington, 1758
Wellesley, Richard Colley, Marquis Wellesley, statesman, 1760-1842
Wellesley-Pole, William, 3rd Earl of Mornington, 1763-1845
Wells, Edward, divine and geographer, 1727
Wells or Wellys, John, opponent of Wiclif, fl. 1390
Wells, Mrs. Mary, actress, fl. 1781-1812
Wells, Robert, Dean of Ely, 1557
Wells, Samuel, Nonconformist divine, fl. 1650
Wells, Samuel, 'History of Bedford Level,' 1852
Wells, Sir Thomas Spencer, Bart., gynæcologist, 1818-1897
Wells, William, agriculturist, 1889
Wells, William Charles, physician, 1757-1817
Wells, William Frederic, water-colour painter, 1762-1836
Wellsted, James Raymond, sailor and traveller, 1842
Welsby, William Newland, legal writer, 1803-1864
Welsh, David, Scots divine and author, 1793-1845
Welsh, John, F.R.S., man of science, 1824-1859
Welsh, Thomas, vocalist, 1780-1848
Welstead, Leonard, poet, 1689-1747
Welstead, Robert, medical writer, 1735
Welton, Richard, Nonjuring divine, 1675*-1726
Welwitsch, Frederick, botanist, 1806-1872
Welwood, James, physician and historian, 1652-1716
Welwood, William, writer on navigation laws, fl. 1615
Wemyss, David, 3rd Earl of Wemyss, 1720
Wemyss, Francis Wemyss Charteris Douglas, Earl of Wemyss, 1796-1883
Wemyss, Thomas James, C.B., general, 1800
Wendover, Roger of, chronicler, 1237
Wendy, Thomas, Court physician, 1560
Wenham, Jane, reputed witch, fl. 1712
Wenlock, John, 1st Baron Wenlock, 1471
Wenman, Thomas, 2nd Viscount Wenman, 1664
Wenman, Thomas Francis, Regius Professor of Civil Law at Oxford, 1745-1796
Wentworth, Charles Watson, 2nd Marquis of Rockingham, 1730-1782
Wentworth, Henrietta Maria, Lady, mistress of the Duke of Monmouth, 1686
Wentworth, Sir Peter, politician, fl. 1600
Wentworth, Thomas, 2nd Baron Wentworth, 1584
Wentworth, Thomas, 'The Office and Duty of Executors,' 1567-1627
Wentworth, Thomas, the great Earl of Strafford, 1593-1641
Wentworth, Thomas, Earl of Cleveland, 1591-1667
Wentworth, Thomas, Earl of Strafford, 1674*-1739
Wentworth, William Charles, "the Australian patriot," 1791-1871
Werburgh, St., 875
Werden, Sir John, Bart., politician, 1716
Werferth or Werefrid, Bishop of Worcester, 915
Wesham, John or Roger, Bishop of Coventry, 1257
Wesley, Charles, hymn-writer, 1708-1788
Wesley, Charles, musician, 1757-1834
Wesley, John, founder of the Methodists, 1703-1791
Wesley, Samuel, divine, 1666*-1735
Wesley, Samuel, composer, 1766-1837
Wesley, Samuel Sebastian, musician, 1810-1876
Wessington, John, author, 1446
West, Mrs., actress, 1795
West, Benjamin, P.R.A., painter, 1738-1820
West, Charles Richard Sackville, 6th Earl De La Warr, 1815-1873
West, Sir Edward, political economist and Chief Justice of Bombay, 1782-1828
West, Francis, Governor of Virginia, 1586-1652
West, Francis Robert, history painter, 1719-1809
West, Gilbert, miscellaneous writer, 1706
West, James, President of the Royal Society, 1772
West, Mrs. Jane, novelist, 1758-1852
West, John, 1st Earl De La Warr, 1693-1766
West, Sir John, admiral, 1774-1852
West, Nicholas, Bishop of Ely, 1533
West, Richard, poet and epigrammatist, fl. 1667
West, Richard, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, 1726
West, Temple, rear-admiral, 1714-1757
West, Thomas, 3rd Lord De La Warr, Governor of Virginia, 1577-1618
West, Thomas, 'History of Furness,' 1716-1779
West, Thomas, Jesuit, 1720-1780
West, William, 'Symboleographia,' fl. 1590
West, William, bookseller and topographer, 1778-1854
Westall, Richard, water-colour painter, 1765-1836
Westall, William, painter, 1781-1850
Westcote, Thomas, topographer, fl. 1630
Westcott, George Blagdon, captain R.N., 1798
Western, Charles Callis, Baron Western, 1767-1844
Westfield, Thomas, Bishop of Bristol, 1644
Westgarth, William, Australian financier, 1809
Westmacott, Sir Richard, the elder, sculptor, 1775-1856
Westmacott, Richard, the younger, sculptor, 1799-1872
Westminster, Matthew of, historian, fl. 1300*
Weston, Edward, scholar and divine, 1654
Weston, Elizabeth Jane, learned lady, 1556*-1610*
Weston, Hugh, Dean of Westminster, 1558
Weston, Jerome, 2nd Earl of Portland, 1605-1664
Weston, Richard, 1st Earl of Portland, 1577-1634
Weston, Richard, judge, 1620*-1681
Weston, Richard, agriculturist, 1733-1805
Weston, Robert, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, 1573
Weston, Stephen, Bishop of Exeter, 1665-1742
Weston, Stephen, classical and Oriental scholar, 1747-1830
Weston, Thomas, merchant adventurer, 1575*-1625*
Weston, Thomas, actor, 1737*-1776
Westphal, Sir George Augustus, admiral, 1785-1875
Westphal, Philip, admiral, 1880
Westphaling, Herbert, Bishop of Hereford, 1602
Westwood, John Obadiah, palæographer and entomologist, 1805-1893

(To be continued.)

SALE OF BOOK-PLATES.

ON Tuesday Messrs. Puttick & Simpson held the second sale of book-plates (ex-libris). High prices ruled, the following being some of the more important items: Sir James Wright, 1*l.* 18*s.* Lord Byron, 1*l.* 2*s.* Archbishop Sancroft, 1*l.* 18*s.* Matthew Prior, 4*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* Sir Thos. Hanmer, 1707, 1*l.* 10*s.* Sir R. Clayton, 1679, 1*l.* 10*s.* Countess of Oxford, 1736, 2*l.* 10*s.* Right Hon. T. Wentworth, 1698, 1*l.* 16*s.* George I., Gift-Plate to Cambridge University, largest size, dated 1715, 4*l.* 4*s.*; second size, 2*l.* 8*s.*; third size, 1*l.* 6*s.* Henrietta, Countess of Pomfret, 3*l.* 3*s.* Penn Family, Two Plates and MS. Notes, 3*l.* 5*s.* David Garrick, 1*l.* 2*s.* Wm. Penn, 1703 (reissue), 2*l.* 2*s.* Countess of Bessborough, 3*l.* 10*s.*

TWO PROTHALAMIA.

Old Swan House, Chelsea Embankment, April 3, 1897.

THE answer to Prof. Rowley's letter in to-day's Athenæum is a short one. The date of publication of 'A Tale of Two Swannes' is 1590, as recorded in the registers of the Stationers' Company (see the 'Transcripts of the Registers of the Company of Stationers of London,' edited by Edward Arber, vol. v p. 159, which is the authentic register of the poem). Further, there appears to be no reason for supposing that there ever was any such later edition of the poem as the Professor imagines. The only known edition is that of 1590, spoken of by Hearne and Warton, and recorded as I have said.

But quite apart from this it is strange that Mr. Rowley should have failed to notice that the poem itself contains conclusive evidence both that it was written in the time of Queen Elizabeth—who died in March, 1603—and that the Cecil (Cicill) referred to was not a Cecil of Hatfield, but of some other place that is situate on the river Lea between Wormley and Waltham, that is, at a distance of some miles from Hatfield House, which at the date of the poem was the property not of Cecil, but of the queen.

The following passages in Vallans's poem are proof conclusive that it was written in the time of Queen Elizabeth, that is before 1603.

On p. x:—

—— and amended late
By her the onely mirror of the world
Our gracious Queene and Prince Elizabeth.

On p. xii :—

Lord, how they live all glorious as the Sunne,
With types and titles fit for their degree
As kinsmen to our most redoubted Queene
And men of high desert unto the State!

On p. xiii :—

I meane of Spanyardes, that with open armes
Attempted both against our Queene and us:
There now Lord Talbot keeps a noble house.
* * * *
Then Enfield house, that longs unto our Queene,
They all behold, and with due reverence
Salute the same.

It was—as Murray's 'Handbook for the Eastern Counties' tells us—to Enfield House that Queen Elizabeth repaired "to drive the deer." Now, do not these four passages clearly show that Queen Elizabeth was a living person at the date of the poem, and that the Professor's suggestion that the poem was written some years after her death cannot for a moment be entertained?

Again, the poem contains in itself conclusive proof that the Cecil spoken of was not a Cecil of Hatfield, for in it the procession of the swans down the river is thus described :—

From Stansted unto Hodsdon goe these Swannes
From thence to Broxburne and to Wormly wood
And so salute the holy house of nunnes
That late belonged to Captain Edward Dennis.
* * * *
Now see these Swannes the new and worthie seate
Of famous Cicill, treasoror of the land
Whose wisedom, counsel, skill of Prince's state
The world admires.

And then, we are told, the swans passed on to Waltham.

It was then at some spot on the river between Wormley and Waltham that the "new and worthie seate" of Cecil was seen by the swans, who must have had long necks indeed if they had seen, as the Professor supposes, Hatfield House, which is about ten miles away!

Can there be any possible doubt that the place so "seen" was "Theobalds"? which is about a mile west of Waltham Cross, and which, in the year 1590—the date of Vallans's poem—belonged to William Cecil, Lord Burleigh, Queen Elizabeth's famous minister, who had been since 1572—and was then—Lord High Traesurer of England, the "treasoror of the land." It was here that Lord Burleigh built a palace—one of the most stately houses in England—in every sense a "new and worthie seate," in which, on many occasions, he entertained the queen with great magnificence.

Hatfield (which the Professor thinks is spoken of in the poem, though this is certainly not the case, the Bishop's Hatfield once spoken of being an altogether different place) did not become the property of the Cecil family till the reign of King James I., when the king exchanged it for Theobalds with the Cecil of his time, Lord Burleigh's son. As to the exact date of the poem, it will be seen from Hearne's notes (at the foot of p. xxviii of vol. v. of his book) that the poem must have been written as far back at least as 1575, though, for reasons stated in his preface, it was not published till 1590. One more point that I must call attention to before completing this reply to the Professor's letter is this: the Professor has evidently read the poem without looking either to the right hand or to the left. Had he done so he would have noticed in the broad margin of the print—the right-hand margin—right opposite the line of the poem on which he relies in support of his argument, the little word "Thebals," by which the poem itself clearly designates the worthy seat of Cecil that was seen by the swans!

In conclusion I wish to express my thanks to Prof. Hales for calling attention to the fact that Spenser does not, in the 'Prothalamion,' speak (as I at first supposed he did) of the Lee as the river of that name. The expressions "come swiftly swimming downe along the Lee," and "adowne the Lee, that to them murmured low," that twice occur in so short a poem as the 'Prothalamion,' are expressions that are often found in Spenser's poetry. In addition to the examples quoted by the Professor, there is another which Drayton quotes in the 'Polyolbion':—

And where the crystall Thamis wont to slide
In silver channell downe along the lee,
About whose flowry bankes on either side
A thousand nymphes with mirthfull jollity
Were wont to play.

Whether the word Lee is, as the Professor tells us, "an old common noun meaning a river," I do not know. With all respect I should doubt this. It seems to me that it is used by Spenser as denoting a place of shelter, the smooth or sheltered part of a river. It is, as used in English, a seaman's word, meaning a sheltered place. One sees it in the 'Morte d'Arthur,' "We lurked undyr lee."

WICKHAM FLOWER.

April 3, 1897.

I AM sorry Mr. Wickham Flower should think his article gave me "extreme displeasure." He certainly errs in thinking so. His suggestion, though I believe it to be erroneous, has done service in making better known a poem that is little known—not quite unknown, as he seemed to suppose. Moreover, his article has called forth a letter with at least two really interesting points from Mr. Harting (though there is yet something to be said for "turn his merry note"), and also a valuable contribution from that careful and accurate scholar Prof. Rowley. For my part I beg to congratulate Mr. Flower on the results of his communication.

But less than ever do I agree with his theory. It would be easy work answering every paragraph of his last letter, e.g., it is only too clear that he has not understood or perceived the distinction Spenser makes between Prothalamion and Epithalamion! Spenser would never have celebrated the marriage of the Thames and the Lea in a Prothalamic ode! Observe the title of his lost poem 'Epithalamion Thamesis'—a poem reasonably believed to be embodied in the fourth book of the 'Faerie Queene.' And in like manner Mr. Flower's other sentences might be dealt with; but life is limited, and so are the columns of the Athenæum.

His conclusion was "Palmam qui meruit ferat," that is, the palm is to be transferred from Spenser to Vallans. Now every schoolboy and every schoolgirl know how freely certain great writers helped themselves from previous productions. But no one surely would dream of insisting that the palm is to be taken from Shakspeare and given to Lodge because 'As You Like It' is founded on a novel by Lodge. And even if Spenser took anything of any importance from Vallans, which I do not myself allow, I do not understand how any competent person who knows both 'A Tale of Two Swans' and the 'Prothalamion' can exclaim, "Palmam qui meruit ferat," in the sense that Vallans is to have "the garland." If it is question of plan or design, then, as I showed a fortnight ago, the palm-bearer, if any one, should be Leland.

But once more I maintain that no noticeable obligation to Vallans has yet been shown. If such correspondences as Mr. Flower has collected prove Spenser's indebtedness, * then assuredly we must accept Fluellen's parallelism between Monmouth and Macedon as really significant! And I shall say nothing more on this point, except that any one who cares about the matter at issue should read again Mr. Flower's list with my remarks upon it and Mr. Flower's rejoinder, and then perpend.

But now evidence of another kind is advanced by Prof. Rowley—evidence that Vallans's poem was not written till at least eleven, probably fourteen, years after the 'Prothalamion.' When Vallans's swan passes Hatfield, occur these lines :—

Now see these Swans the new and worthy seat
Of famous Cecil, Treasurer of the land,
Whose wisdom, counsel, skill of Prince's state
The world admires.

* The idea of Venus's chariot being drawn by swans, which Mr. Flower quotes as suggested to Spenser by Vallans, was so familiar in the time of both these writers that it was represented even in a puppet-show!

And Prof. Rowley is surely correct in stating that the exchange of Theobalds for the manor of Bishop's Hatfield did not take place till 1607, King James having become attached to Theobalds in 1606. It was in 1607, on May 22nd, that Ben Jonson produced his 'Entertainment of King James and Queen Anne at Theobalds, when the house was delivered up, with the possession, to the queen by the Earl of Salisbury,' now "in the twilight of sere age" beginning

To seek a habitation new,

the Genius of the House deploring the loss of such a master, but rejoicing at the advent of such a mistress. "The new and worthy seat" was finished in 1611. Unless, therefore, this reference can be shown to be an interpolation, for which view I do not think there is any ground whatever, Prof. Rowley's argument, to quote his own words, "blows to atoms the whole structure raised" by Mr. Flower.

The gentleman who states that I forgot that the Elizabethan year began on March 25th seems scarcely yet to have grasped the situation. The time of the year concerned is the autumn.

JOHN W. HALES.

Athenæum Club.

A SLIGHT oversight of Mr. Wickham Flower's in describing Vallans's poem has made Prof. Rowley's otherwise most acute and pertinent note of no effect. Vallans does not say that the two swans were passing Hatfield when they came in sight of the "new and worthy seat" of the Cecils. On the contrary, he distinctly says that it was when the birds were traversing the portion of river between Broxbourne and Waltham Abbey. This, therefore, fixes Theobalds as the house in question. In point of fact, if Mr. Flower will examine the poem afresh, he will find that the swans had already passed Hatfield ("Bishop's Hatfield" it is called in the poem), and had then proceeded down the river past Ware and Broxbourne.

In the third edition of Hearne's 'Leland,' which is the only one I have had access to, there is a single word in the margin, opposite the passage about the home of the Cecils, and the word printed is "Thebals."

May I add that I agree with Prof. Hales in regarding Vallans's poem more as an itinerary than as a marriage poem? Indeed, in a preface to the poem, the author admits that his chief object was to chronicle the many beauties and interests of his favourite Hertfordshire. It was this circumstance, no doubt, that led Charles Lamb to borrow a line from Vallans,

The fruitful fields of pleasant Hertfordshire, and quote it more than once, with characteristic variations, both in his verse and prose, when treating of his much-loved county.

ALFRED AINGER.

IN April, 1580, writing to Harvey, Spenser sketched the plan of his 'Epithalamion Thamesis' "shortely" to be "sette forth," a topographical poem in the reformed verse, dealing incidentally with all English rivers and their courses. In 1590 (for Theobalds is not Hatfield, and Mr. Rowley has not read 'A Tale of Two Swannes') Vallans wrote as follows in his preface :—

"Another reason was, that albeit neither my writing, nor other indevour whatsoever, be able to perfourm anything that might either beautifie or adorne the places I speake of: Yet hereby I would animate, or encourage those worthie Poëts, who have written 'Epithalamion Thamesis,' to publish the same. I have seen it in Latine verse (in my judgment) wel done, but the Author, I know not for what reason, doth suppresse it. That which is written in English, though long since it was promised, yet is it not perfourmed. So as it seemeth, some unhappy Star envieth the sight of so good a work: which once set abroad, such trifles as these would vanish, and be overshadowed, much like the Moon and other Starres, which after the appearing of the Sunne are not to be seen at all."

Here, then, is a fact (and surely it was worth mention) which indubitably connects the two poets. Vallans writes to imitate and "animate"

Spenser, and, possibly in compliment, hints in conclusion at the marriage of two rivers "of great name," not necessarily Thames and Lea, possibly Thames and Medway (see 'F. Q.,' iv. xi.). Well may Prof. Hales exclaim, "Quid hoc ad Prothalamion?"

Mr. Flower spoils his case by catching at such straws as the joint use of words like "nurse" and "merrie" (very usual words in sixteenth century poetry, though he does not think so), and by claiming far too much for Vallans; but he has drawn attention to a probable connexion, slight indeed, yet, taken with the above facts, demanding notice in any annotated edition of the 'Prothalamion.' I pass by other points of interest, but remark that the "lesser starres" image reappears in Vallans's preface (somewhat pathetically if we follow Mr. Flower), and also in 'The Faerie Queene,' book vi. canto x.

Mr. Flower rebukes Prof. Hales for accepting Hearne's title as Vallans's. Prof. Hales knows the difference between a sixteenth and an eighteenth century title, and Mr. Flower, by his own showing, has not seen the original title-page of 'The Tale,' &c., which could alone justify him. If it did so, it would be surprising; his statement that the poem now exists only in Hearne's reprint needs investigation.

Robert H. Case.

Literary Gossip.

Mr. Andrew Lang purposes replying to the Right Hon. F. Max Müller's recent 'Contributions to the Science of Mythology,' in a volume which is to be called 'Modern Mythology,' and brought out by Messrs. Longman. This is the first time two former Gifford lecturers have come into open collision.

Dr. Conan Doyle is making considerable alterations and additions to his story 'Uncle Bernac: a Memory of the Empire,' previous to its publication in volume form by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. on May 14th. The work will be illustrated by twelve full-page plates.

The Dean of Canterbury is going to publish, through Messrs. Longman, a volume which he has long had in preparation on 'The Bible: its Meaning and Supremacy.' He discards the theory of verbal inspiration, and points out that the Bible is not a homogeneous book, but a canon gradually formed.

Messrs. A. & C. Black are now the publishers of the works of the late Dr. John Brown.

The Lord Chief Justice (Lord Russell of Killowen) will be among the guests at the Newsvendors' Dinner.

Mr. Hale White is editing and annotating a quarto containing a description of the Wordsworth and Coleridge manuscripts which are in the possession of Mr. T. Norton Longman, of the famous firm in Paternoster Row.

A new identification of some importance is being proposed by Mr. J. T. T. Brown in the April number of the Scottish Antiquary. Starting from the poetical treatise on morals in the Cambridge University MS. Kk. 1. 5, self-styled 'Ratis Raving,' he seeks to establish a connexion between it and several poems in an Oxford MS. (Ashmole 61), which bear at the end of them the recurring colophon or ascription "quod Rate." They include, besides pieces on morals and courtesy, the romances of 'Syr Ysombras,' 'The Erle of Tolous,' and others, with a religious motive more or less present throughout, the plot of one turning upon the use of the confessional. Nearly all are in print. Mr. Brown affirms that there is a unity of diction and general treatment amongst them, and he claims the whole group as Scottish, the work of David Raté, Vicar of the Dominican Friars in Scotland and confessor of King James I. If well founded the proposition has wide bearings, not merely affecting the interrelations of certain well-known MSS., but touching crucially the literary history of the fifteenth century and the evolution of some later phases of English Arthurian romance.

About three hundred American librarians, as well as delegates from the chief libraries of the United Kingdom and representatives from several of the great continental libraries, are expected at the International Library Conference next July. The Americans propose to take a tour through England and Scotland, which will occupy nearly two months and include visits to the chief libraries, as well as to Warwick, Stratford, and other places that their countrymen make a point of visiting.

There seems to be considerable discussion among American librarians upon the conduct of one of their brethren, who is at the head of a library in Pennsylvania. The copies of the works of Mr. E. P. Roe and several story-tellers unknown here, but popular in the United States, having worn out, he has refused to renew them. He says they are printed on poor paper, badly bound, and high in price; further, that they are trash; and finally, that the argument that people who read this rubbish would go on to read something better has been disproved by experience. As the percentage of fiction asked for in the library had risen to 90 per cent. of the books issued, we suppose the librarian felt it necessary to act. Several authors, however, who print their trash on respectable paper have escaped expulsion.

The Belgravia Magazine has recently changed hands, and is to undergo considerable alteration.

The Right Hon. D. H. Madden, Vice-Chancellor of Dublin University, is bringing out a Shakspearean study under the title of 'The Diary of Master William Silence.' Messrs. Longman are the publishers.

A new magazine, devoted to genealogy and kindred subjects, is about to be published by Mr. Elliot Stock, under the title of The Genealogical Magazine: a Journal of Family History, Heraldry, and Pedigrees. The first number will be issued on May 1st, and will contain, among other articles, one on 'The Red Book of the Exchequer,' by Mr. J. H. Round; 'A New Pedigree of Shakespeare,' carried further back than any hitherto published; and a paper on the 'Mayflower Log,' with a facsimile of its register.

Frau Legationsrat von Schober, who wrote under her maiden name, Thekla von Gumpert, died on the 2nd inst. at Dresden, in her eighty-seventh year. She was a popular and most prolific writer for the young, more especially for girls. She also was to the last the editor of the monthly Herzblättchens Zeitvertreib, founded in 1840, and of the annual entitled Töchter-Album, first published in 1841.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include an Abstract of the Accounts of the University of Aberdeen (3*d.*); a General Index to Treaty Series, 1892–6 (4*d.*); a Return of Endowed Charities in the Parish of St. Botolph Without, Aldgate (1*s.* 6*d.*); and three further Returns of the Charities of West Riding Parishes.

SCIENCE

The Life of Sir Henry Halford, Bart. By William Munk, M.D. (Longmans & Co.)

Sir Henry Halford was for twenty-four years President of the College of Physicians, and he was for a still longer time the most prominent figure in London in his profession. Practice left him little leisure for study, but he had been bred a scholar, and continued one throughout life. He entertained a high idea of the duties of a physician and rigid notions as to the proprieties of professional life, and he himself was a steady example of the principles which he maintained. A considerable spice of worldliness and a somewhat exaggerated display of respect for men of high rank were also natural to a man who lived at the Court of the Regent and preserved an unbroken intimacy with George IV. His classical attainments were respectable, and if he added little or nothing to medical knowledge, he was undoubtedly useful in his time to many sick men, and encouraged the cultivation of science by other physicians. Dr. Munk, whose memory goes back to Sir Henry himself and to his later days, has written his life with much judgment and some admiration for his subject.

Henry Vaughan, afterwards Halford, was the eldest surviving son of Dr. James Vaughan, of Leicester, and was educated at Rugby School and at Christ Church. He graduated at Oxford in 1788, then studied medicine at Edinburgh, and took the degree of M.D. at Oxford in 1791. He began practice in Scarborough, but came to London in 1792. He was one day dining with Sir George Baker, the king's physician, when the Provost of Eton, another of the guests, was seized with a violent pain due to a stone in the kidney. Sir George Baker approved the way in which the young physician aided him in treating the Provost, and hence looked on Vaughan with a friendly eye when he came to London, telling him that it would be five years before he could hope to support himself by practice. The prediction of what proved to be the true cause of the death of Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, in 1806 led to an immediate increase in the number of Vaughan's patients, who had, however, been numerous before. His annual income advanced from over seven thousand guineas to over nine thousand, and continued to exceed that sum for thirty years. Dr. Munk, who can speak as an authority, having himself been for many years in considerable practice in London and the friend of all the chief physicians of his time, furnishes some interesting details as to the income of physicians. Nowadays it is sometimes suggested that increased facility of locomotion might be accompanied by somewhat smaller remuneration, but Dr. Munk points out that in Halford's time the fees were larger, and mentions (what is now little known) the period of the change :—

"When railroads had become general throughout the country, it was felt by some of the leading physicians and surgeons of the metropolis, that an easier, less tedious and less expensive mode of travelling ought in fairness to the public, to be met by some reduction in the rate of remuneration ; and after a full consideration of all the circumstances it was concluded, in sequel to a conference between Dr. Paris and Sir Benjamin Brodie, on the part respectively of the College of Physicians and of the College of Surgeons, that a reduction of one-third would be fair to all parties, and meet all the requirements of the case ; and thus, that a physician's journey of three hundred miles would imply a fee of two hundred guineas, in the place of three hundred as it had previously done."

On succeeding in 1809 to the Halford estates Dr. Henry Vaughan changed his name by Act of Parliament to that of Halford, and was created a baronet September 27th, 1809.

Halford has sometimes been spoken of as if he were merely a Court physician, and not careful of medicine as a branch of learning; but Dr. Munk points out that his close friendship with Matthew Baillie, the greatest pathologist of his age, would of itself refute this statement. Sir Henry was undoubtedly a careful observer of vast experience, but in the hurry of a busy life he was unable to record what he saw and knew. Instead of doing so, he wrote an interesting account of the discovery at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, of the remains of Charles I., a few medical essays of no great depth, an elegant Harveian oration, and some correct Latin verses.

Dr. Munk's caution deserves the highest praise. It would have been easy to tell from the records that Sir Henry left behind him of his royal and other distinguished patients many things which are with greater propriety left unsaid, and Dr. Munk, who had full access to all records, has shown the true instinct of a physician in recording nothing which could give pain to any one or be regarded as a revelation of what Halford came to know in the course of his practice. The biography is not too long, and is a fitting memorial of a physician whose prominent place in his own time deserves record in permanent literature.

SALE.

Messrs. Sotheby sold the scientific library of the late Mr. F. C. S. Roper, of Eastbourne, on Friday and Saturday last week, when excellent prices were realized, some of which follow : Biblia Sacra Latina, MS., fourteenth century, 16*l.* 15*s.* Cooke's British Fungi, 8 vols., coloured, 17*l.* 5*s.* Dibdin's Tour in France and Germany, 11*l.* 5*s.* Dutch Book of Devotions, MS. on vellum, with ten miniatures, Sec. XV., 58*l.* Horæ on vellum, Hardouyn, n.d., 9*l.* 10*s.* Linnean Society Publications, 11*l.* Report of the Challenger, 22 vols., 16*l.* 10*s.* Horæ on vellum, with four miniatures, Sec. XV., 31*l.* Graduale Romanum, Sec. XV., 20*l.* The Great Herbal of Treveris, 1526, 39*l.* Quarterly Microscopical Journal, complete to 1884, 41*l.* 10*s.* Zoological Society's Proceedings, 1863–93, 16*l.* 10*s.* Quarterly Journal of the Geological Society, 1826–96, 21*l.* Ray Society, 1845–93, 28*l.* Saccardo, Sylloge Fungorum, 12 vols., 27*l.* Seemann's Journal of Botany, 1863–96, 21*l.* Sowerby's Botany, with Supplements, 36*l.* ; the Third Edition, 9*l.* 10*s.* Sussex Archæological Collections, complete, 18*l.* 10*s.* Palæontographical Society, 13*l.* 10*s.* Schimper, Bryologia Europæa, 18*l.* 5*s.* Transactions of Linnean Society, 25*l.* Transactions of Zoological Society, 1835–95, 43*l.* 10*s.* Musée Français, 10*l.* 10*s.*

SOCIETIES.

Society of Antiquaries. — March 25. — Sir H. H. Howorth, M.P., V.P., in the chair. — Mr. Hartshorne exhibited a folding lantern of the seventeenth century from Holdenby House, Northants.—Lieut.-Col. Fishwick communicated a note on the discovery of some skeletons and sepulchral urns on Pule Hill, Yorkshire. — Mr. C. E. Keyser read the second portion of a paper on the panel paintings of saints, &c., on the Devonshire screens, mentioning in detail the interesting examples at Portlemouth, Bradninch, Kenn, Ashton, Buckland-in-the-Moor, Ugborough, Tor Brian, and Wolborough, and directing especial attention to the many very rare saints portrayed, such as St. Cornelius at Portlemouth, St. Catherine of Siena at Portlemouth and Tor Brian, St. Dominic or Peter Martyr at the former place, SS. Mary of Egypt, Scholastica, and Genevieve at Kenn, St. Vincent at Tor Brian, Samson at Bradninch, &c. At Wolborough, where the screens not only divide the nave and aisles from the chancel and chapels, but are also returned westward to enclose a small chapel in each aisle, there have been seventy-six panels in all, of which sixty-four still retain their painted figures of saints. Besides St. Alexius (who also occurs at Tor Brian), St. Maurice, &c., there is a series of saints, many of them very rare, on the portion across the north aisle, with the names inscribed below, viz., SS. William of York, Etheldreda, Gertrude (?), Ursula, Helena, Sidwell, Catherine, and Dorothy ; and on the main screen across the nave, also with their names, Sir John Schorne (who also appears at Portlemouth), SS. Aubert, Cosmos, Damian, Julian Hospitator, Maura, Isaac and Abraham, SS. Adrian, Leodegar (who also occurs at Ashton), Victor of Marseilles (also portrayed at Tor Brian), and Paul, the first hermit (?). Mr. Keyser thinks that the Wolborough screen owed its origin to the Premonstratensian abbey of Torre, to which the church belonged, and that a screen having been introduced into one of the Devonshire churches, either in imitation of the earlier examples in the eastern counties or through some foreign influence, a sudden desire was manifested to have many of the neighbouring churches similarly adorned. It seemed probable that some central school of carving and painting had been established, from which these screens had been supplied, as it appeared hardly possible that, except under some system of this kind, so large a number of screens, with paintings exhibiting such marked similarity of treatment, could have been furnished to so many churches during the limited period (circa 1480–1540) to which they all belonged.—A discussion followed, in which the Chairman, Messrs. J. G. Waller, J. T. Micklethwaite, Purdon Clarke, G. H. Fox, and W. H. St. John Hope, and the Bishop of Stepney took part.

Chemical.—March 31.—Anniversary Meeting.—Mr. A. Vernon Harcourt in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected : President, Dr. J. Dewar ; Vice-Presidents (who have filled the office of President), Sir F. Abel, Dr. H. E. Armstrong, Dr. A. Crum Brown, Mr. W. Crookes, Dr. E. Frankland, Sir J. H. Gilbert, Dr. J. H. Gladstone, Dr. A. Vernon Harcourt, Dr. H. Müller, Mr. W. Odling, Dr. W. H. Perkin, Lord Playfair, Sir H. E. Roscoe, Dr. W. J. Russell, and Dr. A. W. Williamson ; Vice-Presidents, Dr. F. R. Japp, Messrs L. Mond, W. Ramsay, J. E. Reynolds, W. C. Roberts-Austen, and W. A. Tilden ; Secretaries, Mr. J. M. Thomson and Mr. W. R. Dunstan ; Foreign Secretary, Mr. R. Meldola ; Treasurer, Dr. T. E. Thorpe ; Ordinary Members of Council, Mr. P. P. Bedson, Mr. B. H. Brough, Mr. O. H. Hehner, Mr. C. T. Heycock, Mr. H. McLeod, Dr. R. Messel, Mr. H. Morley, Mr. J. W. Rodger, Dr. T. K. Rose, Dr. A. Scott, Mr. A. Smithells, and Dr. S. Young.

April 1.—Prof. J. Dewar, President, in the chair. —The following papers were read : 'The Hydrolysis of Perthiocyanic Acid,' by Messrs. F. D. Chattaway and H. P. Stevens,—'The Composition of Cooked Fish,' by Mr. K. J. Williams,—and 'On the Oxidation of α-γ-dimethyl-α₁-Chloropyridine,' by Mr. E. Aston and Dr. T. N. Collie.

Institution of Civil Engineers.—April 6.—Mr. J. W. Barry, President, in the chair.—It was announced that thirteen Associate Members had been transferred to the class of Members, and that twenty-six candidates had been admitted as Students. —The last ballot of the session resulted in the election of ten Members and of sixty-nine Associate Members.—The paper read was 'On the Blackwall Tunnel,' by Messrs. D. Hay and M. Fitzmaurice.

Society of Arts.—April 5.—Sir C. Kennedy in the chair.—Prof. Roberts-Austen gave the fourth and concluding lecture of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On Alloys.'

April 6.—Mr. A. Helder in the chair.—A paper 'On Recent Travels in Rhodesia and British Bechuanaland' was read before the Foreign and Colonial Section by Mr. C. E. Fripp. The lecture was illustrated by a collection of sketches by the author of the paper and by a series of lantern photographs.

April 7.—Lord Belper in the chair.—A paper 'On Dairy Produce and Milk Supply' was read by Prof. M. J. Dunstan, and was followed by a discussion.

Society of Engineers.—April 5.—Mr. G. M. Lawford, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. P. M. Faraday, entitled 'The Rating of Engineering Undertakings.'

Society of Biblical Archæology.—April 6. —Sir P. Le Page Renouf, President, in the chair.— A paper was read by Mr. E. J. Pilcher, entitled 'The Date of the Siloam Inscription.'

Aristotelian. — April 5. — Mr. S. H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. C. E. Hooper was elected a Member.—The Hon. B. Russell read a paper 'On the Relations of Number and Quantity.' The argument was as follows : First, with regard to number, its extensions beyond the positive integers result from a gradual absorption of the properties of the unit, and give a gradually diminishing information as to the whole. Then, with regard to the application of number to continua, number per se gives no information as to quantity, but only comparison with an already quantitative unit. Quantity, therefore, must be sought in an analysis of the unit. Assuming quantity to be an intrinsic property of quantities, there are two hypotheses. The first regards quantity as an irreducible category, the second regards it as an immediate sense datum. On the first hypothesis it was shown that extensive quantities are rendered contradictory by their divisibility, and must be taken as really indivisible, and so intensive. But intensive quantity, too, must, if it be an intrinsic property of intensive quantities, be also a mere relation between them. The hypothesis that quantity is a datum in sense will also be found to lead to contradictions. The view that quantity is an intrinsic property of quantities must therefore be rejected. It must be regarded instead as a category of comparison ; there is no common property among things that can be treated quantitatively, except what is involved in the extraneous property that there are other qualitatively similar things with which they can be quantitatively compared. Thus quantity turns into measure, but at the same time every connexion with number ceases—quantity or measure is a wholly independent conception of comparison. But a discussion of the kind of comparison involved in measure brings back the previous difficulties in a new form ; the terms compared, though no longer regarded as quantitative, are infected with contradictions. The conclusion then is that quantity is only applicable to classes of actual and possible immediate data, and not to any fully understood material.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Victoria Institute, 4½.—'The Scope of Mind,' Dr. Schofield.
— Hellenic, 5.—'The Panathes,' Miss J. Harrison ; 'A Vase in the Harrow Museum,' Prof. E. Gardner.
— Institute of British Architects, 8.—'The New Government Offices Scheme,' Mr. H. H. Statham.
— Geographical, 8½.—'Fourth Centenary of the Voyage of John Cabota, 1497,' the President.
Tues. Civil Engineers, 8. Discussion on 'The Blackwall Tunnell.'
Thurs. Linnean, 8.—'New Irish Crustacea,' Mr. A. O. Walker ; 'Desmids from Singapore,' Messrs. W. and G. S. West.

Science Gossip.

A meeting was held last month, Sir Douglas Galton in the chair, which was attended by Mr. F. Galton, Dr. Hughlings Jackson, Mr. Haldane, M.P., and several professors of University College, at which it was resolved that it was desirable to establish a laboratory of experimental psychology at University College. The Professors of Physics and Physiology think they can afford temporary accommodation in their laboratories, and it is supposed that an outlay of 100*l.* on additional apparatus and an annual expenditure of 100*l.* would secure the services of an instructor for a single term in each year, which is as long a course as it would be prudent to attempt at present. Prof. Sully has written a letter asking for subscriptions, which should be sent to the Hampstead branch of the London and South-Western Bank, to the account of the "Psychological Laboratory, University College."

THE fourth meeting of the International Congress on Technical Education will be held this year in London. The previous meetings were, in 1886 at Bordeaux, in 1889 at Paris, and in 1895 at Bordeaux. The meeting will be held at the invitation of the Society of Arts and of sundry City companies—the Drapers, Fishmongers, Goldsmiths, Merchant Taylors, and Clothworkers. The meetings will be held on Tuesday, June 15th, and the following Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, from 11 to 1, and from 3 to 5. The Congress will be opened by addresses from the President, the Duke of Devonshire, and from the President of the last Congress, M. Léo Saignat. The subscription for others than delegates of foreign Governments, members of the Society of Arts, or liverymen of the companies mentioned, will be five shillings. Subscribers will be entitled to a copy of the report of the proceedings. The subjects for discussion will include education, technical and commercial, of both sexes, both advanced and secondary, but not elementary instruction. Papers to be read at the Congress must be in the hands of Sir Trueman Wood by May 29th.

DR. KARL BOHLIN, of Upsala, has been appointed to succeed the late Prof. Gyldén as Astronomer of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Stockholm and Director of the Observatory there.

SIR W. H. FLOWER has written a paper for the May part of Chambers's Journal, entitled 'Natural History as a Vocation.' The paper contains several autobiographical touches, describing how he came first to fall in love with natural history as a vocation.

THE library endowed by the late Mr. Crerar, of Chicago, was to be opened on the 1st of the present month in temporary premises, the managers having wisely determined not to diminish the endowment of the library by spending any of it on building, but to accumulate funds for that purpose. The special field of the library will be the natural, the physical, and the social sciences, with their applications. The total endowment is estimated to exceed 2,500,000 dollars, and the income should be sufficient ultimately to allow of the making of a good collection within the limits proposed. There are over 15,000 volumes ready for use, and the number of periodicals in the reading-room will be 800, and 400 others are to be added. By the end of 1898 it is expected that there will be 40,000 volumes on the shelves.

A FINE portrait by Sir Thomas Lawrence of Sir Henry Halford, Bart., President of the College of Physicians from 1820 to 1844, has been bequeathed to the College of Physicians by his grandson, the late Sir Henry Halford. The College already possesses a splendid portrait by Gainsborough of Dr. Richard Warren, who was the chief physician in London when Halford began practice, and who predicted his success.

FINE ARTS

EGYPTOLOGICAL LITERATURE.

Wall Drawings and Monuments of El-Kab: The Tomb of Sebeknekht. By J. J. Tylor and Somers Clarke. (Quaritch.)—A short time since we noticed (No. 3601) the first part of a work by Mr. J. J. Tylor on the tombs of El-Kab, and the appearance of the second part, the name of which stands above, leads us to hope that his health is now restored, and that he will be enabled to bring to a successful end the work which he has so well begun. The publication of the tomb of Sebeknekht in its entirety was much needed, and Mr. Tylor has done well to reproduce the much-faded scenes and partially erased inscriptions in a size sufficiently large to enable the student to examine the forms of the characters and the drawing of the figures with ease. From both scenes and texts many facts of archæological interest may be learnt, and among these may be specially mentioned the existence in Egypt of a sledge with rollers as early as the thirteenth dynasty (see plate ii.). The tomb of Sebeknekht was hewn in the uppermost layer of good stone on the hill of El-Kab, and was probably the first place of sepulture made there; it is of unique importance, for it is the only one which can with certainty be attributed to the thirteenth dynasty. The cartouche containing the prenomen of King Sebek-hetep, which occurs in the text, places this statement beyond the range of doubt, and this being so, the forms of the hieroglyphics, the scenes, &c., serve as fixed objects wherefrom comparisons between earlier and later work may be made. Lepsius, Champollion, and Brugsch have in their works published and discussed certain portions of the text, but it has been reserved for Mr. Tylor to give us the scenes in their own proper colours and sequence. His work consists of eleven folio plates, each of which is accompanied by a full description, and transliterations and translations of all the texts. To these is added a plate containing a plan, sections, and details of the decoration of the tomb chamber of Sebeknekht by Mr. E. Richmond and Mr. Somers Clarke, together with some very interesting architectural notes by Mr. Somers Clarke. When the artist, architect, and hieroglyphic student unite in publishing a tomb, it follows as a matter of course that the results are fuller than when the Egyptologist edits a text along with a series of guesses upon subjects of which he knows nothing; we hope that Mr. Tylor's book is a sign that this custom is dying out, and that our knowledge of ancient Egypt is becoming large enough to merit the attention of others than Egyptologists pure and simple. Mr. Tylor hopes that his work may "serve as a text-book," but we fear that it is too large for such a purpose, and it is certainly too expensive. But when it is known that he devotes his time and money and abilities to rescuing from destruction the texts and scenes which remain upon such important monuments as the tombs of Paheri and Sebeknekht, nothing can be said against his plan, and all will hope that he will continue his work.

In El-Bersheh, Part II. (Kegan Paul & Co.), Messrs. Griffith and Newberry bring to an end their survey of the monuments of the Middle Empire in the Wâdy Dêr al-Nakhleh. The tombs here described are those of Tehutinekht, Sep, Nehera, Ahanekht (Abanekht), Tehuti-nekht, son of Ankh, Nehera the priest, Ahanekht and Aha, Khnemu-hetep, and Ahanekht and Tehuti-nekht, all of whom seem to have been men holding high office, and members of the dominant family in the nome of Unt in Upper Egypt, and to have flourished before B.C. 2500. Unfortunately, the texts and scenes are for the most part fragmentary, and there is not much new to be learnt from them. What remains of them has, however, been set forth here with diligent care, and it is satisfactory to know that, whether an earthquake or "a native prospector for antiquities" (p. 3) visits these tombs and destroys them, all the information possible has been gleaned from them for the use of Egyptologists. Mr. G. W. Fraser adds a report, with plans, of his survey of the Wâdy Dêr al-Nakhleh; and Miss Paget and Mr. Blackden deserve praise for their excellent coloured drawings which have been reproduced in this volume of the Egypt Exploration Fund's 'Survey.'

The Temple of Deir el Bahari. By E. Naville. Part I. (Kegan Paul & Co.)—The handsome volume before us is the first part of an exhaustive work by M. Naville on the famous temple which the architect Sen mut built on the western bank of the Nile, almost opposite the modern village of Luxor, for the mighty Queen of Egypt, Hatshepset, who reigned about 3,400 years ago. The publication of this important monograph has been undertaken by the Egypt Exploration Fund, and the committee are to be congratulated upon having secured the services of Messrs. Carter, whose artistic and accurate plates and drawings have contributed as much to the success of the work as the hieroglyphic lore of M. Naville himself. The present part contains thirty-four plates illustrating the north-western end of the upper platform of the temple, and some fifteen pages of letterpress describing them. No attempt has been made in it to discuss the temple as a whole or to give the complete results of the excavation thereof, which occupied M. Naville for nearly three winters. There is much to be said for this plan, because archæological disquisitions upon disputed points require time to compose, and the Egyptologist who cares only for the hieroglyphic texts which cover the walls and is eager for new material for work falls meanwhile into despair. The general history of the temple M. Naville promises to give in a series of special chapters, and we hope that he will be able to throw some new light upon the difficult historical problems which force themselves into the field whenever an attempt is made to discuss the remarkable circumstances which resulted in Hatshepset becoming the absolute ruler of Egypt. For the present, we limit ourselves to recording the appearance of the first part of this valuable Egyptological work, and hope to describe it more fully when the other portions of the monograph have appeared.

MR. HOOK'S PICTURES.

MR. HOOK will be represented at the Academy by four, if not five contributions, among them by that portrait of his elder son, Allan, which we have already described, a three-quarters-length, nearly life-size figure dressed in blue, standing in front of a bookcase lost in thought, and holding a volume, the leaves of which he has been opening with a paper-cutter. An excellent likeness, this portrait is strong in colour and solidly and vigorously painted. The other works are landscapes. 'The Stepping-Stones' depicts the mouth of a Devonshire river just where rising ground hides the sea from us and compels the stream to turn at a right angle to reach its embouchure. At the angle is a ford which, at high water, runs between two lines of wooden guide-posts, the tops of which are never covered, and which reach to an old kiln where the road ascends the bank. Against the nearest post on our right a Devonshire lass wearing a greenish-brown gown is leaning. She holds a basket at her hip and gossips in a leisurely way with a companion who has put upon the ground her burden, two creels full of fish. In a cart which is going upon the road are two men, one of whom seems to have uttered some parting remark which the girls affect not to hear. The charm of this homogeneous piece lies in the exquisitely pale blue and yet brilliant sky, which is saturated with light most consummately graded from a soft ashy colour to olive-green and grey, pure white and pallid gold. These beautiful hues are reflected, and even intensified, by the surface of the stream, which in its smoother parts catches a thousand tints from the road, and the pools which shine between the stepping-stones. The highest light of the coloration and tonality is focussed with skill upon the nearest pools. The second landscape, at present called 'The Three Donkeys,' depicts one of Mr. Hook's favourite bays in West Cornwall, a large semicircle of very dark slate cliffs of no great height, capped with vivid verdure, and having at their feet black stones and rocks of a thousand hues, besides a curving strip of yellow sand. This little bay embraces a portion of a resplendent blue sea. A strong breeze meets the ebbing tide and chafes the waves, that surge and resurge in lines of white foam. The more distant water extends in dark tracts of indigo-grey and purple, subtly graded till they are merged at the horizon, where a white sail faintly gleams. Overhead the deep blue firmament is tempered by vapours, here almost invisible in their tenuity, there massed in lofty summer clouds. The subject is, of course, the splendour and soft abundance of the light, the sumptuous jewellery of the colours, and the harmony of the whole scene. The incident that supplies the title is derived from a donkey laden with seaweed and its boy driver trudging steadily up a rough cliff road leading from the shore towards us, while two other donkeys stand patiently with their burdens at the margin of the sea, and await their turn to ascend. While 'The Stepping-Stones' depicts full, yet tender daylight, without strong shadows and very intense colours, 'The Three Donkeys' is marked by intense coloration and vivid light. The third landscape is softer in all respects than the second, but richer in its hues and tones than the first. Called for the time being 'The Boots,' it portrays a large and nearly level expanse of pale sands, flecked with greyish-silver reflections from the sky, and broken by many patches of greenish water, lustrous pools, and long hollows that shine in the sun. Dark rocks, too, covered with weed, show their parti-coloured heads. On the nearest stone sits a barelegged boy clad in a pink and brown dress and a black cap. Behind him are his boots, whose blackness and that of the cap explain the title of the picture. Round his neck clings a chubby little boy more than half-naked, to help whose paddling the boots have been taken off. The charm of the picture resides in the painting of the splendid sea that gently laps the sand and spreads landwards in wide curves to refill the pools. Through the portions, in shadow, of the wavelets—there are no waves—the golden sand reflects the sunlight. At the horizon the sea and sky are lost together; the one is soft and pure till it meets the other. A dark cliff surmounted by cottages of grey granite adds, by its strong tints and the force of its tones, to the effect of a most powerful coast piece. 'A Dutch Canal' is the descriptive title of the last landscape we have to notice. It depicts somewhat in Cuyp's golden manner, but with colours at once fuller and more diversified, a Dutch canal which, in the middle distance, is spanned by a bascule bridge of wood, connecting two roads, of which that on our right is, so far as the front of the picture, lined with trees in full leaf and seventeenth century houses. In the foreground is a small barge, whose purple-brown sail has been lowered to stop her way in the water; a woman on board puts out a plank to the shore for a gangway, and a man standing on the bank hauls it to the land with a rope. On our left, beyond a narrow strip of land, a glimpse is given of the resplendent sea, in sunlight that is partly obscured by vapour; a windmill, some houses with red roofs, and a dark point of land in the distance serve to complete the picture. A golden semi-haze tempers their brightness, and, fusing them together, reduces the tints of the sky and summer clouds. The titles of these three pictures are, we need hardly add, liable to change.

POMPEY'S PILLAR AT ALEXANDRIA.

University College, W.C.

As two years ago I examined Dr. Botti's excavations with him around and under Pompey's Pillar, and I have lately revisited the place with Prof. Mahaffy's recent letter in view, I should be glad to place on record a few facts. These are solely archæological; with the literary question I have nothing to do.

The earliest remains that I could see on the hill are long loculi tombs pierced endways into the soft rock. These cannot be before Ptolemaic times, as the cemetery of the small town before that would hardly extend so far.

Next there are extensive cisterns and water-channels which intersect and destroy the loculi tombs. These are of the first or second century A.D. to judge by the fine even bonding of double courses of Roman tile in the side of one which is lined with masonry. These cisterns were, probably, only for the catchment of rain from this hill, as they are too high up to receive water from elsewhere. So far there is no indication of any buildings being erected upon the hill.

Next these cisterns fell into decay, were filled with earth, and hidden so that they were forgotten. Had they been known and visible it can hardly be supposed that the enormous pressure of the foundation of Pompey s Pillar would have been placed half over a mass of soft earth when continuous rock could be used by going a few feet to one side. As it is the great column rests half on rock, half on an old cistern full of loose dust and chips.

Lastly, after the cisterns of early Roman age were wholly disused, hidden, and forgotten, the great column was set up in the most careless manner without any proper foundation. Among the basement stones is a fragment of a dedication on black syenite inscribed under Philadelphus: another evidence that the column is long posterior to that king.

As to the possibility of the column having been a reworked obelisk we may note:—

(1) It has not been reworked in situ; for the column ends below in a ring moulding which rests on a torus base in one piece with a shallow square base, which, in turn, rests on a cubic die. Were this an obelisk there could hardly be a shallow block between the obelisk and its massive cubic die; such would be unprecedented, and would greatly detract from the appearance, whereas it is almost a necessity for the base of a column.

(2) There is no trace of the flat faces remaining upon the top ring of the column, where they would be most likely to be left.

(3) The column is already too wide in proportion to its height for an obelisk, and would have been even more so before dressing away the faces. If an obelisk, much of its length must have been lost.

So—while never pronouncing any block in Egypt not to have been reworked—it seems that the facts point to the column (A) not having been a whole obelisk reworked; (B) not having stood on its present base as an obelisk; and (C) not being earlier in its present position than about the third century A.D.

I see then no evidence against the dedication to Diocletian being its original purpose.

W. M. Flinders Petrie.

SALES.

Messrs. Robinson & Fisher sold on the 1st inst. the following pictures: W. Vandervelde, A Marine View and Shipping, 336*l*. Jan Steen, A Landscape, with cottage and numerous figures, 420*l*.; An Interior and Figures, 110*l*.; A Kermesse, 120*l*.; An Interior and Figures, 997*l*. F. Hals, A Portrait of a Gentleman, 3,517*l*. De Keyser, A Landscape, with cavalier on horseback, lady, and dog, 735*l*.; A Landscape, with cavalier on horseback, 525*l*. Snyders, Dogs attacking a Porcupine, 283*l*. L. Boilly, An Interior and Figures, 462*l*. Guardi, A Festa on the Grand Canal, 357*l*.; A Marine View and Shipping in a Storm, 131*l*. Weenix, Still Life, 346*l*. G. Romney, Portrait of Mrs. Yates in the character of the Tragic Muse, 425*l*. F. Cotes, Portrait of Miss Sheridan, 178*l*. Watteau, A Fête Champêtre, 304*l*. N. Berchem, Preparing for the Chase, 115*l*. Terburg, The Letter-Writer, 262*l*. W. Shayer, sen., The Roadside Inn, 120*l*. Paul Potter, A Dutch Landscape, with farm buildings, windmill, and cattle, 294*l*. S. Ruysdael, A Dutch Landscape, horses, cattle, &c., 325*l*. Van der Neer, A Conflagration by Night, with boats and figures, 110*l*.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 3rd inst. the following pictures, the works of the late H. Macallum: Jan Van der Plas, the Shrimper, 183*l*.; The Return from Lance Fishing, 199*l*.

Fine-Art Gossip.

The Loan Exhibition of Pictures at Guildhall was opened to the public on Wednesday last. It more than sustains the high position won by its five forerunners, all of which, like the present one, were formed by Mr. A. C. Temple, the City's Art Director. The pictures are, of course, already well known, and it remains for us only to mention the most celebrated: Mr. Abbey's 'Gloucester and the Lady Anne' (1896); Mr. Brett's 'The Grey of the Morning' and 'The Stonebreaker' (1858); Madox Brown's 'Last of England'; 'The Roll Call,' by Lady Butler; Mr. J. Clark's 'The Sick Child'; Constable's 'Fording the River'; David Cox's 'Vale of Clwyd'; Egg's 'Peter the Great and Catharine'; Mr. Frith's best picture, 'Ramsgate Sands'; two Hooks, 'The Shortest Way to School' and 'The Wily Angler'; Mr. A. Hughes's 'April Love'; Mr. H. Hunt's 'May Morning' and 'Two Gentlemen of Verona'; Landseer's 'Man Proposes'; Leighton's 'Cymon and Iphigenia' and 'Antigone'; Linnell's 'Welsh Drovers crossing a Common'; 'The Banquet Scene in Macbeth,' by Maclise; G. Mason's 'The Harvest Moon'; six by Millais, 'Chill October,' 'The Gambler's Wife,' 'Just Awake,' 'Ferdinand lured by Ariel,' 'A Huguenot,' and 'The Blind Girl'; 'The Newhaven Packet,' one of Henry Moore's masterpieces; Albert Moore's 'Topaz'; Mulready's 'Burchell and Sophia'; Mr. Orchardson's 'The Young Duke'; J. Phillip's 'La Bomba'; Poole's 'Seventh Day of the Decameron'; Sir E. Poynter's 'Dragon of Wantley' and 'Faithful unto Death' (1865); 'In Manus Tuas, Domine!' by Mr. Briton Riviere; D. G. Rossetti's 'The Beloved' and 'The Magdalene at the House of the Pharisee'; Mr. F. Sandys's 'Valkyrie' and 'Head of a Lady'; Stanfield's 'Abandoned'; Mr. Alma Tadema's 'Women of Amphissa' and 'Love's Jewelled Fetter'; Turner's 'Going to the Ball, San Martino,' 'Departure of Adonis for the Chase,' and 'Returning from the Ball, St. Martha'; F. Walker's 'The Old Gate,' 'The Lost Path,' and 'The Plough' (smaller versions); Mr. Watts's 'Aurora'; Wilkie's 'The Penny Wedding' (1819); and Mr. W. L. Wyllie's 'Black Diamonds.' Besides these the collection includes works by Mrs. Alma Tadema, Sir E. Burne-Jones and Sir J. Gilbert, Messrs. Aumonier, J. B. Burgess, M. R. Corbet, A. East, T. Faed, L. Fildes, A. S. Forbes, A. Goodwin, A. C. Gow, P. Graham, G. D. Leslie, J. F. Lewis, D. Murray, A. Parsons, A. Stokes, E. A. Waterlow, and J. S. Sargent.

On and after Monday next the public will be admitted to see, in the Fine-Art Society's rooms, collections of pictures, water-colour drawings, and lithographs, by Messrs. G. Petrie and C. H. Shannon. The private views were appointed for yesterday (Friday) and to-day.

Mr T. Hope McLachlan, the accomplished painter of many pleasing, if not striking landscapes, a considerable proportion of which have appeared at the Academy and elsewhere since 1875, died, while still in the prime of his artistic life, at Weybridge on the 1st inst. McLachlan was bracketed Senior in the Moral Sciences Tripos at Cambridge in 1867, and practised at the bar for a short time before taking definitely to painting.

Prof. Ernest Gardner writes on the 3rd inst.:—

"M. Lambros's 'Notes from Athens' in to-day's Athenæum contain a full account of the projected International Congress for Greek Archæology, to be held in Athens on the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of the French School at Athens. In the circular issued under the direction of M. Homolle, and dated January 11th, 1897, it was proposed to hold this conference on April 26th, 27th, and 28th. But in consequence of the unfortunate turn taken by political affairs in the Levant, M. Homolle has recently found it necessary to issue a second circular, postponing the conference until next September. It need hardly be said that the other proposals mentioned by M. Lambros, such as the performance of the 'Œdipus Rex' in the theatre of Dionysus by the Comédie Française, have also had to be given up, at least for the present. The actual date in September is not yet fixed; but it seems necessary to correct at once the announcement made in the Athenæum to prevent disappointment on the part of those who propose to attend the Congress, and may not have heard of the change."

The Salon, which opens on the 25th inst.—not the 1st prox. as usual—is to be held in the Champs Elysées for the last time, and comprises a much smaller number of pictures than for many seasons has been customary. Among them are the following: M. Beauvais's 'Prairie Inondée' and 'Le Chemin Rond au Val de Grâce'; M. Brisset's 'Le Général Lepie à Eylau'; M. P. Buffet's 'La Source, paysage'; M. Fantin-Latour's 'Tentation de St. Antoine' and 'La Nuit'; M. G. B. Olive's 'La Corniche à Marseille' and 'Un Canal à Venise'; M. Vollon's 'Veille de Noël' and 'Portrait de M. P. V.'; M. Benjamin-Constant's portraits of the Duc d'Aumale and of M. Chauchard; M. Bonnat's 'Portrait de M. Bertrand de l'Académie Française'; M. Gérôme's 'La Fuite en Égypte, un Effet de Jour, et un Effet de Nuit'; M. L. Glaize's 'Saint-Saëns'; M. Petitjean's 'Canal du Moulin'; M. Robert-Fleury's 'Au Coin du Feu'; and M. Zuber's 'Lever de Lune au Cap d'Antibes' and 'Journée Orageuse.' Among the sculptures will be the 'Valkyrie' of M. Belloc, the 'Bonaparte en Egypte' of M. Gérôme, and M. Mathurin-Moreau's 'Monument à Pierre Joigneaux, ancien Sénateur.' The last is a group in marble, designed for the city of Beaune.

A Correspondent writes:—

"The addition of the Caillebotte Collection to the gallery of the Luxembourg has, it is stated, been the subject of an indignant protest addressed by the members of the Institute to the Minister of the Fine Arts. The pictures are all of the Impressionist school, and include canvases by Manet and Claude Monet. They are such childish daubs as seen elsewhere would be passed by unregarded, or with the glance one bestows on the mackerel and impossible landscapes chalked on the London pavement. Indeed, the two schools have strong similarities of style and treatment, saving that the London artist omits the 'note'—to use the studio slang—of lubricity which his Parisian rival is fond of parading. Government patronage of productions of this nature is felt in France to be a serious matter, and all foreign admirers of the admirable work accomplished by French painters in the past will sympathize with the patriotic indignation of the members of the Institute."

The atlas to the first volume of M. Ed. Pottier's 'Greek Ceramic Art in the Louvre' is ready for publication, and will be issued this month. It contains fifty plates of vases, each plate including several examples. The text gives detailed descriptions of the separate vases. It is needless to point out the value of this work to the student of Greek art. M. Pottier is preparing the second volume of his work, which will be followed by a third and concluding volume.

M. Charles Ravaisson-Mollien has nearly finished the arrangement of the new gallery of casts of antique sculpture in the Louvre, which it is expected may be opened this summer. The casts are displayed in the hall built for the riding school of the late Prince Imperial. The architectural style of the hall is not exactly that which is appropriate for Greek sculpture. However, the lighting is fairly good, and the size of the hall will admit of such arrangement of the objects that they may be well seen. The system of keeping original work and casts rigorously separate is a wise one; and the fact of its receiving the adherence of the direction of the Louvre must exercise a salutary influence in other national museums.

M. Casolani writes from Cyprus:—

"The small group of magnificent, albeit weather-worn and ruinous columns of the Temple of the Sun at Baalbeck seemed to make a pitiful appeal for protection when I saw them a few weeks ago. It is believed that there were originally fifty-eight columns; of the eight that remained in the latter part of the last century there are now six standing, and judging by the deep cracks in the frieze, their numbers must, at no very distant date, dwindle to five and even four. The little that is left of the very handsome roof of the peristyle of the Temple of Jupiter is also fast crumbling, two of the huge slabs which form the roof being in imminent danger of coming down. I wish, in these circumstances, to appeal to the true lover of art and history to save from utter ruin these unique relics, these bones of ancient Rome, which no treasure, no human ingenuity, could replace. There appears to be a great amount of money to spare in England, France, and the United States; cannot a fund be formed for the preservation of these temples from further decay (which in their case means disappearance), and for their restoration so far as the débris—and there is an immense quantity—will permit? Those responsible may be restricted from making excavations or removing anything from the sites. All that need be done really is to restore the buildings as well as possible, frame proper instructions for the two guards, and, if thought advisable, contribute a small sum annually towards an increase of their salaries on condition that a better class of men is employed (if possible a European and a Turk). That being done, the buildings might be handed back to the local authorities, a report on their condition being obtained periodically from any intending visitor to Baalbeck who may be known to the fund. The Ottoman Government may, I believe, be counted upon not to withhold their consent, nor the British ambassador at the Porte his countenance, from such pious work. The area of operations might eventually be extended to Palmyra and other parts of Turkey as well as to Persia and any other country where no steps are taken at present to preserve ancient buildings of great historic or artistic interest. Unless several attempts in the direction indicated have already been made and have failed, it seems a curious and sad commentary on the narrowness of view of antiquaries and museum authorities that monuments of the class of the temples of the Sun and of Jupiter should be allowed to disappear."

There is at present in a jeweller's shop in Dublin a silver-gilt chalice 8 in. high, 13 oz. weight, with an octagon design for the foot—a graceful piece of work. Round the foot the words following are engraved in large Gothic letters:—

Me fieri fecerunt go IHS Malle i
Thoma de Bur et Graniuali y anno Do
M | CCCC | LXXXX | IIII

The IHS, which is between the two main lines on a level with the ends of the names de Burgo and Granuale of Mally, is adorned with a shamrock.

The Swiss painter Albert de Meuron, who died at Neuchâtel a few days ago in his seventy-fourth year, was one of the founders of the Neuchâtel Museum and an energetic member of the Swiss Federal Art Commission. He studied at Düsseldorf and afterwards at Paris, and was one of the members of the international jury for painting at the Paris Universal Exhibitions of 1878 and 1889.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

St. James's Hall.—Henschel Concerts. Popular Concerts.
Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts.
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts. Promenade Concerts. Bach Festival. Philharmonic Concerts.

Mr. Henschel closed his orchestral and choral concerts in St. James's Hall on Thursday evening last week with a performance which may be regarded as a fitting climax to an enterprise of considerable benefit to musical art, which he carried out for the first few years under discouraging circumstances. Since the commencement of the present decade, however, there has arisen a strong movement in favour of orchestral music, and Mr. Henschel might have to face losses due not to the apathy of the public, but to increasing competition. The closing performance consisted of Bach's St. Matthew Passion Music rendered in English and with some instruments which are now obsolete, intended to represent as nearly as possible those for which Bach wrote. We cannot but think this kind of procedure savours of pedantry. Would not Bach and other old masters have availed themselves of modern improvements in wind instruments had they been ready to their hand? To this question only an affirmative answer can be given. If we must have the harsh tones of old-fashioned oboes and the strident sounds of the high trumpet, we should, to be consistent, insist upon Bach's suites being played on the harpsichord or clavichord, and Beethoven's sonatas on weak-toned pianos. For the rendering of the Passion in every other respect we have little but praise. The choir had been splendidly drilled, and we never heard the dramatic choruses sung with more firmness and decision. Miss Louise Dale was unsatisfactory at first in the soprano solos, and although she improved somewhat later, she was obviously overweighted. Miss Marian Mackenzie was commendable, and Mr. James Leyland, with his pure light tenor voice, was admirable as the narrator. Mr. Charles Clark scarcely infused sufficient dignity and pathos into the music of the Redeemer, but he sang carefully; and Mr. Daniel Price "doubled" the smaller bass parts successfully. It should be added that Lady Halle played the violin obbligato in the air "Have mercy, Lord, on me." The new English translation by the Rev. Dr. Troutbeck is an improvement on the old in some respects, though the too abundant use of the present participle might have been avoided. The constant iteration of the syllable "ing" is rather tiresome. The Henschel Concerts have now ceased, but the members of the choir have expressed a desire to be kept together, and it would be a pity if an organization now among the best of its kind in the metropolis were disbanded.

A new departure was made at the Popular Concert last Saturday afternoon. For the last four concerts of the season the celebrated Joachim string quartet party had been engaged, and they made their first appearance on this occasion. Two of the members, Herr Kruse and Herr Wirth, the second violin and viola, are new to London, but Herr Hausmann (violoncello) has played here several times. The most striking merit in the playing of these artists is the extraordinary perfection in ensemble. If it were possible for one performer to play a string quartet he could not impress his own individuality on the music more distinctly than Herr Joachim has impressed his on his three associates. Three quartets of Beethoven were performed on Saturday, namely, those in B flat, Op. 18, No. 6; in F minor, Op. 95; and in C sharp minor, Op. 131: thus illustrating in turn the first, second, and third styles of the master.

On Monday more variety was given to the programme, the three quartets being Mozart's in E flat, No. 4 of the set dedicated to Haydn; Brahms's in A minor, Op. 51, No. 2; and Beethoven's great work in B flat, Op. 130. Here, again, it was impossible to decide which work received the fullest measure of justice. Mozart's quartet was played with a degree of refinement that was positively exquisite, and the more recondite example of Brahms received equal care. Beethoven's Quartet in B flat is the most genial of the set generally known as posthumous, and indeed the finale, which replaced the gigantic fugue subsequently published separately, is more in his second than his third manner, though it is believed on the best authority to have been the master's last composition. There was no pianoforte music at either of these concerts, but Madame Marchesi contributed songs by Bach, Schubert, Brahms, and Schumann with delightful effect. The last-named master's 'Die Beiden Grenadiere,' however, was a somewhat unwise choice, for in spite of the artist's marvellous skill in varying the timbre of her voice, the feeling could not be resisted that the song is far more fitted for a male than a female voice.

It was easy to predict that Mr. Edward Elgar's fine and spirited cantata, 'Scenes from the Saga of King Olaf,' produced at the North Staffordshire Festival last October, would shortly be heard again. The Crystal Palace concert last Saturday was mainly devoted to it, and the impression made was unquestionably very favourable. The libretto and the music were noticed at some length at the time when the work was produced (Athen. No. 3602), but reference must again be made to the qualities of the music, which combine freshness, force, picturesqueness, and, in general terms, freedom from the slightest appearance of a laboured style. Two of the soloists at Sydenham were the same as at Hanley, namely, Madame Medora Henson and Mr. Edward Lloyd; but Mr. Ffrangcon Davies was replaced by Mr. Andrew Black. The choir seemed to have their hearts in their work, and sang with spirit and with commendable attention to the nuances. Mr. Elgar's work was preceded by Beethoven's 'Leonora' Overture, No. 2.

The first series of Saturday afternoon Symphony Concerts at the Queen's Hall came to a conclusion last Saturday afternoon. The first performance in England was given of a Danse Polovtsienne from Borodine's opera 'Le Prince Igor,' based on a barbaric subject of the eleventh century, and apparently treated in a barbaric manner, if one may judge from this excerpt, which is wild, noisy, and garish, with lucid intervals. A splendid performance was given of Tschaïkowsky's 'Symphonie Pathétique,' which seems to grow more and more in popularity. Liszt's Rhapsody in D and G, No. 4, Dvoràk's piquant symphonic poem 'Der Wasser Fay,' Grieg's 'Peer Gynt' Suite, No. 1, and the Prelude to the third act of 'Lohengrin' were also finely played by Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra. The Symphony Concerts have met with so much favour that Mr. Robert Newman announces a second series of six, to take place between April 24th and May 29th; also a musical Thanksgiving Service to take place on Sunday morning, June 20th, with an orchestra and chorus of five hundred. On this occasion the music written by Dr. Martin and Dr. Bridge to be sung at St. Paul's on June 22nd will be performed for the first time, by permission. Admission to the service will be limited to subscribers for the fresh series of Symphony Concerts.

The excellent so-called Promenade Concerts at the Queen's Hall will terminate for the season this evening. The penultimate programme last Saturday included Tschaïkowsky's Symphony in E minor, No. 5, a work that, like the 'Pathétique,' grows on acquaintance. Mr. E. F. Jacques justifiably observes that from the subject-matter the composer in some way probably intended to suggest Poland, but however this may be, the symphony contains much beautiful music, and will not quickly be forgotten. A programme under Mr. Henry Wood would not be complete without a novelty. On this occasion there were two, the first and more important being a Concertstück in F minor for pianoforte and orchestra by Mr. G. W. F. Crowther, a young English musician born in 1864 at Carlisle, and from an early age a student at the Royal Academy of Music, where he gained high honours. He has already composed a fair number of works in various styles, and his Concertstück, if not strikingly original, gives ample proof of high musical culture. Mr. Crowther played the solo part himself in brilliant style. The other piece marked "first time" was the Prelude to the second act of M. Bourgault Ducoudray's opera 'Thamara,' which was produced in Paris in 1891, and is to be revived this year. The significance of the trifle could not be gauged apart from the context, and it created but little impression.

This week it is only possible to chronicle the first performance at the Queen's Hall of the Bach Festival, which opened on Tuesday. As on the previous occasion two years ago, the work selected was the St. Matthew Passion Music, and, also as before, with the original German text. Herr Robert Kaufmann was happily available for the part of the narrator, and he sang it with beautiful feeling and perfect command over his fine voice. Miss Fillunger sang artistically, and Madame Marian Mackenzie, Mr. Kennerley Rumford, and Mr. Francis Harford did fairly well, though the German tongue seemed rather to puzzle the English singers at times. The same remark will apply to the choir, whose singing was devoid of life and vigour, in spite of the exemplary conducting of Prof. Villiers Stanford. The constitution of the orchestra merits note. There were twelve first violins, twelve seconds, nine violas, six violoncellos, six double-basses, eight flutes, eight oboes, and four bassoons, with, of course, contingents of other wind instruments, the idea being apparently to approach the proportions of strings to wind customary in Bach's time. Of the remaining festival performances we must speak next week.

The nearest approach to a novelty at the second Philharmonic Concert on Wednesday evening was Mr. Frederic Cliffe's Violin Concerto in D minor, produced at the Norwich Festival last October. A second hearing reveals good points overlooked at first, but still we think the concerto must rank below the composer's Symphonies in C and E minor, at any rate in freshness of theme. The composer conducted, and the solo part again received full justice from M. Tivadar Nachèz. The Philharmonic orchestra was scarcely up to its usual mark in Dvoràk's brilliant Symphony in D. The magnificent tone of the strings told well, of course, but the nuances might have been better observed. Again, the accompaniment to Walther's Preislied from 'Die Meistersinger' should have been more subdued. The solo parts in this and in Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Come, Margarita, come," from 'The Martyr of Antioch,' were beautifully sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd. Mendelssohn's 'Hebrides' Overture and Schubert's to 'Rosamunde' completed the programme. Handel's Dead March from 'Saul' was played before the concert as a tribute to the memory of Brahms.

JOHANNES BRAHMS.

The news of the death of this great master on Saturday morning last, though not unexpected, was nevertheless a shock to all interested in music. As Brahms was born on May 7th, 1833, he had nearly completed his sixty-fourth year, and had therefore far exceeded the term of life allotted to Mozart, Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, and Chopin, although he did not attain to so great an age as Bach, Handel, and Spohr. It had been for some time evident that the end of the composer was at hand and that nothing more of importance could be expected from his pen. Whether his career could have been prolonged had he led a more active life and burnt less of the midnight oil cannot be said, but at any rate he accomplished sufficient to render his name immortal. Brahms offered contributions to every department of musical art save the stage, with which he had little sympathy. For many years after his genius had obtained recognition in Germany he was practically unknown here, and the first work to gain acceptance was the 'Deutsches Requiem,' which is not surprising, in view of the great favour always displayed in this country towards choral music. Slowly but surely Brahms's utterances made their way in England, and of recent years every new composition has been brought to a hearing at the earliest moment. It will be within the recollection of musicians that he was invited by the University of Cambridge in 1877 to conduct his First Symphony in C minor and take the diploma of Mus.Doc. by the side of his friend Herr Joachim; but he declined, and in spite of other flattering offers he never crossed the Channel. Up to middle life, however, Brahms could scarcely be described as an anchorite, for he conducted at the Vienna Sing-Akademie and the Gesellschaft der Musik-Freunde, and occasionally appeared as a solo pianist; but from 1875 to the time of his death the master kept himself in retirement, resembling Beethoven in this respect, as well as in his music, more than any other great composer. On glancing back at the life work of Brahms we perceive at once how much he has done to enrich the repertory of musical art in its purest forms. His four symphonies are strangely dissimilar in their characteristics. No. 1, in C minor, is grand and sombre, an epitome of all that is lofty in classical music; No. 2, in D, is, on the other hand, gentle and sweetly melodious with just a touch of melancholy; and No. 3 is so bright and genial that a German critic remarked that it was pleasant to hear something of Brahms that he could appreciate on a first hearing. The Fourth Symphony, in E minor, is very different, and remains a puzzle, especially in the last movement, a sort of Passacaglia with variations. In the realm of chamber music Brahms was more uniformly successful. His Pianoforte Quintet in F minor, Op. 34, may hold its own with any work of a similar kind; and his pianoforte and string quartets, and his works for clarinet and other instruments, especially the Clarinet Quintet in B minor, are all masterly and, in the main, beautiful. He ceased to write pianoforte sonatas early in life, but he never gave up penning genre pieces of a very piquant nature, which showed to the end the hand of one who knew how to deal effectively with the key-board. Turning again to vocal music, we find the assertion so frequently made that Brahms was invariably austere in his utterances absurd, for apart from his delightful 'Liebeslieder Walzer,' and the two books of 'Zigeunerlieder' for vocal quartet with pianoforte accompaniment, he has left a large number of songs for single voice, many of combined beauty and simplicity. He was followed to the grave on Tuesday at the Central Cemetery in Vienna by a large number of musicians and amateurs, and Brahms "In Memoriam" concerts will undoubtedly be numerous during what remains of the London season.

Musical Gossip.

We have received the prospectus of the arrangements for the forthcoming summer season at the Crystal Palace. Here we have only to do with the musical fixtures, which will commence with a Patriotic Concert on a large scale on Easter Monday under the direction of Mr. Manns. A new 'Imperial March,' from the pen of Mr. Edward Elgar, will be introduced on this occasion. The dates of the triennial Handel Festival, June 11th, 14th, 16th, and 18th, have been already announced. Particulars concerning the Selection Day will follow in due course.

Mr. F. H. Cowen will be the successor of Sir Joseph Barnby as conductor at the next Cardiff Festival. A new choral work from his pen, probably a secular cantata, will be presented on this occasion.

A one day's festival is announced at Exeter on the 22nd inst. Dvorák's 'Stabat Mater,' Beethoven's 'Mount of Olives,' and a new work, 'Balaam and Balak,' by Dr. Ferris Tozer, will be performed.

It cannot be said that the orchestral concert of the Royal Academy of Music at the Queen's Hall on Thursday afternoon last week was particularly interesting. Although the orchestra numbered nearly ninety performers, male and female, the hackneyed Overture to 'William Tell' was the only item in which they were employed save as accompanists. Fair promise was shown by Misses Margaret G. Cooper, L. Foote, S. A. Gomersall, Lydia Care, and Gertrude Drinkwater, vocalists; Miss May Mukle, violoncellist; Mr. Percy Hilder Miles, violinist; and Miss Marion White and Miss Elsie E. Horne, pianists. Sir Alexander Mackenzie conducted the concert.

Mr. G. A. Clinton gave the first of his chamber concerts for string and wind instruments at the Queen's Small Hall on Friday last week, the programme including Beethoven's rarely heard Serenade for flute, violin, and viola; Brahms's Clarinet Trio in A minor, Op. 114; and Mozart's Clarinet Quintet. Mr. Clinton was assisted by Messrs. Ludwig, Collins, Hobday, and Whitehouse, and Misses Fanny Davies and Bertha Salter.

A highly promising début was made by Miss Elsie Hall, a young pianist from Australia, at the Steinway Hall on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Hall has studied in England and Germany with much profit. She displayed excellent technique and artistic intelligence in pieces by Bach, Chopin, and Henselt, and her powers were put to a severer test in Beethoven's 'Kreutzer' Sonata. From this she emerged successfully, and, of course, the violin part received full justice from Herr Kruse, a member of the Joachim Quartet.

Mr. Philip Cathie, a very talented young violinist, finished his series of recitals in the small Queen's Hall on Wednesday afternoon. The principal item, exceedingly well played, was Mendelssohn's own pianoforte accompaniment, rendered by Mr. Bewley Cathie. A praiseworthy rendering was given of Beethoven's Duet Sonata in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2, with Miss Margaret Pierrepoint at the pianoforte; and two pleasing violin pieces, entitled 'Plaint d' Amour' and 'Chant Hongrois,' by Mr. Lambert, were performed for the first time.

Messrs. Boosey & Co. will shortly publish the selection from Purcell's 'King Arthur' which Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland has prepared for the Birmingham Festival in October next.

Herr Augustus Hyllested, the Danish pianist, will give at the first of his three concerts in St. James's Hall on May 4th the Beethoven and Liszt Concertos in E flat (Mr. Gustav Ernest being the conductor of the orchestra), and will conduct his own work, a 'Symphonic Poem,' Op. 25, with orchestra, ending with chorus.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	National Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall String Quartet Concert, 7.30.
Mon.	Popular Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
Tues.	Miss Maude Danks and Miss Hilda Gee's Vocal and Violin Recital, 3, Steinway Hall
—	Wagner Concert under Herr Felix Mottl, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
Fri.	Queen's Hall Choral Society, 3, 'The Redemption.'
—	Sacred Concert, 3 30, Crystal Palace.
—	Royal Choral Society, 'The Messiah,' 7, Albert Hall.
—	Sacred Concert, 7 30, Queen's Hall
—	Mr. Ambrose Austin's Sacred Concert, 7.30, St. James's Hall.
Sat.	Crystal Palace Concert, 3.

DRAMA

Dramatic Gossip.

Mr. Fitzgerald Molloy is writing two volumes on 'The Romance of the Irish Stage.' During the eighteenth century no other country could boast of so many notable players. Charles Macklin, who abandoned the trade of saddler to be a comedian; Tom Sheridan; Peg Woffington; Spranger Barry; Miss Bellamy; Henry Mossop, at one time the rival of Garrick; Dorothy Jordan; and Richard Daly, who fought sixteen duels in three years, and lived to introduce Mrs. Siddons to an Irish audience.

M. Filon's promised book on the English stage will be ushered in by a preface by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones, who may be trusted to ventilate his own views on the future of an institution he has helped to elevate.

The long-deferred performance of 'Madame Sans-Gêne' at the Lyceum takes place this evening.

A new lease for forty years of Drury Lane Theatre is, it is understood, to be granted to Mr. Collins; it will retain, says the Daily News, the privilege of a patent house, which enables it to dispense with an annual application for the Lord Chamberlain's licence.

The production at the St. James's of Mr. Carton's 'Tree of Knowledge' is, with the author's consent, postponed until the autumn. Mr. Alexander will, however, be seen during the season as Mirabell in Congreve's 'Way of the World.' Opportunities of witnessing a comedy of Congreve are so few that the announcement has more than common interest. Originally taken at Lincoln's Inn Fields by Verbruggen, Mirabell has been played by many leading comedians, including Wilks, Ryan, Palmer, Smith, Lewis, Holman, and Kemble.

To Correspondents.—W. C. N.—H. O.—E. H.—M. B.—W.—L. L. & B.—F.—H. de P. G.—S. E. W.—E. F.—C. B.—G. M. A.—A. J. D.—J. B.—G. A. Q.—received.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

THE LIFE OF NELSON THE EMBODIMENT OF THE SEA POWER OF GREAT BRITAIN.

By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.,

Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c.

2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

Full Prospectus post free on application.

VOLUME I. READY IN A FEW DAYS.

A HISTORY OF THE ROYAL NAVY FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO THE PRESENT.

By W. LAIRD CLOWES,

Fellow of King's College, London, Gold Medallist U.S. Naval Institute, Hon. Member R.U.S. Institution.

Assisted by Sir C. R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, &c.

5 vols. with very numerous Illustrations, royal 8vo. cloth extra, 25s. each, net.

The First Volume of the History, bringing the narrative to the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, is about to be published, and will be followed at short intervals by the subsequent Volumes. Full Prospectus of the Work sent post free on application.

OF ALL BOOKSELLERS.

WAR, FAMINE, and our FOOD SUPPLY. By R. B. MARSTON. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.; boards, 2s.

TRUTH says:—"I can only hope the book will be widely read."

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

OUIDA'S NEW NOVEL.

THE MASSARENES.

THIRD EDITION NEXT WEEK.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

The NATIONAL OBSERVER and BRITISH REVIEW (April 3rd, 1897) says:—"In many ways incomparably the best that the author has ever written.....Many of the characters are drawn with singular skill.....The writer's poetic power has not deserted her."

Mr. W. L. Courtney in the DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"Ouida has written an extremely interesting narrative. .....She has chosen to depict modern society as it has come to be in its latest phases.....Ouida's hand has not lost its cunning."

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

THE HANDSOME HUMES.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of this Popular Writer's Books.

LOW'S 2s. 6d. LIBRARY OF TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

TWO NEW VOLUMES.

Uniform crown 8vo. volumes, fully illustrated, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

HAUSALAND; or, Fifteen Hundred Miles through the Central Soudan. By the Rev. C. H. ROBINSON, M.A. With Map, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations.

TWO KINGS of UGANDA; or, Life by the Shores of the Victoria Nyanza. By the Rev. R. P. ASHE, M.A. With Map and Illustration.

FOR A BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED PAPER ON MR. WILLIAM QUILLER ORCHARDSON, R.A.,

Written by Mr. COSMO MONKHOUSE,

and Illustrated with Reproductions from the Artist's Work,

See the APRIL NUMBER of

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

At all Booksellers', price ONE SHILLING.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S

NEW NOVELS AND NEW PUBLICATIONS.

JUST READY.

Crown 8vo. art canvas gilt, Six Shillings.

With specially designed Cover by Turbayne.

FALSE DAWN. By Francis Prevost.

The author's previous volumes, RUST of GOLD and ON the VERGE, have placed him in the foremost rank of literary artists, and the Publishers feel confident that this, his first long novel, will more than confirm the reputation he has already acquired.

"We can only praise the vivid restraint and dumb eloquence of the love scenes, the distinction of the literary style, the luminous character of the epigrams and metaphors of the book's solid backbone of 'fundamental brainwork.'"—Echo.

"The author's final passages dealing with John Avon's love-taught philosophy of life are very winning in their sweet reasonableness and pathos."

Books of To-day and To-morrow.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Crown 8vo. art canvas, Five Shillings.

RUST of GOLD.

"A series of nine fin de siècle stories of great power and picturesqueness.....As word pictures they are simply masterpieces."—Daily Telegraph.

ON the VERGE.

"If Mr. Prevost's work were not so good, one would praise it more. As it is, it challenges comparison with the best."—Daily Graphic.

THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

CAPTAIN SHANNON. By Coulson Kernahan.

Illustrated by F. S. Wilson. [Ready shortly.

After Mr. Kernahan's wonderful success in very different lines of literature, this thrilling romance from his pen will be eagerly anticipated.

"The interest grows, the situations are novel, the story is intense, the treatment serious, and the culmination befitting. Taken as a whole it is a remarkable record of what two widely different men are capable of."—Literary World.

FORDHAM'S FEUD. By Bertram Mitford,

Author of 'The Expiation of Wynne Palliser,' &c. Illustrated by Stanley L. Wood. [Ready shortly.

The CRIME and the CRIMINAL. By Richard

MARSH. Illustrated by Harold Piffard. [Ready immediately.

A most novel plot, worked out with the sensational power familiar to all readers of Mr. Marsh's previous works.

LADY TURPIN. By Henry Herman, Author of

'His Angel,' &c. Profusely illustrated by Stanley L. Wood.

READY APRIL 12.

Artistic cover, designed by A. A. Turbayne, crown 8vo. leatherette, 6*d.*; cloth, 1*s.*

A LITERARY GENT. By Coulson Kernahan,

Author of 'God and the Ant' and 'The Child, the Wise Man, and the Devil,' of which 100,000 copies have been sold. With Portrait of the Author.

This little book is believed by many to be the author's masterpiece, and, the publishers believe, is especially interesting as being the first instance on record of an attempt to produce a sixpenny book in a style of high artistic excellence.

"'A Literary Gent' should preach a finer apocalypse against intemperance than all the harangues of platform orators during the century."—Illustrated London News.

"We know of nothing published in recent years which is to be compared with the realization of the fatally-dominant alcoholic craving in the study entitled 'A Literary Gent.'"

Daily Chronicle.

FIVE SHILLINGS.

AT RANDOM. By L. F. Austin. With Photo-

gravure Portrait of the Author.

Mr. James Payn in the Illustrated London News says:—"The art of writing an essay which should be as wise as a proverb and bright as an epigram (and not much longer) is a gift with which few men are dowered.....'At Random' is a meritorious example of it. It is long since I have read a brighter book."

Dr. Robertson Nicoll in the British Weekly says:—"A series of fantasies which it would be difficult to overpraise for their grace, their beauty, and their lightness. There is in them, too, a certain seriousness and depth which add to the attraction. Nothing of the kind so good has recently been published."

GUY BOOTHBY'S NOVELS.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED BY STANLEY L. WOOD.

The FASCINATION of the KING. [Ready in April.

After the remarkable success of Mr. Boothby's previous novels, 'Dr. Nikola,' 'Beautiful White Devil,' 'Bid for Fortune,' &c, this book will be eagerly welcomed, and will, it is anticipated, secure even greater success.

DOCTOR NIKOLA. Fourth Edition.

"Deeply interesting.....The charm of the book is its remoteness from the ordinary scenes and ways of fiction; after reading it, one could almost fancy that one had stood within the gates of Lhassa the Blessed."—British Weekly.

The BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL. Sixth

Edition.

"An original idea worked out in original fashion. A book for all who like stories told in a bright, healthful style."—Globe.

A BID for FORTUNE. Third Edition.

"He never allows the interest to drop from first to last. The plot is highly ingenious, and when once it has fairly thickened, exciting to a degree."—Times.

IN STRANGE COMPANY. Fourth Edition.

"A capital novel of its kind—the sensational-adventurous. It has the quality of life and stir, and will carry the reader with curiosity unabated to the end."—World.

The MARRIAGE of ESTHER. Third Edition.

"A story full of action, life, and dramatic interest.....There is a vigour and a power of illusion about it that raises it quite above the level of the ordinary novel of adventure."

Manchester Guardian.

THE

NINETEENTH CENTURY CLASSICS.

Edited by CLEMENT K. SHORTER.

Published at HALF-A-CROWN each Volume.

Crown 8vo. tastefully bound, gilt top, uncut edges, art canvas, full gilt, printed at the Chiswick Press on Whittingham's best antique wove paper, with Photogravure Frontispiece to each Volume, and Introductions by Eminent Writers.

"A series of reprints of literary masterpieces.....These books will educate the eye as well as the intellect, and at a modest price of half-a-crown are within the reach of everybody. Beautiful books they are, and their intrinsic value is increased by bibliographical notes and introductions by experts."—Illustrated London News.

NEW VOLUMES.

BELLS and POMEGRANATES. By Robert

BROWNING. Introduction by THOMAS J. WISE, and Photogravure Portrait of the Author. [Now ready.

PAST and PRESENT. By Thomas Carlyle.

Introduction by FREDERIC HARRISON, and Photogravure Portrait of the Author from the Portrait by Whistler. [Now ready.

BELLS and POMEGRANATES. Second Series.

By ROBERT BROWNING. Contains Photogravure Portrait of the Author from the Original Painting by D. G. Rossetti. [Ready shortly.

CRANFORD. By Mrs. Gaskell. Introduction by

W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, LL.D. Photogravure Portrait of the Author. [Ready shortly.

VOLUMES ALREADY PUBLISHED.

SARTOR RESARTUS. By Thomas Carlyle.

Introduction by EDWARD DOWDEN, LL.D.

ALARIC at ROME, and other Poems. By Matthew

ARNOLD. Introduction by RICHARD GARNETT, C.B. LL.D.

HEROES and HERO WORSHIP. By Thomas

CARLYLE. Introduction by EDMUND GOSSE.

PROMETHEUS BOUND, and other Poems. By

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING. Introduction by ALICE MEYNELL.

London: WARD, LOCK & CO., Limited, Salisbury-square, E.C.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JÓKAI'S POPULAR NOVELS.

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow By MAURUS JÓKAI. With Engraved Portrait of Author. 6s. [Fifth Edition.

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"In its panoramic width of outlook, its inexhaustible fertility of invention and barbaric splendour of colouring, Maurus Jókai's great novel challenges comparison with Tolstoi's 'War and Peace.' There is a succession of brilliant tableaux. To read this remarkable book is like witnessing a magnificent Oriental pageant. It is of enthralling interest and takes rank with the great novels of the century."
Spectator.

BLACK DIAMONDS. By Maurus JÓKAI. 6s. [Third Edition.

"It is so well written, so abounding in all sorts of special knowledge, and displays so much real literary power, that we never feel tempted to leave any of its pages unread. There are some extremely fine descriptive passages in the book.....Maurus Jókai is absolutely original in thought and treatment."—Daily Chronicle.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. By MAURUS JÓKAI. 5s. [Second Edition.

"One of the best of his historical romances. Who can resist reading the book? We can promise that the most rapacious and exacting reader shall not be disappointed."
Black and White.

PRETTY MICHAL. By Maurus JÓKAI. 5s. [Second Edition.

"It is part of the high art of the story that the author has kept the whole atmosphere free from the complexity, the subtle motives of a later and more sophisticated age. Maurus Jókai's novel is a book to be read."—Saturday Review.

NEW "GREENBACK" NOVELS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ALLANSON'S LITTLE WOMAN. By EASTWOOD KIDSON.

"A story which can be enjoyed by every lover of wholesome fiction. The book is well put together and is a welcome relief from the novels of the hysterical school of writers."
Publishers' Circular.

The THIRTEENTH BRYDAIN. By MARGARET MOULE. Author of 'Wingrove's Ways,' 'Dick's Wife,' 'Miss Maidment,' &c.

"The story is attractive in itself, with cleverly constructed plot and naturally as skilfully developed."
Sheffield Daily Telegraph.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C.
At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

SENSATION OF THE SEASON.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

ROSE OF DUTCHER'S COOLLY.

By HAMLIN GARLAND.

THE BOOK OF THE YEAR.

This book, first published in America, has met with marvellous success. It has been hailed as the most noteworthy book of the day, and is selling by thousands. In this country unstinted praise has been accorded it by the press, and the

FIRST EDITION IS NOW NEARLY EXHAUSTED.

The Saturday Review says:—"'Rose of Dutcher's Coolly' follows the development from birth to marriage of a particularly fine and attractive rough diamond—female sex. Born the daughter of a farmer in the middle-west of the States, she has little in common with her companions beyond a splendidly robust physique. All her tastes are instinctively literary as she gets a chance to cultivate them, ending by marrying an actual editor of a leading paper. Some may object to the extreme outspokenness on subjects of sex. There is, perhaps, a little too much of it; but we can see the necessity for it in most instances, and the general tone of the book is by no means objectionable, though subjects are now and then touched upon which even contemporary fiction usually avoids."

Of all Booksellers and Bookstalls.

London: NEVILLE BEEMAN, LTD.,
6, Bell's-buildings, Salisbury-square, E.C.

STANFORD'S NEW MAPS OF LONDON.

Just published.

STANFORD'S MAP OF CENTRAL LONDON.

On the scale of 4 inches to 1 mile.

Extending from Kentish Town on the North to Clapham Common on the South, and from Bethnal Green on the East to Acton on the West, and showing Main Roads, Omnibus and Tramway Routes, Parks and Open Spaces, with the greatest accuracy and detail.

One sheet, 40 by 27 inches.

Prices: In flat sheet, or folded in case, 2s.
Mounted to fold in case, 3s. 6d.
Mounted on rollers and varnished, 7s. 6d.

Recently published.

STANFORD'S NEW MAP OF THE COUNTY OF LONDON.

On the scale of 4 inches to 1 mile.

Twenty sheets, 84 by 57 inches.

Prices: Coloured sheets, 15s. Flat in portfolio, 16s.
Mounted to fold in case in five divisions, 45s.
Mounted on mahogany rollers, 45s.
Mounted on spring roller, 6l.

Separate Sheets can be bought, 18 by 16 inches, price One Shilling each.

Complete List of Maps of London sent post free on application.

London: EDWARD STANFORD,
26 and 27, Cockspur-street, S.W.,
Geographer to the Queen.

THE PUBLICATION OF A SEVENTEENTH CENTURY YORKSHIRE MS.

Will be issued early in May to Subscribers only at

ONE GUINEA NET.

ANALECTA EBORACENSIA;

OR,

SOME REMAYNES OF THE ANCIENT CITY OF YORK.

COLLECTED BY A

CITIZEN OF YORK

[Sir THOMAS WIDDRINGTON, KNT., Barrister of Gray's Inn; Recorder of York; Commissioner for the Great Seal; and Speaker of the House of Commons].

EDITED BY

The Rev. CÆSAR CAINE, F.R.G.S.,
Author of
'The Martial Annals of the City of York.'

MANY ILLUSTRATIONS,
From Old and Unpublished Drawings, MSS., and Modern Photographs.

As 260 copies only have been printed, and the List is nearly full, intending Subscribers should forward their names immediately.

London:
CHAS. J. CLARK, 4, Lincoln's Inn-fields, W.C.
PHILLIMORE & CO.
36, Essex-street, Strand, W.C.

EASTER, 1897.

PASTOR PASTORUM;

OR, THE SCHOOLING OF THE APOSTLES BY OUR LORD.

By the Rev. H. LATHAM,
Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge.

Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

"It is a survey of Christ's work from the special point of view stated in the second title of the book. This survey is so thorough .....that the result is scarcely less than a Life of Christ."—Academy.

"There are not many books of which it can be said that they deserve to be read and read again, but 'Pastor Pastorum' belongs to this select class."
Saturday Review.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

A SERVICE OF ANGELS.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Originality of treatment and freshness of style make Mr. Latham's 'Service of Angels' a delightful book."—Church Quarterly Review.

"Any man to whom the spiritual world is a reality, but who from one cause or another has not entered upon the full enjoyment of his inheritance of belief, will rise from the perusal of Mr. Latham's book with a sincere gratitude towards its author and a lively sense of his own increased spiritual possession."—Saturday Review.

Cambridge: DEIGHTON, BELL & CO.
London: GEORGE BELL & SONS.

THE ATHENÆUM
Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

JOWETT'S LIFE and LETTERS.
The PREACHING of ISLAM.
A CONTEMPORARY ACCOUNT of ELIZABETHAN IRELAND RE-EDITED.
The LIFE and MIRACLES of ST. WILLIAM of NORWICH.
TWO FOREIGN STATESMEN.
NEW NOVELS—Lads' Love; Dinah Fleet; Equal Shares; The Mistress of Brae Farm.
BOOKS of TRAVEL.
SHORT STORIES.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
An UNDESCRIBED EDITION of GRAY'S 'ELEGY'—The RECENTLY DISCOVERED FRAGMENT of ECCLESIASTICUS in HEBREW—The SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON—The REV. WILLIAM FULFORD—HAYDON'S NOTES on KEATS—'UNDER the CIRCUMSTANCES'—TWO PROTHALAMIA.

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Alternating-Current Machinery; The Spring Publishing Season; Societies, Meetings, Gossip
FINE ARTS—Books of Reference, Notes from Athens, Sales, Gossip
MUSIC—The Week; 'Les Troyens à Carthage'; Gossip, Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week; Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY, price THREEPENCE, of John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—Ambiguous Prophecy—Kentish Town and the King's Printer—'Dictionary of National Biography'—Prendergast-Williams—Lancashire Customs—Walpole and his Editors—Canon Driver on Usury—Dr Nansen.

QUERIES:—"Hake"—"Busket"—Names of Drugs—'Journal of Dean Davies'—Firebrace Family Bible—Lieut.-Col. F. F. Staunton—Carrick—"Ace of Hearts"—Game—E. Waller, Poet—Peeling Line—78th Highlanders—"Manus Christi"—Sir M. Featherstonhaugh—Colchester M.P.s—Baron Perryn—College of Wye—First British Steamers—Author Wanted—"John Trot"—G. Lipscomb.

REPLIES:—Latin Prayer Book—'Bishopsrick Garland'—Steel Pens—G. Morland—Source of Quotation—G. Baxter—"Rigmarole"—Wooden Pitchers—Olney—Countess Nelson—Four Misquotations—"Lanthorn"—Letter of Byron—"Cabal"—Jessamy Grooms Green Marriages—"Eye-rhymes"—"Playing the wag"—Graham, Lord Easdale—"Brang"—Shelta—Gillman Family—Eagles Captured at Waterloo—Red, White and Blue—Longest Words—Old Montacute—Purblind—John Andre—Early Steam Navigation—Sutton and Dudley—Ghost-Names—Early Copying Machine—Cagots—"Handicap"—Death of Miss Rosa Bathurst

NOTES on BOOKS—Houston's 'Study of Nullification in South Carolina'—Woolward's 'First Steps in a Pedigree'—Magazines of the Month.

Notices to Correspondents

Price 4d., by post, 4½d.

Published by John C. Francis, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

W. THACKER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

TO BE PUBLISHED WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14.

The NINTH EDITION of KIPLING'S 'DEPARTMENTAL DITTIES.'

Dedicated by Special Permission to FIELD-MARSHAL THE Right Hon. LORD ROBERTS, V.C. G.C.B.

DEPARTMENTAL DITTIES,
And other Verses.

BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

Printed from New Type on Antique Wove Paper.
With 12 Illustrations by DUDLEY CLEAVER.
Crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt top, 6*s*.

Also an ÉDITION DE LUXE (limited to 150 Numbered Copies), WITH EXTRA ILLUSTRATIONS, printed on Hand-Made Deckle Edge Paper, specially Manufactured for this Edition, 21*s*. net.

AND TWELVE COPIES ON JAPANESE VELLUM, 42*s*. NET.

CAPT. HAYES'S VETERINARY NOTES for HORSE OWNERS. Fifth Edition, Revised. With over 200 Illustrations, 15*s*. [Ready.

CAPT. NUNN'S STABLE MANAGEMENT in INDIA and the COLONIES. Second Edition, Enlarged. 3*s*. 6*d*. [Ready April.

THACKER'S INDIAN DIRECTORY for 1897. 36*s*. [Ready April.

THACKER'S DIRECTORY of the CHIEF INDUSTRIES of INDIA for 1897. 6*s*. [Ready April.

MEDICAL HINTS for HOT CLIMATES. By Dr. HEATON. [Ready April.

Prospectus and Catalogues on application.

W. THACKER & CO. 2, Creed-lane, London, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2*s*.; or free by post, 2*s*. 3*d*.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1*s*. 4*d*., or free by post, 1*s*. 6*d*.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

ON TUESDAY NEXT.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.
No. 380. APRIL, 1897. 8vo. price 6*s*.

1. A GREAT HISTORIAN.
2. NOVELS of the ITALIAN RENAISSANCE.
3. The EXODUS of PICTURES from ENGLAND.
4. OLD ETON and MODERN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.
5. The CRISIS in AMERICAN AFFAIRS.
6. JOWETT.
7. The SCULPTURED TOMBS of HELLAS.
8. Un ROYAUME ANGLO-CORSE.
9. PAINTERS BEHIND the SCENES.
10. NATIONAL DEFENCE.

London: Longmans, Green & Co.

PROF. HENRY DRUMMOND.
By the Rev. W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, LL.D.
SEE
THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.
APRIL. Price Half-a-Crown.

WHICH ALSO CONTAINS—

A COMMON CITIZENSHIP for the ENGLISH RACE. By Prof. Dicey.
CRETAN STRUGGLES for LIBERTY. By J. Gennadius.
The CRETAN IMBROGLIO. By Sir M. E. Grant Duff, G.C.S.I.
REFORM the HOUSE of LORDS! By Goldwin Smith.
HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ. By Edmund Gosse.
The LAW of LIBERTY. By Emma Marie Caillard.
AFTER the FAMINE in my GARDEN. By Phil Robinson.
JOANNES SCOTUS ERIGENA. By William Larminie.
The RELIGIOUS ORDERS in the ROMAN COMMUNION. By the Rev. Philip Limerick.
The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE of EUROPE. By W. T. Stead.
MONEY and INVESTMENTS.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
No. 242. APRIL, 1897.

The BOER INDICTMENTS of BRITISH POLICY. By Henry M. Stanley, M.P.
The ETHICS of EMPIRE. By H. F. Wyatt (Hon. Secretary of the "Seeley" Lecturers).
The ENCROACHMENT of WOMEN. By Charles Whibley.
HOW I BECAME POPE. By Pius II. Translated by Alfred N. Macfadyen.
A TURKISH "YOUNG PRETENDER." By Lady Currie.
AGRA in 1857: a Reply to Lord Roberts. By Sir Auckland Colvin, K.C.S.I. K.C.M.G. C.I.E.
MR. HERBERT SPENCER and LORD SALISBURY on EVOLUTION. Concluded. By His Grace the Duke of Argyll.
RONSARD and his VENDOMOIS. By J. J. Jusserand.
1. HOW POOR LADIES LIVE: a Reply. By Miss Eliza Orme.
2. HOW POOR LADIES MIGHT LIVE: an Answer from the Workhouse. By Miss Edith M. Shaw.
GOETHE as a STAGE MANAGER. Walter Shaw Sparrow.
SOME CHANGES in SOCIAL LIFE DURING the QUEEN'S REIGN. By the Right Hon. Sir Algernon West, K.C.B.
MR. LAURIER and MANITOBA. By J. G. Snead Cox (Editor of the Tablet).
"The INTEGRITY of the OTTOMAN EMPIRE" as a DIPLOMATIC FORMULA:—
1. By Sir Wemyss Reid.
2. By the Rev. Dr. Guinness Rogers.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

NEW SERIES. Now ready, No. 22. Price 3*s*. APRIL, 1897.

MIND: a Quarterly Review of Psychology and Philosophy. Edited by G. F. STOUT, with the Co-operation of Professor H. Sidgwick, E. Caird, Dr. Venn, Dr. Ward, and Professor E. B. Titchener.

Contents.

1. Some Problems of Conception. L. T. Hobhouse.
2. Hegel's Treatment of the Categories of the Subjective Notion. I. J. Ellis McTaggart.
3. The Function of Religious Expression. Henry Rutgers Marshall.
4. On the Nature of the Notion of Externality. Howard V. Knox.
5. Discussions:—In what sense, if any, do Past and Future Time exist? B. Bosanquet, S. H. Hodgson, G. E. Moore.
6. Critical Notices:—Herbert Spencer, 'The Principles of Sociology,' Vol. III. W. D. Morrison.—Wm. Caldwell, 'Schopenhauer's System in its Philosophical Significance.' C. A. F. Rhys Davids.—Jul. Bergmann, 'Die Grundprobleme der Logik.' E. E. C. Jones.—Gédéon Gory, 'L'Immanence de la Raison dans la Connaissance Sensible.' S. H. Mellone.
7. New Books.
8. Philosophical Periodicals.
9. Notes:—'Paramnesia,' by H. Ellis. The late Professor Wallace.

Williams & Norgate, 14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh, and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE HONOUR OF SAVELLI.'

A GALAHAD OF THE CREEKS,
And Other Stories.

By S. LEVETT YEATS.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

London: LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo. 6*s*.

WIDE ASUNDER AS THE POLES.
A Novel.

By ARTHUR CRUMP.

"Interesting from first to last.....The characters are well drawn and consistent with themselves."—Academy.

"The characterization is admirable.....Every one will be delighted with the sketches of Swedish manners and scenery by one who has studied them on the spot."—Aberdeen Daily Free Press.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. London, New York, and Bombay.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LIMITED.

SELECTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF SIR LEWIS MORRIS.

WITH LATEST PORTRAIT.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth plain, 4*s*. 6*d*.

Watered silk, gilt edges, 5*s*.

Paternoster House, Charing Cross-road, London.

MR. ARTHUR A. SYKES'S NEW BOOK NOW READY.

WITHOUT PERMISSION: a Book of Dedications. Art canvas, 3*s*. 6*d*. post free; or may be ordered through any Bookseller.

The Roxburghe Press, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY.
By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

MEMORY.
PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.

Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading. Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10*s*. 6*d*. English, post free.

Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.

Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

LIVERPOOL and LONDON and GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Invested Funds £9,067,182

FIRE. LIFE. ENDOWMENTS. ANNUITIES.

Fire Insurances effected on most favourable terms.

LIFE BONUSES LARGE, either in Cash or Additions to Sum Assured.

Policy holders incur no Liability of Partnership, and may so insure as to participate in NINE-TENTHS OF THE PROFITS of their Class.

EQUITABLE RATES. MODERATE EXPENSES.

Head Offices:
1, DALE-STREET, LIVERPOOL; 7, CORNHILL, LONDON.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10*s*. 6*d*., 16*s*. 6*d*., and 25*s*. each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH. HEARTBURN.
HEADACHE, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

A. & C. BLACK'S LIST.

GUIDE-BOOKS.
NEW EDITIONS.

BOURNEMOUTH.
By A. R. HOPE MONCRIEFF.
Price 1*s.*

DORSET.
By A. R. HOPE MONCRIEFF.
Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

HAMPSHIRE.
By A. R. HOPE MONCRIEFF.
Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

NORTH WALES.
By A. R. HOPE MONCRIEFF.
Price 3*s.* 6*d.*

TROSSACHS.
By A. R. HOPE MONCRIEFF.
Price 1*s.*

PARIS.
By R. B. DOUGLAS.
Price 1*s.*

NOW READY.

Price 3s. 6d. net.

WHO'S WHO, 1897.

FORTY-NINTH YEAR OF ISSUE

(Entirely Re-modelled).

Edited by DOUGLAS SLADEN.

CONTENTS IN BRIEF.

PART I. Tables of Peers, Baronets, Knights, Members of Parliament, and many other Tables of a similarly useful nature.

PART II. Nearly 6,000 Biographies—mostly Autobiographies — of the Eminent Men and Women of the day.

PART III. Lords, Ladies, and Honourables.

Complete in One Volume.

In crown 8vo. 832 pp. bound in cloth gilt, with gilt edges and rounded corners.

NEW BOOKS.

HANDBOOK to CHRISTIAN and ECCLESIASTICAL ROME. By H. M. and M. A. R. T. Part I.—The CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.* [Ready immediately.

NAPLES in the NINETIES. By E. Neville Rolfe. With numerous Illustrations. Square crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.* [Now ready.

THROUGH FINLAND in CARTS. By Mrs. Alec Tweedie. Illustrated. [In preparation.

CARLYLE'S SARTOR RESARTUS. Edited, with Notes and Introduction, by JAMES A. S. BARRETT. [Ready immediately.

FADS of an OLD PHYSICIAN. By Dr. George S. Keith. A Companion Volume to 'Plea for a Simpler Life.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 2*s.* 6*d.* [Ready immediately.

FERRETS: their Management in Health and Disease. With Remarks on their Legal Status. By NICHOLAS EVERITT. With numerous Illustrations. Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.* [Now ready.

ZIG-ZAG GUIDE to the KENTISH COAST. By F. C. BURNAND. Illustrated by Phil May. Crown 8vo. limp cloth. [Ready immediately.

NEW NOVELS.

A DOZEN WAYS of LOVE. By L. Dougall, Author of 'Beggars All.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.* [Now ready.

OUT of HER SHROUD. By Henry Ochiltree, Author of 'Redburn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.* [Ready immediately.

A MATTER of TEMPERAMENT. By Caroline FOTHERGILL, Author of 'The Comedy of Cecilia' and 'A Question of Degree.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.* [Now ready.

The JUCKLINS. By Opie Read, Author of 'A Kentucky Colonel.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.* [Now ready.

London: ADAM & CHARLES BLACK, Soho-square.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by John Edward Francis, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C., and Published by John C. Francis at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for Scotland, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, April 10, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3625. SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN,
Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

LECTURE ARRANGEMENTS AFTER EASTER, 1897.

Lecture Hour, 3 o'clock P.M.

TEMPEST ANDERSON, M.D. B.Sc.—FOUR LECTURES on 'Volcanoes.' (The Tyndall Lectures.) On TUESDAYS, April 27, May 4, 11, 18. Half-a-Guinea the Course.

ERNEST HENRY STARLING, M.D.—THREE LECTURES on 'The Heart and its Work.' On TUESDAYS, May 25, June 1, 8 Half-a-Guinea.

The Rev. CANON AINGER, M.A. LL.D.: FOUR LECTURES on 'Some Leaders in the Poetic Revival of 1760–1820: Cowper, Burns, Wordsworth, Scott.' On THURSDAYS, April 29, May 6, 13, 20. Half-a-Guinea.

Prof. DEWAR, M.A. LL.D. F.R.S. M.R.I. THREE LECTURES on 'Liquid Air as an Agent of Research.' On THURSDAYS, May 27, June 3, 10. Half-a-Guinea.

The Rev. J. P. MAHAFFY, D.D., Professor of Ancient History in the University of Dublin. THREE LECTURES on 'The Greek Theatre according to Recent Discoveries.' On SATURDAYS, May 1, 8, 15. Half-a-Guinea.

J. A. FULLER MAITLAND, Esq., M.A. F.S.A. FOUR LECTURES on 'Music in England during the Reign of Queen Victoria' (with Musical Illustrations). On SATURDAYS, May 22, 29, June 5, 12. Half-a-Guinea.

Subscription (to Non-Members) to all Courses of Lectures (extending from Christmas to Midsummer), Two Guineas. Tickets issued daily at the Institution, or sent by post on receipt of Cheque or Post-Office Order.

Members may purchase not less than Three Single Lecture Tickets, available for any Afternoon Lecture, for Half-a-Guinea.

The FRIDAY EVENING MEETINGS will be resumed on April 30, at 9 P.M., when Prof. J. J. THOMSON will give a Discourse on 'Cathode Rays.' Succeeding Discourses will probably be given by "ANTHONY HOPE," Prof. HAROLD DIXON, the Right Hon LORD KELVIN, Prof. H. MOISSAN, Mr. W. H. PREECE, Mr. WILLIAM CROOKES, and other Gentlemen. To these Meetings Members and their Friends only are admitted.

Persons desirous of becoming Members are requested to apply to the Secretary. When proposed they are immediately admitted to all the Lectures, to the Friday Evening Meetings, and to the Library and Reading Rooms; and their Families are admitted to the Lectures at a reduced charge. Payment: First Year, Ten Guineas; afterwards, Five Guineas a Year; or a Composition of Sixty Guineas.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE (1897).

President—The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.

The Conference will be held in LONDON on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of existing libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Organizing Committee will be glad to receive offers of Papers. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to invitations to all functions and entertainments.

J. Y. W. MACALISTER, Honorary General Secretary.

20, Hanover-square, W.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)

Arrangements are made to provide Members with seats to view the QUEEN'S PROCESSION on the line of route at moderate prices.—For terms, &c., apply Secretary's Offices, 60, Haymarket, S.W.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)

The Committee propose (prior to entering on New and Larger Premises) to elect FIVE HUNDRED NEW TOWN MEMBERS and ONE THOUSAND NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS at the Original Subscription of 3*l.* 3*s.* and 1*l.* 1*s.* per annum respectively.

The Subscription for Future Members will then be raised to 5*l.* 5*s.* (Town) and 2*l.* 2*s.* (Country).

For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY,
PALL MALL CLUB OFFICES, 60, HAYMARKET, S.W.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT and PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Patron—The Right Hon. the EARL of ROSEBERY, K.G.
Presidents—The Right Hon LORD GLENESK and Sir W. J. RICHMOND COTTON

The Right Hon the EARL of CREWE will preside at the RECORD REIGN FESTIVAL, in aid of the ROYAL VICTORIA PENSION FUND for the benefit of Widows of Newsvendors, at the HOLBORN RESTAURANT, on WEDNESDAY, April 28, 1897, at 6.30 o'clock. The Right Hon the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE of ENGLAND will attend the Dinner, and the Chairman is promised the support of Arthur D. Acland, Esq.

J. Q. Adams, Esq.
Messrs. Ashley & Smith, Ltd.
Charles Awdry, Esq.
Robert J. Aylward, Esq.
Thomas F. Blackwell, Esq.
Messrs. Blades, East & Blades.
John B. Boyle, Esq.
Sir W. Cuniffe Brooks, Bart.
Charles L. Carson, Esq.
Mess. s. W. H. & L. Collingridge.
J. J. Colman, Esq., M.P.
E. T. Cook, Esq.
John Corlett, Esq.
Sir W. J. Richmond Cotton.
J. Maskall Cottrell, Esq.
Gilbert Dalziel, Esq.
James Dentington, Esq.
Edward Dicey, Esq., C.B.
John Dorrose, Esq.
Arthur Everett, Esq.
T. Mullett Ellis, Esq.
Edgar Fifoot, Esq.
John Fleuret, Esq.
John C. Francis, Esq.
John E. Francis, Esq.
L. Upcott Gill, Esq.
Treasham Gilbey, Esq.
George Golding, Esq.
Arthur G. Gravatt, Esq.
Robert Gravatt, Esq.
Edward Grimwood, Esq.
T. Anstey Guthrie, Esq.
Alfred H. Hance, Esq.
Alfred C. Harmsworth, Esq.
Harold Harmsworth, Esq.
Augustus Helder, Esq., M.P.
C. H. St. John Hornby, Esq.
William Howe, Esq.
Mrs. Humphreys.
Sir John Hutton.
Kennedy Jones, Esq.
W. G. Kingsbury, Esq.
Sir John Leng, M.P.
Frank Lloyd, Esq.
Norman Maccoll, Esq.
W. T. Madge, Esq.
Horace B. Marshall, Esq., M.A. J.P. D.L.
Messrs. Miller & Richard.
Thomas Miles, Esq.
Frederick D. Mocatta, Esq.
W. J. P. Monckton, Esq.
John Morgan, Esq.
T. P. O'Connor, Esq., M.P.
R. I. Pottle, Esq.
Sir T. Wemyss Reid.
J. Compton Rickett, Esq., M.P.
Sir John R. Robinson
Alfred Rothschild, Esq.
Henry Sarson, Esq.
John Shaylor, Esq.
James A. Spender, Esq.
Peter Terry, Esq.
Mr. Alderman W. P. Treloar.
John W. Willans, Esq.
Henry Williams, Esq.
Christopher E. Weldon, Esq.
Charles H. Walter, Esq.
T. Humphry Ward, Esq.
Walter J. Woods, Esq.
C. Dickens Yates, Esq.

W. W. JONES, Secretary.

Memorial Hall Buildings, Farringdon-street, E.C.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION,

10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

A GENTLEMAN, age 26, of good social position, well educated, with literary tastes, good references, and fair knowledge of Shorthand and Type-Writing, who has travelled and had previous experience, desires a post as PRIVATE SECRETARY, or similar position of trust, to a Member of Parliament or other Gentleman.

Address B., 24, Leckford-road, Oxford.

BOOKSELLING, NEW and SECOND-HAND.—Messrs. MAWSON, SWAN & MORGAN, Newcastle-on-Tyne, have a VACANCY for a MANAGER, who must have had a first-class experience and possess a good knowledge of Current and Standard Literature. A keen Buyer and good and gentlemanly Salesman indispensable.—State age, experience, and salary required by letter in the first instance.

WANTED, an efficient LIBRARIAN, age 25 to 35. Thoroughly experienced in the routine work of a large Circulating Library, a quick, neat writer, and good Disciplinarian. Good health essential.—Apply, stating experience and salary required, to Miss LANGLEY, The Lovejoy and Southern Counties Library, Reading.

LIVERPOOL COLLEGE for GIRLS.

The Council are desirous of electing a HEAD MISTRESS. She must be a member of the Church of England. Her remuneration will be 180*l.* per annum, with board, furnished rooms, and attendance, and a Capitation Fee to be arranged hereafter. Duties to commence after the Summer Holidays. Testimonials, not more than six (twelve copies), including three recent ones, stating age, qualifications, and general experience, to be sent on or before May 31 to the REV. GEORGE H. DAWSON, Secretary, Liverpool College, Shaw-street, to whom application may be made for further information.

MERTHYR TYDFIL COUNTY SCHOOL.

MATHEMATICAL MASTER, able to teach Welsh, WANTED EARLY IN MAY. Salary 130*l.*—Application, with one copy of testimonials, to be sent before 28th inst. to CHARLES OWEN, M.A., Head Master.

CITY of LONDON SCHOOL,

Victoria Embankment, E.C.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT MASTER to teach about Thirty Hours per Week in the Modern Third Class and elsewhere. Thorough German (Literary and Colloquial) and Mathematics. A good knowledge of French a recommendation.

The salary will be 250*l.* a year. Candidates for the appointment are requested to forward their applications, accompanied with a copy of testimonials as to qualification and character, not later than Saturday, April 24 next, to the SECRETARY, at the School, Victoria Embankment, E.C. Selected Candidates will be duly communicated with. Forms of application can be obtained of the Secretary. A Gentleman not over 30 years of age will be required.

CITY of BIRMINGHAM MUNICIPAL TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

The Corporation of Birmingham require the services in SEPTEMBER NEXT of a HEAD MASTER for the NEW TECHNICAL DAY SCHOOL. Salary 300*l.* per annum.—Full particulars of the post will be forwarded on receipt of a stamped addressed foolscap envelope. Personal canvassing of members of the Committee by applicants or their friends will be a disqualification.

GEO. MELLOR, Secretary.

Offices of the School, Suffolk-street, April 12, 1897.

ST. DAVID'S COLLEGE, LAMPETER.

The Council invite applications for the Office of PRINCIPAL, about to be vacated. The Principal is required by the Charter of Incorporation to be an M.A. of either Oxford or Cambridge, and in Holy Orders. Salary 800*l.* a year, together with a share of Tuition Fees and a House rent free.—Further particulars may be obtained from the Clerk to the College Council, to whom applications, with thirty printed copies of testimonials, should be sent on or before May 15, 1897.

WILLIAM DAVIES, Clerk to the Council.

St. David's College, Lampeter.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION

will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, OXFORD.

An OPEN THEOLOGICAL SCHOLARSHIP, of the annual value of 75*l.* (tenable for one, two, or three years), is offered by the Dr. Daniel Jones's Trustees for competition.

For particulars apply to the SECRETARY, 1, St. James's-square, Manchester.

GROCERS' COMPANY.—MEDICAL RESEARCH SCHOLARSHIPS.

—These Scholarships, Three in number, each of the value of 250*l.*, and open only to British Subjects, have been instituted by the Company as an encouragement to the making of exact researches into the Causes and Prevention of important Diseases. The Company appoint annually. At the next Election Two of the present Scholars, should they renew their applications, will be entitled to a preference.

Applications may be made at any time before the end of April by letter addressed to THE CLERK OF THE COMPANY, Grocers' Hall, Princes-street, E.C. from whom particulars may be obtained.

April 7, 1897.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON (for WOMEN),

York-place, Baker-street, W.

Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.

The EASTER TERM, 1897, BEGINS on THURSDAY, April 29. Special Classes for Students who matriculated in January.

Dr. DRYSDALE will begin a Course on BACTERIOLOGY.

Two Entrance Scholarships will be offered for competition in June.

LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.

—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

UNIVERSITY of LONDON.—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the next Half-yearly Examination for MATRICULATION in this University will commence on MONDAY, the 14th of June, 1897. In addition to the Examination at the University, Provincial Examinations will be held at University College, Aberystwith; University College, Bangor; The Modern School, Bedford; Mason College, Birmingham; University College, Bristol; Cavendish College, Cambridge (for Ladies only); Dumfries College (for University College), Cardiff; The Ladies' College, Cheltenham (for Ladies only); The Heriot-Watt College, Edinburgh; The Royal Medical College, Epsom; The Yorkshire College, Leeds; St. Edward's College, Liverpool; University College, Liverpool; The Owens College, Manchester; Rutherford College, Newcastle-on-Tyne; University College, Nottingham; The Athenæum, Plymouth; Firth College, Sheffield; Hartley Institution, Southampton.

Every Candidate is required to apply to the Registrar (University of London, Burlington-gardens, London, W.) for a Form of Entry not less than five weeks before the commencement of the Examination.

F. VICTOR DICKINS, M.B. B.Sc., Registrar.

April 10, 1897.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on MAY 3. The work is arranged so that a Student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then.

Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned.

A. E. BARKER, F.R.C.S., Dean of the Faculty.
J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL and COLLEGE.

The SUMMER SESSION will BEGIN on MAY 1, 1897.

Students can reside in the College within the Hospital walls, subject to the collegiate regulations.

The Hospital contains a service of 750 beds. Scholarships and Prizes of the aggregate value of nearly 900*l.* are awarded annually.

The Medical School contains large Lecture-Rooms and well-appointed Laboratories for practical teaching, as well as Dissecting-Rooms, Museum, Library, &c.

A large recreation-ground has recently been purchased.

For further particulars apply, personally or by letter, to the WARDEN OF THE COLLEGE, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, E.C.

A Handbook forwarded on application.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL,

Albert Embankment, S.E.

The SUMMER SESSION will COMMENCE on MONDAY, May 3. Students entering in the Summer are eligible to compete for the Science Scholarships of 150*l.* and 60*l.* awarded in October.

A SCHOLARSHIP of 50*l.*, open to University Students, and other Prizes and Scholarships of the value of 500*l.*, are offered for annual competition.

All Appointments are open to Students without extra payment.

SPECIAL CLASSES for the Examinations of the University of London are held throughout the year.

TUTORIAL CLASSES are held prior to the Second and Final Examinations of the Conjoint Board in January, April, and July.

A REGISTER of approved Lodgings, and of private families receiving Boarders, is kept in Secretary's Office.

EXCELLENT DAY CLUB accommodation is provided in the School building.

Prospectuses and all particulars may be obtained from the Medical Secretary, Mr. G. RENDLE

H. P. HAWKINS, M.A. M.D. (Oxon.), Dean.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.

—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE

can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BREVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION

OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

MR. EDWARD WHYMPER will accept engagements to LECTURE on MOUNTAINEERING and MOUNTAIN TRAVEL during the Season 1897–8.

—For full particulars apply to THE LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, London.

SPECULATIVE INVESTMENT.—WANTED, a

Lady or Gentleman to become the PROPRIETOR of a SERIAL PUBLICATION of an original and unique character. Greatest risk involved. 1,000*l.* Possible profits, 1,200*l.* to 1,300*l.* per annum. None treated with except Principals or their Solicitors.—Write to Q. V. P., Willing's Advertisement Offices, 162, Piccadilly, W.

TYPE-WRITING, MANUSCRIPTS, PLAYS, &c.,

COPIED. Terms 1*d.* per folio (72 words); or 5,000 words and over, 10*d.* per thousand, in two colours, 1*s.*, paper included.—Miss NIGHTINGALL, Springfield, Walkern-road, Stevenage.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all

Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses R. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary Miss FETHERSTONHAUGH Natural Science Tripos sends out Ladies trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries expert Stenographers and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations. French, German, and Medical Typewriting.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU 9 Strand London Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10d. per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6080. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

TO AUTHORS.—Messrs. DIGBY, LONG & CO. (Publishers of 'The Author's Manual,' 3s. 6d. net, Eighth Edition) INVITE AUTHORS to FORWARD their MSS. (Fiction, Travel, Poetry, &c.) for prompt consideration.—Address 18, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS
NOW OFFERED AT
GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST
(100 PAGES)
Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,
30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;
241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;
48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at
BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

WILL BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

THE NORWICH SCHOOL OF PAINTING.

A Series of Autotype Reproductions of Works by John Sell Cotman, Old Crome, Stark, Ladbrooke, Bright, Middleton, Daniell, Leman, Lound, &c. Forty Autotype Plates, mounted on grey boards, in Portfolio. Price Ten Guineas, net.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.

This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.

An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

Catalogues.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free Sixpence. WM. WARE, 2 Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS.
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.
Fine Library Sets—Works Illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors, old and modern—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.
CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3*d.* post free.
MAGGS BROS.,
109, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

Now ready.
CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS.
DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 85) OF CHOICE BOOKS AND MANUSCRIPTS,
Including a Remarkable Collection of RARE BOOKS on MUSIC, now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

ALL OUT-OF-PRINT BOOKS speedily procured. Acknowledged the most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants to BAKER'S Great Bookshop, Birmingham.—Books Bought, Lent, or Exchanged.

THE TRUTH ABOUT STAMMERING.—Any one interested will receive the latest information, and important Books on the CURE, on loan, post free, without charge, from ISTUERIEL, Messrs. Deacon's, 154, Leadenhall-street, E.C.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c., ON SALE by FRANK T. SABIN, 118, Shaftesbury avenue, W.

BRASS RUBBINGS, Military, Civil, Ecclesiastic. Upwards of 250. 5*l.* Approval.—EVERETT, 17, Royal Exchange, London.

FIFTY-FIVE VOLS. TIMES, half bound, January, 1859, to November, 1886, 27½ years.—H. DUNNING, 10, Emerald-street, Theobald's-road, W.C.

FOR SALE, CHAUCER'S WORKS, Kelmscott Edition. 27*l.*—Write X. Y. Z., Box 738, Willing's Advertisement Offices, 125, Strand, W.C.

FINE ARTS.—TO CONNOISSEURS ONLY.
PART of an ESTATE of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, under directions of co-Executors, TO BE SOLD PRIVATELY, in whole or in part. It is a small Collection by Ancient and Modern Masters of distinction.
Solicitor, HAROLD F. P. ROBERTS, Esq., 7, Gray's Inn-place, Gray's Inn, Holborn, W.C.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

R. L. STEVENSON.—SKERRYVORE, BOURNEMOUTH.—Bijou Residence, which was for many years the property and favourite home of Robert Louis Stevenson, TO BE SOLD PRIVATELY. Well-wooded grounds, Stabling, &c.—Full particulars from the Owner, H. LEWIS, Skerryvore, Bournemouth.

Sales by Auction.

FRIDAY NEXT.

Photographic and Scientific Apparatus and Miscellaneous Property from various Private Sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38 King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, April 23, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.
On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

Important to Licensed Victuallers and all Trades doing a large Cash Business.—A London Manufacturer's Stock of 40 perfectly New and Unique Type Registering Cash Tills, with system of 24 Revolving Advertisements, providing a source of income, handsomely fitted up in Polished Walnut Cases.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will include the above in his SALE by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38 King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, April 23, without the least reserve.
On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

TUESDAY, April 27.

Valuable Collections of Exotic and European Lepidoptera, Coleoptera, Orthoptera, and other orders of Insects, especially rich in fine and rare Species, made by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., of Condover Hall, Shrewsbury, together with the Cabinets in which they are contained.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION at his Great Rooms, 38 King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY, April 27, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.
On view the day prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

A Portion of the Valuable Library of Manuscripts and Printed Books, the Property of the late Professor MIDDLETON, Litt.D. D.C.L. V.P.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 26, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS of the late Professor MIDDLETON, Litt.D. (Camb.), D.C.L. (Oxon), V.P.S.A., formerly Slade Professor in Cambridge and Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum, late Director of the South Kensington Art Museum, comprising some fine Illuminated Manuscripts on Vellum, including Two Latin Bibles by Anglo-Norman Scribes of the Thirteenth Century, and One of the Fifteenth—Horæ and Offices, MS. and Printed—Breviaria—Missalia—Queen Mary Sarum Missal, 1555—Early Printed Books with Woodcuts—fine Works on Art, Archæology, and Architecture—Arundel Society's Publications; also an interesting Series of Letters of Thomas Carlyle—Picture Galleries—a Collection of Sixty Rare Pamphlets relating to George Washington, 1783-1808.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of the Engraved Works of William Woollett, the Property of the late Dr. G. J. VINE.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 28, at 1 o'clock precisely, the well-known COLLECTION of the ENGRAVED WORKS of WILLIAM WOOLLETT, the Property of Dr. G. J. VINE (late of 3, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden); also Engravings after J. M. W. Turner, J. Constable, and others, including a Portion of the Collection of the late David Cox, the celebrated Artist.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Books and Manuscripts, including a Portion of the Library of the late Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 29, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a Selection from the Library of the late Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS, and various other Properties, including Thackeray's Second Funeral of Napoleon—Valuable Topographical Works by Hutchins and Clutterbuck—Sporting Books and several important Early Publications relating to America—Byron's Hours of Idleness, First Edition—Autograph Letters of Cowper, Wordsworth, and others—Books of Emblems—First Editions of American Authors—Charles Lamb's Beauty and the Beast—The Paradise of Dainty Devices—Rare Tracts and Manuscripts—the Original Proof-Sheets of De Quincey's Leaders in Literature, with Notes and Corrections in De Quincey's Handwriting.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Book-Plates, the Property of a well-known Collector.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES (EX-LIBRIS), including Specimens of the Jacobean, Chippendale, Wreath and Ribbon, and other styles; also a few Books relating to Heraldry and Book-Plates, comprising a Complete Set of the Ex-Libris Journal, the Property of a well-known COLLECTOR.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.
The Valuable and Extensive Collection of Medals commemorative of British History.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 24, and Five Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very valuable and extensive COLLECTION of MEDALS commemorative of British History, the Property of the late HYMAN MONTAGU, Esq., F.S.A., Vice-President of the Numismatic Society.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues, illustrated with Nine Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3*s.* each.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On FRIDAY, April 23, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS of the late J. ROBSON, Esq., THOMAS CHAMBERS, Esq., W. E. BISCOE, Esq., and re Morgan Settled Estates.

On SATURDAY, April 24, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, the Property of the late A. J. W. BIDDULPH, Esq.

On MONDAY, April 26, the REMAINING WORKS of E. K. JOHNSON, R.W.S., deceased.

On MONDAY, April 26, OBJECTS of ART, DECORATIVE FURNITURE, and TAPESTRY.

On TUESDAY, April 27th, COLLECTION of OLD CHINESE PORCELAIN, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; and Two other small COLLECTIONS of ORIENTAL OBJECTS.

On TUESDAY, April 27, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS after LANDSEER of the late Sir GEORGE JOHNSON, and the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS of the late GEORGE JAMES, Esq.

On WEDNESDAY, April 28, SILVER, JEWELLERY, LACE, PORCELAIN, ARMS, &c., of the late Mrs. ANNA GALLENGA.

On THURSDAY, April 29, the COLLECTION of MEZZOTINTS after Sir J. REYNOLDS of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A., and the REMAINING WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A.

On FRIDAY, April 30, CHOICE WINES, the Property of the MARQUIS of WORCESTER; and other fine Wines from Private Cellars.

On SATURDAY, May 1, the WORKS and COLLECTION of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A., the WORKS and COLLECTION of the late Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A., and a few High-Class Modern Pictures from different sources.

On MONDAY, May 3, the WORKS of the late J. F. LEWIS, R.A.

On TUESDAY, May 4, and Following Days, the valuable LIBRARY formed by FREDERIC, THIRD EARL of BESSBOROUGH, the Property of the Hon. ASHLEY PONSONBY.

On WEDNESDAY, May 5, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, the Property of the late Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A.

On SATURDAY, May 8, important EARLY ENGLISH PICTURES from MULGRAVE CASTLE and other famous Collections.

On SATURDAY, May 22, Fifty important ENGLISH and FOREIGN PICTURES, the Property of BENJAMIN ARMITAGE, Esq., of Manchester; and the important COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of F. W. ARMITAGE, Esq., of Melbourne.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 400 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues will be ready shortly, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

THURSDAY and FRIDAY, April 29 and 30.

PRIVATE AUCTION WITH CLOSED DOORS. Twenty Seats only at 5*l.* 5*s.* each. All seats must be booked and paid for before view.

HERALDRY: Early English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, Canadian, American, British Colonial, French, German, Italian, Prussian, Danish, Portuguese, Spanish, Russian, Dutch, Anglo-Indian, and other Countries—Orders of European Knighthood, and special Garter Portraits, Chapter Records, and Arms—fine Impressions of Arms from Copper and Wood—old Book-Plates—rare old Portraits, with arms—special Arms of Celebrated Persons, Officials, Cities, Towns, Families, Cardinals, Popes, Kings, Emperors, Queens—Royal Victorian Heraldry and Portraits—very fine First Impressions of John Speed's County Maps, with arms and plans, A.D. 1610, singly—rare original official historic London Gazettes and Gazettes Extraordinary of the Reigns of Charles II., James II., William III., Queen Anne, George II., and George III.—and scarce Literary Items of the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Centuries.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL by AUCTION, at his Literary and Art Sale-Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., at 1 o'clock each day.

On view Wednesday, April 28.

PARIS.—COLLECTION of the late BARON JEROME PICHON.—Pieces of Antiquity of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, Silver Dishes (the Feltre Treasury), Rings, Jewels, Seals, Artistic Medals since the Renaissance, Royal Coins of France, Tokens from the Middle Ages to the Eighteenth Century. SALE at the HOTEL DROUOT, Room No. 7, from SATURDAY, April 24, to SATURDAY, May 1, at 2 P.M.—Auctioneer, M. PAUL CHEVALLIER, 10, Rue Grange Batélière; Experts, MM. ROLLIN and FEUARDENT, 4, Rue de Louvois. On view Saturday, April 24.

PARIS.—The E. BONNAFFÉ COLLECTION.—OBJECTS of ART and RARE CURIOS of the Renaissance Period—Jewellery—Gold and Silver Work—Faience—Painted Enamels—Paintings—Clocks—Bronzes—Plaquettes—Copperwork—Wrought Ironwork—Sculptures—Carved Wood—Wainscoting—Furniture Slats—Stuffs—Tapestry. SALE at the HOTEL DROUOT, Room No. 6, from MONDAY, May 3, to THURSDAY, May 6, at 2 P.M. Auctioneer, M. PAUL CHEVALLIER, 10, Rue Grange Batélière. Experts, MM. MANNHEIM & SON, 7, Rue St. Georges.

On view May 1 and 2, from 1.30 to 5.30 P.M.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.
No. 380.—APRIL, 1897.—8vo. price 6*s.*

1. A GREAT HISTORIAN.
2. NOVELS of the ITALIAN RENAISSANCE.
3. The EXODUS of PICTURES from ENGLAND.
4. OLD ETON and MODERN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.
5. The CRISIS in AMERICAN AFFAIRS.
6. JOWETT.
7. The SCULPTURED TOMBS of HELLAS.
8. UN ROYAUME ANGLO-CORSE.
9. PAINTERS BEHIND the SCENES.
10. NATIONAL DEFENCE.

London: Longmans, Green & Co.

THE ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW.
No. 46, APRIL. Royal 8vo. price 5*s.*
Edited by S. R. GARDINER, D.C.L. LL.D., and REGINALD L. POOLE, M.A. Ph.D.

1. Articles.
FUSTEL de COULANGES as an HISTORIAN. By Edward Jenks.
The AUTHORSHIP of the 'BOOK of HUSBANDRY' and the 'BOOK of SURVEYING.' By the Rev. Reginald H. C. Fitzherbert
NEW LIGHTS on the DIVORCE of HENRY VIII. Part III. By James Gairdner.
JAMES MACPHERSON and the NAIRNE PAPERS. By Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Arthur Parnell, R.E.
2. Notes and Documents.—Domesday and some Thirteenth-Century Surveys. By F. Baring.—Two Letters addressed to William Rufus. By J. P. Gilson.—The Earliest Fines. By J. H. Round.—Bull of Paul IV. concerning the Bishopric of Bristol. By the late Rev. Nicholas Pocock.—Assessment of Wages for 1630. By W. A. J. Archbold.—William Hedges in Turkey. By Lewis L. Kropf.
3. Reviews of Books. 4. Correspondence. 5. Notices of Periodicals. 6. List of Recent Historical Publications.

Longmans, Green & Co. London, New York, and Bombay.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL.
Contents. APRIL. 2*s.*

The First Crossing of Spitzbergen. By Sir W. Martin Conway.
Two Years' Travel in Uganda, Unyoro, and on the Upper Nile. By C. F. S. Vandeleur, D.S.O., Lieutenant, Scots Guards.
The Southern Borderlands of Afghanistan. By Captain A. H. McMahon, C.I.E.
The Perso-Baluch Boundary. By Colonel T. H. Holditch, R.E. C.B.
The River Oder.
The Teaching of Geography in Relation to History. By A. W. Andrews.
The Monthly Record.
Obituary. Sir Thomas Elder, G.C.M.G.—Correspondence on the Formation of Sand-dunes, by G. F. Goldsmid.—Meetings of the R.G.S.—Geographical Literature of the Month.—New Maps.—Numerous Maps and Illustrations.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, S.W.

JOURNAL of the INSTITUTE of ACTUARIES.
No. CLXXXV. APRIL, 1897. Price 2*s.* 6*d.*
Contents.

Mr Arthur Rhys Barrand on Some Legal Points arising in Life Assurance Practice—with Discussion
Mortality in the Liquor Trade.
Mr George King on the Rate of Mortality amongst the Female Nominees of the General Annuity Trust Fund, during the period from January 1, 1869, to December 31, 1895.
Review.
Correspondence.
International Congress of Actuaries, 1898.

London: C. & E. Layton, Farringdon-street.

THE GOVERNMENT OFFICES QUESTION; Report on the Electrical Fatality at Hampstead, Illustration of the New Theatre, Deptford, Lordington Manor House, In Committee on Supply, &c.

See the BUILDER of April 17, post free, 4½*d.*
Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

NOW READY.

HANDBOOK
TO
CHRISTIAN AND ECCLESIASTICAL ROME.

BY

H. M. and M. A. R. T.

PART I. THE CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS OF ROME.

This Handbook gives full information on the Catacombs and Basilicas, and so meets a need felt by English and American travellers. No such guide to Christian Rome has hitherto been obtainable.

It is in a portable form, and illustrated with 23 Cuts and Plans.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

NAPLES IN THE NINETIES.

A SEQUEL TO NAPLES IN 1888.

BY

E. NEVILLE ROLFE,
H.B.M. Consul at Naples.

With 10 Full-Page Illustrations and others in the Text.

Square crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

THE REMAINS
OF ANCIENT ROME.

BY THE LATE

J. HENRY MIDDLETON.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. cloth, 888 pages, containing 102 Illustrations and 4 Coloured Plans, price 25*s.*

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

SEVENTEENTH EDITION NOW READY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36*s*.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes are embellished with Portraits on Steel and Copper of Sir JAMES OUTRAM, General NICHOLSON, Sir HENRY LAWRENCE, Sir ABRAHAM ROBERTS, Sir COLIN CAMPBELL, Sir WILLIAM MANSFIELD, LORD NAPIER of MAGDALA, Sir DONALD STEWART, Sir SAMUEL BROWNE, the AMIR of AFGHANISTAN, Sir ARTHUR HARDINGE, and Field-Marshal LORD ROBERTS.

"A vivid and simple narrative of things actually seen by a fighting man who, during forty-one years of Indian service, saw more hard fighting than almost any other Englishman of our time. It also records the experience of a military administrator who has conducted historical campaigns, and been the presiding genius in the reorganization of a great army. But to the general reader, perhaps, its chief charm will be glimpes which it gives, with a certain Cervantes-like naïveté, of the personality of the author. A hundred unconscious touches, in the camp, on the battlefield, and at the Council table, reveal to us the veritable hero of the British private, and the fearless leader of men whom every native soldier would follow to the death."—Times.

SOME STANDARD HISTORICAL WORKS.

The NAVAL HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN. From the Declaration of War by France, in 1793, to the Accession of George IV. By WILLIAM JAMES. In 6 vols. crown 8vo. 42*s*.

The HISTORY of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. By ADOLPHE THIERS. Translated by FREDERICK SHOBERL. With 50 Engravings. 5 vols. demy 8vo. 45*s*.

The COURT and REIGN of FRANCIS the FIRST. By JULIA PARDOE. 3 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel, and a Brief Memoir of the Author, 42*s*.

The LIFE of MARIE de MEDICIS. By JULIA PARDOE. 3 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Facsimiles, 42*s*.

LOUIS the FOURTEENTH and the COURT of FRANCE in the SEVENTEENTH CENTURY. By JULIA PARDOE. 3 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel, 42*s*.

A HISTORY of ENGLISH DRESS. By GEORGIANA HILL. 2 vols. demy 8vo. with 14 Illustrations on Steel, 30*s*.

The HISTORY of MUSIC. A New Edition. By J. F. ROWBOTHAM. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

TWO NEW NOVELS

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

READY THIS DAY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD,

Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

THE NEW ISSUE OF THE

NOVELS OF MRS. HENRY WOOD.

THE TWENTY-EIGHTH VOLUME,

A S H L E Y

(Fifteenth Thousand),

IS NOW READY.

In red cloth, gold lettered on side, similar to the 3*s*. 6*d*. Edition, 2*s*. 6*d*.

In green cloth, gold lettered on back, but with a plainer binding, 2*s*.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7*s*. 6*d*.

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches.

By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION. PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now ready at all Booksellers'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s*.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS.

By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

COUSIN JEM. By L. Higgin, Author of 'A Cornish Maid,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' 'Mistress Beatrice Cope,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"It is in the background and details, in the incidental sketches of character, in the freshness of the atmosphere, that the chief charm of this story lies."—Globe.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"The story depends more on its all-round literary merit than upon variety of incident, though in this regard it is by no means poor; it is sure to be read with warm appreciation by discreet lovers of good fiction."—Scotsman.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"'All in All' is melodramatic, but not without interest and attraction."—Athenæum.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s*.

"An excellent story of a well-imagined mystery, skilfully expounded and wrought out.....Has many light and pleasant passages and is readable throughout."—Globe.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.
"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

GENTLEMAN GEORGE: a Story without a Heroine. By Mrs. HERBERT MARTIN, Author of 'Britomart,' 'Her Début,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

A NEW CYCLING MAP.

MESSRS. GEORGE PHILIP & SON beg to bring under the special notice of the Public their NEW MAP of ENGLAND and WALES, in 40 Sheets (size 17 by 21 in. each), which is the most detailed large-scale General Map issued by private enterprise since CARY published his half-inch Map at the beginning of the Century.

Although having for its original basis the New one-inch Ordnance Survey, PHILIPS' TOPOGRAPHICAL MAP is in no sense a mere copy or slavish reproduction, but, under the experienced direction of Mr. E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S., an enormous amount of additional information has been gathered from the Admiralty Charts and other Official Sources, whilst the Spelling and relative sizes of names have been based on the latest Census reports. In order to make this Cycling Edition as complete and perfect as possible, the delineation of the various main and cross roads has received special attention, and in addition to being carefully revised by the County Surveyors, all new information and the routes described in the valuable Road Books published by the C.T.C. have been made use of, with the result that for the first time a really new and trustworthy Road Map of England and Wales at an extremely moderate price is placed within the reach of the ever-increasing army of Cyclists.

The following Sheets and Districts will be published this Month, to be followed by others at short intervals :—

18. PETERBOROUGH and BOSTON.
19. NORWICH.
24. CAMBRIDGE.
25. IPSWICH.
29. OXFORD and READING.
30. LONDON.
31. RAMSGATE and MARGATE.
35. SOUTHAMPTON.
36. BRIGHTON.
37. DOVER and HASTINGS.

The Sheets will be issued in two forms—

1. On paper, folded in cloth case, 1*s*. each.
2. On waterproof cloth, in limp cover, 2*s*. each.

Detailed Prospectus and Index on application.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Capt. Mahan's Life of Nelson	497
Reports of State Trials	498
The Epic of the Fall of Man	499
History of Rome in the Middle Ages	500
A German History of England in the Eighteenth Century	501
New Novels (Guavas the Tinner; Christine of the Hills; The Career of Claudia; St. Eva; Beyond the Pale; Sworn Allies; An Australian Duchess; From Grub to Butterfly; The Sound of a Voice) ...	503—504
Chinese Stories	504
Biblical and Patristic Literature	505
Catalogues of Manuscripts	505
Translations from the Greek Poets	506
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	507—508
Ubaldino and the Armada; The 'Dictionary of National Biography'; The Spring Publishing Season; Chaucer and King René of Anjou; Sale; Two Prothalamia	508—510
Literary Gossip	510
Science — Red Deer; Anthropological Notes; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	511—514
Fine Arts—The Ruined Cities of Ceylon; Library Table; Sir E. Burne-Jones at the New Gallery; Vitruviana; Pompey's Pillar at Alexandria; Sales; Gossip	514—517
Music—The Week; Recent Publications; Gossip; Performances Next Week	517—518
Drama—John Gabriel Borkman; Library Table; The Week; Gossip	519—520

LITERATURE

The Life of Nelson, the Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain. By Capt. A. T. Mahan. 2 vols. (Sampson Low & Co.)

It is quite possible that some readers may object to the size of this work; may say that it would have been easy to tell the story of Nelson's life clearly and fully in one volume, more especially as the correspondence is almost entirely omitted. As a broad principle, such an opinion deserves a good deal of sympathy; it may be laid down as a general rule that a biography in one volume is better than a biography in two, which is always apt to wander from the right track and become a chronicle or an inchoate mass of correspondence. In the present case, however, we must hold that Capt. Mahan has justified his scheme by the result now before us, which is neither history nor correspondence, but a carefully planned, skilfully executed, and withal elaborate portraiture of the life and character of the greatest of our naval heroes, aptly described as "the embodiment of the sea power of Great Britain."

In his first conception of the work the author must have found himself face to face with a very grave difficulty. In his now standard volumes on 'The Influence of Sea Power upon the French Revolution and Empire' he had already told and commented on so much of Nelson's public services that little remained. This difficulty Capt. Mahan has met and overcome with tact and judgment. In his former work he treated of the great battles as incidents in the campaigns, and gauged their results by their effects on the course of the war. Now he deals with them rather as incidents in the career of Nelson, and with painstaking ability traces their connexion with the development of Nelson's character, passing lightly over the strategical questions involved, except when they, too, were controlled by Nelson. In the 'French Revolution' the battle of Cape St. Vincent, for instance, is considered in its bearing on the struggle for sea power, on the withdrawal of the English fleet from the Mediterranean, and on the necessities of England at the time. Jervis, as the commander-in-chief, is rightly the prominent figure in the story, and the very remarkable exploits of Nelson, though described and justly appreciated, are passed over as brilliant incidents. Now, on the contrary, it is Nelson who fills the foreground of the picture; it is Nelson's action that we are specially called on to witness; and after describing how, wearing out of the line, Nelson threw his ship, singly, in the way of the whole Spanish fleet, Capt. Mahan goes on:—

"By this spontaneous and sudden act, for which he had no authority, by signal or otherwise, except his own judgment and quick perceptions, Nelson entirely defeated the Spanish movement. Devoting his own ship to a most unequal contest, he gained time for the approaching British van to come up and carry on the work they had already begun when first passing these ships—before the moment of tacking.....To quote Jervis's words concerning this incident, 'Commodore Nelson, who was in the rear on the starboard tack, took the lead on the larboard, and contributed very much to the fortune of the day.' On the intellectual side, the side of skill, this is what he did; on the side of valour, it is to be said that he did it for the moment single handed. The Culloden, the actual leader, came up shortly, followed afterwards by the Blenheim; and the Excellent was ordered by Jervis to imitate Nelson's movement, and strengthen the operation which he had initiated. It was the concentration of these ships at the point which Nelson seized, and for a moment held alone, that decided the day; and it was there that the fruits of victory were chiefly reaped."

And again, after describing the capture of the San Nicolas and the San Josef, he continues:—

"The dramatic and picturesque surroundings which coloured the seizure of these two Spanish ships have doubtless given an exaggerated idea of the danger and difficulty attending the exploit.....Yet it may better be looked upon as another of those 'fortunate' occurrences which attend — and in Nelson's career repeatedly attended — the happy meeting of opportunity and readiness. Doubtless they were beaten ships, but other beaten ships have escaped in general actions—did at St. Vincent.....[Nelson] was there, he could do nothing else, he saw with his rapid glance that he might do this, and he did it. And after all, it was a big thing—this boarding a first-rate ship over the decks of another hostile ship, not inaptly characterized in the fleet as 'Nelson's patent bridge.' We must mark, too, or we shall miss significant indications of character, that the same qualities which led him to the quarterdeck of the San Josef had led him but an hour before from the rear of the fleet to the van to save the fight—the same quickness to see opportunity, the same promptness to seize it, the same audacity to control it. The brilliant crowning of the day may be but an ornament, but it sits well and fitly upon the knightly deed that rolled back the tide of battle in the hour of need."

The author then goes on to discuss the Parker incident, and it may be noted, as indicating his scrupulous justice and his freedom from the "Lues Boswelliana," that he does not hesitate to condemn Nelson's conduct in it as "ungenerous," for which the only and not quite satisfactory excuse is that he had just lost his arm at Teneriffe, and "was then suffering, not only from pain and weakness, but also from discouragement about his professional future, which he thought threatened by disability" — both as being now "a left-handed admiral," and as having failed in his first independent command. He went home sick and wretched, but rejoined the fleet a few months later cheerful and expectant. As Capt. Mahan points out, it is the dividing line of his career:—

"Before leaving England he is a man of distinction only; prominent, possibly, among the many distinguished men of his own profession, but the steady upward course has as yet been gradual, the shining of the light, if it has latterly shot forth flashes suggestive of hidden fires, is still characterized by sustained growth in intensity rather than by rapid increase. No present sign so far foretells the sudden ascent to fame, the burst of meridian splendour with which the sun of his renown was soon to rise upon men's eyes, and in which it ran its course to the cloudless finish of his day. Not that there is in that course—in its achievements—any disproportion with the previous promise. The magnitude of the development we are about to witness is due, not to a change in him, but to the increased greatness of the opportunities. A man of like record in the past.....might have failed to fill the new sphere which the future was to present. Nelson proved fully equal to it, because he possessed genius for war, intellectual faculties, which, though not unsuspected, had not hitherto been allowed scope for their full exercise.....For success in war, the indispensable complement of intellectual grasp and insight is a moral power, which enables a man to trust the inner light, a power which dominates hesitation, and sustains action, in the most tremendous emergencies, and which, from the formidable character of the difficulties it is called to confront, is in no men so conspicuously prominent as in those who are entitled to rank among great captains. The two elements—mental and moral power—are often found separately, rarely in due combination. In Nelson they met, and their coincidence with the exceptional opportunities afforded him constituted his good fortune and his greatness."

This, as it appears to us, is a singularly happy estimate of the character and genius of the man. It was not merely the restless, intellectual energy arraying all possibilities beforehand; not merely the exceptional genius ready to flash forth when opportunity occurred; not merely the quick perception which showed the opportunity, nor the moral power which at once, unhesitatingly grasped it; but it was the rare union of all these that formed a Nelson. Capt. Mahan points out many incidents which illustrate this difference between Nelson and the best of his contemporaries—men who when they once saw where the possibility lay could do with ability, skill, and courage, and make their ships do, whatever had to be done. He contrasts, for instance, Nelson's conduct at St. Vincent with Troubridge's delay to land at Teneriffe till he had consulted the admiral, thus giving the Spaniards three hours or more for the strengthening of their defences, and rendering the proposed attack impossible. He dwells on Nelson's repeated assertions, after the battle of the Nile, that "if it had pleased God that I had not been wounded, not a boat would have escaped to have told the tale," and says:—

"Whether the result would or would not have equalled his belief, the traces are clear that what was wanted during the remainder of that eventful night [after the Orient blew up] was just that concord of action which the head imparts to the members. Messages went from ship to ship, captains consulted together and proposed to move together, and did move separately; there was no lack of goodwill, nor—as Nelson says—of exertion; but men were not quite sure of what the other man would do, and felt no authority to command him; and there was hesitation over risks, and cautious delays about soundings and shaky spars, which, the author is persuaded, would not have deterred Nelson in such conditions where victory was decisive, though not yet complete."

The story of Hotham's untimely caution in the Gulf of Genoa, or of Hyde Parker's irresolution in the Baltic, is a commonplace of naval history; and readers of Capt. Mahan's scattered essays will have no difficulty in remembering other instances, more or less analogous, which he has elsewhere noted. With the ideas recently put forward that, except in matters relating to his own profession, Nelson's mind was essentially borné, and that even in professional matters his conduct showed neither genius nor remarkable ability, and was guided by the merest common sense—with such ideas Capt. Mahan has no sympathy. To describe as the matter-of-course outcome of common sense actions which no others, senior or junior, could aim at, as at St. Vincent, or could understand, as at Trafalgar, is a misuse of language, and Capt. Mahan will none of it; while as to Nelson's non-professional capacity, he aptly quotes Lord Minto's words—not only those addressed to Nelson himself: "You are as great in the cabinet as on the ocean, and your whole conduct fills me with admiration and confidence"; but also those publicly spoken in the House of Lords:—

"There is one other point of excellence to which I must say a single word, because I am, perhaps, the man in the world who has had the best opportunity of being acquainted with it. The world knows that Lord Nelson can fight the battles of his country; but a constant and confidential correspondence with this great man, for a considerable portion of time, has taught me that he is not less capable of providing for its political interests and honour on occasions of great delicacy and embarrassment. In that new capacity I have witnessed a degree of ability, judgment, temper, and conciliation not always allied to the sort of spirit which, without an instant's hesitation, can attack the whole Spanish line with his single ship."

But keen as was his political insight, great as he was as a strategist, it was as a tactician that Nelson was most brilliantly pre-eminent—far above all his contemporaries even in that age of "giants"—above, we may well believe it, all his predecessors, with whom it is not so easy to compare him. It is essentially as a man of action, dying at the culminating point of his career, that his memory lives in the hearts of his countrymen, and even of aliens in name, not in blood, like Capt. Mahan, who concludes:—

"Sharer of our mortal weakness, he has bequeathed to us a type of single-minded self-devotion that can never perish. As his funeral anthem proclaimed while a nation mourned, 'His body is buried in peace, but his name liveth for evermore.' Wars may cease, but the need for heroism shall not depart from the earth while man remains man and evil exists to be redressed. Wherever danger has to be faced or duty to be done at cost to self, men will draw inspiration from the name and deeds of Nelson."

And so ends this great work. Many lives of Nelson have been written, but till now there has been none which could be considered in any way complete or satisfactory. We will not say that this one is ideally perfect, but it goes a long way towards being so; and when a few slips of the pen—e.g., the misspelling of Fremantle's name, the statement that Syracuse or Augusta is on the west coast of Sicily (ii. 30), and "1894" printed for 1886 (ii. 223, note)—have been corrected, the nineteenth century may flatter itself in its dying years that it leaves behind it an adequate memorial of the great admiral whose achievements rendered its dawn illustrious.

Reports of State Trials. — New Series, Vol. VII. 1848 to 1850. Published under the Direction of the State Trials Committee. Edited by John E. P. Wallis. (Eyre & Spottiswoode.)

The seventh volume of the new 'State Trials' contains, in the body of the book, full reports of fifteen, and, in the appendix (for some inscrutable reason called "Appendix A"), abridged descriptions of thirteen cases. The editor has performed his duties with his accustomed care, and the production of the work, as usual, does credit to the publishers and printers. As in the case of previous volumes, we feel that, instead of attempting the task (almost impossible in our small space) of summarizing the whole mass, it is wise to select a small number of cases which, for one reason or another, may have a special interest for the general reader.

The first, and longest, case in the volume is the Queen against Smith O'Brien, which occupies 380 columns, or 190 pages. Many of our older readers will remember that Mr. Smith O'Brien was an Irish member of the Imperial Parliament, of distinctly anti-English proclivities, but was considered for a long time to be too sensible and well balanced a man to run into the extreme of trying to carry out his views by physical force. As that was the general opinion, much surprise was felt at his taking a course which caused him to become the somewhat derided hero of a short and easily suppressed outbreak, and to be tried, when captured in a cabbage garden, for levying war against the Queen and compassing the death of Her Majesty. The "cabbage garden" raised an immense amount of ridicule, rather unaccountably, for there must have been fighting in cabbage and other gardens before, though historians may have overlooked the circumstance. But the real source of mirth lay, perhaps, in the fact that we, the British public, felt uncommonly "jolly" at the quick and easy termination of the affair, conscious as we were that such a beginning of strife might have led to much graver consequences. "Mr. Punch" had his good-humoured fling at the rebel leader, remarking that it would not do to laugh at a man and hang him too; everybody felt the same thing; yet it was necessary that the law should declare its power, and Smith O'Brien underwent a nine days' trial before a "Special Commission" at Clonmel, was found guilty of levying war (the count as to "compassing the death" having been withdrawn), and was sentenced to a traitor's doom under the law as it then stood. The actual words were these:—

"That you, William Smith O'Brien, be taken from hence to the place from whence you came, and be thence drawn on a hurdle to the place of execution, and be there hung by the neck until you be dead, and that afterwards your head shall be severed from your body, and your body divided into four quarters, to be disposed of as Her Majesty shall think fit."

Such was the sentence for "levying war" less than fifty years ago; but we may at once relieve the feelings of our younger readers who do not remember the milder actual result. The thoughtful editor here steps in to tell us that the sentence was speedily commuted to transportation under an Act passed expressly for that purpose; and further, that Mr. O'Brien was pardoned in 1854 on condition of not returning to the United Kingdom, and was pardoned in 1856 without any condition whatever. We live in happier times than those in which a dozen or so of the principal hostile leaders were beheaded after every suppression of their outbreaks.

It has been mentioned that the count as to compassing the Queen's death was advanced and afterwards withdrawn; it must not, however, be supposed that Mr. O'Brien was ever thought to have any actual designs against Her Majesty's life. The count had been inserted in the indictment in reliance on an old and barbarous fiction which declared an attack on the sovereign power of the State to be equivalent to a murderous attack on the person of the monarch.

An unusual incident occurred in this trial—an incident indicative of the moderation and just feeling which actuated the most important persons engaged in it. The Lord Chief Justice (Blackburne, afterwards Irish Chancellor) had arrived at an advanced stage in his summing-up, when he found it his duty to comment on the evidence of one Dobbyn, who, his lordship said, had "advanced the case on the part of the Crown one step further than the other evidence." To make the significance of this remark apparent, we may explain that the Crown produced ample evidence of violent acts, but that the defence of the prisoner was based on the contention that he perpetrated those acts to escape being arrested, and not with any general intention against the Crown. This contention, if successful, would have ensured an acquittal of the crime alleged, and would have reduced the prisoner's offence from that of levying war to something of a comparatively personal and insignificant character. But now, at the very crisis of the judge's exposition, an unexpected voice arose in court; the prisoner's leading counsel, the celebrated Whiteside (afterwards Lord Chief Justice of Ireland), startled the Bench with the words, "Before your lordship proceeds further with your charge I ask you, as a favour, to hear a short application." "Is it in another case?" asked the judge. "No, my lord, in this," answered Whiteside, who then requested that the Attorney-General might step with him "into the chamber." The judges, as well as the Attorney-General and Mr. Whiteside, then retired to "the chamber," and returned into court in a quarter of an hour, when the extraordinary application was made that the witness Dobbyn might be recalled and confronted with a new witness, who alleged that he had travelled down from Dublin by the night mail on seeing the report of Dobbyn's evidence in a newspaper. Such a request at such a time was so "very unusual" that the Chief Justice asked the Attorney-General's consent before granting it; that consent, however, was readily given, and then the new witness, a man named Dalton, entered into a long and rather improbable story as to certain interviews with Dobbyn and others, which, if believed, would have negatived the evidence of Dobbyn. That witness, however, swore that the whole of Dalton's statement was, to use the judge's words in commenting on this curious conflict, "a pure and absolute fabrication," and the judge left the question of truth or falsehood to the jury, merely pointing out that if one man was believed the other must be entirely disbelieved. It is probable that this strange episode did not make any difference to the result of the trial, but it made a great difference to the feelings of the persons engaged in it; the prisoner himself exclaimed impulsively, "I beg to make my acknowledgments to the Attorney-General for the concession," and Mr. Whiteside said, "I think it right to state that the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General are entitled to the highest honour for their conduct in the administration of justice." It is not too much, perhaps, to say that there are some eminent barristers who, in their eagerness to win a great case, would hesitate to exhibit the frank impartiality which was shown by Monahan and Hatchell, the Irish Attorney-General and Solicitor-General for the time being. The Irish Bar has long been renowned for the eloquence and spirit of its members; the Dobbyn-Dalton episode bears testimony to their just and honourable feelings.

The case of Regina v. Maria Manning, which settled a point of law of some importance, arose out of a trial for a murder of the most deliberate and heartless kind, of which Maria Manning and her husband were found guilty. A man named Patrick O'Connor had been inveigled by the Mannings into their dwelling in a rather secluded neighbourhood in the outskirts of the metropolis, and had been murdered for the sake of plunder and buried under the flagstones of the basement floor. No doubt of their guilt was entertained. No dream, however wild, of mercy could be indulged in, but Mrs. Manning sought refuge under a statute of Edward III., which enacted, in effect, that in trials "amongst aliens and denizens" the jury should, if possible, be a jury de medietate linguæ—in other words, half denizens (which here evidently meant Englishmen as distinguished from foreigners) and half aliens. Mrs. Manning was a native of Lausanne, in French-speaking Switzerland, and she demanded a mixed jury of the kind just alluded to. Her request was refused at the trial, but the point was reserved for argument in the Court of Criminal Appeal. If that Court had decided in her favour, it seems quite possible that she might have escaped the capital punishment. It is true that in such case she could not strictly have been held to be autrefois convicte, as the original conviction would have been null and void to all intents and purposes; but her counsel would not have admitted this, and the chances are that there would have been a long struggle, and ultimately a commutation of the sentence if the mixed jury had convicted. But it was not to be. Her application was resisted on several grounds; among others, that under an Act of Queen Victoria a woman married to a natural-born subject "shall be deemed and taken to be herself naturalized, and have all the privileges and rights of a natural-born subject." It may seem strange to non-legal reasoners that the judicial mind seized upon this argument as settling the case against the prisoner. To an ordinary intellect it might not seem that the loss of a foreigner's privilege could be reckoned among "privileges and rights" of a British subject. But the intellects of judges are not, perhaps, ordinary intellects, and it must be admitted that in thus deciding the whole case on a simple point of construction their lordships avoided entering into a number of arguments of a more laborious character. These we need not enumerate in detail; but we cannot help mentioning as a forensic curiosity the Attorney-General's argument that "amongst aliens and denizens" must necessarily mean "between aliens and denizens," because the original word was the French entre, "which," the learned Attorney-General said, "strictly means between." Probably the judges could have reminded the Attorney-General that entre means among just as often as between; but, as they decided on another ground, perhaps they did not think it worth while to criticize his Gallic philology.

It may be remembered that the Queen against the Archbishop of Canterbury (described in our notice of the preceding volume) arose from a difference of views between Lord John Russell (at that time a Prime Minister in his novitiate) and several zealous clergymen of the Church of England as to the fitness of a certain learned Oxonian to be a bishop. In like manner, Gorham v. the Bishop of Exeter arose from a difference of opinion as to the fitness of an accomplished mathematician of Cambridge, the Rev. George Cornelius Gorham, to be the incumbent of a Crown living. The Bishop of Exeter of that day, a clever and courageous champion of the High Church party, strongly disapproved of the nomination of Mr. Gorham to the vicarage of Brampton Speke in his diocese, and refused to obey the Crown's command that he should complete the appointment by "instituting" its nominee. In justice to all persons concerned, it may be stated that the bishop did not allege anything against Mr. Gorham's personal character, but considered him an unfit person on account of certain religious opinions "held and maintained" by him. Mr. Gorham at once took proceedings to obtain what he considered to be his rights, and the Crown's authority prevailed against opposition, as in the Hampden case, though not exactly in the same way. It will be remembered that in the Hampden case the "confirmation" of the appointment was impugned on the ground that, although objectors had been openly summoned and had appeared, the objections had not been heard; the objectors appealed to the Court of Queen's Bench, and that Court was equally divided. In the Gorham case, on the other hand, it was the appointed person who had to appeal to the law, in order to obtain the completion of his appointment by institution. Mr. Gorham commenced proceedings in the Arches Court, and the Dean of Arches gave judgment against him. On appeal to Her Majesty in Council, however, the decision was reversed by the Judicial Committee, and the cause was remitted to the Arches Court "that right might be done." Without entering too much into legal technicalities, we may briefly describe the sequel. After some preliminary steps the question was argued, in effect, before the Court of Queen's Bench, whether the Judicial Committee was a competent court to hear such an appeal, or whether it was incompetent, so that the reversal pronounced by it was invalid. The Queen's Bench, in an elaborate judgment pronounced by Lord Campbell, decided that it was competent—in other words, decided against the bishop, who afterwards (as the editor tells us) successively moved the Courts of Common Pleas and Exchequer, but with the same result. Mr. Wallis does not tell us what were the exact practical steps which followed the defeat of the Bishop of Exeter. We believe that Mr. Gorham became incumbent of the living de facto as well as de jure; in other words, that he enjoyed its income and performed its duties; but it would be interesting to know whether the Bishop of Exeter instituted him, whether some one else (say the Archbishop) had power to institute him and did so, or whether he held the living without any institution at all.

Almost as we write, a fresh Hampden case has arisen. A clergyman objected on December 22nd, 1896, to the confirmation of Dr. Temple as Archbishop of Canterbury, and was told, on the authority of the Queen against the Archbishop of Canterbury, that he could not be heard. His retort was neat and obvious: "The invitation to oppose which we have just heard is, in that case, reduced to a nullity." We do not consider that it would be seemly for us to express any opinion as to the fitness or unfitness of Dr. Temple; but we have no scruple in expressing our opinion that the laws of this civilized country should be purged of shams and subterfuges. It is an insult to common sense that persons should be summoned with a distinct assurance that they "shall be heard," and should then be told that those who summoned them are forbidden by law to hear them. Was the immortal Bumble right in his juridical principles, albeit a little unfortunate in their practical application? Is the law "a hass" after all?

The Epic of the Fall of Man: a Comparative Study of Cædmon, Dante, and Milton. By S. Humphreys Gurteen, M.A., LL.D. (Putnam's Sons.)

"In the following work," says Mr. Gurteen in his preface, "my object is to present, as I did in 'The Arthurian Epic,' a comparative study of one most interesting niche in the poetic literature of England." A "study" of "a niche" is not a particularly happy phrase, nor is it solitary in its infelicity. Thus, on another page, Mr. Gurteen talks of "the chaste phantasies of Cædmon and the more brilliant imaginings of the blind bard"

(Milton to wit); and other such like gems are easy to find. Nor yet, it would seem, either in learning or in judgment is Mr. Gurteen quite equal to the task he undertakes. He shows no sign of any real comprehension of the Cædmonic poems and the many problems as to authorship they unquestionably present. Such investigations cannot be ignored by any one who deals with the poems merely as pieces of literature, and surely are not what Mr. Gurteen calls "outlying questions" that need not be touched, "however fascinating or important they may be." Clearly, if Cædmon is to be compared with Dante and with Milton, we must at least have some assurance to the effect that the so-called Cædmonic poems are by one author and not by several. It cannot be very profitable to compare the special work of one man with a work that is composite, and represents the combined output of two or more geniuses, possibly of different times and places. To speak as if the "Cædmonic" poems possessed any such unity as 'Paradise Lost' is hopelessly misleading. And as to Mr. Gurteen's critical faculty, let such a sentence as this be considered:—

"Indeed, as we shall subsequently see, the poem as a whole will bear favourable comparison in many respects with the more elaborate epic of the erudite Secretary of the Commonwealth, and in more than one passage evinces a chaste and delicate line of thought, while the corresponding passages in Milton cannot fail to displease by their coarseness and repulsiveness."

(We have taken the liberty to improve, as we think, Mr. Gurteen's punctuation.)

Still, though it is impossible to applaud either its scholarship or its literary insight, this volume may be of some service in spreading the knowledge of our Old English (what used to be styled Anglo-Saxon) poetry. At all events, it is a sign that there is some general interest awakening in the earliest period of English culture when a book of this popular kind makes its appearance. Mr. Gurteen is essentially a caterer for "the public," and it indicates a certain new affection for the past in the public bosom that he should provide such viands as these. He feels himself a genuine pleasure in these antique metres, and we shall be glad indeed if he can inspire others with it. He will not have laboured in vain if he induces any one to acquaint himself with the story of the Abbess Hild's monastic servant and of the "rimes" that have been connected with his name, and certainly belong to his "school."

And for one thing we wish heartily to recommend Mr. Gurteen's volume, viz. its reproduction of a large number of the old drawings that illustrate the Junian MS. These alone should secure it a welcome with all who are not fortunate enough to possess the Society of Antiquaries' volume containing the complete set; these alone should make this publication a success. It may be mentioned that there are two of these plates given in a little sixpenny booklet published at Whitby by one inspired by the genius loci, and they are by themselves well worth the money, even if their value is not greatly increased by the well-meant attempt at an introduction to "Cædmon" that accompanies them. Mr. Gurteen gives twenty-six reduced facsimiles of these very valuable and interesting drawings—the total number is fifty-three, one illuminated—taking them from the twenty-fourth volume of the Archæologia, but "corrected and verified with the kind assistance of Mr. Horace Hart, Controller of the University Press at Oxford."

We will now point out a few matters for Mr. Gurteen's consideration, should his volume reach a second edition, as we hope for the sake of these drawings at least that it may do. He should not state boldly, as he does, that Hrothgar was "King of the Danes in the North of England," or that Beowulf and his men "see in the distance their native cliffs—the well-known headlands of the Anglian coast." He should not write, so far as grammar goes, to say nothing else, "Milton's poetic narrative of the Creation and Fall are in possession of the imagination of the average amateur theologian." He should not assert or imply that Milton's sole, or at least first, object in composing 'Paradise Lost' was "to immortalize himself," and that the O.E. poet was entirely disinterested and didactic. He should warily revise such curious statements as that

"most of the peculiarities of modern English speech in this respect [i.e., in the matter of pronunciation], which at first seem to court the criticism of those who are not of English birth, belong legitimately to the English nation as heirlooms of its Anglo-Saxon ancestry, and can be shown to be correct on strict philological lines,"— or that

"his [Cædmon's] 'Fall of Man' is the only poem so far discovered that could be supposed for a single moment to have influenced Milton's brilliant and powerful imagination,"—

or

"This annuity [the one provided for Miss Elstob by her friends] was assumed by Queen Caroline, who was pleased to continue it until her own death."

Also he might perhaps reduce such a centipede as

For in the stead of rebel victory and princely power to the normal length.

The History of the City of Rome in the Middle Ages. By Ferdinand Gregorovius. Translated from the Fourth German Edition by Annie Hamilton. Vol. III. (Bell & Sons.)

The first two volumes of 'The History of the City of Rome' (reviewed in the Athenæum, March 16th, 1895) terminated with the coronation of Charlemagne, A.D. 800; the one before us continues the history during the couple of succeeding centuries. It opens with the anticipation of the fairest prospects for the city and the welfare of humanity:—

"The great tradition of the Orbis terrarum, or of the unity of the world, formerly the political end and aim of the Roman Empire of the Cæsars, which arose contemporarily with Christianity, was revived in the age of Charles the Great. This age transformed the ancient Imperium into the Western monarchy, which found its inmost bond of adhesion in the principle of the Christian religion. Charles was the Moses of the Middle Ages, who successfully led mankind through the deserts of barbarism, and bestowed on them a new code of political, ecclesiastical, and civil constitutions. In his theocratic Empire was exhibited the first attempt to establish the new federation of nations in the form of a Christian republic."

This and the following passage indicate the splendid dream which it was hoped would be realized by the union of the Church and the Empire:—

"Who can deny that the idea of a sacred metropolis, a temple of eternal peace in the midst of struggling humanity, a universal asylum of culture, of law, and of reconciliation, is great and admirable? Had the institution of the Papacy but remained void of ambition and worldly desire, had it escaped dogmatic stagnation, and advanced with the development of a widening life, with the social forces of the world and the discoveries of toil and culture, it would have constituted almost the highest cosmic form, in which mankind should have seen the expression of its unity and harmony. However, after the expiration of its first and most glorious period, the Papacy became the essentially retarding principle in the drama of history. The greatest idea latent in the Church never attained fulfilment; but that it had once existed in the Papacy serves to make the Papacy the most venerable of all institutions which history has beheld, and that the city of Rome was the classic receptacle of this idea suffices to secure for her the everlasting love of mankind."

It is to be feared that a lofty ideal such as this can never exist, save in the mental domain of the student. That it was the aspiration of pious souls here and there during the ninth and tenth centuries is, perhaps, the one consoling reflection which may be suggested in contemplating this troublous period of the city's history.

Rome and the Campania in those two centuries appear to have been spared no form of human misery and degradation. From the highest to the lowest, whether laic or clergy, the only form of religion was that of a gross superstition. Courage had died out in the race; Saracens and Hungarians slew men as butchers slaughter sheep. Yet when there were no German soldiers to overawe the populace its passions would suddenly blaze into massacre and wreckage. Licence and ferocity went unrestrained; adultery and incest, robbery and murder, were of common occurrence, though with regard to the last-mentioned crime, when the victim belonged to the higher orders of the clergy or was a Pope, it often assumed the less sanguinary form of poisoning. The ignorance of the clergy was general throughout Italy, and still more marked in Rome. The Gallic bishops in the tenth century at Rheims declared that "there is no one at present in Rome who has studied the sciences, without a knowledge of which, as it is written, a man is incapable of being even a door-keeper. The ignorance of other priests is in some degree pardonable when compared with that of the Bishop of Rome. In the Bishop of Rome, however, ignorance is not to be endured, since he has to judge in matters of faith, mode of life, and discipline, the clergy, and in short the Universal Catholic Church."

If, however, learning was extinct in Rome, Gregorovius points out that it was still cultivated in the West:—

"Learning seems occasionally to flow in secret channels below the surface of history, coming to light unexpectedly in an apparently erratic manner, and, like a spring, quickening a succession of minds into life. When the intellectual life of Charles's age seemed to have perished under a fresh inroad of barbarism, Germany and England suddenly became centres of a new intellectual movement, and the reform of monasticism issued from France."

At the same time the author does not omit to point out that while in Rome it might have been difficult to find a scholar who could distinguish by name the statues of poets and sages which then stood, black and mutilated, in the ruinous Forum of Trajan, learning was still cultivated at the monastery of Monte Casino, where the illustrious Bertarius then reigned as abbot.

The root of the disorder was the sheer incapacity of the Popes for temporal government, yet it was for this they were always hankering and intriguing. The rare and hasty visits of the Emperor gave them the desired opportunity, of which they were unable to avail themselves, and consequently were obliged to be constantly flying to him for protection. As the result of their inability to maintain order in the city the author points out what happened at the death of the Popes :—

"He [the newly elected Pope] found the treasure chambers of the palace completely empty. The custom had long since arisen that, on the death of a Pope, his servants and the populace should fall on the apartments of the dead and plunder, not his private rooms alone, but the entire palace, and should carry off everything that came to hand—gold, silver, costly stuffs, and precious stones. The curious condition of anarchy into which Rome was thrown on the death of each Pope in succession gave occasion to excesses such as these. The decease of the ruler invariably called forth extravagant joy among the people. The ship of Peter had been stranded, the cargo left ownerless to be the prey of the public. The like happened on the death of bishops, whether in the city or country ; the episcopal dwellings were sacked in the same way. The princely splendour with which the bishops were surrounded was undoubtedly at open variance with the principles of Christianity. These prelates lived in sumptuous dwellings, resplendent in gold, purple, and velvet. They dined like princes on vessels of gold. They sipped their wine out of costly goblets or drinking horns. Their basilicas were smothered in dust, but their ample obbæ or wine vessels were resplendent with paintings. As at the banquet of Trimalchio, their senses were gratified with the spectacle of beautiful dancing girls and the 'symphonies' of musicians. They slept on silken pillows, and on beds artistically inlaid with gold, in the arms of their paramours, leaving their vassals, coloni, and slaves to look after the requirements of their court. They played at dice, hunted, and shot with a bow. They left the altar, after celebrating mass, with spurs on their feet, a dagger at their side, to mount their horses—saddled Saxon fashion and furnished with gilt bridles—to fly their falcons."

When the possession of office and power offered such free scope for the gratification of their appetites, it naturally followed that passionate and uncultured men were not scrupulous in the means they employed to secure the coveted prizes.

"St. Peter's Chair became the prey of the nobles, and was occupied by a series of Popes in such quick succession that scarcely had they ascended it before they sank into a bloody grave. The Papacy, which under Nicholas, Adrian, and still more under John the Eighth, had risen to lofty aims, sank in the midst of the general political disruption to the lowest depths. A thousand spoilers laid hands on the ecclesiastical State, while the spiritual power of the Pope itself sank into little more than an empty title. Sinister darkness brooded over Rome, scarcely relieved by the doubtful glimmers which ancient chroniclers let fall upon this terrible period. A fearful scene is disclosed : violent barons calling themselves consuls or senators ; rising from amongst them brutal or wretched Popes ; beautiful, fierce, and debauched women ; shadowy emperors who come, struggle, and disappear — all pass before the sight in tumultuous haste.....Pope Stephen [VI.] disgraced the history of the Papacy by a scene of barbarity such as no other period has witnessed. It was ordained that a solemn trial of Formosus [Stephen's predecessor at one remove] should be held, and the dead was summoned to appear in person before the tribunal of a Synod. It was February or March, 897. The Emperor Lambert himself, with his mother, had come to Rome, where he now ruled as sovereign. The cardinals, bishops, and many ecclesiastical dignitaries were assembled. The corpse of the Pope, taken from the grave where it had lain eight months, and clad in pontifical vestments, was placed upon a throne in the council chamber. The advocate of Pope Stephen arose, and turning to the ghastly mummy, beside which a trembling deacon stood as counsel, brought forward the accusations ; and the living Pope, in his insane fury, asked the dead : 'Why hast thou in thine ambition usurped the Apostolic seat, thou who previously wast only Bishop of Portus ?' The counsel of Formosus, if terror allowed him to speak, advanced no defence. The dead was judged and convicted ; the Synod signed the act of his deposition, pronounced sentence of condemnation upon him, and decreed that all the clergy ordained by Formosus should be ordained anew. The Papal vestments were torn from the mummy ; the three fingers of the right hand, with which the Latins bestowed the benediction, were cut off ; with barbarous shrieks the dead man was dragged from the hall through the streets, and thrown amidst the rush of the yelling rabble into the Tiber."

In this, as in the preceding volumes, we find some graphic descriptions of the monuments referred to in relation with the historical events with which they are connected. Gregorovius's knowledge and appreciation of art were far above those of the average historian. They were no second-hand "padding" got up for the occasion, but were genuine and founded on a cultivated taste. And, needless to say, his familiarity with the monuments and all the artistic remains of ancient Rome was exhaustive. Such few monuments (all churches) belonging to these two centuries as still exist he, of course, places on a much lower level than those belonging to the earlier Christian period. He points out that while "in the age of the Borgias and the Medicis moral corruption was veiled by an outward show of classic culture, the vices of the Church being hidden behind the tapestries of Raffaelle, in the tenth century all show of outward beauty was unknown."

One might hazard the suggestion that the horror of those terrible times did at last find artistic expression, but at the distance of five centuries after the events. The tradition of the hideous saturnalia of blood and crime would linger long in the popular imagination, and would not have been unknown to the artists working at Rome in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Without pretending that Pollaiuolo intended his 'Gladiators' to be a typical representation of Rome in the tenth century, yet it may be advanced that the orgy of blind rage and ferocity which is the subject of the well-known engraving aptly illustrates that dreadful epoch. So the motive of the drawing by the same master in the Hertford House Collection might well portray a scene of agony and despair which would have been no uncommon event in the fortress palaces of mediæval Rome. The legends would have been dimly floating in the mind of the artist, till, by a sudden inspiration, he would fix them in indelible form by means of his burin or pencil. Motives of similar derivation might be traced in Signorelli's frescoes at Orvieto. Raphael's pictures in the Stanze representing events in the life of Leo IV., such as the 'Incendio del Borgo,' will be recalled by the reader. Here the history of the time is depicted from an official point of view. Hence its real degradation is overlooked ; besides, the benign serenity of Raphael's nature influenced his treatment of even tragic subjects. The sentiment of graceful presentation never deserted him. Motives of sanguinary violence or brutal lust he simply ignored. But when Buonarotti displayed the tragedy of human history on the walls of the Sistine Chapel, he may not have forgotten the unspeakable iniquities transacted on the very spot where he was working. To him, as he sat at night in his dark and solitary studio, evolving the conceptions which were to form the subjects of the Sistine frescoes, the woes and trials of God's chosen people would evoke memories of the infinite sorrows of his own race. In the tragedy of his country he himself had been an actor, he had fought and lost, and in the bitterness of exile would have brooded over the apparently never-ending story of Italy's defeat and shame. The Bible and Dante were the books with which he had saturated his mind, and in both he found sin and suffering following each other in ceaseless succession. The record of history presented to his sombre imagination one long blood-stained roll of iniquity, triumphant for a moment, cut down, and then condemned to an eternity of torment. Thus when designing the Deluge, the Haman, the Holofernes, the lamenting Jeremiah, or the agonies of the condemned of the Last Judgment he had but to glance back at the legends of mediæval Rome to give actuality and precision to his painted stories. That he intentionally translated the episodes of the tenth century Pandemonium into sixteenth century form, presented in colours not less lurid, may not be asserted ; but that the traditions of those earlier times influenced his artistic conceptions, and formed, as it were, a standpoint from which he surveyed the current of the history of humanity, can scarcely be doubted.

Englische Geschichte im achtzehnten Jahrhundert. Von Wolfgang Michael. Vol. I. (Leipzig, Voss.)

The labours of such men as Pauli and Lappenberg, Ranke and Gneist, in the field of English history have been as cordially acknowledged in this country as in their own. Prof. Michael will obtain an honoured place among them should the whole of his 'English History in the Eighteenth Century' be as good as the present instalment.

He has worked at his task with true German thoroughness. Two years were spent by him in studying the documents which are preserved in the British Museum and our Record Office. The official reports of Hoffmann, the Austrian Resident in London, he examined at the State Paper Office in Vienna, and those of Bonet, who filled the like position for Prussia, he read in the Secret Archives at Berlin. He has also made good use of the State papers which are treasured at Hanover. He acknowledges in a short preface how freely he was allowed to pursue his researches both in this country and his own, and he adds that many documents which required long examination were forwarded from Berlin and Hanover to the library of Freiburg University, in which he is a professor, and were left at his disposal there during several months. The preface ends with the author's view of the scope and character of his work:

"There are periods in English history bearing no comparison as regards great events and famous names with that which I have treated. The reader of this book must not expect to find in it portraits of mighty men or descriptions of brilliant deeds. The glorious epoch which England passed through in relation to the war of the Spanish succession is closed. Some heroes move among her people like the shadows of a great age which has vanished. The living men were clearly resting on the laurels of their sires. Not one of them rises above his surroundings to such a supreme position as to be the centre and hero of the story. The hero of it is the collective English people with their indefatigable striving after power, wealth, and freedom. In the end the characteristics of particular individuals can be recognized in the nation itself."

This volume, though marked by an excellent spirit and a most readable style, does not afford an adequate notion of the author's design. He purposes setting forth what relates to the business of life, as well as to home and foreign politics, the law and the Constitution, science, art, and literature. Here, however, he confines himself to showing how the English Constitution was evolved and consolidated till it became worthy of a free people and fitted for envy and imitation at the accession of the house of Brunswick, when the dynasty of the Georges began to reign in virtue of a Parliamentary title and the government of the country by the nation through Parliament was finally placed beyond question of overthrow.

The whole of the first book in this volume is retrospective. It embraces the period when England was under Roman dominion to the Revolution in 1688, and must have been composed for German rather than for English readers. Yet the summary is good, and evinces thorough familiarity with the subject. Prof. Michael makes the pregnant suggestion that the development of Ireland and Scotland as independent nationalities would not have occurred had the Romans conquered those parts of Britain as completely as they did the Southern one, the Teutonic invaders never attempting to advance beyond the halting-place of the Romans.

No part of the introductory sketch is better written than that which deals with the reign of Elizabeth. In Prof. Michael's eyes the English queen holds the place which Cæsar does in the pages of Mommsen and William III. in those of Macaulay. He sums up her desires and deeds in as fine and flowing a style as they employed. He tells the story of the Armada in a condensed yet most effective form, noting what many forget, that the Armada was shattered beyond redemption by the English ships before the storm arose which converted defeat into a catastrophe. He states, moreover, what is equally worthy of remembrance, that the victory had a significance for the rest of the world as well as for England, as it ensured the triumph of Protestantism. But the event was also a turning-point in English history. He holds that "an entire policy for the future was determined when it was settled to meet the Spanish attack, not on land, but on the sea. The greatness of English commerce, which the first of the Tudors had fostered, dates from this time. Encouragement of maritime interests bore good fruit. The line was not then distinctly drawn between merchant ships and men-of-war, and the merchantmen were at the orders of the queen during hostilities. These merchantmen did splendid service against the Armada. Elizabeth was indefatigable in furthering commerce; she conferred privileges upon the trade guilds and tried to induce foreigners to join them. Industry advanced with commerce, and riches and luxury were diffused over the land to an unheard-of extent. It was at this period, when the nation was ruled by a queen after its own heart, pluming itself upon its place in the world, and feeling conscious of its power, that the intellectual life of England attained an unforeseen elevation; for the age of Elizabeth was also that of Shakspeare."

Prof. Michael understands and celebrates the Revolution of 1688 as fully as the great reign of Elizabeth. He writes that

"the English are perfectly justified in speaking of their 'glorious Revolution.' The import of the transformation is not lessened by its bloodless character, because this was due to the unanimity prevailing among the people. The greatness of the event consisted in the moderation displayed. The nation showed itself master of its own destiny by determining not to suffer again, at the hand of a despotic government, the loss of the benefits for which it had struggled during many years, among them being the free exercise of its Protestant faith and of its political rights; yet it proceeded to change the old order while retaining what it had acquired, acting as if heedless of consequences, yet circumspectly, displacing the king and all his mischievous innovations in such a manner, however, as to base the kingly office upon the nation's will."

After the Revolution, the war of the Spanish succession was the most important European act in which England played a leading part, with the result, in Prof. Michael's opinion, of obtaining the position among the nations which she has held since then. Queen Anne is generally supposed to have exercised as much authority in the conduct of affairs as the preceding Stuarts, and the influence of favourites is held to have guided her; yet it is clearly shown in this volume that public opinion had more power during her reign than has been attributed to it, and the queen's dismissal of her Whig advisers, and the summoning of Tories to her council, were in perfect accordance with the hopes and aims of the people. Those who had votes sent Tory members to Parliament to support a Tory administration, and the mob, which had a loud voice and hands ready to smite, bawled for Church and State, and belaboured those who refused to do likewise. Sacheverell, the scourge of the Whigs, was undoubtedly the favourite of the mob.

With the advent of George I. the interest of Prof. Michael's narrative increases, as much of the information is novel. He publishes at p. 371 some verses in French written after Anne's death, which Bonet, the Prussian Resident, forwarded to his Government. They are preserved in the Secret Archives at Berlin, and their substance is that, if Queen Anne had lived six months longer, the Protestants would have been in a sorry plight.

No one has placed in a clearer light than Prof. Michael the predominant feeling in Hanover when the Elector was summoned to wear the English crown. Neither he nor his courtiers had the slightest notion of the real differences between Hanover and England. Both thought that the electorate had annexed the kingdom, or that the form of government in the little German state did not differ essentially from that in the island realm; but they knew that England was far the richer, and the Court, as Prof. Michael notes, migrated in a body to the El Dorado. All of them, from the king downwards, were bitterly disappointed when they learned that they could not dip their hands at will into the Treasury, and that, by the Act of Settlement, foreigners were excluded from the service and pay of the State. George I. did retain some of his German favourites, but he paid them with Hanoverian coin; and Prof. Michael maintains, on the authority of Bonet and Bothmer, that the payments out of the Civil List were made to British subjects exclusively. Baron Schütz was the single German who filled an office at Court, and, as he had been born on British soil, he considered himself entitled to the rights of a double nationality.

The picture of George I. in this volume has the character of having been drawn from the life:—

"George I. was of middle height and without anything kingly in his appearance. His portraits show us two eyes staring into vacancy out of a full and broad forehead. Moreover he had no feature which lent life and expression to his countenance. His nose was large and broad and his mouth was ugly, and without a vestige of the moustache which it was then the fashion to wear. All his features, surrounded by a dark wig, might have been taken for those of a woman had it not been for their repulsive harshness and sternness, betraying a heartless and selfish man. The king's intellectual gifts were not wholly despicable. None of his clever mother's traits had been transmitted to him; yet he possessed a simple understanding which sufficed for the production of a certain measure of ideas, according to which he formed his opinion in all cases. Being slow in thought and action, he was always on his guard against hasty decisions. It is noteworthy, yet in perfect accordance with his environment, how the king effaced himself behind his ministers in all political concerns. He was at one with them at bottom; consequently he permitted them to act as they deemed for the best. It cannot be truthfully said of him that he was always jealously on the watch for the possession and exercise of power. He was obviously conscious of the limits of his own capacity. He avoided speaking in public, even when he could have spoken French, of which he had acquired an adequate mastery. But the right word did not occur to him at the moment.

It was in private circles only, where he could be jovial and at ease after his own fashion, that he sometimes succeeded in making pointed and telling remarks. Foreign ambassadors were never denied an audience by him. Quite as rarely, however, did he let fall from his lips a conclusive answer."

The picture of the king's life, prepared from the reports of Bonet and others, is graphically drawn by Prof. Michael. It is shown how he dined alone at 2 o'clock, and would not give audience to a minister after dinner; how he presided at the opening of Parliament, when a speech was delivered in his name, of which he did not understand a word; how he attended service at St. James's Chapel without having the slightest notion of the ritual or the import of the sermon. When the rebellion of 1715 was crushed, he was the most merciless man in the kingdom. Perhaps he shared the surprise expressed by the Prussian Resident Bonet, that the rack could not be applied to the Jacobites. Prof. Michael considers that he wished every leader in the rising to be executed.

It is amusing to read how, to use the Professor's words, "George thought as elector and acted as king." When Hanover, Prussia, and Denmark were leagued against Charles XII. of Sweden, George I. cleverly manœuvred to make the English fleet fight against a power with which England was at peace. This lamentable episode in our history has never before been told in such detail and with equal effect.

Several errors ought to be corrected and some statements authenticated. At p. 73 "burh" should be burg; p. 145, "Kische" should be Kirche; p. 152, "sehwand" should be gewand; p. 186, "Graf Cornwath" should be Graf Carnwarth; at p. 458 Bonet is given as the authority for the statement that 500*l.* a year was paid to the poor peers in the reign of Anne, a statement which is both new and incorrect; in a note at p. 500 "Thorton" is printed instead of Thornton; at p. 510 "die Bank von London" should be die Bank von England; at p. 531 "Groom of the stool" is a misprint for Groom of the Stole; p. 534, "sinp" should be sind; at p. 554 warming-pan is rendered "Wärmflasche," a better rendering would be "Wärmpfanne"; at p. 700 "treibendeu" is an obvious misprint for treibenden. A few words are German newspaper slang, and these offend us the more because Prof. Michael's German is so good on the whole, and so free from the besetting drawbacks of German prose, that it recalls Lessing. Both as writer and historian he has made an excellent and praiseworthy beginning, and the present volume has the further attraction of an elaborate index.

NEW NOVELS.

Guavas the Tinner. By S. Baring-Gould. (Methuen & Co.)

There is a kind of flavour about this book which alone elevates it far above the ordinary novel, quite apart from any particular merit in the story. The curious aloofness of these miners from the generality of English people, and the convincing manner in which the author throws the reader amongst them and makes them perfectly natural, perhaps account for this flavour of plausible singularity; but it is a hard task to define it. The story itself has a grandeur in harmony with the wild and rugged scenery which is its setting. Isolt, with her cold and passionate nature, is a most haunting figure, and her mysterious appearances are very dramatic. The hero in a different way is equally fine — distinguished by a silence and a strenuous self-mastery at once pathetic and magnificent. It seems almost unfair in such a book to select a purple patch, but it is impossible not to dwell on the terrible scene in the disused mine where Guavas is all but done to death in dark and silent forgetfulness. On one point we are in doubt. It is not meant as a criticism of the story, which it would be absurd to tie down to historical accuracy, but Mr. Baring-Gould is generally so exact that it would be interesting to know if he has any warrant for introducing Jews in Cornwall in the time of Elizabeth. It is generally supposed that they were not allowed anywhere in England before Cromwell's time after their first expulsion from the kingdom.

Christine of the Hills. By Max Pemberton. (Innes & Co.)

Mr. Pemberton here deserts his accustomed subject of extraordinary adventure for the quieter matters connected with the human heart. But the change of method is not very successful. Like some of the greatest writers of tales of adventure, he does not seem able to look at human beings except from the outside; as actors his characters are admirable, but when it comes to entering into their real being, to presenting them as individual sentient creatures, he fails. Christine Mr. Pemberton hardly seems to have realized at all, at any rate he fails in making us realize her. She passes through various phases which are vivid enough; but what the real Christine thought of it all or what she was really like is never properly brought out. The most careful attempt at a character sketch in the book is that of the narrator, the old foster-father of Christine, who is a strange mixture of covetousness and of real love for his charge. But it is our impression, though it may be a piece of hypercriticism, that his covetousness is somewhat too crudely rendered—it seems hardly possible that a man would voluntarily reveal such depths of cunning greed.

The Career of Claudia. By F. M. Peard. (Bentley & Son.)

Miss Peard, whose writings are associated so closely with the young girl, could hardly be expected to overlook a late development of the species. It is, however, safe to say that in her hands the "New Woman"—who, by the way, is already old-fashioned—is as harmless as she is conventional. Claudia, indeed, is only twenty, and her "newness" consists principally in spelling "Woman," by which she means herself, and "Career," by which she means her own, in capital letters, and in considering nothing and nobody else. This self-absorption, however, combined as it is with a frank rudeness to those who wish to be kind to her and a determination to ride her bicycle in and out of season, is largely due to her youth, and is considerably modified by experiences that are in no way "new" and of far more importance to a woman than the career of a landscape gardener. Claudia's education is of a decidedly humiliating character; but she remains wonderfully self-contained, and not half so grateful as she should be for an affection which it is astonishing she should ever have evoked, and which she finally condescends to accept. She is none the less a not unlovable character, and certainly a more natural one than Miss Arbuthnot, though her attractions are far surpassed by those of two of her elderly and slightly despised cousins. The story is told with animation and pervaded by a pleasant, wholesome spirit, which should make it very welcome to the girl readers for whom it is obviously written.

St. Eva. By Amelia Pain. (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)

A story adorned with a frontispiece by Sir Edward Burne-Jones has, of necessity, a claim upon the respectful attention of the critic. But 'St. Eva' in addition has merits of its own. The author writes really good English, and the characters, especially the minor ones, are admirably and distinctively drawn. The heroine's girlhood at Springfield is alive (if such an expression be in this case permissible) with the dreary existence peculiar to a country-town villa, standing back behind a wooden gate and gravel sweep, whose widowed owner keeps "only one carriage, and utility decided it a brougham." The girl's introduction to life under the kindly patronage of Mrs. Maynard Rowe, her pleasant friendliness with the Gurdons, and the first dawnings of her feeling for Seaford, all prove the author to be a careful observer of human nature in its ordinary pains and pleasures. Even the tragedy in St. Eva's story is handled with restraint up to a point. We do not feel convinced that such a sensitive nature would not have shrunk more decidedly before Seaford's wooing; but while we admit his excellence as a type, we do not recognize his attraction so fully as is intended. St. Eva is in most respects a charming creation, but a little spoilt by a conventional note of æstheticism, beginning with the lute and the hat-strings and culminating in the final catastrophe, which, to our thinking, goes far to mar an otherwise pretty and pathetic story. The end, we are convinced, would have been different and more lifelike had Mrs. Pain moulded her heroine less conscientiously upon the lines of the canvas, and trusted rather to her own conception of serious girlhood in the flesh.

Beyond the Pale. By B. M. Croker. (Chatto & Windus.)

Mrs. Croker's Irish stories have a life and a freshness of their own which go far to atone for the occasional slipshod carelessness of her style and the strong family likeness of her heroines. The present one is first introduced to us as a Cinderella, the hardly used stepchild of a horse-dealer and the breaker-in of his young horses. "Galloping Jerry" is none the less the first lady in the county, the descendant of kings, and more lately of owners of half the country round.

Perhaps it is the proud consciousness of her descent that preserves her from the contamination of her surroundings, and enables her, when occasion arises, to appear with ease and dignity in a satin ball dress, thereby enforcing the recognition of her position, which the ladies, at all events, have denied her in the hunting field. But wherever she is placed Miss O'Bierne holds our sympathies, and, in every sense of the word, overrides our criticism. We cordially rejoice when the fairy prince is raised up to restore her, with much ingenuity of detail, to her ancestral halls. That Denis Money is in reality a descendant of one of the O'Bierne serfs is a humorous point, but one that does not appeal so keenly to us as to Miss Narcissa Dwyer, Jerry's delightful godmother, who, with her sister, lives principally upon the pride of birth and past possessions. Needless to say that the Irish peasantry are handled with a pathos and humour that have already made the author's reputation, and the "Emerald Isle" itself comes in for the usual share of her affectionate appreciation.

Sworn Allies. By M. E. Le Clerc. (Hurst & Blackett.)

The author has selected a title quite unsuggestive of her story; but the latter is none the less decidedly readable. Her success, such as it is, lies not in the unlikely alliance between Robert Warburton and Mr. Bragg, or rather in the corruption of a respectable country-town solicitor by an outside broker of obvious untrustworthiness, but in the delightful picture that she gives us of Mrs. Warburton's brothers and sisters. The Joyces are Irish, and as fresh as their own Atlantic breezes. We can spare a little sympathy for Robert's horror of the shrieking parrot and the yapping terriers; but the majority of it is certainly claimed by the young owners of these, when on their grandfather's death they are removed from the happy freedom of their life in Donegal to the uncongenial shelter of their brother-in-law's English roof. How, for the sake of one another and of the sister who has had the misfortune to marry an Englishman, they comport themselves under these and subsequent serious misfortunes, is told in a truly Irish combination of pathos and lightness of heart. Robert's downfall astonishes us as entirely as it does the family whose little irregularities are such a pain to him; and we scarcely blame the author for her use of the conventional railway accident as the only possible way out of the dilemma.

An Australian Duchess. By Amyot Sagon. (Hurst & Blackett.)

Australia is, we all know, a land of paradoxes:—

"Quick as thought the boy twisted himself free, jumped on to his horse, and seizing the whip that hung at his saddle-bow, he caught the fellow's collar with his left hand, and, with a dexterity born of long practice, brought the whistling lash again and again across the man's body and face; then tired, he flung him bleeding and blinded from him, exclaiming as he looked with flashing eyes at the other men, who had risen and were standing round: 'Dare to touch me, any of you, again, and you know what you may expect.'"

This promising boy turns out to be a girl dressed in male attire, riding astride, one of the most skilful stock-riders in the district. She subsequently marries another stock-rider, a youth fresh from England, upon whom the dukedom of Rivesdale devolves. In due course he and his bride most reluctantly return to England, where we find our heroine endowed with every grace and feminine fascination, worshipped and admired by all who approach her, more especially by one of her husband's aristocratic friends, who steals her diamonds. The author is more at home on the "Blue Creek run" than he is in Park Lane and Grosvenor Square. Some of the scenes on the other side of the world are well described, and two or three of the characters are fairly well drawn.

From Grub to Butterfly. By Joseph Forster. (Ward & Downey.)

It is difficult to say that the transition expressed in the title of Mr. Joseph Forster's novel is edifying. A girl who cleans doorsteps in Walworth ultimately becomes a popular danseuse, and wife of "the Hon. Algernon Wildby, the eldest son of the Earl of Cranes"; though it is not said why the young gentleman is deprived of the courtesy title usually enjoyed by an earl's eldest son. The intervening stages in her career are represented by her marriage to a drunkard and her connexion with a swindler. In other respects the story is characterized by more pleasing incidents. The heroine is described as evoking some of the best qualities in the men she meets, and her amiability and charm enable the author to indulge a happy turn for sketching the brighter colours of human character. She is almost

> A creature not too bright or good
> For human nature's daily food.

Were Mr. Joseph Forster's story better written it might almost be compared with a well-known anonymous novel entitled 'Violet; or, the Danseuse,' the authorship of which has been attributed to a daughter of the first Lord Brougham.

The Sound of a Voice. By Linda Gardiner. (Hurst & Blackett.)

A child who recognizes the voice of a man, and who in later years identifies him as the murderer of her guardian, forms the heroine of a romance which, though carefully written, is too sensational to be satisfactory. Where the writer describes scenes that she knows there is some interest to be found. The final scene is practically impossible, and is not in keeping with the design of the story.

CHINESE STORIES.

Chun Ti-kung, his Life and Adventures. By Claude A. Rees. (Heinemann.)—Stories connected with China have appeared of late in considerable numbers, and the adventures of individual Chinamen have been described with more or less verisimilitude from almost every point of view. Though instances have, it is true, occurred in real life in which Chinamen have married English wives, the experiments have not been successful, and, so far as we are aware, in every case the lady has met with bitter disappointment on her arrival in China. The only known instance in which a wife of the English race has found Chinese surroundings congenial to her is that of an Australian lady who is now living in the neighbourhood of Foochow in perfect contentment with her adopted country and her pig-tailed husband. In the work before us the hero, who is the son of a coffin maker, is adopted by a childless uncle, holding the office of Taotai; and after passing the necessary examinations with exceptional distinction, he is appointed secretary to the Chinese Legation in London. While here, although already married in China, he falls desperately in love with a Miss Nellie Serjeant, who, strange to say, returns his affection. The proposed match naturally arouses considerable opposition in the Serjeant family. But in the end love triumphs, and Miss Serjeant becomes in due course the second Mrs. Chun. The rest of the story is not a pleasant one. While Chun makes every endeavour to prevent Nellie from becoming aware of the existence of his first wife, she goes through the various stages of disillusionment until her Chinese rival forces her way into the room where she is prostrated with fever, and denounces her as a usurper in the affections of her husband. Frenzied with grief and shame, she carries her newly born infant to the neighbouring creek and plunges into the tide. The story is told well and interestingly, and considerable pains have evidently been taken to make the incidents conform as much as possible to Chinese manners and customs. To say that in all instances they do so would be to say that Mr. Rees has performed a miracle. So few foreigners have ever penetrated into the inner life of the Chinese that it is not to be expected that in the present volume, in spite of a considerable amount of local colouring, there should be a minutely accurate picture of native domestic scenes. But enough has been done to make the book readable and the plot plausible.

A Marriage in China, by Mrs. Archibald Little (A. E. N. Bewicke) (White & Co.), is not the first work on China that we owe to the pen of Mrs. Little. 'My Diary in a Chinese Farm,' which lately appeared, contained her description of a summer residence in the neighbourhood of the gorges on the Yangtsze, spoken of in the present work; but compared with that book this volume is of a far more pretentious nature. It is a novel of 312 closely printed pages, the scene of which is laid in China, and the author has brought her long experience of Chinese life and manners to add colour to her subject. To all those interested in Cathay the book will be welcome; but it may be doubted whether "the general public" will be deeply stirred by it. The characters are not drawn with sufficient vigour, strength, and distinctness to make them generally interesting, and in the plot there is nothing to fix the attention or to excite sustained interest. The hero, Mr. Fortescue, is a consul in China who has made a companion of a young Chinese girl, by whom he has two children. While temporarily severed from his social entanglements he visits England, where he makes the acquaintance of a Miss Grey, who is residing with her aunt at Northampton. For this young lady he forms an attachment, and, finding it hard to struggle against his feelings, takes to flight. In course of time Miss Grey is left alone by the death of her aunt, and falling under the influence of a Mrs. Betterton, a lady missionary in China, she goes to the "Flowery Land" to make converts, and, as events prove, to meet Mr. Fortescue. At first he thinks it best to avoid her, but circumstances being too strong for him, he falls again under her influence and offers her marriage. The offer is accepted, and the story ends by the Fortescues taking charge of the two Eurasian children, and by the marriage of their mother with a Portuguese resident. Mr. Fortescue is represented as being highly intellectual, a sceptic as far as Christianity is concerned, and with a strong leaning towards Taoism. Probably his character is the one which the author has intended to draw with most distinctness. But he is, after all, too shadowy to make a strong impression, and his strange vagaries in moments of repentance and self-reproach are too erratic to be natural. To residents in China some of the scenes will be very familiar, and it is even possible to identify several of the characters as real personages. In fact, the book reads like a narration of actual facts. But it is somewhat wanting in "go," and the English is not in every instance all that could be desired. Such phrases as "He could not help but know I wished it," in the mouth of the heroine, and "What we bring the girls we say we love to!" are awkward, and some descriptive passages would be better for revision. For example, in the account of the struggles of the boatmen in the heroine's passage through the Yangtsze rapids, we meet with such a passage as the following:—"Evidently the boat must have been caught by one of those sudden geysers that rise up unexpectedly in mid-Yangtsze like a waterspout, creating a new whirlpool for the moment. Whatever it was, there was the boat below turning, and worse! Over now! Four of them in a confused knot! The fifth caught with his hands at the edge of the cliff, then was jerked and flung down after the others. The sixth just saved himself by lying sprawling on the road; the rest, by giving way a little, going back with the boat, then tugging with might and main, seemed getting the boat out of the whirlpool, when the tow-line gave, and they were all thrown forward on their faces against the cliff." The picture of life in China which the author draws is not an attractive one, and we would fain hope that the climate on the Yangtsze is not so unfavourable to European life, that the mobs are not quite so aggressive, and that the missionaries are not so unfavourably placed as she represents them.

Chin-Chin-Wa, by Charles Hannan, F.R.G.S. (Constable & Co.), is a volume of short stories, two of which are Chinese, three Indian, and the remaining three European. They are extremely light, and, as far as they go, are well and amusingly told. When looking abroad for his inspirations the author has not troubled himself over much to make acquaintance with the manners and customs of the people of whom he writes, and probably he would consider such a study superfluous. The book is of a kind that might while away the tedium of a railway journey or help to relieve the monotony of a sick room; but it would seem to require the environment of boredom to make it really acceptable. There is little that is new in the situations which are described, and the stories want point and finish.

BIBLICAL AND PATRISTIC LITERATURE.

Studia Biblica et Ecclesiastica: Essays chiefly in Biblical and Patristic Criticism. By Members of the University of Oxford. Vol. IV. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The continuation of the 'Studia' deserves a hearty welcome. The papers contained in this volume are of various merit. The first, 'St. Paul and Hellenism,' by Mr. E. L. Hicks, is not a study at all, and ought not to have appeared in the book, for it is a lecture delivered in a magisterial tone to an audience whom the lecturer must have considered extremely ignorant. It contains some interesting information, but for the most part it abounds in facts known to all or in generalizations and assertions which are not proved or supported in any way. The subject which the scholar has to discuss in connexion with St. Paul is the amount of influence which Hellenism, Hebraism, and Orientalism exercised on the apostle, but this must be determined by an accurate analysis of his conceptions and a juxtaposition of them with the conceptions which are supposed to have influenced him. There is nothing of this sort in the lecture. If there is anything characteristic of the lecture, it is a dogmatic attack on Dr. Hatch's Hibbert Lectures. Mr. Hicks says:—

"It is irrational to appeal from the Nicene Creed to the Sermon on the Mount. For Christianity needs to be expressed in the language, and therefore in the thought and phrase of mankind at whatever particular date."

And so it might be inferred that Mr. Hicks thinks that Christianity is always the same, whether it is expressed in Arian, mediæval, Puritan, or other modes, because these are the modes of the particular date. We are quite sure that Mr. Hicks does not mean this. Mr. Hicks has done splendid work in his purely scholarly books, and it is to be regretted that he has allowed a crude exposition of crude ideas to appear in what ought to be a purely scholarly volume. The next article is by Prof. Ramsay. It discusses the Galatia of St. Paul and the Galatic territory of Acts. It was written before the publication of his 'St. Paul' and it is incomplete. The question is, as our readers already know, whether the foolish Galatians who troubled the soul of the apostle by their return to beggarly elements were the Galatians of Celtic origin in the North or the inhabitants of the Roman province of Galatia that were in the South. It is a question that will never be settled, but it will always afford a subject of interesting discussion, and new points may arise. Prof. Blass, for instance, has just found in the rendering of a passage in Acts contained in a MS. of a Latin translation of that book a reason for believing that Prof. Ramsay is in the wrong. Prof. Ramsay himself seems to make his theory a personal question. Thus he speaks of Dr. Zöckler in these words: "Hence he sees only what seems to agree with his decision. There can, I think, be no other reason why he makes some of the statements which vex me so often." Why should Prof. Ramsay be vexed at all? Does he think that it is a question that involves the character of the Celts of the present day, and has he some interest in these Celts? His article is well worth reading. It adduces a number of passages from ancient writers bearing on the subject which have not generally been taken into account, and also commences a series of investigations into the history of Christianity in North Galatia which may prove to be of the greatest value. The third article is an attempt to embody in a Greek and in a Latin form Armenian versions of the 'Acta Pilati.' It is a valuable contribution to apocryphal literature. Mr. Conybeare has evidently done his work with great care, but whether he has translated the Armenian accurately we are not able to say. No Armenian scholar, as far as we know, has ever expressed distrust of his ability. The next paper is 'On the Purpose of the World-Process and the Problem of Evil as explained in the Clementine and Lactantian Writings in a System of Subordinate Dualism.' The writer, Mr. F. W. Bussell, in the first part explains his own philosophical position. He is what he calls a Personalist, and his belief is expressed in these words: "The true life of the world is seen to consist of one relation only, a personal God in immediate contact with personal man." He unfolds the consequences of this belief. On the one hand, "the idea of an Evil Spirit, who in a sense thwarts and in another fulfils the designs of Providence, is by no means an obsolete superstition, but a doctrine of the highest truth and importance." On the other hand, "it is clear that omnipotence, in the usual sense of the word, can no longer form one of the primary attributes of the Divine Nature." In this part Mr. Bussell shows considerable metaphysical power, wide philosophical reading, and great lucidity in the expression of his thoughts. In the other parts he furnishes the readers with citations from the Clementine homilies and Lactantius in regard to God, the Devil, and evil. This part is not so well done, though it is good. There is a curious blending of Greek, Latin, and English. One feels that the passages would be more intelligible if they were read in their context. Mr. Bussell moreover does not seem to have made a thorough study of the books from which he makes extracts. He has only one critical reference to the text of the Clementine homilies, and it shows that he has not referred to the notes of Wieseler and of other commentators or to more recent translations. There are also misprints in Greek, such as συγκιρνάντος for συγκρίναντος, unless he means this for an emendation; and accents are misplaced, as ἡγέμονες for ἡγεμόνες. Mr. E. W. Watson is the author of the last article. The subject is 'The Style and Language of St. Cyprian.' It is an admirable piece of work. Mr. Watson has made a masterly study of St. Cyprian's treatises, he has availed himself of all modern researches, and he exhibits great critical ability. It is the most valuable contribution in the book.

Ante-Nicene Library. Additional Volume. Edited by Dr Allan Menzies. (Edinburgh, Clark.)—Twenty-five years have passed since this most useful series came to a close, and all who are unfamiliar with ancient languages will rejoice that the work is now being brought up to date. Among the contents of the new volume one notices Origen's commentaries on Matthew and John, the fresh leaves of 1 and 2 Clement, the 'Apology of Aristides,' the 'Gospel of Peter,' the 'Passion of the Scillitan Martyrs,' the 'Narrative of Zosimus,' and the 'Acts of Xantippe.' The prize put into our hands is indeed an exceptionally rich one, but there are some traces of undue haste in publication. For example, in the index to Origen one finds that 'The Gospel according to the Hebrews' has quite escaped notice; and, in the text, that the remarkable addition to that Gospel which the Latin version of Origen supplies is passed over in silence. In the comparison of the Peter Gospel with canonical matter, the parallelism to Mark xvi. 10, John xix. 34, is unrecognized. And one may doubt, too, whether in some cases the editor has been altogether judicious in his selection. The Apocalypses of Paul and of Mary are almost certainly post-Nicene, and in any case ought to have waited until justice had been done to such important works as Lagarde's 'Syriac Recognitions,' the 'Proverbs of Xystus,' the 'Pistis Sophia,' and the Papias-Hegesippus-Pierius fragments which De Boor has recently detected in Philippus Sidetes. These, together with the 'Dialogue of Aristo,' now appearing in the Expositor, and the 'Gospel of Mary,' about to be published in Germany, will, it may be hoped, soon form part of a supplement. But it would be unjust to take leave of the present work with expressions of dispraise. The volume is as a whole a beautiful one, and will certainly earn wide gratitude.

CATALOGUES OF MANUSCRIPTS.

A Guide to the Manuscripts, Autographs, Charters, &c., exhibited in the Department of Manuscripts and in the Grenville Library.—Facsimiles of Royal, Historical, Literary, and other Autographs in the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. First and Second Series. (Printed by order of the Trustees.)—The 'Guide,' intended for popular use, is full of instruction, and is, as becomes its source, unimpeachably accurate. We cannot but think, however, that, in view of the objects of its publication, greater attention should have been paid to that portion which deals with autographs, whether letters or literary works. Special care has been given to the chronicles, illuminated and other manuscripts, such as the Greek and Latin, and the papyri; but for one of the public who will look at these, a hundred will look at the autographs. The 'Guide' is also intended to serve as a handbook to the facsimiles which the Trustees have had beautifully executed by the process of photo-lithography.

As Mr. Scott, the Keeper of the Manuscripts, says in his few words of introduction to the facsimiles, "they have all been carefully selected with a view to direct attention, so far as possible, to the leading events and most prominent persons in each reign. The student is thus enabled to follow English history, at least in outline, in the actual handwriting of those who have most largely contributed to make it." We remark that some of the documents have their dates given in the facsimile, but a large number have not, except in the printed under-line. It is obvious that a certain value is lacking to the facsimile, unless the original date and signature are included in it. In No. 6, though the date is not wanting on the face of the document, the endorsement has been facsimiled on the plate. The same could have been done in other cases where the date was not on the face of the record. No. 8, the instructions of Charles I. to Sir Edward Herbert relative to the Five Members, is another example of what can be done in a series like this by bringing together, not two parts of one document, but even parts of two different documents. We may notice, by the way, that the later instruction to Sir Edward Herbert is evidently not in Charles I.'s hand. Again, Mr. Scott says, and with much force, "It would be easy to pick out plates from the present instalment which might profitably be used as texts or illustrations for historical lectures." The Trustees have done a good work in issuing these aids to history.

At first the value of the work was lessened by the autograph letters referred to not being printed in extenso, but since the publication of the facsimiles the Trustees have wisely supplemented it by printing the full text of the several letters, and the various portions given of journals and similar documents. The letterpress is edited by Mr. George F. Warner, Assistant Keeper of Manuscripts, and he has done his work with great accuracy. A welcome promise is given that the printed text will be supplied with future issues of the facsimiles.

The first series of these facsimiles appeared in 1895, and already, with commendable zeal, the Museum authorities have published a second. The reproductions are excellent, and maintain the high reputation acquired by the Museum for similar work in the past. Although, to avoid the multiplication of plates, only portions of some letters are reproduced, yet the full text is printed with the facsimiles, and for this boon the public will be thankful; for, except to experts, much of the writing is very difficult to decipher. Perhaps the worst hands in this series are those of John Pym, Napoleon I., and Martin Luther. The educational value of these facsimiles is great and has been recognized, a fact that will encourage the Trustees to the regular publication of further reproductions from their magnificent collection. Each series is complete in itself, and illustrates several centuries, whilst the price is extremely small. The letters in this second series have been singularly well chosen, and extend from Henry V. to Lord Tennyson. One of the most remarkable is that by Claverhouse on his defeat at Drumclog. It is strange to see Napoleon writing from Egypt in 1798, "Je n'ai plus que de quoi vivre," or to hear the mild William Cowper, when denouncing Johnson's biography of Milton, declaring of the burly Doctor, "Oh! I could thresh his old jacket till I made his pension jingle in his pocket," or to be assured by Edward Gibbon that he considers "religion as the best guide of youth and the best support of old age." Letters by Anne Boleyn, Lord Burghley, James I., Lord Clive, William Pitt, Edmund Burke, and many others are to be found here. We congratulate the Trustees on the success that has attended one of their latest enterprises.

I Codici Francesi della R. Biblioteca Nazionale di S. Marco in Venezia. Descritti e illustrati dal Prof. Domenico Ciampoli. (Venice, Olschki.) — The French manuscripts of St. Mark's Library are mostly well known. They were mentioned briefly by Zanetti in 1746 at the end of his 'Græca, Latina, et Italica D. Marci Bibliotheca Codicum Manuscriptorum,' and all, or at any rate the most important of them, were described by M. Paul Lacroix fifty years ago. Since that time those belonging to the Middle Ages (and this date covers most of them) have been the object of notices or various publications by numerous German, French, and Italian scholars, among whom we may mention the names of A. Keller, I. Bekker, Guessard, L. Gautier, Ant. Thomas, Mussafia, P. Meyer, and Bartoli. The history of these MSS. is as familiar as their contents since the publication in 1880 in the Romania of an inventory drawn up in 1407 of the rich library of the Gonzaga family of Mantua. This account has shown that the most valuable of the French MSS. of St. Mark's belonged to the Gonzagas, and were, some of them at any rate, executed for that family. This fact, taken with others elsewhere stated, is sufficient evidence that in the fourteenth century French was, properly speaking, the literary language of a large part of Northern Italy. We did not then expect to find in Signor Ciampoli's catalogue anything like a revelation. We do not, however, wish to say that it is useless. On the contrary, it would have been convenient for purposes of research to possess an exact description of the French MSS. of St. Mark's, with some indication of the publications in which they have been treated and a short résumé of the history of each of them. Unfortunately the present catalogue is in no way equal to our expectations. Prof. Ciampoli is evidently a novice in bibliographical study, and has an insufficient knowledge of the works which have been devoted to the MSS. which he has described. He reproduces and quotes at great length the opinions of M. Paul Lacroix (the celebrated Bibliophile Jacob), which are often erroneous. He copies, with faults of reading unchanged, selections already edited by this bibliographer. Yet he has missed much of the latest writing on the subject. To be convinced of this, it is only necessary to read the letter of Prof. Crescini, which the author is candid enough to print as an appendix. Prof. Crescini, in fact, saw the catalogue when it was already in print, but not yet published, and pointed out to the author a crowd of omissions and mistakes, concluding with the words, "Many additions are needed." And, indeed, it would be easy to fill several columns with corrections and additions. It is when he has to describe a MS. without the help of M. Paul Lacroix, his usual guide, that Prof. Ciampoli is absolutely at sea. To give an instance, the MS. registered under No. 26 is beyond all dispute an incomplete copy of the 'Grandes Chroniques' of Saint Denys. A comparison with the edition of Paulin Paris is enough to prove it. It is then surprising to find this MS. regarded as a fragment of Froissart's chronicles, and Prof. Ciampoli presenting us, as in duty bound, with a long and yet very incomplete bibliography of the editions of Froissart. If he had taken the trouble to compare his MS. with any one of these editions, he would have seen that there is no connexion whatever between the two. The mistakes he makes in the extracts which he gives from this MS. are extraordinary. In the first line he writes "apres le despassement" for trespassement, and a few lines lower down "le conte dalemon" for d'Alençon. From the preface we gather that Prof. Ciampoli was officially selected to make this catalogue. No more deplorable choice could have been made.

TRANSLATIONS FROM THE GREEK POETS.

Some twelve or thirteen years ago three Oxford undergraduates published a volume of verse entitled 'Love in Idleness,' the most notable pieces in which were two studies on Homeric subjects by Mr. J. W. Mackail. They were perhaps Homeric in subject rather than in manner; but to one of them, a soliloquy by Nausicaa after the departure of Odysseus from Phæacia, may fairly be ascribed the impulse which has now led Mr. Mackail to publish a translation of the sixth book of the Odyssey in the same metre, Odysseus in Phæacia (Nutt). So far as scholarship goes, Mr. Mackail's reputation answers for itself. One knows beforehand that his version will be at once faithful and graceful. But it is rather as a metrical experiment that his little volume is interesting; and we are bound to add that it is not a wholly successful experiment. Like the earlier poem of 'Nausicaa,' the translation is written in the quatrains of Fitzgerald's 'Omar Khayyam,' and the comparison of the two is instructive. The measured cadence of the stanza, the rise of tone in the unrhymed third line and its relapse in the fourth, suits the melancholy and meditative character of the Oriental poem; but Homer's free and flowing narrative refuses to be shut up within such narrow bounds. The sense overflows the stanza oftener than not, and thereby the special effect of the metre is destroyed. The fourth line, which should round off the sense to its conclusion, is of no greater account than the others, and indeed is felt rather as an obstacle than as a climax. Thus, in 'Nausicaa,' where Mr. Mackail was free to match the sound and the sense to one another, only four stanzas out of twenty end otherwise than with a full stop; whereas in an equal number of stanzas of 'Odysseus in Phæacia' the proportion is exactly reversed. A concrete example may be given from each poem. In 'Nausicaa' the princess meditates thus:—

> O splendour of the sunset as we went
> Past the ploughed fields to where the poplar bent
> About Athene's spring, that, rising there,
> Down the King's Meadow its white water sent!

The corresponding passage in 'Odysseus in Phæacia' runs as follows:—

> Now, guest, mark well my words; and they are these:
> So at my father's hands you may with ease
> Find convoy and home-coming. You will note
> Athena's goodly grove of poplar-trees,
>
> By the roadside: therein a spring wells out;
> And the king's close and croft lie round about
> In the rich meadow, as far off the town
> As a man's voice will carry if he shout.

If we admit a preference for 'Nausicaa' over 'Odysseus in Phæacia,' it does not follow that Mr. Mackail is to be regarded as a greater poet than the author of the sixth book of the Odyssey, but rather that his representation of Homer is not wholly successful. But Mr. Mackail is too good a scholar and poet to expect complete success in such a task; and as an interesting experiment we can cordially recommend his version.

The second volume of Mr. A. S. Way's Tragedies of Euripides in English Verse (Macmillan & Co.) fairly maintains the good promise of the first, to which we were able to give a warm welcome two years ago. If, nevertheless, it is somewhat less interesting to read, the blame may be imputed rather to the author than to the translator. The plays contained in this volume are 'Andromache,' 'Heracleidæ,' 'Troades,' 'Electra,' 'Helen,' and 'Hercules Furens'—a list which includes a large proportion of what are generally reputed to be the weakest of Euripides's plays, and none of his greatest masterpieces. It is, perhaps, owing to a perception of this fact that Mr. Way has prefixed to this volume a long essay on Euripides and his works, vindicating the poet from the aspersions which have been cast upon him by modern critics. His defence would be more effective if the language in which it is couched were less flowery and rhetorical. Still, it is not necessary to condemn Euripides in order to exalt Æschylus and Sophocles, and Mr. Way does well to protest against the exaggerated denunciations of Schlegel and Donaldson. Probably, however, the poet's most influential advocate will be found in a brother poet, and Browning's 'Balaustion' and 'Aristophanes' Apology' will do more to rehabilitate him than any number of prose essays. We shall look with much interest for Mr. Way's concluding volume, in which he has still to render the 'Orestes,' the two 'Iphigenias,' and, above all, the 'Bacchæ.' The last of these will furnish free scope for the Swinburnian rhythms of Mr. Way's choruses; but we hope he will try to attain greater smoothness in the use of them than he shows generally in the present volume. The metres are Swinburnian, but the Swinburnian music is too often wanting. The joints of the rhythm seem to creak and move heavily. A rapid rhythm will not bear slow, many-consonanted words. Even the blank verse would sometimes be better for a more careful study of rhythmical expedients. But in spite of this defect we are glad to recognize in this second volume a faithful and poetical version of the great and once popular tragedian, and wish Mr. Way success in what remains of his task of producing the first complete translation of Euripides into English verse within the present century.

Songs from the Greek. Translated by Jane Minot Sedgwick. (Lane.)—Perhaps the pleasantest form of translation from the classics, at least for those who can read the originals, is that which confines itself to rendering select passages and short poems, instead of complete works. The translator can then devote himself to the more congenial parts of his task, and need publish only such versions as seem to him reasonably successful. In addition, if he selects, as he will naturally do, passages of noted beauty or especial interest, some part of the inspiration of the original is likely to attach itself to his translation. Of course this is to ignore the very important service which the translation of complete plays and long poems may do to those who cannot read the originals; it is spoken from the point of view of those to whom translations are merely a graceful and pleasant amusement. It is to such that Miss Sedgwick's little volume will chiefly appeal, containing as it does versions of a few selected odes from Sophocles and Euripides, and a few poems or fragments of poems by Theocritus, Moschus, Sappho, and the poets of the 'Anthology.' Miss Sedgwick's translations come near a high degree of success, without quite attaining it. She has the great merit of writing natural English, not translators' English, and she uses English metres which are easy and straightforward. This of course necessitates a certain amount of freedom of rendering, to which we make no objection; but unfortunately Miss Sedgwick's expansions and paraphrases are often rather flat. For instance, the last lines of Theocritus's eighth idyl, κὴκ τούτω Δάφνις παρὰ ποιμέσι πρᾶτος ἔγεντο,

καὶ νύμφαν, ἄκρηβος ἐὼν ἔτι, Ναΐδα γᾶμεν, are rendered thus:—

> From this time forth victorious Daphnis headed
> His brother shepherds, as they say in truth;
> And at his bridal the fair Naiad wedded,
> Although as yet in very earliest youth.

Few of the poems are without some weakness of this sort, and it is this that makes them fail of real success. There are, however, many pretty things among them, as, for example, the well-known lines of Sophocles (μὴ φῦναι, κ.τ.λ.):

> Man's happiest lot is never
> To draw in vital breath,
> And his second best is ever
> To be early freed by death.

The pieces chosen are all worth translation, and a pleasing feature is the use that is made of the fragmentary remains of lost poets. These, in the nature of things, cannot appear in the larger translations, but are often eminently suited to volumes of selections such as this. They have in many cases been preserved to us through having been inserted in ancient anthologies, and may well be transferred to modern collections. Indeed, we have sometimes wondered why no scholar with a turn for verse translation has given us a version of part at least of Stobæus. Among the fragments utilized by Miss Sedgwick is one from Bacchylides, which, though not in his most exalted vein, is worth quoting now, when the poet is on the eve of coming forth to the fuller light of day. It is a fair specimen of the translator's style:—

> A sweet compelling power in the fire
> Of wine doth the awakening brain inspire,
> When, mixed with Dionysos' generous gift,
> Soft hopes of love the throbbing heart uplift.
>
> Then is a man absorbed by lofty cares
> The battlements of towered walls he dares
> To overthrow, and thinks that he may reign
> O'er all mankind, himself sole sovereign.
>
> His house is built of gold and ivory;
> Rich argosies, incoming from the sea,
> Bring him from Egypt heaps of glistening grain:
> And, as he drinks, his thoughts are bold and vain.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Two books which concern Australia reach us at the same time, and are published in London by Messrs. Simpkin & Co., and in Sydney by Messrs. Angus & Robertson. The one is The Coming Commonwealth: an Australian Handbook of Federal Government, by Mr. R. R. Garran, which is a useful introduction to the study of systems of Federal government in all countries.

The second book of the two to which we have referred is of extraordinary interest, although it consists only of the letters of a working man to his family. It is An Emigrant's Home Letters, being a collection of letters to his family written by the late Sir Henry Parkes, G.C.M.G., between 1838 and 1844. This correspondence of the future Prime Minister of the mother colony of Australia is altogether superior to the poetry and the other writings of Sir Henry Parkes. The simple and dignified pathos with which the wretched story of his early struggles is related has touched us more than any book which has come before us for many days. Little passages about the most trivial concerns—the care of the dog that he has left behind, his poor library, the price of bread, and such like matters—are beyond almost anything of the kind in literature, and we commend the courage with which his family have issued to the world letters which in one way may be called too sacred to be read, but which as an account of distressing circumstances borne with high spirit are an example to the world. There is courage, too, in publishing in Australia Parkes's frank statement:—

> "I have been disappointed in all my expectations of Australia, except as to its wickedness; for it is far more wicked than I had conceived it possible for any place to be, or than it is possible for me to describe to you in England."

It is largely owing to Parkes—admitting everything that can be said against him—that Australia is a better place in the present day. As a specimen of the letters, we quote one:—

> "Beloved father and mother, I feel as if they were already in their graves. A father and mother bowed down with years of affliction, and steeped in poverty and wretchedness. The very thought seems to make me unhappy for ever, when I know that half the circumference of the globe will shortly lie between us. Farewell, my father and mother, my fond affectionate parents. God Almighty bless them, and provide for their few remaining years better than I can hope they will be provided for. May they be daily surprised with comforts, and may floods of unexpected joy continually descend into their hearts. Another letter, and another, and perhaps another, and then my next letter will be dated on the blue, wide ocean, where I can have no answer—and then more than a long weary year must pass away before I can hear from you again. Yes, my beloved sister, I shall soon leave you, even as you come to me in your affectionate letters. The very name of Birmingham will no longer meet my eye, except when I unconsciously write it on some part of the ship that bears me over the beaming waters, or on some gloomy tree in the wilderness of Australia. I shall hear no more of Birmingham except from my own tongue, or from my weeping wife's, when we think of those dear friends who live there, and of those angel-infants of our own, who sleep there in their little graves. And when I do hear from you again, will it be of death?"

MM. Perrin & Cie. publish Une Fiancée de Napoléon: Désirée Clary, Reine de Suède, by the Comtesse d'Armaillé, a little volume which we are unable to praise, as it does not strike us as being very ably put together. The author apparently tries to please Bonapartists by smoothing over the circumstances under which Bonaparte jilted the future Madame Bernadotte, and married Josephine; and says: "By a strange coincidence the abandonment of the sweetest hope of the youth of Napoleon was almost exactly coincident to a day with the circumstance which was to decide his military future." Either the author is a singularly simple person, or this is an odd way of stating that, in marrying into the circle of the all-powerful Barras, Bonaparte received as his dowry, under discreditable circumstances, the command which was to make his fame. We do not remember whether it has been remarked that Bernardine Eugénie Désirée Clary, although always called Désirée by herself, was called Eugénie by Bonaparte, and, had she married him, would have reigned as the first empress of that name.

The house of Calmann Lévy have printed the second volume of the letters of Pozzo di Borgo, while Russian ambassador at Paris, to Count Nesselrode. This volume takes us from January, 1817, to the conference of Aix-la-Chapelle in September, 1818. It is almost wholly devoted to the negotiations with the Duke of Wellington for the evacuation of France by the allied forces under his command.

Of all the literary impostors who are playing with the French public M. Paul Fort, next to M. Péladan, is the most wild. His Ballades Françaises, published by the Société du Mercure de France (which spells not only its own name but that of a respectable street with v's for u's), is a series of "thoughts," written, as his friends explain, neither in verse nor in prose, but in the intermediate style "which is alone complete," "the literary style of the future." In addition to being neither in verse nor prose, it is in slang, a large number of vowels being omitted, according to the vulgarest of Parisian pronunciation, in the style of some of the heroines of "Gyp." We might be willing to forgive these ridiculous eccentricities if there were any substance in the "thoughts" themselves; but there is not, or, if there is, we entirely fail to find it. When recently a book of M. Péladan was sent us for notice we declined to criticize it, but we must take the present opportunity, as the epidemic apparently continues to prevail, of condoling with the literary people who claim with pride to have the most perfect of modern literary schools and of modern styles on this attempt to make France ridiculous.

Edmondo de Amicis has reprinted in an édition de luxe the somewhat slight and superficial lecture he delivered last year at Turin on the subject of anonymous letters, La Lettera Anonima (Milan, Treves). The book is charmingly illustrated with little vignette sketches interpolated in the text, but whether that text was worth reprinting is doubtful. As a spoken discourse it may have beguiled an idle hour; as a printed book and an attempt to study psychologically a form of social plague which is particularly rampant in Italy, where both men and women are apt to lack moral courage, it is ineffective and inadequate.

In their new "Diamond Library" Messrs. Chapman & Hall have sent us A Collection of Ballads, edited by Mr. Lang, and English Sonnets, edited by Mr. Quiller-Couch. Both editors are, as might be expected, quite at home with their subjects, and the little volumes are well printed on good paper. Mr. Lang is pleasantly learned on the ballads, but "Q" should not leave references in such a state as "Horace, Carm., line 16." We do not care for the illustrations, still less for the figure in red which stares from the cover.

Messrs. Routledge publish in their "Olive Books" Poems, by E. B. Browning, which is spoilt by the crowding of print on the pages.

Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Co. have added to their wonderfully cheap "Burleigh Library" an excellent reprint of Mary Barton.—Messrs. Clowes & Sons have reissued at a lower price Serjeant Pulling's gossipy volume The Order of the Coif.

We have on our table Pius the Seventh, 1800-1823, by Mary H. Allies (Burns & Oates),—Sir James Y. Simpson, by E. B. Simpson (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier),—The Historical Development of Modern Europe, by C. M. Andrews: Vol. I., 1815-1850 (Putnam),—Livy, Book I., by J. K. Lord (Boston, U.S., Leach, Shewell & Sanborn),—Greek Inflection, by B. F. Harding (Ginn & Co.),—Lectures on French Literature, by Irma Dreyfus (Longmans),—Studies in Interpretation, by W. H. Hudson (Putnam),—Socialism and Catholicism, from the Italian of Count Edward Soderini by Richard Jenery-Shee (Longmans),—A Series of Lessons in Articulation and Lip-Reading, by R. Elliott (Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb, Old Kent Road),—Outlines of Psychology, by W. Wundt, translated by C. H. Judd (Williams & Norgate),—Physiography for Beginners, by A. T. Simmons (Macmillan),—Arnold's School Shakespeare: The Tragedy of King Richard the Third, edited by F. P. Barnard (Arnold),—The Primer of English History, by T. J. Livesey and S. B. Thorp (Burns & Oates),—A Guide to Modern Photography, by H. Baker (Iliffe),—Beauty and Art, by A. Heaton (Heinemann),—Mercantile Practice, by G. Johnson (Wilson),—The Crichton Royal Institution, Dumfries, by J. Carmont (Leicester, Raithby, Lawrence & Co),—The Land Question in North Wales, by J. E. Vincent (Longmans),—Grandmother Gwen, by the Author of 'Earth's Many Voices' (S.P.C.K.),—The Children of Melby Hall, by M. and J. M'Kean (Chambers),—A Boyar of the Terrible, by F. Whishaw (Longmans),—A Thankful Heart, by Lady Dunboyne (S.P.C.K.),—Golden Chimes, and other Poems, by A. H. Gray (Stock),—Peeps into Bird Life, by A. Donne (Simpkin),—Scientific Theology, by Vox (Marshall, Russell & Co.),—A History of the Hebrew People, by C. F. Kent (Smith, Elder & Co.),—The Clock of Nature, by H. Macmillan, D.D. (Isbister),—Das Schauspiel im Schauspiel zur Zeit Shaksperes, by Dr. Hans Schwab (Vienna, Braumüller),—Les Origines de la Monnaie, by M. E. Babelon (Paris, Firmin-Didot),—and Die Lyrik Lydgates, by E. Gattinger (Vienna, Braumüller). Among New Editions we have Quiet Hours, by J. Pulsford, D.D. (Melrose),—A Paradise of English Poetry, arranged by H. C. Beeching (Rivington),—The Loss of John Humble, by G. Norway (Blackie),—French Book-Plates, by W. Hamilton (Bell),—and The Confession of St. Augustine (Melrose).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Barlowe's (Bp.) Dialogue on the Lutheran Factions, with Introduction by J. R. Lunn, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Bell's (Rev. G. C.) Religious Teaching in Secondary Schools, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Dionysius the Areopagite, Works of, translated by Rev. J. Parker, 12mo. 6/ cl.
Farrar's (F. W.) The Bible, its Meaning and Supremacy, 15/
My Life in Christ, Extracts from the Diary of the Most Rev. J. I. Sergieff, 8vo. 9/ cl.
Ourselves in relation to a Deity and a Church, 8vo. 6/ net, cl.
Patton's (Rev. W. J.) Pardon and Assurance, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Spence's (Very Rev. H. D. M.) The Church of England, a History for the People, Vol. 1, imp. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Law.

Ashburner's (W.) A Concise Treatise on Mortgages, Pledges, &c., royal 8vo. 25/ cl.
Beach's (C. F.) The Modern Law of Contract, 2 vols. 65/ cl.
Jelf's (R. A.) Where to Find your Law, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Wines's (F. H.) The Liquor Problem in its Legislative Aspect, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Handbook to Christian and Ecclesiastical Rome, by H. M. and M. A. R. T., Part 1, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Poetry.

Douglas's (H.) The Silver Cross, a Collection of Poems and Hymns for the Sick and Suffering, 18mo. 3/6 cl.

Bibliography.

Hazlitt's (W. C.) The Confessions of a Collector, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

History and Biography.

Baddeley's (St. C.) Robert the Wise and his Heirs, 1278-1352, 8vo. 21/ cl.
Boswell's Life of Johnson, ed. P. Fitzgerald, imp. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Bryan's (W. J.) The First Battle, a Story of the Campaign of 1896, illus. 8vo. 10/6 net, cl.
Carlyle's Oliver Cromwell's Letters and Speeches, Vol. 2, Centenary Edition, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Eggleston's (E.) The Beginners of a Nation, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Hammond's (Mrs. J. H.) A Woman's Part in a Revolution, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Mitchell's (J. O.) Burns and his Times as gathered from his Poems, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Omond's (G. W. T.) The Early History of the Scottish Union Question, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Parkes, Sir H., Life of, by C. E. Lyne, 8vo. 16/ cl.
Royal Navy, by W. L. Clowes, assisted by Sir C. Markham and others, illus., Vol. 1, 4to. 25/ net, cl.

Geography and Travel.

Bowles's (C. and S. M.) A Nile Voyage of Recovery, 7/6 swd.
Clifford's (H.) In Court and Kampong, Tales and Sketches of Native Life in the Malay Peninsula, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Picturesque America, Vol. 4, 4to. 18/ cl.
Workman's (F. B.) Sketches Awheel in Fin de Siècle Iberia, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Philology.

Bohn's Classical Library: The Poems of Horace, a Literal Translation by A. H. Bryce, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Science.

Bailey's (L. H.) The Forcing Book, a Manual of the Cultivation of Vegetables in Glass Houses, cr. 8vo. 4/ net, cl.
Elder's (W.) Aphasia and the Cerebral Speech Mechanism, illus. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Fenwick's (W. S.) The Disorders of Digestion in Infancy and Childhood, illus. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Matthews (C. P.) and Shearer's (J.) Problems and Questions in Physics, 8vo. 7/6 net, cl.

General Literature.

Belloc's (B. R.) A Passing World, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Christian's (S.) A Pot of Honey, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Constance's (O.) Opals, 12mo. 3/6 net, cl.
Curtis's (E.) His Double Self, or the Transformation of Keith Winstanley, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Cyclist's Year-Book, 1897, 2/ net, sewed.
Flowerdew's (H.) In an Ancient Mirror, 16mo. 2/6 sewed.
Grimshaw's (B. K.) Broken Away, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Halévy's (L.) Abbé Constantin, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Higgins's (L.) Cousin Jem, a Sepia Sketch, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Housman's (L.) Gods and their Makers, 12mo 3/6 net, cl.
Jocelyn's (Mrs. R.) Only a Flirt, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Kernahan's (C.) Capt. Shannon, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Marryat's Works, Uniform Edition: Little Savage, Valerie, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net each, cl.
Peacock's (F. M.) A Friendship after Plato, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Pemberton (A. C.) and others' The Complete Cyclist, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Perceval's (H.) In a Country Town, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Prior's (J.) Ripple and Flood, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Spencer's (E.) Cakes and Ale, a Memory of Many Meals, 5/
Tales from the Ranks, Recollections of Service during the Queen's Reign, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Wood's (Mrs. H.) Ashley, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Baur (J. B.): Argumenta contra Orientalem Ecclesiam eiusque Synodicam Encyclicam a. MDCCCXCV., 2m.
Chable (D. F.): Die Wunder Jesu in ihrem innern Zusammenhange betrachtet, 2m.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Aegyptiaca, Festschrift f. G. Ebers, 20m.
Soria (H. de): Histoire Pittoresque de la Danse, 15fr.

Poetry and the Drama.

Fontainas (A.): Crépuscules, 3fr. 50.
Vigié-Lecocq (E.): La Poésie Contemporaine, 1884-1896, 3fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Eisenhofer (L.): Procopius v. Gaza, 2m.
Foucart (Comm.): Bautzen, 20-21 Mai, 1813, 5fr.
Perrens (F. T.): Les Libertins en France au XVII. Siècle, 8fr.

Geography and Travel.

Grande Carte Cycliste des Environs de Paris, 2fr.; Du Nord de la France et de la Belgique, 0fr. 75.

Science.

Buchner (G.): Lehrbuch der Chemie: Part 1, Chemie der Nichtmetalle u. Metalle, 5m. 50.
Haacke (W.): Grundriss der Entwickelungsmechanik, 12m.
Montpellier (J. A.): Les Dynamos, 16fr.

General Literature.

Benoist (C.): La Crise de l'État Moderne, 10fr.
Cladel (L.): Juive-Errante, 3fr. 50.
Duboc (É.): Le Point Faible de l'Angleterre, 0fr. 25.
Frapié (L.): L'Institutrice de Province, 3fr. 50.
Gildemeister (O.): Essays, 2 vols. 6m.
Leblanc (M.): Armelle et Claude, 3fr. 50.
Mauclair (C.): L'Orient Vierge, 3fr. 50.
Queyssie (E. de la): Acte de Raison, 3fr. 50.
Reinach (J.): Œuvres Oratoires de Challemel-Lacour, 10fr.

UBALDINO AND THE ARMADA.

The discovery of Petruccio Ubaldino's account of the Armada campaign, by which Prof. Laughton was able to identify Howard's official 'Relation,' was one of the most interesting features of his collection of Armada papers. Since then a still more interesting MS. by the same hand, and in the same place, has come to light. This is a second 'Commentary' by Ubaldino. The first, as is well known, was merely a translation of Howard's 'Relation of Proceedings,' with a few amplifications and additions, notably one excusing Drake's chase of the Hanseatic hulks the night after the Plymouth action. The second one just discovered is much more full. It is entitled 'Commentario della Impresa fatta contra il Regno d' Inghilterra dal Re Catholico l' anno 1588 per la Relation et Instruttione del Illmo. Caval. Franco. Drake, Vice-Ammiraglio, et altri huomini honorati che nell' Armata erano.' The dedication is to Drake's staunch patron Sir Christopher Hatton, in whose honour Drake changed the name of the Pelican to the Golden Hind. It begins thus:—

"Forasmuch as last year, most illustrious and excellent Sir, I was desired and requested by the illustrious knight Sir Francis Drake to be pleased to put into my mother tongue what befell that summer upon these seas between the fleets," &c.

The date is "London, New Year's Day, 1590." In this long-unnoticed paper we have undoubtedly the most valuable contemporary narrative of the memorable campaign. Its genuineness is indisputable. From internal evidence it is clear that Ubaldino was not only instructed by Drake, but must have been furnished by him with copies of his despatches to prove how unjust to him was Howard's 'Relation.' Drake's sudden disappearance from the front rank in 1588 has long been a suspicious mystery. Up till that time, and again in the following year, he was recognized as the leader of English naval enterprise, and yet in the received accounts of the 1588 campaign he seems to sink to the level of the rest of Howard's prominent captains. The mystery is now solved. We have at last Drake's own account of the matter, and we find that as far as it goes—only, unfortunately, up to the arrival of the Armada in the Channel—it differs lamentably from Howard's. Certain statements of the Lord Admiral's, which make him appear the real director of the campaign, we already knew were an inaccurate representation of what really happened. It is just these passages that are altered in Ubaldino's revised version, and in a sense that is entirely endorsed by extant documents. The self-restraint of Drake's defence of himself is one of the most remarkable features of the document. From Spanish accounts it is clear he might have said much more. Indeed, there is no trace of his having troubled himself to answer Howard at all until the Lord Admiral attempted to get his garbled story disseminated through Europe by means of Ubaldino's translation. It was then apparently Drake determined, in justice to himself, to set the actual facts of the case plainly before the world, and Ubaldino's second commentary is the result. To give in detail the whole of the evidence as to the true significance of the newly found document is impossible. How Drake was smarting under the wrong that was being done him is apparent throughout. In a forthcoming life of him I trust to deal fully with the new and unexpected light thrown on the well-worn tale that has so long passed current.

Julian Corbett.

P.S.—Since writing the above I have found in the Florence archives (Archiveo Mediceo, 4185) two letters written by Ubaldino from London to his prince, Ferdinand Medici, Grand Duke of Tuscany. In the first of these, dated August 12th, 1589, he enclosed the long-lost account of the Armada campaign for the Grand Duke's acceptance. The letter, which is in the same hand as the British Museum MSS., runs as follows:—

"Il signor Lorenzo Guicciardini mi hai piu volte accenuto che saria stato bene che V.A. ser^ma^ havesse ricivuto da me qualche sommario dell' armata passata sopra questo mare l' anno precedente, sapendo lui, ch' io scriveva quelle cose. L' ho finalmente scritto, et di mia mano, et non stampato ne si stamperà. Et so, che da quei, che si adoperarono in ogni parte di quei fatti, io n' ho di propria bocca havuto sicura instruttione. Si degni adunque V.A. Ser^ma^ di ricever questa mia fatica; prima, che per lei passa il mare, se non per completa historia, al meno trama opportuna," &c.

It is possible that after Drake's failure and disgrace in the summer of 1589 Hatton was unwilling to become sponsor of his defence, and that Ubaldino, in order not to lose his labour, resolved to send the MS. to his prince. In any case the letter makes it certain that the account was never printed in England, and explains how it thus became inaccessible to English historians. The remainder of the letter refers to Ubaldino's previous works, and shows him as an author of some pretensions. He had already sent the Grand Duke a work on Scotland, and had written another on the illustrious members of the Medici family. The complete list of his works which he enclosed is missing, but several, perhaps all, of them are in the British Museum.

THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

THE 'Dictionary of National Biography' is now rapidly approaching completion. Below we publish a further instalment of the final list of names which it is proposed to insert. Cross-references are excluded. When one date is given, it is the date of death, unless otherwise stated. An asterisk is affixed to a date when it is only approximate. The editor of the 'Dictionary' will be obliged by any notice of omissions addressed to him at Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.'s, 15, Waterloo Place, S.W. He particularly requests that when new names are suggested, an indication may be given of the source from which they are derived.

Wetenhall or Whetenhall, Edward, Bishop of Kilmore, 1636-1713
Wetherall, Sir Frederick, general, 1754-1842
Wetherall, Sir George Augustus, general, 1788-1868
Wetherell, Sir Charles, politician, 1770-1846
Wetherset, Richard, Chancellor of Cambridge, fl. 1350
Wetwang, Sir John, captain R.N., 1684
Wewitzer, Ralph, actor, 1748*-1824
Weyland, John, writer on the poor laws, 1774-1854
Weyland, Thomas de, judge, fl. 1272
Weymouth, George, voyager, fl. 1620
Whalley, Col. Edward, regicide, fl. 1650
Whalley, George Hammond, politician, 1813-1878
Whalley, John, quack, 1654*-1724
Whalley, Peter, divine, 1722-1791
Whalley, Thomas, politician and eccentric, 1766-1800
Wharton, Anne, poet, 1685
Wharton, Edward Ross, scholar, 1896
Wharton, Sir George, soldier and author, 1617-1681
Wharton, Henry, chaplain to Archbishop Sancroft, 1664-1695
Wharton, John, author, fl. 1575
Wharton, Philip, 4th Baron Wharton, 1613-1695
Wharton, Philip, Duke of Wharton, 1699-1731
Wharton, Richard, politician and author, 1820*
Wharton, Sir Thomas, 1st Baron Wharton, 1501-1568
Wharton, Thomas, physician, 1610-1673
Wharton, Thomas, Marquis of Wharton, 1640-1715
Whately, Richard, Archbishop of Dublin, 1787-1863
Whately, Thomas, writer on gardening, 1772
Whately, Thomas, medical writer, 1821
Whately or Whateley, William, Puritan divine, 1583-1639
Whatton, William Robert, antiquary, 1790-1835
Wheare, Degory, Professor of Ancient History at Oxford, 1573-1647
Wheatley, Charles, divine, 1686-1742
Wheatley, Francis, painter, 1747-1801
Wheatstone, Sir Charles, inventor of the electric telegraph, 1802-1875
Wheeler, Daniel, Quaker author, 1771-1840
Wheeler, George Bomford, writer of school-books, 1805-1877
Wheeler, Sir Hugh M., defender of Cawnpore, 1789-1857
Wheeler, James Talboys, historian of India, 1897
Wheeler, John, 'A Treatise of Commerce,' fl. 1600
Wheeler, Maurice, 'The Oxford Almanack,' fl. 1695
Wheeler, Thomas, botanist, 1754-1848
Wheelocke, Abraham, Professor of Arabic at Cambridge, 1653
Wheler, Sir Francis, admiral, 1694
Wheler or Wheeler, Sir George, traveller, 1650-1724
Wheler, Robert Bell, historian of Stratford-upon-Avon, 1785-1857
Whelpdale, Roger, schoolman, 1422
Whetecroft, Henry, translator, fl. 1598
Whethamstede, John, Abbot of St. Albans, 1464
Whetstone, George, dramatist, fl. 1580
Whetstone, Sir William, admiral, fl. 1700
Whewell, William, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1794-1866
Whichcord, John, architect, 1823-1885
Whichcote, Benjamin, Provost of King's College, Cambridge, 1810-1883
Whichcote, George, general, 1794-1891
Whichelo, John, water-colourist, 1865
Whiddon, Jacob, sea captain, fl. 1585-1595
Whiddon, Sir John, judge, 1575
Whincop, Thomas, divine and dramatist, 1745
Whinyates, Sir Edward Charles, general, 1782-1865
Whipple, George Matthews, Superintendent of Kew Observatory, 1843-1893
Whish, Sir William Sampson, soldier, 1787-1853
Whishaw, Francis, engineer, 1804-1856
Whistler, Daniel, Gresham Professor of Geometry, 1684
Whiston, James, economic writer, fl. 1704
Whiston, William, divine, 1667-1752
Whitaker, Sir Edward, admiral, 1735
Whitaker, Sir Frederic, New Zealand Premier, 1891
Whitaker, John, historian of Manchester, 1735-1808
Whitaker, John, musical composer, 1776-1847
Whitaker, Joseph, founder of 'Whitaker's Almanack,' 1820-1895
Whitaker, Thomas Dunham, divine and antiquary, 1759-1821
Whitaker, Tobias, physician to Charles II., fl. 1660
Whitaker, William, Master of St. John's College, Cambridge, 1548-1595
Whitbourne, Richard, author and adventurer, fl. 1620
Whitbread, Samuel, brewer and politician, 1758-1815
Whitby, Daniel, theological writer, 1638-1726
Whitchurch, Edward, printer, fl. 1550
White, Andrew, Jesuit, 1579-1656
White, Anthony, surgeon, 1782-1849
White, Blanco, divine and author, 1775-1841
White, Charles, gynæcologist, 1728-1813
White, Francis, Bishop of Ely, 1638
White, Francis Buchanan, botanist, 1894
White, Gilbert, naturalist, 1720-1793
White, Henry, educational writer, 1880
White, Henry Kirke, poet, 1785-1806
White, James, miscellaneous writer, 1806-1862
White, James, founder of Jezreelites, 1840-1885
White, Jeremiah, chaplain to Cromwell, 1629-1707
White or Whyte, John, Bishop of Winchester, 1511-1560
White, John, divine, 1615
White, John ("Century White"), 1590-1645
White, John, Puritan divine, 1574-1648
White, John, founder of White's chocolate-house, 1768
White, John Tahourdin, classical scholar, 1810-1893
White, Joseph, Oriental scholar, 1746-1814
White, Sir Michael, general, 1791-1868
White, Sir Nicholas, Master of the Rolls in Ireland, fl. 1590
White, Patrick F., composer, 1875
White, Richard, Roman Catholic divine, 1584
White, Whyte, or Vitus, Richard, canonist, 1612
White, Richard, Roman Catholic divine, 1604-1687
White, Robert, organist, 1574
White, Robert, engraver, 1645-1704
White, Robert, Newcastle antiquary, 1802-1874
White, Robert Meadows, Professor of Anglo-Saxon at Oxford, 1798-1865
White, Samuel, schoolmaster, 1733-1811
White, Stephen, Irish Jesuit, fl. 1645
White, Sir Thomas, Lord Mayor and founder of St. John's College, Oxford, 1492-1566
White, Thomas, founder of Sion College, London, 1624
White, alias Woodhop, Thomas, Benedictine, 1583-1655
White, Thomas (Anglus), philosopher, 1582-1676
White, Thomas, Bishop of Peterborough, 1698
White, Thomas, surgeon, 1728-1813
White, Thomas, Canadian statesman, 1830-1888
White, Walter, miscellaneous writer, 1811-1893
White, William, divine, 1678
White, Sir William Arthur, ambassador, 1824-1891
White, Sir William Henry, C.B., military official, 1826-1893
Whitefield, George, divine, 1714-1770
Whitefoord, Caleb, wit and poet, 1734-1810
Whitehall, Robert, poet, 1685
Whitehead, Charles, author and critic, 1804-1862
Whitehead, David, divine, 1571
Whitehead, George, Quaker preacher, 1723
Whitehead, James, gynæcologist, 1812-1885
Whitehead, John, Quaker, 1696
Whitehead, John, M.D., biographer of John Wesley, 1740*-1804
Whitehead, Paul, author, 1710-1774
Whitehead, William, poet, 1715-1785
Whitehurst, John, horologer, 1713-1788
Whitelaw, James, author, 1749*-1813
Whitelocke, Bulstrode, regicide, 1605-1676
Whitelocke, Edmund, friend of Essex, 1565-1608
Whitelocke, Sir James, Justice of the King's Bench, 1570-1632
Whitelocke, John, general, 1759*-1808*
Whiter, Walter, philologist, 1759*-1832
Whiteside, James, Chief Justice in Ireland, 1806-1876
Whitfield, Henry, New England divine, 1597-1654*
Whitfield, John, musician, 1770-1836
Whitford, David, soldier and scholar, 1674
Whitford or Whytforde, Richard, 'The Wretche of Syon,' fl. 1530
Whitgift, John, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1533*-1604
Whithorne, Peter, military writer, fl. 1563
Whithorne, Thomas, song-writer, 1528-1570*
Whiting, John, Quaker writer, 1722
Whiting, Richard, Abbot of Glastonbury, 1539
Whitlock, Mrs. Elizabeth, actress, 1761-1836
Whitlock, John, ejected divine, 1625-1708
Whitlock, William, historian of Lichfield, 1584
Whitmore, Sir George, Lord Mayor of London, 1657
Whitney, Geoffrey, poet, fl. 1585
Whitshed, Sir James Hawkins, Bart., admiral, 1762-1849
Whitson, John, merchant adventurer, 1575*-1629
Whittaker, George Byrom, publisher, 1793-1847
Whittaker, James W., water-colourist, 1876
Whittaker, John William, divine, 1791-1854
Whittingham, Charles, printer, 1767-1840
Whittingham, Sir Samford, lieutenant-general, 1841
Whittingham, William, translator and Dean of Durham, 1524-1579
Whittington, Sir Richard, Lord Mayor of London, 1423
Whittington or Whitynton, Robert, grammarian and Latin poet, 1480-1530*
Whittle, Peter, topographer, 1789-1867
Whitty, Edward Michael, journalist, 1827-1860
Whitty, Michael James, 'Tales of Irish Life,' 1795-1873
Whitworth, Charles, Lord Whitworth, diplomatist, 1725
Whitworth, Sir Charles, author, 1778
Whitworth, Charles, 1st Earl Whitworth, 1754-1825
Whitworth, Sir Joseph, mechanician, 1803-1887
Whood, Isaac, portrait painter, 1689-1752
Whorwood, Jane, partisan of Charles I., fl. 1645
Whyte, James, colonial statesman, 1820-1880
Whyte, Robert, F.R.S., President of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh, 1714-1766
Whytehead, Thomas, divine and hymn-writer, 1815-1843
Whyte-Melville, Capt. George John, novelist, 1821-1878
Whytt, Robert, Professor of Medicine, 1714-1766
Wickens, Sir John, Vice-Chancellor of County Palatine of Lancaster, 1815-1873
Wickham, William, D.C.L., politician, 1761*-1840
Wickins, John, master of Manchester Grammar School, 1677
Wickwane, William, Archbishop of York, 1285
Wiclif, John, Reformer, 1415
Widdowes, Daniel, 'Naturall Philosophie,' fl. 1631
Widdrington, Roger, controversialist, fl. 1617
Widdrington, Samuel Edward, writer on Spain, 1856
Widdrington, Sir Thomas, Speaker of the House of Commons, 1665
Widdrington, William, 1st Baron Widdrington, 1611-1651
Wiffen, Benjamin Barron, Spanish scholar, 1794-1867
Wiffen, Jeremiah Holme, author, 1792-1836
Wigan, Alfred Sydney, actor, 1818*-1878
Wigan, Horace, actor, 1818-1885
Wigan, John, physician, 1695-1739
Wigg, Lilly, botanist, 1749-1828
Wigginton, Giles, divine, fl. 1585
Wighard, hagiologist, 1164
Wight, John, printer, fl. 1580
Wight, Robert, writer on Indian botany, 1796-1872
Wightman, Sir William, judge, 1784-1864
Wightwick, George, architect, 1802-1872
Wiglaf, King of Mercia, 838*
Wigner, George William, chemist, 1842-1884
Wigram, Sir James, judge, 1793-1866
Wigram, Joseph Cotton, Bishop of Rochester, 1798-1867
Wihtgar, Saxon invader, 544
Wihtred, King of Kent, 725
Wikeford, Robert de, Archbishop of Dublin, 1375
Wikes, Thomas, chronicler, fl. 1304
Wilberforce, Henry William, journalist, 1807-1873
Wilberforce, Robert Isaac, divine, 1800-1857
Wilberforce, Samuel, Bishop of Winchester, 1805-1873
Wilberforce, William, philanthropist, 1759-1833
Wilbye or Wilby, John, composer, fl. 1598
Wilcocks, Joseph, author, 1723-1791
Wilcox, Thomas, translator, fl. 1580
Wild, Charles, architect and water-colourist, 1781-1835
Wild, Henry, Arabic scholar, 1684*-1755
Wild, James, architect and Curator of the Soane Museum, 1815-1892
Wild, Jonathan, thief taker, 1682-1725
Wild or Wilde, Robert, Nonconformist divine and poet, 1609-1679
Wildbore, Charles, mathematician, 1802
Wilde, Sir Alfred T., lieutenant-general, 1819-1873
Wilde, George, dramatist and Bishop of Londonderry, 1609-1665
Wilde, John, judge, 1588*-1669*
Wilde, Sir John, Chief Justice of the Cape of Good Hope, 1781-1859
Wilde, Thomas, Baron Truro, Lord Chancellor, 1782-1855
Wilde, William, judge, 1611*-1679
Wilde, Sir William Robert Wills, surgeon and antiquary, 1876
Wilderspin, Samuel, educational promoter, 1867
Wildman, John, Puritan, fl. 1650-1680
Wilford, Lieut.-Col. Francis, Orientalist, 1822
Wilford, John, biographical compiler, fl. 1741
Wilfrid, St., Bishop of York, 634*-709
Wilkes, John, politician, 1727-1797
Wilkes, Richard, antiquary and physician, 1691-1760
Wilkes, Sir Thomas, clerk of the Privy Council, 1598
Wilkie, Sir David, painter, 1785-1841
Wilkie, William, "the Scottish Homer," 1721-1772
Wilkins, Sir Charles, Orientalist, 1749-1836
Wilkins, Charles, lawyer, 1800-1857
Wilkins, David, ecclesiastical scholar, 1685-1745
Wilkins, George, poet, 1603
Wilkins, John, Bishop of Chester, 1614-1672
Wilkins, William, architect, 1779-1839
Wilkinson, Charles Smith, Australian geologist, 1843-1891
Wilkinson, Henry, divine, 1675
Wilkinson, Henry, divine, 1616-1690
Wilkinson, John, ironmaster, fl. 1785
Wilkinson, Sir John Gardner, archæologist, 1798-1875
Wilkinson, Tate, actor, 1740*-1803
Wilkinson, Thomas Turner, antiquary, 1815-1875
Wilkinson, William, divine, fl. 1580
Wilks, John, adventurer, 1846
Wilks, Mark, Indian official, 1831
Wilks, Robert, actor-manager, 1670-1732
Wilks, Washington, journalist, 1864

(To be continued.)

THE list of eminent members of the Wentworth family for the 'Dictionary of National Biography' appears to me very deficient. Apart from the holders of the earldoms of Strafford, Cleveland, and other titles, the junior family is only represented by Sir Peter Wentworth; Thomas, who died in 1627; and Lady Wentworth, the mistress of Monmouth.

In Mr. Rutton's well-known volume on 'Three Branches of the Family of Wentworth' I find the following names of persons worthy, it may be thought, of a place in the 'Dictionary': Sir Henry, grandfather of Queen Jane Seymour; Lady Maria, on whose monument is the famous epitaph:—

> Else the soul grew so fast within
> It broke the outward shell of sinne
> And so was hatch'd a cherubin;

Sir Roger and Sir John; Sir John, Baronet; Sir Nicholas; Peter, who died a prisoner in the Tower, as did his wife; Paul, his brother, also M.P.; Thomas, M.P., Recorder of Oxford; Peter, D.D., Dean of Armagh.

Besides these there is a Darcy Wentworth, of Portadown, near Belfast, who was so far eminent that his portrait was etched by Crispin de Pass in 1624. He is claimed as an ancestor by the Australian Wentworths, one of whom figures in the list. His arms are on the plate, and are differenced by a crescent. I think there is a pedigree of this branch in Burke's 'Australian Landed Gentry.' W. J. Loftie.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Messrs. Cassell & Co.'s list includes the following novels: 'My Lord Duke,' by Mr. E. W. Hornung; 'Ill-Gotten Gold,' by Mr. W. G. Tarbet; 'A Story-Teller's Pack,' by Mr. Frank Stockton; 'In the Days of the Pioneers,' by Mr. E. S. Ellis; and 'Rogues of the Fiery Cross,' by Mr. Walkey,—'My Life in Christ,' being Extracts from the Diary of the Most Rev. John Iliytch Sergieff (Father John), of St. Andrew's Cathedral, Cronstadt, translated by Mr. E. E. Goulaeff, of St. Petersburg,—Vol. III. of the 'Building World,'—Vol. IX. of 'Cottage Gardening,'—and a new serial 'The Queen's Empire.'

The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge promises in "Diocesan Histories," 'Lincoln,' by the late Canon Venables and the late Archdeacon Perry, and 'Rochester,' by the Rev. A. J. Pearman,—'The Ancient Hebrew Tradition as Illustrated by the Monuments,' by Prof. Fritz Hommel, translated by Mr. McClure and Mr. Crosslé,—"The Bishop Paddock Lectures" on 'The History of the Theological Literature of the Church of England from the Reformation to the Close of the Eighteenth Century,' by the Bishop of Edinburgh,—'Christ in His Holy Land,' written during and after a journey through the Holy Land, by the Rev. A. A. Boddy,—'Heldai's Treasure,' a tale by Frances H. Wood,—'Addresses to Lads,' by Prof. H. C. Shuttleworth,—'In the Beginning,' by Mary E. Bellars,—'The Great Storm,' by Hope Carlyon,—'The Legend of St. Christopher,' by the late Archdeacon Allen,—'The Work of Grace,' devotional addresses by the Rev. J. Brett,—'Papal Claims and Anglican Orders,' by the Bishop of Gibraltar,—'The Private Devotions of Bishop Andrewes,' arranged by Prebendary Kempe,—'The Protestation issued by the English Romanists in 1788,' edited by the Rev. A. J. C. Allen,—and 'The Queen, her Empire, and the English-speaking World.'

CHAUCER AND KING RENÉ OF ANJOU.

The first lines of the 'Canterbury Tales' have been compared with a variety of texts, either Latin or English, and well they may as springtime and April supplied to most poets of the Middle Ages their opening description. Dr. Richard Morris has called attention to the (not very striking) similitude between the well-known lines and a passage in Stephen Hawes's 'Pastime of Pleasure':—

> When that Aurora did well appeare
> In the depured ayre and cruddy firmament, &c.

Mr. Skeat has quoted much more curious texts anterior to Chaucer, and offering a much closer resemblance; they are derived from the Latin of Guido delle Colonne and Vincent de Beauvais ('Complete Works,' v. 2). But the closest resemblance of all (and strangely enough it seems to have escaped Sandras) is to be found in the works of King René of Anjou. The pastoral in which René has commemorated his love for Jeanne de Laval, who became his second wife in 1455, begins in the same words almost as the 'Canterbury Tales.' That work is entitled in the St. Petersburg MS., of which a facsimile is preserved in the National Library of Paris (Fr. 12,178), "Les amours de René, Roy de Naples et de Sicile, et de Jeanne, fille de Guy, comte de Laval, qu'il espousa en secondes noces." It begins thus:—

> Vers my avril, en temps que la verdeur
> Je m'apraist, commençant par douleur
> Du renouveau issir la fueille et fleur
> En bautonnant, de laquelle l'odeur
> Fait devenir l'air serain trop meilleur
> Qu'il n'a esté par la dure froideur
> Que le soleil a si fort combatue .....
> Les oiseillons si n'ont lors plus de peur
> D'encommencer leurs doulx chans sans demeur,
> Par amourettes qui leurs gens cueurs argue.....
> Car le doulx temps si fort les esveritue
> Que du tout ont leur crainte abatue.

Does not this read like a free translation of the familiar lines?—

> Whan that Aprille with his shoures sote
> The droghte of Marche hath pereed to the rote,
> And bathed every veyne in swich licour,
> Of which vertu engendred is the flour;
> Whan Zephirus eek with his swete breeth
> Inspired hath in every holt and heeth
> The tendre croppes, and the yonge sonne
> Hath in the Ram his halfe cours y-ronne,
> And smale fowles maken melodye
> That slepen al the night with open ye,
> So priketh hem nature in hir corages.....

It seems unlikely that King René knew English and followed the English model; both probably derived the same hints from some older original. I need not observe that in this as in most cases the more Chaucer is compared to other writers the greater appear his poetical genius, his literary tact, and his skill and sobriety. King René continues for pages; and yet all spring, with its freshness, its flowers and birds, is in the few lines of the English master. The more you read the "originals and analogues" of his works, the more you enjoy that "property" which Lowell so justly attributes to him, "that vernal property that soothes and refreshes in a way of which no other has ever found the secret."

J. J. Jusserand.

SALE.

Messrs. Puttick & Simpson sold on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday in last week a collection of books and MSS., including a further portion of the library of Mr. Farmer Atkinson, the following being some of the principal prices: Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana and Ædes Althorpianæ, 17*l.* 10*s.* MS. Missale of the fourteenth century, on vellum, with three miniatures, 22*l.* Biblia Germanica, Nuremberg, Koburger, 1483, 21*l.* Case, I Monumenti di Pompei, 11*l.* 10*s.* Browning's Aristophanes' Apology, with the author's corrections in his autograph, 17*l.* 10*s.*; Bells and Pomegranates, first edition, 9*l.* Calendars of State Papers, 175 vols., 50*l.* Mirror of Fashion, A Trip to Town, and Fashion and Folly, three series of coloured caricatures printed on long rolls and fitted into cases, 28*l.* 5*s.* Collection of 500 Civil War Tracts, 25*l.* 10*s.* Cervantes, Novelas Exemplares, 1613, 5*l.* 5*s.* De Bry, Emblemata Nobilitate, 1593, 14*l.* Biblia Latina, Nuremberg, 1478, 10*l.* 10*s.* MS. Psalterium Davidis, finely written on vellum of peculiarly choice quality and whiteness, with 31 miniatures and ornamental borders, 119*l.* Mr. R. Kipling's Quartette, first edition, 5*l.*; Wee Willie Winkie, Under the Deodars, Story of the Gadsbys, and In Black and White, first editions, 5*l.* 17*s.* Officium B.V.M., printed on vellum, Lugduni, 1499, 53*l.* Scrope's Salmon Fishing, 1843, 8*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* Gospels of the Fower Evangelistes, Anglo-Saxon, 1571, 13*l.* Spenser's Faerie Queene and Colin Clout (the latter first edition), 27*l.* 10*s.* Thackeray at Clevedon Court, 1865, 10*l.* Queen Victoria, by R. R. Holmes (voucher for this work, to be issued in June next), 19*l.* 10*s.* The total of the three days' sale was 1,160*l.*

TWO PROTHALAMIA.

April 12, 1897.

Of course I withdraw my acquiescence in the suggestion that by "the new and worthy seat" Vallans meant Hatfield rather than Theobalds—a suggestion started by Mr. Flower himself (see his article of March 20th). But my own objection to Mr. Wickham Flower's charge against Spenser of "appropriating" things from Vallans did not, and does not, stand on that point; I carefully kept it quite distinct from it.

This discussion seems now pretty well exhausted; and it remains that no at all noticeable obligation of Spenser to Vallans has yet been proved or made probable. It is possible the author of the 'Prothalamion' had read the 'Tale of Two Swans.' Certainly Mr. Case, in his very interesting note, shows that the author of the 'Tale of Two Swans' had seen the 'Epithalamion Thamesis,' and had heard of the designed English marriage song, which, as I said last week, is now to be found in the fourth book of the 'Faerie Queene.' However these things may be, I venture to assert that all the coincidences that Mr. Flower insisted on in his first letter—e.g., that Vallans used the words "nurse" and "merry," and so did Spenser!—have been found on inspection to be wholly insignificant. And so "securus" judicet "orbis terrarum"; and I shall be very much surprised if any careful reader of this correspondence echo, in Mr. Flower's sense, Mr. Flower's "Palmam qui meruit ferat," and, as he suggests, transfer the palm from Spenser to Vallans!

Mr. Flower now tells us that he thinks "along the lee," which he so unfortunately quoted in his first letter, means "along the smooth and sheltered part of" the river. Well, if this interpretation gives him pleasure, "per me licet esse" beato, only I hope any younger readers who may be inclined to think it plausible will examine the matter before they subscribe to it. And I notice at least two other errors in Mr. Flower's last communication; but I am not concerned with these. What I wished to do, and it seemed right to do, I have done—I trust with all courtesy. John W. Hales.

Literary Gossip.

Mrs. Julia Davies, who died at Clifton a few days ago at the great age of ninety-four, was probably the last survivor of the intimate friends of Charles Lamb. She was the daughter of Joseph Hume, of Montpellier House, Notting Hill, where Lamb, Godwin, and Hazlitt were constant guests. She married Vice-Admiral George Davies, R.N., and was the mother of the late Mrs. Augusta Webster. Another daughter is the widow of Isaac Todhunter, the mathematician.

The catalogue of the New Gallery will have an unusual literary value this year in the shape of a remarkable poem by Mr. Rudyard Kipling, written to Mr. Phil Burne-Jones's strange picture 'The Vampire.' Those who heard it recited by Mrs. Beerbohm Tree the other night state that it shows Mr. Kipling's powers in a new direction.

Mr. Miller Christy writes from Pryors, Broomfield, near Chelmsford:—

"Will you allow me to state through your columns that I am engaged upon a life of Joseph Strutt (1749–1802), author of 'Sports and Pastimes' and other well-known antiquarian works, and to ask whether any of your readers possess, or know of the existence of, any of Strutt's letters or any documents connected with him, and, if so, whether they would allow me to borrow the same for purposes of my work? Any letters or documents sent here would be very acceptable, and would be returned as soon as they have been copied."

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish shortly a revised and cheaper edition of Sir W. W. Hunter's 'Annals of Rural Bengal.' It has been prepared by the author in response to suggestions which reached him that its publication would be very opportune at the present time as showing what a great famine really means in India.

Mr. Emanuel Green, F.S.A., has finished his 'Bibliography of Somerset,' upon which he has long been engaged. The work will be in two volumes, the first dealing with the county, to the exclusion of Bath, while the second will be devoted entirely to the literature of that city. The printing will be done in Taunton, and the work will be obtainable by subscribers only.

Messrs. Crosby Lockwood & Son will have ready in a few days a new edition of 'A Handbook of English Literature,' originally compiled by Mr. Austin Dobson, and now revised and extended to the present day by Prof. Hall Griffin.

Mrs. W. K. Clifford's novel 'Mrs. Keith's Crime,' which for the last few years has only been procurable in an eighteenpenny form, is about to undergo a curious change of fortune. Mr. Fisher Unwin has determined to do with it as Messrs. Hutchinson did with 'The Story of an African Farm,' which was published at a shilling; he will raise it again to the price of six shillings, and restore to it the advantages of good type and binding. Mrs. Clifford has written a special introduction, and the Hon. John Collier has drawn a frontispiece for the new edition. 'Mrs. Keith's Crime' appeared first in 1885, when it was anonymous, and may fairly be said to have made a sensation.

Mrs. C. W. Earle has written a volume, consisting mainly of notes on gardening, but referring also to household management and education, to which Lady Constance Lytton has contributed an appendix. The book will be published by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., under the title 'Pot-pourri from a Surrey Garden.'

News comes from the United States of the decease of Mr. W. T. Adams, a voluminous writer for children under the pseudonym of "Oliver Optic."

Some years ago we reported that the Empress of Austria, during her temporary stay at Paris, had deposited a wreath on Heine's grave in the cemetery of Montmartre. We were surprised to see from a recent number of the Frankfurter Zeitung that his tomb is in a deplorably neglected state. A rusty iron wreath is the only visible tribute to the author of the 'Buch der Lieder.'

We informed our readers lately that a Mädchengymnasium was to be established at Bremen, and now we learn that, owing to the efforts of the society called "Frauenbildungs-Reform," a similar institution will be founded at Carlsruhe. The town has granted a contribution of 2,000 marks for the purpose.

The first volume of the series of photographic reproductions of the oldest Greek and Latin manuscripts has recently made its appearance at Leyden. It is edited by Dr. W. N. du Rieu, the late principal librarian of the university of that place, and bears the title of 'Vetus Testamentum Græce,' &c. Only a limited number of copies has been printed.

August Radintzky, the Nestor of the dialect poets of the Austrian-Hungarian monarchy, died at the Collegialstift of Mattsee on March 22nd. He was born at Salzburg in 1810. He became widely known under his pseudonym of "Fink von Mattsee," the ancient foundation which he had served for many years as administrator.

SCIENCE

Red Deer. Natural History, by the Rev. H. A. Macpherson; Deer-Stalking, by Cameron of Lochiel; Stag-Hunting, by Viscount Ebrington; Cookery, by A. Innes Shand. Illustrated by J. Charlton and A. Thorburn. (Longmans & Co.)

In dealing with the first section of this work Mr. Macpherson has acted judiciously by restricting the larger portion of his remarks to a haunt of the red deer with which he is well acquainted, and about which little has been previously written. This is Martindale, situated in the heart of the Lake district, and bounded on the north by Ullswater, while Haweswater closes it in on the eastward, unless an adventurous stag, in quest of unknown hinds, dares to face the ascent of Shap Fell. It is true that Martindale stags have been known to swim the breadth of Ullswater to visit the hinds in Gobarrow Park, but excursions in the reverse direction are rare. Compared with Scottish deer forests, Martindale is wooded, though without the heavy timber of the coombes of North Devon and Somerset; therefore the herd, which now numbers about two hundred and fifty head, exhibits a mixture of the characteristics of the woodland and of the mountain deer. Mr. Macpherson does not omit some observations on deer in other districts, but he is mindful of the fact that as regards Scotland his "player" in this "pool" is Lochiel, while Lord Ebrington follows with the practical knowledge of Devon and Somerset obtained by some years' mastership of staghounds. It is just as well that Mr. Macpherson does not venture to write about the West Country, for, while justly eulogizing the late Dr. Collyns, he brackets with him Richard Jefferies, whose 'Red Deer' we consider to be as thorough a specimen of book-making as was ever turned out; while the excellent work of the Hon. John Fortescue (Lord Ebrington's brother) is ignored. Occasionally the author nods, and by "Dartmoor" (p. 31) he must mean Exmoor; while "Islay Forest" (p. 43) is evidently a slip for Jura.

Lochiel's account of deer forests and their management contains some interesting facts indicative of the changes in customs which have taken place in the Highlands. At the beginning of this century it was not always thought "good form" for the owner of a deer forest holding a high social position to go out stalking himself, and the old Lord Lovat, grandfather of the present peer, on succeeding to the estate, was told by his guardian that such a practice was neither dignified nor customary, a view largely shared by other country gentlemen, and certainly prevalent in the district. When Sir Walter Scott had aroused a love for Highland sport, especially by that wild episode of the "tinchel" in 'Waverley,' and after Scrope had described the pursuit of the deer in Atholl Forest and the drive in Glen Tilt, "so thrilling," says the author, "was the interest which I felt in the adventures of Tortoise and Lightfoot, as well as in the splendid performances of Tarff, Derig, and Shuloch, that at this day, and with the experience acquired during many years of managing forests, I can hardly bring myself to criticize the proceedings which I then looked upon not only as quite proper, but almost sublime."

The lords and ladies who were the guests of the Duke of Atholl of that day doubtless enjoyed the exciting scene of cross-firing, racing herds of deer, and pursuing hounds; but no forest could stand such treatment for long, and it is almost unnecessary to say that driving has been generally abandoned. Lochiel confesses that in his hot youth, when the weather was unsuitable for stalking, the house party would sometimes "drive" a small bit of ground dignified by the name of "the sanctuary," in which no real harm could be done. Ladies could go to see it, "and, in short, it was very good fun. We are older and wiser now, but, alas! do we have the same fun?" He proceeds to admit that he, too, has sinned against the very rules which he has laid down as the canons of true deer forestry, having gone out with a couple of pure-bred deerhounds and coursed a cold stag, sometimes bringing him to bay, very rarely pulling him down. After deprecating these "joyous frivolities," the author gives excellent advice as to the management of forests and the means to be employed in keeping up a good stock of deer. Comparatively few proprietors like to ask their guests to spare stags with well-growing heads and to kill old inferior stags; besides, it is not always easy to distinguish a beast that is "going back," though we think short blunt points are apt to accompany old age. In uttering a word of warning against surrounding a forest with a deer fence, it is remarked that for want of fresh blood the animals will get smaller and smaller, till they dwindle to the size of island deer. Some island deer, however, are not small; for instance, those of Jura and Rum; while in Harris the stags have pretty heads with many points, and, owing to the fine grazing, they are fat and make excellent venison, though not tall beasts. The chapters on the practice of deer-stalking and the social and economical aspects of forests are excellent, and there are some good stories about the Select Committee on the crofter question, for the narrator does not mind a joke against himself at times.

Not many years after Monmouth's rebellion, when the wild red deer had a far more extended range than Macaulay indicates in a well-known passage, the second Duke of Bedford kept staghounds at Tavistock, hunting the coverts on the Tay, Tamar, and other rivers on the side of Dartmoor, and the deer often took the sea at Torbay. Subsequently the venue was shifted to North Devon, where the first Earl Fortescue took the mastership, so that it may well be said of Lord Ebrington, "il chasse de race." In 1855, however, hunting was at a very low ebb, when the late Mr. Fenwick Bisset took the hounds and laid the foundations of the prosperity of the present Devon and Somerset pack. Practically it was Mr. Bisset who introduced deer into the Quantocks, where they have multiplied exceedingly, and we do not wonder that, from the point of view of a master of hounds, Lord Ebrington, who succeeded Mr. Bisset, regrets the act; for it is necessary to hunt that district from time to time, and the mob which turns out during a Quantock week and the picnic at Triscombe Stone would try the patience of any master who wished to show sport. Cloutsham can be bad enough, but there the terrible Taunton contingent with its brass band is absent. Of woodcraft, harbouring warrantable stags, and famous runs Lord Ebrington writes from experience, and, moreover, with great judgment. Before leaving this section we must say a few words in praise of the illustrations. Those by Mr. Thorburn relate to the Highland scenes he depicts so well, while Mr. Charlton deals with hunting, and a particularly spirited plate is that facing p. 210, where a French mounted relai volant is struggling with "rather a handful" of hounds in leash.

Mr. Shand has written a very pleasant article upon the cookery of venison, though the want of material has driven him to begin with the patriarch Isaac and the savoury-meat story and work upwards, while at times he gets very far away from the flesh of deer. He considers that "the ideal red deer for table purposes is a young yeld or barren hind, in prime condition from favourable pasturage"; but we prefer a big, heavy old hind, for young red deer seldom lay on much fat in a wild state. Fallow deer comes under the head of park-fed venison, and is beside the question; but we endorse Mr. Shand's praise of roe deer when at its prime, which is not often. As regards the entire work, it has given us more pleasure than any other volume of the "Fur and Feather" series, of which it forms a part, and we can strongly recommend it.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

The papers on anthropological subjects published by local societies during the year ending June 1st, 1896, according to the report of the Corresponding Societies Committee of the British Association, were thirty-nine in number, and the societies publishing them were seventeen. The Dumfriesshire and Galloway Natural History and Antiquarian Society heads the list with seven papers, dealing with standing stones (Mr. F. R. Coles), Roman earthworks (Dr. J. Macdonald), folk-lore (Mr. S. Arnott), a superstitious custom about young calves (Mr. John M'Kie), and the local antiquities of Dunscove (Rev. R. Simpson), Troqueer (Mr. J. G. Hamilton Starke), and Tynron (Mr. James Shaw). When to this wealth of local illustration is added all that contained in the Rev. Walter Gregor's report to the Ethnographical Survey Committee and in Sir Herbert Maxwell's new book, it will be seen that the anthropology of Dumfriesshire and Galloway is being very thoroughly studied. The Essex Field Club ranks next with six papers: two by Prof. Meldola, on an ancient entrenchment on Navestock Common, and on the eastern boundary stones of the forest of Waltham; another on Navestock by the Rev. S. C. Hore; on the Romano-British settlement at Chigwell, by Mr. I. C. Gould; on the field-name of Puttock's Lees, by Mr. Miller Christy; and on the lost rural industry of potash-making, by Mr. Henry Laver. The Buchan Field Club has four: two on the ethnographical survey of Buchan, by Mr. John Gray and Mr. J. F. Tocher; a report on antiquarian remains at Schivas, by Mr. James Spence; and ecclesiastical punishments in the seventeenth century, by the Rev. P. Milne. The Dorset Natural History and Antiquarian Field Club has three, all by Mr. E. Cunnington, on Poundbury, Hambledon, and Helstone; and the Berwickshire Naturalists' Club the same number: on Scottish place-names, by Miss Russell; on the British camps above Lauder, by the Rev. G. Gunn; and a catalogue of a loan collection of prehistoric and other antiquities, by Mr. G. F. Black. Four societies have two each: the Norfolk and Norwich Naturalists' Society (neolithic man in Thetford, by Mr. W. G. Clark; Mayday customs at Lynn, by Dr. C. B. Plowright); the Marlborough College Natural History Society (Wayland Smith's cave, by the Rev. A. J. Galpin, and Mr. E. Meyrick's anthropometrical statistics); the Isle of Man Natural History and Antiquarian Society (Miss A. M. Crellin's anthropological report, and Mr. A. W. Moore on foreign elements in the Manx language); and the Belfast Natural History and Philosophical Society (on three Irish sepulchral urns, by Mr. R. M. Young, and a paper on antiquarian collections in Ulster, by Mr. S. F. Milligan). The eight societies which contribute a single paper each are the Hertfordshire Natural History Society (Sir John Evans's anniversary address on the Stone Age), the Hampshire Field Club (Mr. T. W. Shore on prehistoric remains in the old Clare country), the Birmingham Natural History and Philosophical Society (Prof. Windle and Mr. Manners-Smith on the physical characters of a group of female pupil teachers), the Liverpool Literary and Philosophical Society (the Rev. J. Sephton on Runic remains), the Rochdale Literary and Scientific Society (Dr. Thomas Hunt on some Heywood surnames), the Yorkshire Geological and Polytechnic Society (Mr. J. Spink on lake dwellings in the Vale of Pickering), the Cardiff Naturalists' Society (Mr. Wm. Riley on entrenchments and camps on Mynydd Baidan and Mynydd Margam), and the South African Philosophical Society of Cape Town (Dr. S. Schönland on some human skulls in the collection of the Albany Museum). All these entries are noticeable as showing the great and growing attention that is being paid in every part of the country to observations on the physical characters of the people, the ancient monuments, and the relics of old superstitions, customs, and beliefs; but the last entry is particularly interesting as showing a desire on the part of our fellow countrymen in South Africa to be enrolled with societies at home as fellow workers in anthropology.

Folk-lore for March contains some notes on the physique, customs, and superstitions of the peasantry of Innishowen, co. Donegal, by Mr. Thomas Doherty. He observes that most of the inhabitants are descendants of the old Celtic tribes, and that where there has been an intermixture of race between them and the descendants of the English and Scottish planters of Stuart times, the Celtic features predominate. Though red is the prevailing colour of hair in the seaboard districts, to meet a woman with red hair is looked upon as a bad omen, as such women frequently have the evil eye. Hare-lip is common, and is accounted for by the mother meeting a hare before the child's birth. Witchcraft is still strongly believed in, and witches often take the form of hares. They can then only be shot by silver bullets. Mr. Alfred Nutt's address to the Folk-lore Society on taking the chair as its president relates to the origin and nature of the fairy mythology of English literature. He seeks to show why England alone of modern countries has admitted the fairy world into its highest imaginative literature. He proposes to pursue the subject further in the forthcoming second volume of the 'Voyage of Bran.'

The first number of the journal of the Swiss Folk-lore Society has been issued. Not merely traditions are included within its programme, but also the material arts, dwellings, tools, dress, food, and fabrics of the people, and to these the society proposes to add physical observations.

The Journal of the Anthropological Institute for February contains a paper by Mr. Henry Balfour on a remarkable ancient bow and arrows, believed to be of Assyrian origin. The bow is fifty-three inches long, of composite structure, formed of two kinds of wood, of black horn, of animal sinew, of birch bark, and of glue. It was found in a tomb of the twenty-sixth dynasty at Thebes. A paper by the lamented Mr. Horatio Hale, honorary fellow of the Institute, also appears with notes and addenda by Prof. Tylor, forming a study of aboriginal American history and mnemonic symbols, based on four Huron wampum records, viz., the double-calumet treaty belt, the peace-path belt, the Jesuit missionary belt, and the four-nations alliance belt. A similar belt, deposited with the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in 1857 by a great-grandson of William Penn, is held by Mr. Hale to have been given to Penn on the occasion of his treaty of peace with the Indians in 1701. The conclusion is drawn that when the European colonists arrived in America, the tribes who then occupied what are now the United States and Canada enjoyed frames of government and forms of civilization which evinced intellectual and moral faculties of no mean order. The Hale series of belts has been presented by Prof. Tylor to the Oxford University Museum. Two papers by Prof. Oscar Montelius, on the Tyrrhenians in Greece and Italy and on pre-classical chronology in Greece and Italy respectively, are illustrated by a splendid series of sixteen folded plates. He dates the first portion of the first period of the Bronze Age, or the "Copper Age," in Northern and Central Italy at 2100–1950 B.C.; the second portion at 1950–1800; the second period from 1800 to 1650; the third from 1650 to 1350; the first portion of the fourth period from 1350 to 1200, and the second from 1200 to 1100. The first period of the Iron Age in Northern Italy he assigns to 1100–950 B.C.; the second to 950–750; the third from 750 to 550; and the Etruscan period from 550 to 400. For Central Italy, he marks out a first proto-Etruscan period from 1100 to 1000 B.C. and a second from 1000 to 900; a first Etruscan period from 900 to 800, a second from 800 to 700, a third from 700 to 600, and a fourth from 600 to 500 B.C. This chronology differs considerably from that hitherto generally accepted. In particular Dr. Montelius throws back the date of the Regulini-Galassi tomb at Cervetri two hundred and fifty or three hundred years earlier than the received chronology, a conclusion in which Mr. Arthur Evans, in the interesting discussion which took place on these papers, followed him only halfway. Mr. Laurence Duckworth furnishes to the Journal an account of three skulls from Madagascar in the Anatomical Museum of Cambridge University, with photographs. The skulls in question belong to different tribes, respectively Hova, Betsileo, and Betsimisaraka; and Mr. Duckworth finds that the Hova skull has its counterpart in one from Borneo, while the two others agree in such features as distinguish them from the Hova, and resemble certain skulls from the African continent rather than any Oceanic specimens.

SOCIETIES.

Geographical.—April 12.—Sir C. Markham, President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Baron A. von Andrée, Capt. C. Ashburnham, Messrs G. D. Callender, S. Castle, H. W. Cave, H. A. Doubleday, H. Hague, and J. Hardy.—The paper read was 'Fourth Centenary of the Voyage of John Cabota, 1497,' by the President.

Archæological Institute.—April 7.—Judge Baylis, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. C. E. Keyser read a paper 'On Aldermaston Church, Berkshire.' He gave a brief description of the distinguished personages who were lords of the manor and owners of the Aldermaston estates, and then described the church and the necessary reparation which had been recently carried out at his expense under the direction of Mr. E. D. Webb. The church was probably built about 1120 on the site of the earlier one mentioned in the Domesday survey; it was enlarged about the years 1260 and 1300, in the fifteenth century, again about 1660, and at the beginning of the present century, when it was unfortunately thoroughly beautified. The mural paintings representing St. Christopher and probably two scenes from the life of St. Nicholas, found last year in the south chapel and elsewhere; the old glass; two panels representing the Annunciation and Coronation of the Virgin, dating from the middle of the thirteenth century; numerous armorial shields, inserted by Sir Humphrey Forster, circ. 1540; and the various tombs and brasses, notably the fine alabaster monument of Sir George Forster and Elizabeth his wife, who died in 1526, were most minutely described.—An interesting discussion afterwards took place, in which Messrs. W. H. St. John Hope, M. Stephenson, E. D. Webb, P. H. Newman, and G. E. Fox pointed out the various peculiarities and particular objects of interest, more especially with regard to the tomb of Sir George Forster.—Some excellent rubbings of the brasses and inscriptions, and photographs of the monument, mural paintings, and Norman west doorway, were exhibited by Mr. M. Stephenson, Mr. A. H. Lyell, and the writer of the paper.

Linnean.—April 1.—Dr. A. Günther, President, in the chair.—Prof. Graf zu Solms-Laubach, the Rev. R. Usher, and Mr. W. Martindale were admitted, and Messrs. J. B. Sowerby and J. B. Willis were elected Fellows.—Mr. M. Christy exhibited three royal state cloaks, formerly worn by the kings of the Hawaiian Islands, and made of the feathers of four species of birds, of which the exhibitor gave an account, referring to the coloured figures of them given in Mr. Scott Wilson's 'Birds of Hawaii,' namely, Vestiaria coccinea (red), Psittacirostra psittacea (green), Acrulocercus nobilis, and Drepanis pacifica (black and yellow). The last named, of which no specimen is to be found in the National Collection, is believed to be now extinct.—Mr. W. T. Thiselton-Dyer exhibited: 1. A series of drawings (on the screen) to illustrate the "cultural evolution of Cyclamen latifolium, Sibth." The species is a native of Greece and the Levant, and is believed to have been first introduced into European cultivation in 1731. In 1768 Miller described a form modified by cultivation under the name of Cyclamen persicum. This was erroneous, as according to Boissier neither the wild nor the garden form occurs in Persia. The latter persisted in cultivation for about a hundred and fifty years, and about 1860 became the starting-point of the modern races which were illustrated. Cyclamen latifolium has never been hybridized, and it was shown that the striking forms now in cultivation were the result of the patient accumulation of gradual variations. Drawings of the remarkable forms "Papilio," obtained by De Langhe-Vervaene, and of "The Bush-Hill Pioneer," by Messrs. Hugh Low & Co., were shown. It was pointed out that the tendency of the species under cultivation was to lose its distinctive generic characters and to approximate to a more generalized type. The reflexion of the corolla-segments was often lost as in Lysimachia, the segments were sometimes multiplied as in Trientalis, and the margins were fringed as in Soldanella and cultivated forms of Primula sinensis. The "Bush-Hill Pioneer" possessed, in the cresting of the petals, a remarkable character without parallel in any primulaceous plant occurring in a wild state. 2. A series of plants was exhibited to illustrate the origin of the garden "Cineraria." It was generally agreed that this had sprung from one or more species native of the Canaries. An extreme cultivated form was shown and compared with Senecio cruentus, which all internal evidence indicated as the sole original stock. S. heritieri, another reputed parent, was exhibited. But it was pointed out that this has a shrubby habit and stems markedly zigzag between the internodes, while the leaves are clothed beneath with a dense white tomentum. These characters it transmits more or less to its hybrid offspring. In illustration of this point Mr. Poë's hybrid (S. super-heritieri × cruentus) was exhibited (a similar one has occurred at Edinburgh); also the Cambridge hybrid (S. super cruentus × heritieri). S. cruentus crosses very freely with the garden cineraria, and as the latter never exhibits any trace of the characters of S. heritieri, it was concluded that that species had no part in its origin, and that, as in the case of the cyclamen, the striking development of S. cruentus in cultivation was due to the continued accumulation of gradual variations.—Mr. A. W. Bennett exhibited a series of drawings by Mr. E. B. Green of root-hairs of plants with various parasitic growths, and showed preparations of several under the microscope.—Mr. G. R. Murray exhibited several lantern-slides of coccospheres and rhabdospheres, prepared from specimens collected by Capt. Milner, of the s.s. Para, while on a voyage to Barbados, including all the forms figured in the Challenger Report. Of these remarkable organisms Mr. Murray gave a detailed account, explaining the formation of coccospheres (so named by Dr. Wallich) as the aggregation into spheres of the so-called coccoliths described by Huxley from deep-sea soundings taken in the North Atlantic by H.M.S. Cyclops. The calcareous scales (or coccoliths) were shown to overlap each other, and to constitute not only a defensive armour, but from their arrangement to admit of the growth of the organism, which is thus not limited by its calcareous coat, as diatoms are by their siliceous shells; each coccolith being attached to the cell by a button-like projection on its inner surface. In the rhabdospheres with projecting rods, of which figures were shown, the plates (rhabdoliths) do not fit into each other as figured in the Challenger Report, but their bases are imbedded on the surface of the cell, each by itself without contact. As to the cell-contents, the exhibitor had found nothing more than a granular material resembling protoplasm. There was no trace of colouring-matter in the specimens, all of which had been brought up from a depth of three fathoms.—Mr. H. Groves exhibited a large number of Characeæ collected by Mr. T. B. Blow in various parts of Australasia and Asia, views of the localities referred to being shown on the screen by the collector.—Mr. G. Massee, on behalf of Miss H. B. Potter, communicated the substance of a paper 'On the Germination of Spores of Agaricineæ.'

Zoological.—April 6.—Dr. W. T. Blanford' V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during March, and exhibited, on behalf of Mr. A. J. L. Jones, a cinnamon-coloured variety of the blackbird (Turdus merula), which had been captured near Dorking.—Prof. B. C. A. Windle and Mr. F. G. Parsons contributed the first part of a paper 'On the Myology of the Terrestrial Carnivora,' which dealt with the muscles of the head, neck, and fore limb of eighty-three individuals.—Communications were read: from Mr. C. S. Tomes, on the minute structure of the teeth of Notoryctes, in which he confirmed the view previously arrived at by other naturalists that this animal has affinities with the Dasyuridæ and Didelphidæ,—and from Mr. R. Lydekker, entitled 'The Blue Bear of Tibet, with Notes on the Members of the Ursus arctus Group.' The author described a mounted specimen in the British Museum which he identified with the Ursus pruinosus of Blyth. He also made a survey of the other members of the U. arctus group, and came to the conclusion that, with the exception of the extinct U. spelæus, they should all be regarded as subspecies rather than species. As they are all structurally similar, they seem, in his opinion, to be merely local varieties and colour-phases of what is essentially one animal.—Mr. G. A. Boulenger gave an account of the freshwater fishes collected in Celebes by Drs. P. and F. Sarasin. The specimens obtained were referred to fourteen species, of which four were described as new, one of them forming the type of a new genus of Atherinidæ, proposed to be named Telmatherina.

Philological.—April 2.—Mr. H. Bradley, V.P., in the chair.—Prof. G. Foster read a paper 'On the Text and Versification of Sir Thomas Wyatt's Poems.' The earliest version of most of the poems is Additional MS. 17,492 in the British Museum. This MS. was borrowed by Wyatt's editor of 1816, Dr. Nott, from the Duke of Devonshire, and was never returned, but sold at Nott's sale. It has much alliteration, the rondeaux in a bad form, lines scanning mainly by accent and not by feet or measures. It is the sole source of forty-nine poems. The revised version of most of the rest of Wyatt's poems is the Egerton MS. 2711, which is the only authority for fifty-eight poems. It puts the rondeaux into the right French form, gets rid of much of the alliteration, improves the expression of the thought, and has many run-on and central-pause lines, the work of later years and freer power. The Additional MS. 28,365 is Nott's transcript of a lost original MS. of 1564, a miscellany probably compiled by one of the Harrington family, part of which was sent as copy to the printer by the editor of 'Nugæ Antiquæ.' It contains poems by Wyatt and by some twenty-four other authors, some of which have not yet been printed. It is the only source of three or four poems of Wyatt. The Harleian MS. 78 contains several poems attributed to Wyatt that have not yet been published. The Parker MS. at Cambridge is the sole authority for one poem, and contains four in other collections. Of the printed versions of Wyatt's poems, the 'Penitential Psalms' were published by Sir J. Harrington in 1549, and have a few variations from the Egerton text. Tottell's 'Miscellany,' 1557, is the only source for fifty-seven poems in the form to which N. Grimoald or some one else has altered them from Wyatt's originals. The rondeaux are changed to sonnets; the accentual lines are made syllabic; the alterations are many and evidently unauthentic. Nott in 1816 printed a text (1) from the Egerton MS.; (2) from Addit. 17,492, with emendations of his own. The Aldine editions of 1834–6 are reprints of Tottell doctored, with other poems taken direct from Nott. There is no edition founded on the best authorities. An editor should base his text on the Egerton MS., and give collations of Addit. 17,492. Wyatt's versification has been, to some extent, treated by Drs. R. Alscher and Simmons and Prof. Schipper. He began accentually, the pause clear, and each half-line having two strongly stressed syllables. Afterwards he became syllabic, and his verse-stress frequently contradicted the natural word-stress. At first he rhymed "passion" with "reason," and treated the genitive s, "lovës," as a syllable. These practices he gradually gave up, and acquired freedom, shown by his omission of unstressed syllables; he took to run-on lines and used inversion; he allowed two unaccented syllables at the beginning of a line, and extra syllables before the line-pause and at the ends of lines. He was the first to use the sonnet and rondeau, and (save Chaucer's fragments) terza rima; and was the inventor of many single-stanza forms. His first sonnets kept to the regular Italian form in the octave, but did not always complete the sense in it; later he rhymed the octave alternately. In the sestet he uses three forms, and ends it in a rhyming couplet.

Mathematical.—April 8.—Prof. Elliott, President, in the chair.—The following were elected Members: the Rev. A. H. Frost, and Messrs. S. H. Burbury and E. T. Whittaker; and Dr. Bryant, the Rev. F. H. Jackson, and Messrs. F. W. Lawrence and A. Young were admitted into the Society.—The President dwelt at some length on the great loss the Society and the mathematical world had sustained by the recent death of Prof. Sylvester, who was the second President of the Society.—It was ordered that the President should send a letter of condolence to the nearest relatives of the deceased.—The following communications were made: 'An Extension of a certain Theorem,' by the Rev. F. H. Jackson,—'On the Deformation of a Closed Polygon, so that a certain Function remains Constant,' by Mr. F. S. Macaulay,—'A Continuation of Gauss's Dioptrische Untersuchungen,' by Prof. R. A. Sampson,—and 'Ueber verzweigte Potentiale im Raum,' by Prof. A. Sommerfeld.—Mr. S. Roberts, an ex-President, having taken the chair, the President read papers by Mr. A. L. Dixon, 'On the Potentials of Rings,' and by Mr. J. W. Russell, 'On certain Concomitant Determinants.'—Mr. R. Hargreaves and Lieut.-Col. Cunningham made impromptu communications. The latter gentleman announced four high primes.

Physical.—April 9.—Mr. S. Bidwell in the chair.—Mr. T. A. Garrett read a paper 'On a Nickel Stress Telephone.'—Mr. W. A. Price read a paper 'On Alternating Currents in Concentric Conductors.'—Mr. Price exhibited a galvanometer support.—Mr. H. Garrett read a paper, communicated by Prof. W. B. Morton, 'On the Effect of Capacity on Stationary Electrical Waves in Wires.'

Hellenic.—April 12.—Mr. F. C. Penrose, V.P., in the chair.—Miss Harrison read a paper on the Danaides. She contended that the origin of the Danaid myth had been misunderstood, especially as regards the supposed punishment of the water-carrying in leaky vessels. This was really no punishment at all, but simply the carrying on in Hades of their upper-world function as well-nymphs; the pithos the Danaides had to fill was bored only at the bottom, as shown on ancient monuments, and it was a well cistern. The labour of well-filling was endless from the beginning, because Argos was πολυδίψιον. The idea of water-carrying in Hades as a penalty for the ἀμύητοι was also, she contended, not a mere later moralizing addition, but inherent in the primitive Danaid myth, and the leaky vessels pointed to an "ordeal by the sieve," such as was undergone, according to Pliny, by the vestal virgin Tuccia ('Nat. Hist.,' xxviii. 2, 3). The forty-nine guilty Danaides would fail in the ordeal and be proved as ἀμύητοι in the rites of Demeter Thesmophoros. Referring to Prof. Ridgeway's recent paper in the Hellenic Journal on the Pelasgian origin of the "objects called Mycenæan," Miss Harrison expressed her view that though the Olympian gods would be found, on analysis, to be part Hellenic, part Pelasgian, the remaining denizens of Hades would prove, like the Danaides, to be of Pelasgian origin.—Prof. Ernest Gardner read some notes on a vase in the museum at Chicago, which seemed to him to represent the myth of Athamas.—The paper announced by Prof.

Gardner, on a vase in the museum at Harrow, was postponed to a subsequent meeting.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK

Wed. Meteorological, 7½.—The Relation between Cold Periods and Anticyclonic Conditions of Weather in England during Winter: Mr. W. H. Dines: 'Sunspot Influence on the Weather of Western Europe': Mr. A. B. Macdowall: 'The Use of Kites to obtain Meteorological Records in the Upper Air at Blue Hill Observatory, Mass., U.S.A.': Mr. A. L. Rotch.—Microscopical, 8.—Exhibition of Microscopical Entomological Specimens by Mr. J. Enoch.

Thurs. Electrical Engineers, 8.—Continued Discussion on 'Recent Developments in Electric Traction Appliances.'

Fri. Philological, 8.—Dictionary Evening.

Science Gossip.

Messrs. Longman are about to publish a new and revised edition of Sir John Evans's 'Ancient Stone Implements, Weapons, and Ornaments of Great Britain,' which has long been out of print. The first edition was published in 1872, and since that time numerous discoveries have been made of objects both of neolithic and palæolithic age, which have necessitated considerable additions to the original work, inasmuch as all the principal discoveries of stone antiquities that have taken place in Britain during the last quarter of a century are more or less fully recorded in the new edition. The principal additions that have been made relate to the palæolithic period, concerning which our knowledge has been much enlarged within the last twenty-five years. The new illustrations, partly borrowed from the publications of different learned societies, but to a great extent specially engraved for the work from original specimens, are upwards of sixty in number. Although to a certain extent rewritten, the book still retains its original form and character, and no alteration has been made in the numbering of the figures, the new illustrations being indicated by letters affixed to the numbers.

The Cambridge University Press will publish very shortly 'The Life-Histories of the British Marine Food-Fishes,' by Dr. W. C. M'Intosh, of St. Andrews, and Mr. A. T. Masterman.

The first conversazione of the Royal Society this season is fixed for Wednesday, May 19th.

The ensuing ordinary general meeting of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers will be held on Wednesday evening, April 28th, and Friday evening, April 30th, at 25, Great George Street. The chair will be taken by the President, Mr. Windsor Richards, at half-past seven P.M. each evening. The following papers will be read and discussed, as far as time permits: 'Mechanical Propulsion on Canals,' by Mr. L. S. Robinson, and 'Experiments on Propeller Ventilating Fans, and on the Electric Motor driving Them,' by Mr. W. G. Walker.

We regret to announce the death, in the thirty-sixth year of his age, of Baron Eduard von Haerdtl, Professor of Astronomy at the University of Innsbruck, and author of several investigations in the lunar and planetary theories (one of which obtained the Gold Medal of the Copenhagen Academy of Sciences in 1891) and on the motions of comets and small planets.

FINE ARTS

The Ruined Cities of Ceylon. By H. W. Cave, M.A. Illustrated with Photographs taken by the Author in the Year 1896. (Sampson Low & Co.)

This is a handsome book, beautifully illustrated and well got up. That there were many important ruins, the relics of an ancient densely-peopled empire, hidden away in the forests of Ceylon, has long been well known; but until the volume now before us appeared little opportunity had been given to men possessing artistic or antiquarian tastes of judging what kind of monuments the great island rulers of past ages had left behind them. Mr. Cave has therefore supplied a want, and in a series of forty-seven photographs and sixteen smaller engravings shows relic-shrines, temples, tanks, rock-sculptures, and fortified places, dating in many instances from a remote antiquity, all more or less now jungle-covered and in decay, but bearing silent testimony to the wealth, the power, the religious enthusiasm, and the architectural skill of an important Buddhist monarchy, the history whereof can fortunately be traced in the chronicles of the Mahawansa. The illustrations are the notable feature of this book; but their value is much enhanced by the letterpress. The author in eight chapters has contrived to interweave a narrative of his journeyings, and a brief notice of the leading features of Buddhism, with appropriate extracts from Singhalese histories and descriptive accounts of the monuments represented. But, says Mr. Cave, "only the merest fringe of this great subject has been touched" in the present publication; "the trackless jungle still covers the greater part of the huge cities of Anuradhapura and Polonnaruwa, while other remains of a glorious past are scattered here and there all over the island." The object of his book he declares to be to arouse the interest of those to whom these ruined cities are unknown and to quicken the interest already existing. That these wishes will be realized can hardly be questioned—here, indeed, is an opening for the man of cultured tastes and colossal affluence!—but it is no disparagement of Mr. Cave's labours to say that we quite agree with the view that his photographs only whet the appetite for ampler details. No plans, no sections are supplied, and it is quite possible that the débris and vegetation have in no instance as yet been sufficiently cleared away to admit of the true outlines being properly traced. The puzzle, however, which seems so far from a solution, and yet awakens such deep interest when mighty works like these remains in Ceylon are brought to light, is to explain wherein the men of the past so differed from their squalid descendants of the present age that these vast monuments could be erected over wide areas and often in the hardest stone, whereas the utmost that can be expected now is a moderate-sized building of bricks, plaster, and tiles. In many parts of Burma, in Java, in Camboja, and in Ceylon there are the ruins of public works to be seen which unaided native effort could no longer produce. Fervid religious enthusiasm may count for much, but the Asiatic has always been indolent—not the small man indolent only, but the noble and the taskmaster too; and as the forced labour of slaves is perfunctory and skill-less now, one would presume that it was perfunctory and skill-less in the days of old. It must have been the ancestors of the present Singhalese race who set to with one accord and for years kept all their people cutting, hoisting, dragging, and fitting enormous blocks of stone; for if it had been some now decayed race of superior energy, ability, and power, this superior people would have left descendants at the present day, and the less capable Singhalese would have been the race to disappear.

Remains of Buddhist architecture present everywhere similar features. We discover the same vast relic-shrines or dagobas, the same cave temples, the same temple buildings, the same sleeping Buddhas; there is a monotony over it all which tends somehow at last to deaden the curiosity of the student or the energy of the explorer; and for this reason many readers will probably concur in regarding that part of the present volume as possessing the most attraction in which the lonely crag Sigiri is pictured and described. This was the stronghold of King Kasyapa, who, after depriving his father of throne and life, here sought security by converting the rock into an impregnable fortress. Kasyapa flourished in the latter half of the fifth century of our era, and having rendered himself unpopular by his crimes he retired to Sigiri.

"The perpendicular sides of this rock made it impossible to climb, but Kasyapa by a clever device carried a spiral gallery around it, gradually rising from base to summit. He next surrounded the rock with a rampart of great strength, within which he collected all his wealth and treasure, and set guards over them. He then raised a splendid palace and other buildings needful for the seat of government. Here he lived in great luxury."

Sigiri rises abruptly from the plain, and has an artificial lake on its west side. There are traces of massive stone walls enclosing about fifty acres round the base of the rock, and forming the first line of defence. Further within the wall terraces may be observed, which are held to have been also constructed for defensive purposes, and, in addition, the foundations of numerous city buildings can be pointed out. The spiral galleries, which were carried to the summit of the rock, are in parts well preserved, but in other parts have entirely collapsed, so that the ascent, though lately rendered possible, is still not free from danger. Excavations are, however, being made on the hot and thirsty top of the crag; ruins have been found there belonging to at least two periods, and several other interesting details of what has been done are quoted in the present volume from the report of the Government Archæological Commission. It is to be hoped that the authorities may find themselves able to uncover completely all that is left of this interesting and beautifully situated royal fastness, taking measures also to protect the ruins from future injury or decay, and to improve the road which leads to them. Facility of access and convenient accommodation ought to attract many visitors to this relic of the old despotic rulers of Asia.

The curses of modern Ceylon are the sparseness of population and the sickliness of many large districts where jungle-growth has supplanted the tiller of the soil. But it was not so once, as Mr. Cave's descriptions and pictures of artificial lakes, tanks, and other mighty irrigation works instructively prove. A dense population must formerly have existed, even under the arbitrary sway of Eastern kings. The moonstones form another interesting feature illustrated by the author. These moonstones are semi-circular slabs, peculiar to Singhalese architecture, which constitute the doorstep to the principal entrance of a building. Their ornamentation varies considerably, and is often very florid; but they look like nothing so much as a handsome doormat laid at the foot of a staircase, and this is perhaps the very thing which they are intended to represent. Of one specimen Mr. Cave says that its carving is as sharp and well defined as if it were fresh from the sculptor's chisel, and this in spite of an interval of sixteen hundred years. Of course, during the major portion of that period the moonstone has remained buried beneath a layer of earth, and we must remember also that those who once passed through the principal entrance to a sacred edifice were barefooted; but if there is no trace at all of wear in the stone (and there would appear to be none), the surmise suggests itself that only certain high dignitaries, on particular festivals, were permitted to use that entrance, or it may be that the moonstone was only placed in position some short time before the fall of the empire. In places many beads have been found, of glass, of bone, or of other materials; and among the coins, which on the whole are not abundant, two "third-brass" coins of the later Roman Empire have been unearthed. Sometimes fragments are turned up of thick glass two and a half inches long, and smaller bits of thin blue and white glass. It is possible that this glass may have been used, as it is to-day in Buddhist buildings elsewhere, for mosaic decoration; but Mr. Cave has not touched upon this point.

The end of these Buddhist rulers and of their mighty works came in the early part of the thirteenth century, when the Tamil invaders took the capital and laid the whole country waste. They ransacked the kingdom "even as a wild fire doth a forest." They cut off hands and feet; they despoiled dwellings; the cattle they bound up and carried forcibly away. They broke down the image-houses, and the five ranks of the religious orders they sorely distressed; "many books also of great excellence did they loose from the cords that bound them, and cast them away in divers places." The great and lofty relic-shrines they utterly destroyed. "Alas! alas! even so did these Tamil giants." The rest of the annals of Ceylon till the days when Europeans first landed on its shores are filled with the desolating struggles between the natives and the invaders. The population melted away, and forests wrapped these mighty ruins, with which Mr. Cave's welcome labours will now familiarize the reader at home. We have by no means touched on all that is of interest in the volume, and we lay it down with regret. It has been accurately printed; in fact, save that on p. 28 "needs of the time of the people" has been written instead of "needs of the people of the time," and that the photograph forming plate xxxii. does not support the statement (on p. 97) that the stairway "has quite disappeared," there are no clerical errors, or, rather, none that we have detected; and if an index had not been lacking, we should have had nothing but praise for this handsome book.

Arthur Boyd Houghton. With an Introductory Essay by L. Housman. (Kegan Paul & Co.)—The immediate occasion for this handsome volume seems, so far as we can judge, to have been the getting together of a considerable number of blocks upon which had been cut, after the fashion prevalent in the days of the late Mr. Houghton, certain drawings—by no means of the highest quality—made by him to illustrate various publishers' ventures—reprints of the 'Arabian Nights,' 'Don Quixote,' 'Nursery Rhymes,' and the like. Mr. Houghton was not a great artist, nor even a good designer, still less an impeccable draughtsman, and, besides, he seldom cared to do himself justice by putting the power and skill he possessed to that best of all tests—the best he could do. Mr. Housman, in a clever and sympathetic, but too laudatory essay, pleads that Houghton's handling has all the qualities that belong to a brilliant sketch rather than to a closely finished drawing, and he adds that this detracts from the technical charm of his work. If he had left out the word "brilliant" we should have been disposed to agree with his verdict. But we fail altogether to recognize, even in the best of the cuts before us, that imaginative force and vitality which assigns right values and meanings to the subjects the illustrator has undertaken. Houghton was, it seems to us, always in too great a hurry to make sketches on his blocks and have done with them. Such imagination as he possessed rarely had time to bestir itself, and, even at its best, his invention seems to have been sluggish, content with trivial impressions, and but seldom spontaneous. Founded upon Millais's brilliant art, which was backed by great technical resources and an imagination as profound as it was tender and untiring, Houghton's drawings at their best were thin and superficial; he crowded his figures together without telling their story. Most of his designs, when deprived of that ostensible movement which his bluster and chic imparted to them, are commonplace; many of them were tame and confused, which can never be said of Millais's; and he seldom had insight enough to select from the stories he had to illustrate those dramatic points which most concern the reader and call out the sympathy as well as the genius of the artist. To compare him with Millais, even so remotely as Mr. Housman seems inclined to do, is a misuse of terms. The cut before us, much praised as a representation of the meeting of Camaralzaman and Badoura from the 'Arabian Nights,' is not a bad design for a "cuddling group," which, if adequately drawn—we say nothing of that finish which was quite beyond the reach of Houghton—might pass for a good third-rate book illustration. But nothing can be more ridiculous than the size of the prince's head and his mountain of hair; his legs are too short, and his eyes out of drawing; and yet this cut has been selected as a type of Houghton's powers. The princess is much more successfully portrayed, and she really hugs her disproportioned lover with a delight his construction hardly justifies. Far the best of the designs is the 'Death of the Old Gardener,' with the prince listening to the feeble words of his moribund friend; the drawing, too, is less defective than usual. Next in merit is 'Helga and Hildebrand,' for the drawing of the figures is exceptionally good—sufficiently so indeed to prove what we have said, that Houghton was generally in too great a hurry to do himself justice. Nearly always struggling to be great, the artist, in a lumbering way, lets us see how unequal were his powers, and, most of all, his technical education, to his purpose. At best but a heavy-handed follower of Millais, he could not for a moment fairly be classed, as our author groups him, with Frederick Walker, or even with Pinwell, although it is true there might have come a time when, had Houghton willed it, he and Pinwell could have stood side by side. Mr. Housman's enthusiasm has betrayed him into some random remarks about Houghton's "tone-scheme," of which many of the cuts before us furnish no evidence whatever, but very much of the want of something of the sort.

Le Parthénon et le Génie Grec. Par Émile Boutmy. (Paris, Colin & Cie.)—This volume, as M. Boutmy explains in his introduction, is a new edition, or rather a reprint, of his 'Philosophie de l'Architecture en Grèce,' a charming and suggestive little treatise, which first saw the light in 1870, and which the author modestly supposes to have been overwhelmed in the terrible convulsions of that year. Nevertheless it was known to some readers even in England, and they will welcome its revival in a new and more attractive form. The change of title implies no change of view on the part of the author, but only a consciousness that the former name was too ambitious; M. Boutmy still devotes his book to maintaining the thesis that the Parthenon "holds latent in it a whole psychology." Accordingly he does not confine his study to a subtle analysis of the forms of the building itself, but gives also a sketch of the religious notions that it embodies, the surroundings amidst which it was made, the political and social conditions, even the racial character of the people, and the geographical nature of the country. In all this the author shows a keen eye for suggestive analogies, and a refinement of observation which combines with the charm of his style to make a most fascinating book. At the same time it is often easy to criticize his remarks; there is, indeed, little attempt at accuracy in detail, or at keeping up to the level of recent archæological research. Perhaps the most striking example of this defect may be seen in the fact that the author is content to change the past eighty years of discovery to a hundred with but little modification of his summary of their results—and this although the last twenty years, perhaps, count for more in the knowledge we have acquired of the Acropolis of Athens than all the eighty years before. M. Boutmy seems to anticipate some such criticism as this, since he asserts in his preface that recent discoveries have only served to confirm the inferences he had drawn from what was previously known; but he can only maintain this view by discrediting, to what seems an undue degree, the value to the student of Greek architecture of the many early monuments that have recently come to light. Since, however, he practically renounces the historical study of architecture his contention may be justified. It is more in accordance with modern practice to trace the stages by which a final Greek form was evolved from its prototype, but M. Boutmy's method is rather to study the perfect form as he finds it; and if we accept the well known aphorism that "the true independence of Greek art lies in its perfection, not in its origin," we must admit that such a method is likely to reveal to us many beauties which a purely historical study might have missed. Certainly no one can read M. Boutmy's book without feeling that he has gained a fresh and a clearer insight into many traits, not only of Greek architecture, but of the Greek character as well.

M. Golénischeff has just published at St. Petersburg a description of the Assyrian monuments preserved in the Hermitage. The positions of the bas-reliefs are indicated by ground plans, and the pamphlet is illustrated with several outline drawings of the principal scenes. The cuneiform texts from some of the bas-reliefs are also reproduced.

SIR E. BURNE-JONES AT THE NEW GALLERY.

Sir E. Burne-Jones will contribute to the forthcoming exhibition in Regent Street an unusually large picture, entitled 'The Pilgrim of Love,' which has for its motto Mr. Swinburne's lines:—

> Love that is first and last of all things made,
> The Light that moving has man's life for shade.

It represents two nearly life-size figures in a bleak marshy plain, interspersed with pools, almost covered with rushes, and strewn with rocks. This barren spot is enclosed by low hills, the angular crests and purplish sides of which cut distinctly against the warm vapours of the skyline. The effect of the scene as a whole is almost shadowless, and, without being sad, decidedly impressive and sombre. The immediate foreground consists of patches of dark grey water, arid herbage, and slate rocks with sharp edges hurtful to the human foot. A very rugged pathway runs athwart the picture, and is encumbered by huge tangles of thorny and flowerless briars. A dense bush of them fills the front on our left, where, having just delivered himself from the tangle, the pilgrim, who is clad like a monk in a very dark bluish hood and a gown of the same colour that reaches to his feet, is moving in the footsteps of Love, who, a tall and comely youthful god dressed in pale blue, of that divine order in which the masters of the early Italian Renaissance delighted, leads the willing pilgrim by the hand which is eagerly extended and placed in that of his guide. In his left hand the god holds a javelin, and uses it to steady his bare feet along the thorny and stony path. Love's wings are black as those of a raven, and there are bronze, silvery, and blue reflections on their lustrous surfaces. He is crowned with roses and girt with a belt of thorns. Around his head hover a multitude of little birds singing as they fly, and thus form a living garland for the traveller. Other birds throng the thornbushes behind and the rocks in front of the group. Love looks back at his companion with an expression of ineffable tenderness. His face is very beautiful, and not less ardent than fair. Hardly inferior in its charm is the worn face of the pilgrim, shaded as it is by the hood, below which his eyes devoutly watch the movements of his guide. What we have said of the landscape applies equally well to the coloration of the work, its tone scheme, the strong harmonies of its local tints, and the breadth and softness of its treatment. It was a happy thought of the artist which induced him to dedicate his work to Mr. Swinburne by means of a cartel with an appropriate inscription.

VITRUVIANA.

Last year Dr. A. S. Murray, of the British Museum, drew my attention to a Danish pamphlet on Vitruvius, with an abstract in French, by the learned M. Ussing, Professor of Philology and Archæology at the University of Copenhagen. Prof. Ussing maintains that the work of Vitruvius we now have shows that Vitruvius was but slightly acquainted with architecture, and that he could not have been an architect; that his style was not Augustan; and that his language shows that he lived during the decadence of the Latin tongue. He says that the quotations given by Servius in the fourth century are not from our Vitruvius, nor is the title of the book the same; and that some of Pliny's extracts from Vitruvius are not to be found in our Vitruvius, and that other passages, common to both authors, rather point to an amplification of Pliny by Vitruvius than to a condensation of Vitruvius by Pliny, and he suggests that our Vitruvius drew his information from Varro.

A strong argument of Prof. Ussing's is that Vitruvius in his tenth book, on machines and engines of war, simply translates chapters xix.–xxi. from Athenæus, who lived in the third century A.D. He also objects to his addressing Augustus as "imperator Cæsar" after the assumption of the title of Augustus, which Vitruvius must have known, as he speaks of the "ædis Augusti" in describing the Basilica he built at Fano.

Prof. Ussing's conclusion is that our Vitruvius was written by some literary man who lived in the third or fourth century, and it pleased him to call his compilation 'The Ten Books of Architecture of Vitruvius,' and to dedicate the book to Augustus.

It seems to me that the main proof of this assertion is to be found in the language and style. I have consequently sent this letter to you in the hope that some of our scholars may confirm or overthrow Prof. Ussing's contention, although I hear that he is a most accomplished Latinist.

I think that the technical questions may be best settled by architects.

A book on architecture by Vitruvius existed in the days of Charlemagne, as his secretary Eginhardt wrote to some one he calls his son to explain to him certain passages in it. The late Prof. Cockerell, in his tract on William of Wykeham (8vo. Lond., 1846), says: "The evidences of the estimation in which Vitruvius was held in the Middle Ages abound. The citation of his name in the earliest and most authentic documents of the Freemasons is seldom wanting. The church in the castle of Nurembourg, built by Barbarossa in 1158, and the Fraumkirk in the centre of that great city .....are exact illustrations of the 'Temple in Antis' of Vitruvius as given by Cæsariano, lib. iii. fol. 52." After the rediscovery of the codex by Poggio Bracciolini in 1414, Vitruvius served as the guide of all the Italian Renaissance architects, and was the vade mecum of Rondelet. Up to 1826 there were at least forty-three editions of Vitruvius published, and there have been many since. It has been translated into English, French, German, Italian, Polish, and Spanish. Architects consequently do not wish to see it sent to the limbo of forgeries without undoubted proof, though they are thankful to Prof. Ussing for his learned labours.

George Aitchison, President R.I.B.A.

POMPEY'S PILLAR AT ALEXANDRIA.

Any criticism from Mr. Flinders Petrie is welcome to me. It would be even more so if I were able to understand his technical arguments better than I now do. But as regards his archæological visit to the pillar two years ago, it was evidently made before Dr. Botti's labours upon the site, and now the aspect of the matter is widely different. Not only did Dr. Botti find large artificial terracing round the hillock, but he uncovered large blocks of granite evidently used for some temple in Egyptian style, and as it seemed to me far older than Roman times. This is confirmed by the great underground chambers he also discovered — one of them running deep under the pillar itself—which surely point to an occupation of the site for important purposes at an earlier date than the third century A.D. It seems to me that Dr. Botti's identification of the site as that of the Serapeum is reasonable, and the best suggestion yet made. His official report of all these novelties is now being printed.

I come now to the foundation of the great pillar, which Mr. Petrie describes as (1) carelessly set upon partly rock, partly a cistern filled with various chips, (2) containing among them a black syenite fragment with a dedication of Ptolemy Philadelphus's time. He does not seem to take any account of the repeated attempts, mentioned by older travellers, which the Arabs of Alexandria made to blow up the whole structure by exploding gunpowder under the base in search of hidden treasure. These explosions blew out a considerable part of the old foundation, but happily did not disturb the pivot stone upon which the pillar sat, and which was specially pictured and described in White's 'Ægyptiaca' as far back as 1801. If he thinks that the stone inscribed by Thestor, son of Satyrus (to Arsinoe Philadelphus), shows the late date of the whole structure, he falls into a trap into which I also fell when first examining the foundation. If he were right his argument would bring down the erection of the pillar to a date posterior to 1864, at which date this stone was found far away, on the supposed site of the Bruchium, and afterwards brought, with other inscribed stones, to fill up the unseemly gap under the great base made by explosions and probings of the Arabs (cf. Revue Archéol. for 1864, p. 380).

Coming, lastly, to the question of the rehandling of the obelisk, I do not fully understand his arguments 1 and 2, and therefore must pass them by. A note from Mr. Somers Clarke to me shows that he also sees difficulties here. With regard to No. 3—viz., that if the stone was originally an obelisk, it must have lost much of its length before it could be suitable for the present pillar—this is exactly what our authorities tell us. Pliny says that the operations of Maximus, the Roman prefect, consisted of cutting down the top (resecto cacumine are the words). The dimensions, moreover, of the great obelisk of Philadelphus, as given by him, are considerably greater than those of the present shaft. He gives the obelisk as eighty-five cubits high. The present shaft is less than 69 ft.

Though quite ready to abandon the hypothesis, if technical arguments prove it untenable, I still think, as I have argued more fully in the Cosmopolis of this month, that the disappearance of the greatest obelisk at Alexandria is only to be accounted for in this way. Mr. Somers Clarke seems to think that if so, it must have fallen, or been taken down, and then reset in its present form. J. P. Mahaffy.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 10th inst. the following, from the collection of the late Mr. G. James. Drawings: T. Collier, After the Storm, Pattenham Common, between Godalming and Farnham, 84*l.*; A Welsh Moorland Scene, with sheep, 54*l.* D. Cox, Rhyl Sands, with bathing machines and figures, 173*l.*; Shakspeare's Cliff, with figures on a jetty, 73*l.*; A Town on the Sea-coast, with figures, 71*l.* C. Fielding, Weymouth Bay, 357*l.*; A Bird's-eye View over a River, 86*l.*; View from above Chichester Harbour, Isle of Wight in the distance, 136*l.* W. Hunt, Too Hot, 525*l.*; The Restless Sitter, 414*l.*; Black and White Grapes, Apple, and Haws, 68*l.* A. Mauve, Cows in a Meadow, 525*l.*; A Landscape, with figure and cattle, 199*l.*; Ploughing, 357*l.*; Troupeau près Bergerie, 609*l.*; Washing Day, 168*l.* J. M. W. Turner, St. Mawes, with numerous fisher-folk on the beach, 241*l.*; The Grand Canal, Venice, with the church of Santa Maria and the Dogana, 178*l.* F. Walker, A Fishing Scene at Corriehoille, 504*l.* P. De Wint, Hay Harvest, 241*l.* Pictures: R. P. Bonington, A French Coast Scene, with shipping, 257*l.* Corot, A View near a Farm, with cows near some old willows, 430*l.* C. Fielding, A Coast Scene, with shipping off a jetty, 173*l.* J. Holland, Venice, 131*l.* J. Maris, Amsterdam, 1,155*l.* A. Mauve, A View in Holland, with three cows in the foreground, 409*l.*; Changing Pasture, 997*l.* H. Moore, Off Gerrans Bay, Cornwall, 346*l.* G. Morland, A Woody Scene, 336*l.* W. Müller, A View near a Village, with church and haystack, 309*l.*; Syrian Dancing Girls, Xanthus, 105*l.*

Also the following, from various collections. Pictures: J. Phillip, The Balcony, 152*l.* J. Israëls, The Shepherd, woodland pastures, late autumn, 798*l.* D. Bles, The Poet and the Cat, 126*l.* E. Verboeckhoven, A Landscape, with peasant and dog, ewes and lambs, 262*l.* R. Ansdell, Rescued, 199*l.* Drawings: Sir J. Gilbert, A Landscape, with a knight and figures on a road, 52*l.* J. L. Gérôme, The Blind Beggar, 99*l.* S. Prout, A Norman Cathedral, 56*l.*

At the sale of the contents of M. F. Willems's studio, which occurred in Brussels on the 5th inst., M. E. van Marcke's Bestiaux au Pâturage realized 24 000 francs. On the same occasion some pieces of porcelain of the famille verte order fetched exceptional sums, e. g., Deux Potiches were sold for 19,000 francs.

Fine-Art Gossip.

Mr. Watts, who is in excellent health and continues painting with unabated vigour, will, being now a Retired Royal Academician, contribute to Burlington House this year but a single work, the three-quarters-length, nearly life-size portrait of Miss Dorothy MacCallum, clad in a primrose and rose-coloured dress, bareheaded, and looking up to us as she moves to our right. The carnations of the picture are in the artist's best manner; the gentle and vivacious expression of the features, and the figure's simple and graceful air, are charming elements of a delightful work of art.

The private view of the New Gallery exhibition is fixed for Saturday, the 24th inst. The public will be admitted on the Monday following.

The Report for 1896 of the Director of the National Gallery contains some additions to the information which has already been given in these columns concerning the acquisitions by purchase, gifts, and bequests. Certain works have been lent to provincial collections at Rotherham, Leeds, and Chester, and interchanges have been made from one country gallery to another. The building in Trafalgar Square was for the first time on a Sunday opened to the public on May 3rd last, and again on each Sunday till September 13th following. During the intermediate Sundays 29,607 persons visited the building; the highest number on a single Sunday was 3,240 persons, the lowest number 770. In the current year the period of Sunday openings is extended from the 1st inst. until September 30th, from 2 p.m. until 5 or 6 p.m., according to the season. Hogarth's 'Calais Gate'; Mulready's 'Crossing the Ford'; Turner's 'Battle of Trafalgar,' 'Carthage,' 'A Sandbank,' 'Phryne,' and 'Æneas with the Sibyl'; Linnell's 'The Windmill'; Etty's 'Imprudence of Candaules'; S. Aretino's 'Crucifixion'; G. Santi's 'Virgin and Child'; and several less important examples, have been variously repaired, and some of them have been varnished. Nearly 500,000 persons visited the gallery during 1896 on weekdays. The seventy-seventh edition of the catalogue of old masters' pictures and the seventieth edition of the works by modern artists are still on sale; a supplement to each of these catalogues was issued on April 1st, 1896, during which year more than 13,000 catalogues in all were sold. The month when the greatest number of visitors went to the gallery was August; April came next in the list, and September third. The fewest visits occurred in December. The largest monthly attendance was 65,842; the smallest 23,985.

The second number of the Annual of the British School at Athens is now nearly ready for issue to subscribers. Besides the usual reports and accounts, it will contain the following papers, by members of the school and others: 'Archæology in Greece' and 'Excavations in Melos,' by Mr. Cecil Smith (Director); 'The Campaign of Artemisium and Thermopylæ,' by Prof. J. B. Bury (Associate); 'Goulas: the City of Zeus,' by Mr. Arthur Evans (Associate); 'Meteora,' by the Rev. Arthur Cruickshank; 'A Visit to Cyrene in 1895,' by Mr. Herbert Weld Blundell; 'The East Gate of Melos and Prehistoric Graves in Syra,' by Mr. R. C. Bosanquet (student); 'Lesbos,' by Mr. W. H. D. Rouse; and 'The Churches of Melos,' by Mr. H. M. Fletcher and Mr. S. D. Kitson, who, though not regular students, did some useful work for the school last session. The first number of the Annual was printed only for subscribers; but as the new number contains so much matter of general interest, the Committee have decided to publish it through Messrs. Macmillan & Co. at the price of half a guinea.

M. E. Detaille contributes to the Salon an important picture representing 'Les Obsèques de Pasteur.' The great military painter thus diverges from his usual choice of subjects.

The rearrangement of the Egyptian collection at Turin is being steadily carried on by Prof. Schiaparelli, and, when completed, will mark an era in the display of Egyptian art. The Professor has selected an ivory tint for the colour of the walls of the room and the insides of the glass cases, consequently the varied and brilliant colours of the objects are seen in their true values. Every example is clearly visible, and the grouping is calculated to emphasize and illustrate the artistic and historical relationship of each particular specimen.

The Museum of Tarento, which had been closed for some years, is now reopened, the Conservator being Signor Caruso, Soprastante dei Musei e Scavi, who has now carefully arranged the highly interesting collection of objects found at the place. The building containing them was formerly a convent, and the rooms are small and ill lighted. It is to be hoped that the municipality will remove the museum to a more commodious structure.

A Correspondent writes:—

"A numismatic 'find' was made last week on the Buchli, about half way between Oberbipp and Niederbipp in Canton Soleure. The workmen came upon an earthenware pot full of coins, nearly 1,300 in number, the great majority of them being 'Denaren' of the Bishops of Lausanne. The 'Denar' is about the size of the modern Swiss ten-centime piece, but considerably thinner, and is described by a Swiss expert as 'a very bad silver coin, of the probable value of twelve Rappen,' the Swiss-German name for centimes. These coins, first unearthed on the Buchli, show on one side a Savoy cross, with the circular inscription 'Civitas Equesstriv.,' that is to say, Nyon; the other side has a church, surmounted by a cross, and the inscription 'Sedes Lausainne.' Exact dating is not practicable, but the coins are supposed to date from some time during the eleventh and twelfth centuries, or even from an early part of the thirteenth century. The Bishops of Lausanne exercised the right of coinage after 1011; the 'Munzrecht' was confirmed to them by the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa in 1150. As Nyon was the seat of a mint of the Dukes of Savoy, there was probably some compromise between the dukes and the bishops, which may account for the ducal cross on one side of the 'Denar,' and the episcopal church with the word 'Lausainne' on the other."

At the beginning of next year an Austrian Archæological Institute is to be established at Vienna.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Queen's Hall.—The Bach Festival. M. Paderewski's Concert.
Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts.
St. James's Hall.—Popular Concerts.
Queen's Hall.—Herr Felix Mottl's Concert.

The Selection programme of the Bach Festival at the Queen's Hall was the most artistically successful of the week. The performance on Thursday evening last week commenced with the elaborate cantata originally composed during the Weimar period for the season of Advent, which was revised in 1823 for the twenty-sixth Sunday after Trinity. The scoring is for solo quartet, chorus, strings, oboe, bassoon, trumpet, and organ. The work is lengthy, and is divided into two parts, between which the sermon would intervene. The general tone of the cantata is sombre, the words dealing with the subjects of death and judgment, and prayer for salvation. The choir had mastered their duties, and sang well, as they did in the more familiar and extremely beautiful cantata "Wachet auf," which was given in place of "Ich will den Kreuzstab gerne tragen," for bass solo and chorus, for which Herr Messchaert, of Amsterdam, had been specially engaged. Illness, however, prevented him from appearing, and hence the change in the programme. The choral items were completed by the final quartet and chorus from the church cantata "Ich hatte viel Bekümmerniss," and all was well done. Herr Joachim took an important part in the concert, rendering the Concerto in E for violin solo, with string accompaniment, and the oft-played Chaconne, in addition to an obbligato. The solo parts in the choral selections were intelligently sung by Mrs. Hutchinson, Madame Marian McKenzie, Herr Robert Kaufmann, and Mr. Francis Harford. It only remains to be mentioned that Sir Walter Parratt displayed complete command over his instrument in the great Organ Toccata and Fugue in D minor.

The performance of 'Die hohe Messe' in B minor, which concluded the festival on the following Saturday afternoon, was in some measure a disappointment. The Bach Choir has rendered the work so often that it was only reasonable to expect an interpretation noteworthy for force, spirit, and general accuracy. In the last-named respect there was no serious fault to find; but unfortunately it cannot be denied that the general impression was one of dulness and feebleness in the choruses. This is to be accounted for on more than one ground. We have had magnificent performances of the Mass at the Leeds Festival, and it would be unreasonable to expect the same amount of voice power from London amateurs as from Yorkshire singers. Then the acoustic properties of the Queen's Hall are peculiar, unsatisfactory in some parts, and absolutely perfect in others. We are not, therefore, disposed seriously to blame the Bach Choir for their noticeable shortcomings, and may express the hope that better results may be obtained on the next occasion. The vocal solo parts were carefully rendered by Madame Medora Henson, Madame Marian McKenzie, Mr. Robert Kaufmann, and Mr. Andrew Black; and the members of the orchestra who played the numerous instrumental obbligati were one and all excellent. Prof. Stanford, of course, conducted with judgment.

M. Paderewski's orchestral concert, or, at any rate, the concert to which he gave his name on Friday evening last week, was, of course, a substantial success, and the Polish artist displayed wisdom in selecting Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto and Liszt's in E flat (more a fantasia than a concerto) as his principal solos, for both are very popular works, though very diverse in respect of artistic merit. Perhaps the rendering of the German master's work was the best he has yet afforded us, though not quite satisfying in breadth and what may be termed intellectuality. Liszt's Concerto was played with all possible brilliancy, and, of course, encores were exacted. All due justice was rendered to the purely orchestral items, including Beethoven's 'Prometheus' Overture, Tschaïkowsky's piquant suite 'Casse-Noisette' ('The Nutcracker'), and two of Brahms's Hungarian dances, orchestrated by Mr. Albert Parlow.

The Saturday Concerts at the Crystal Palace are drawing to a close for the present season, the last performance being announced for to-day. The programme on the 10th inst. commenced with Mr. Edward German's Suite, founded on his incidental music to

Mr. Forbes Robertson's revival of 'Romeo and Juliet' at the Lyceum Theatre. The music is in the composer's best style, and, as vigorously rendered under his own direction, was well received by a somewhat small audience. Mr. Balling must play more attractive music on his instrument, the viola-alta, than Ritter's dry Fantasia if he wishes to gain popularity for an instrument of which a description has been freely circulated. Mozart's 'Jupiter' Symphony and Mendelssohn's 'Hebrides' Overture were splendidly played under Mr. Manns, and Miss Hilda Wilson gave full satisfaction as the vocalist.

The thirty-ninth season of the Popular Concerts ended in a brilliant manner, and brief record of the two closing performances may now be made. Last Saturday the Joachim combination played Haydn's Quartet in G, Op. 17; Beethoven's colossal Quartet in A minor, Op. 132; and Schumann's in A major, Op. 41, No. 3. All were rendered in the manner to which we have now become accustomed, that is to say, with perfect balance of tone and phrasing. Miss Agnes Witting proved herself worthy of fair commendation in Lieder by Schubert. On Monday a little more variety was given to the programme. The first item was Beethoven's early Quartet in A, Op. 18, No. 5, and the next was Brahms's concise and, on the whole, cheerful Quintet in G, Op. 111, in which the second viola part was well played by Mr. Hobday. A truly superb performance of Schumann's Quintet in E flat, Op. 44, brought the concert and the season to a conclusion. Miss Ada Crossley, the vocalist of the evening, was not altogether satisfactory in Brahms's 'Sapphische Ode,' but her fine mezzo-soprano voice, inclining to contralto, and her intelligent style, told well in Asioli's air "Ah! non lasciarmi, nò!" and Dr. Hubert Parry's 'A Contrast.' The concerts will be recommenced on November 1st next.

The so-called "Grand Wagner Concert" under Herr Felix Mottl on Tuesday evening was a striking artistic success, and the Queen's Hall was thronged in every part. A choir nearly two hundred strong had been brought from Leeds specially for the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and the interpretation of the colossal work was, perhaps, the finest ever heard in London. Herr Mottl adopted a somewhat slower tempo than that to which we are generally accustomed in the first and third movements, but the expression he gained in all important phrases was superb. The Yorkshire choristers found the most arduous passages in the finale quite easy, not a trace of wavering being noticeable at any point. Of the principal vocalists, Miss Esther Palliser, Miss Rosa Green, and Mr. Andrew Black were the most commendable. The second part of the concert consisted of familiar extracts from 'Tannhäuser,' 'Lohengrin,' and 'Siegfried,' and the only comment needed is a further reference to the Leeds choir, which rendered the Bridal chorus from the second-named work in a manner that may fairly be described as exquisite.

Recent Publications.

Twelve Pieces for the Pianoforte. By P. Tschaikowsky. 2 books.—Select Pieces for the Pianoforte. By the same. 2 books. (Novello, Ewer & Co.)—It was reserved for the Russian composer Tschaikowsky to achieve posthumous fame—at any rate in this country. His magnificent symphonies Nos. 5 and 6, his fantasias, pianoforte pieces, and songs, are all now greatly in request. The whole of the above-named pieces are edited by Mr. Franklin Taylor, who is, of course, well qualified for his task. It would be invidious to make comparisons merely from perusal; but at least we may venture to say that the 'Chanson Triste,' from the first book of the 'Pieces,' and 'Au Village,' from the second, are among the most charming. Let it be added that these pieces are not for beginners, but for advanced players. The two books of 'Select Pieces' are of similar calibre, and may be equally recommended to the notice of pianists.

The same publishers have sent us Four Studies and Three Sketches for pedal piano by Robert Schumann. It is known that the composer had some admiration for this instrument and wrote ten pieces in all for it, of which seven are given in the two books before us. They have been arranged for the organ; Madame Schumann cleverly adapted them for the keyboard alone, and in this form they are sometimes heard. We have also received an edition of three of the 'Sketches' edited by Miss Agnes Zimmermann.—Mr. Edward German's charming incidental music to Shakspeare's dramas is well known, and it is working its way in the concert-room, where it can be better appreciated. The Masque from 'As You Like It,' which is before us arranged as a suite in three movements, is quite within the means of ordinary amateurs.

There are also to hand four books of the studies and pieces required by the examiners of the Associated Board (Edwin Ashdown). Even those who have no intention of entering for the examinations will find these books very useful for practice purposes. Let it be understood, however, that the pieces selected for examination in the junior grade are intended not for beginners, but for such as can play the sonatas of Mozart or the early works of Beethoven.

The Songs of Burns. With Symphonies and Accompaniments by John Kenyon Lees, and Introduction and Historical Notes by H. C. Shelley. (Bayley & Ferguson.)—This sumptuous large quarto volume is one of the best tributes to the memory of Robert Burns that have yet appeared. Though the poet was not fully appreciated during his life, partly, it must be confessed, owing to his own imperfections of character, his prediction that he would be held in much higher estimation a hundred years later is being fully verified. The treasures of Scottish national song were, so to say, crystallized in him, and now that the national element in music is so largely recognized, it would have been strange indeed had the songs of Burns suffered neglect. This is not the place for an essay on the peculiarities of North-Country music in rhythm, accent, and scale, but it may be said that the plaintive charm in many of the melodies and the pathos of the words appeal with irresistible force not only to the masses of the public, but to musicians. Some of the songs—such as 'Afton Water,' 'Auld Lang Syne,' 'Duncan Gray,' 'Highland Mary,' 'Mary Morison,' "O Mary, at thy window be," "O, my love is like a red, red rose," "O, wert thou in the cauld blast," "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled," "The Deil's awa' wi' the exciseman," "There was a lad was born in Kyle," "Thou hast left me ever, Jamie," and "Ye banks and braes o' bonnie Doon"—may almost be said to have become classics. But there are many others which are equally noteworthy for either pathos or humour, though less known. The accompaniments furnished by Mr. Kenyon Lees are in almost every instance tasteful and appropriate, efforts being evidently made to avoid the use of harmonies out of keeping with the spirit of the quaint ditties. The volume is profusely illustrated, many artists having contributed to this side of the publication. Besides portraits of Burns, there are others of his associates. Perhaps the most delightful of all are the views of Northern scenery, for the most part so well executed as to convey graphic impressions even to those who do not know the country. The volume should be in the hands of every lover of Scottish minstrelsy in general, and of Burns in particular. It should be added that the melodies are given in both the staff and the tonic sol-fa notations, and that a useful glossary is appended.

We have received A Chronological Cyclopædia of Musicians and Musical Events, by Mr. C. Egerton Lowe (Weekes & Co.). This is a handy and useful little volume, and so far as we have tested it commendably accurate.

We have also to hand A Few Words to Candidates for the Degree of Mus. Bac. Oxon., by J. Stainer (Novello, Ewer & Co.). This little pamphlet gives in concise form and in readable language many hints that cannot fail to be of much service to candidates for a university musical diploma.

Musical Gossip.

The series of Saturday evening Promenade Concerts at the Queen's Hall terminated for the season last week with an excellent programme, including Beethoven's 'Leonora' Overture, No. 3; M. Saint-Saëns's symphonic poem 'Le Rouet d'Omphale'; Mr. Edward German's three dances from his music to 'Henry VIII.'; and items by Wagner, Gounod, Massenet, Berlioz, and Percy Pitt, all being admirably interpreted by Mr. Henry Wood's fine orchestra. The concerts will be resumed on Saturday, August 28th.

A fairly pleasant vocal and violin recital was given by Miss Maude Danks and Miss Hilda Gee at the Steinway Hall on Tuesday afternoon. The artist first named has an agreeable and well-trained soprano voice, perhaps better suited to the salon than the concert-room; and Miss Gee displayed refined execution in violin solos by Handel and Max Bruch. Mr. Walter Ford and Mr. Henry Bird took effective part in the concert.

We regret to hear that Madame Adelina Patti has suffered from illness since her return to her Welsh home, Craig-y-Nos, and had to cancel engagements to sing at Sheffield and Newcastle last week.

Messrs. Breitkopf & Härtel will shortly commence the issue of a critical edition of Haydn's works.

Wagner's 'Tristan und Isolde,' recently mounted at Turin, does not seem to have been received with unqualified satisfaction, which is not surprising. Nevertheless the work is to be given at Rome, Milan, Florence, and Naples.

M. E. Jaques-Dalcroze, the Swiss composer and editor of the Gazette Musicale in Geneva, will give three concerts—two in Steinway Hall, respectively on May 14th and 28th, and the third at St. James's Hall, with orchestra and chorus, on June 10th, the programmes consisting entirely of his own compositions. The first two concerts will be devoted to his works written for voice, piano, violin, and string quartet, and the third and last to the performance of his 'Poème Alpestre' for solos, orchestra, and chorus, the principal vocalist being Signorina Faliero.

Performances next week.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	National Sunday League, 'The Messiah,' 7, Queen's Hall.
Mon.	Patriotic Concert, Crystal Palace.
Wed.	Miss Gertrude Mew's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
Fri.	Royal Artillery Band Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
Sat.	Mr. August Manns's Benefit Concert, 3, Crystal Palace.
—	Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3.

DRAMA

John Gabriel Borkman, a Play in Four Acts. By Henrik Ibsen. Translated from the Norwegian by William Archer. (Heinemann.)

Though still nebulous when judged from an ordinary standpoint, the latest play of Ibsen, compared with some of its predecessors, is lightness itself. It has a distinct purpose, both satirical and ethical; its story is not without interest; and its action is progressive. The entire action passes in one middle-class house and its garden, and in the afternoon and evening of a single day. Two lessons are earnestly enforced: the first, that the experience, the counsels, and the claims of age are powerless to check the ebullience of youth, or, couched in more Ibsenite language, that the joy of living is as fierce and selfish as are the hope and exigencies of "eld"; and next, that to extinguish in a human breast happiness and delight is worse than to slay the body. Behind these two assumptions is a third, to the effect that the lust of wealth and power is the greediest, most insatiable, and most abject of human aspirations. Let it be added that the characters are as a rule—there are some exceptions—lifelike and comprehensible, and it will be seen that there is no need, in order to enjoy the perusal of the work, to read into it either symbolism or mysticism.

John Gabriel Borkman is a swindler and a criminal. He is also a man of fervid imagination and unbounded energy, selfish, unscrupulous, indomitable. In one aspect of his character he leans to the Mercadet of Balzac; from another point of view he is akin to Sir Giles Overreach. On the whole, he belongs rather to Tudor times than to-day. A financial Alexander the Great, he has dreamed of universal dominion over the forces of nature. To him the bleak mountain side will yield up its ores; fiord and sea shall be cumbered with his ships; the streams which plunge down the ravines shall turn the wheels of his factories. To carry out these stupendous schemes his own means are ridiculously inadequate, and the disproportion between ambition and power is scarcely less overpowering when he turns to his own fraudulent uses the capital to which, as manager of an insignificant local bank, he has access. The collapse which from the first was inevitable arrives, and Borkman, after three years' detention and five years' convict labour, is again free, with undiminished faith in his own power and confidence in his energies. That he has a roof over his own head and that of his wife and son is due to the fact that, while grasping at all the money that is within his reach, he spared the hoard of Ella Rentheim, the one woman he has ever loved. She is the twin sister of his wife, and has educated his son Erhart, a student now on the verge of manhood.

Around this son Erhart centres the action, such as it is, and for him is waged the fiercest of internecine wars. Gunhild Borkman (who since her husband's release, now eight years ago, has not once spoken to him) looks to the boy to restore the family name, and in the splendour of his triumph to bury the memory of past dishonour. Ella Rentheim would use her influence to save the youth from the fierce tyranny of his mother, and Borkman himself would make him his associate in the new schemes with which his brain overflows. Erhart has, however, chosen for himself. Happiness, the joy of life, is that for which he pines, and, breaking free from all restraint and deaf to all entreaty, he elopes with a divorced woman seven years his senior. After this shock Borkman quits his own house, and, in the aimless, futile fashion of Ibsenite heroes and heroines, struggles upwards to those heights which have always in Scandinavian drama some mystic significance. He breaks down and dies, followed to the last by the tenderness of Ella. The twin sisters—implacable so long, but now reconciled, since there is nothing else for which to fight—shake hands over the man they have both loved in their way, and own themselves "two shadows" over a corpse.

This is simple and intelligible, and, in a sense, dramatic. What is strange, and, for want of a better word, we will say Scandinavian, is in the details. When Mrs. Wilton, the divorcée, elopes with Erhart, she takes as her companion a girl of fifteen years who has already captivated his fancy. Her excuse has a simplicity almost patriarchal:—

"Men are so unstable, Mrs. Borkman, and women, too. When Erhart is done with me, and I with him, then it will be well for us both that he, poor fellow, should have some one to fall back upon."

Providence and foresight such as this are strange enough to convey an idea of burlesque. In quaint contrast with Borkman, with his resolute pursuit of the practical, is the so-styled poet Foldal, the father of Frida, the companion of Erhart and Mrs. Wilton in their escapade. Run over and lamed by the sledge that is conveying his daughter to her—emancipation, this sentimental dreamer finds comfort and delight in the thought that his little Frida was "in that magnificent sledge" with silver bells—"real, genuine silver bells."

The strongest and most characteristic portion of the work is that in which the constant Ella ascertains the reason why she was deserted for her sister, that reason being that her surrender to another who loved her was a means towards Borkman's advancement. The scene in which the revelation is made is genuinely dramatic. It must be read in its entirety. In this act of consummate treachery and baseness the woman sees the one unmentionable, unpardonable offence:—

"I have never rightly nderstood until this evening what had really happened to me. That you deserted me and turned to Gunhild instead—I took that to be mere common fickleness on your part, and the result of heartless scheming on hers. I almost think I despised you a little, in spite of everything. But now I see it! You deserted the woman you loved! Me, me, me! What you held dearest in the world you were ready to barter away for gain. That is the double murder you have committed! The murder of your own soul and of mine."

That Ibsen is a power is shown, if in nothing else, by the way in which, while criticism fumes and decries, the majority of the daily newspapers dealt immediately with the "advance copies" of his new play. 'John Gabriel Borkman' is quite suited to representation. If the supporters of the Ibsen stage had failed to secure its speedy production, they would have laid themselves open to the arraignment that their slackness was due to the absence of the underlying pruriency which has been held to be one, and not the least, of the attractions of the master.

Michael and his Lost Angel. By Henry Arthur Jones. (Macmillan & Co.)—Undeterred by the hostile attitude of some of the critics and the apparent coldness of the general public, Mr. Jones has reprinted his five-act play of 'Michael and his Lost Angel,' produced a few months ago at the Lyceum. It is as literature and not as an acting version that the book appears. No list of the actors taking part in it, no date of performance even, is given. We have always regarded this play as ranking with the best of modern English dramatic effort. That estimate is strengthened by perusal. The contributor of a eulogistic preface attributes its cold reception to a preconceived idea on the part of a portion of the press and the public that the play constituted an attack upon religion, and to a caprice on the part of an actress, who withdrew from a character specially designed for her. This may or may not be. The drama at least constitutes highly agreeable reading, and, though there are points in it difficult of acceptance, strikes a deep and reverberating note. Mr. Jones meanwhile produces figures to show that the Lyceum management, unduly timid, withdrew the piece with unnecessary abruptness, when the tide was turning in its favour. This also may or may not be. There is, however, nothing in the play of which Mr. Jones need be ashamed, and much of which he has cause to be proud, and we are content to think that there is a chance of its again "revisiting the glimpses" of the footlights.

THE WEEK.

Lyceum.—'Madame Sans-Gêne,' a Comedy in a Prologue and Three Acts. By Victorien Sardou and Émile Moreau. Translated by J. Comyns Carr.

It was scarcely to be expected that 'Madame Sans-Gêne' would gain in English estimation when put into an English dress. It is a matter of current observation among people of the world, if not among philologists, that coarseness, indecorum, and blasphemy lose a measure of their offence when delivered in French. It is at least certain that the saucy sayings and malapert speeches and the suggestions of impropriety in the utterances of the Alsatian washerwoman, much of whose argot added to its other attractions for an English public that of the unknown, sound tamer in a language provided with no precise and quotable equivalents. Thus, though Mr. Carr's rendering of the play is probably as exact as the exigencies of the two languages permit, and though the rendering of the principal characters is not inferior to that given three or four years ago at the Gaiety, we find ourselves provided with time to handle the fabric and to marvel at the flimsiness of the texture. The highest praise to be awarded to the adaptation is perhaps bestowed when we say that the atmosphere of the original is preserved. In nothing is the dexterity of M. Sardou so conspicuous as in the manner in which he succeeds in giving his characters a fitting environment. His ficelles are not seldom inadequate. In the present instance nothing can be much more conventional and ineffective than the use made of the Comte de Neipperg, an Austrian attendant first upon Marie Antoinette, and next upon Marie Louise. His escape from the Tuileries and the shelter afforded him by Catherine Hubscher, otherwise Mlle. Sans-Gêne, are pardonable enough. They serve to open out the action, to furnish an insight into the relations between Catherine and her soldier lover, who at that time, if history may be trusted, was a defender rather than an assailant of the Tuileries; and in a somewhat clumsy fashion they assign an appearance of continuity to the action. It is, however, but a poor device to present De Neipperg as a sort of new Chastelard to Marie Louise, whose father he might have been, risking her fair fame by a nocturnal invasion of her apartments. Even poorer and more conventional is the method in which, in the very teeth of Napoleon, a second rescue is planned and executed by Catherine, now Duchess of Dantzig.

Quitting these things, however, and coming to the scenes of Empire life, one is struck with the skill and the knowledge displayed throughout. The subversion of Savary, Duke of Rovigo, by Fouché, who discomfits him and steps into his shoes, is a piece of the best Scribe tinsel. The presentation, moreover, of the Court entertainments, the family altercation between Napoleon and his sisters, and the display—a little extravagant, be it owned—of the Duchess's vulgarity and clumsiness are thoroughly effective. The pictures shown are beautiful and lifelike, and the presentation of the parvenu Court, with its almost barbaric splendour, constitutes the whole a striking and most effective spectacle. A tour de force is accomplished by Sir Henry in getting himself up to the life as Napoleon, whose certified height was "cinq pieds deux pouces et quatre lignes." His stature seemed to have dwarfed, and the resemblance to the familiar portraits was striking and almost uncanny. The most was made of the not very dignified proceedings assigned to the Emperor, who, besides scolding his sisters in the choicest Corsican, absolutely pounds the unfortunate Austrian, whom he promotes temporarily to the position of a rival. That Sir Henry should take a part originally assigned M. Duquesne, and should "play it for all it is worth," shows how loyal he is to his friend and associate Miss Terry. Unlike in many respects the Catherine of Madame Réjane is that of Miss Terry. It is, however, no less interesting. The womanly nature underlying the crude speech and rough bearing of the Duchess was shown with consummate art, as were the frank good-heartedness and sound common sense of the Alsatian peasant, who, through her strange mutations of fortune, preserved her sturdy honesty and independence. The mother of a dozen or more children, Madame Sans-Gêne was probably a less tempting being than she seems in the hands of her interpreters, French and English; but this is a fault not difficult to condone. Miss Terry's performance raises the whole into success and eminence. The mounting of the piece is beautiful, and the cast has praiseworthy ensemble. Some weak spots there are, but on these, in the case of an entertainment so creditable and so inspiriting, it would be harsh to insist.

Dramatic Gossip.

A prospectus has been issued of the New Century Theatre, on the provisional committee of which are Miss Elizabeth Robins and Mr. William Archer. The purposes of this institution are wholly analogous to those of the Independent Theatre, and its aims include the production on May 3rd, with a strong cast, of 'John Gabriel Borkman,' to be followed, if possible, by the first three acts at least of 'Peer Gynt,' with Grieg's music. Early in the autumn 'Admiral Guinea,' by Robert Louis Stevenson and Mr. W. E. Henley, is to be performed.

The death of Mr. George W. Godfrey, which took place on Saturday last, was painfully sudden. Those who went that day to keep an appointment made by him the previous day in full health and apparent spirits were met with intelligence of his decease. Mr. Godfrey was for many years in the Admiralty. He contributed to the stage 'The Queen's Shilling,' 'The Parvenu,' 'My Milliner's Bill,' and 'Vanity Fair,' the last-named given at the Court so recently as April 27th, 1895. Mrs. Godfrey, who predeceased him by some years, was author of some successful novels.

'You Never Can Tell,' a play by Mr. Bernard Shaw, is to be given before long at the Haymarket, at which house a play "suggested to" Mr. Addison Bright and Mr. Baume by 'The Little Minister' of Mr. J. M. Barrie is also in contemplation.

It is said that the Comédie Française en bloc will visit London this year. Particulars as to the repertory to be brought with it are not yet announced.

Yet another series of French performances will, it is said, be given during the summer at the Lyric, at which house in June Madame Réjane and a portion of the Vaudeville company will appear.

'Ferrara' is the title of a tragedy by G. Conrad, a pseudonym for Prince George of Prussia. The piece is said to have been favourably received on its first performance at Düsseldorf, but, dealing with Tasso, it will provoke comparison with Goethe's drama.

A new melodrama by Messrs. Haddon Chambers and Comyns Carr will be given in the late summer or early autumn at the Adelphi by Mr. William Terriss, Mr. H. Nicholls, and Miss Millward.

'East Lynne' was given on Monday at the Opéra Comique, with Miss Eustace as Lady Isabel.

Mr. Bourchier has acquired the English and colonial rights of 'La Loi de l'Homme' of M. Paul Hervieu, the latest success at the Comédie Française. Mr. Bourchier, who is announced to reappear this evening at the Strand in 'The Queen's Proctor,' will play Dr. Johnson next Saturday in a one-act piece so named.

The Lyric Theatre reopens this afternoon with Mr. Wilson Barrett in 'The Manxman,' a piece that will be repeated during the coming week.

'Secret Service,' a drama of the American war, is to be given at the Adelphi on May 17th by Mr. Gillette and a company from the Empire Theatre, New York. It can be played for a short time only, after which the theatre will be occupied by Madame Sarah Bernhardt.

To Correspondents.—A. H. D.—F. S. H.—P. K. F.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

In imperial 8vo. Vol. II. (1-2) pp. 888,

MODERN ENGLISH BIOGRAPHY. By FREDERIC BOASE. Containing nearly 6,200 Concise Memoirs of Persons who have died since 1850. With an Index of the most interesting matter. 30s. net, carriage free. "As a work of reference the book is just what it should be."—Times, April 14, 1897.

Some copies of Volume I. are still on sale at 30s.

Netherton & Worth, Truro.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

THE LIFE OF NELSON THE EMBODIMENT OF THE SEA POWER OF GREAT BRITAIN.

By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.,

Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c.

2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.

VOLUME I. READY NEXT WEEK.

A HISTORY OF THE ROYAL NAVY FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO THE PRESENT.

By W. LAIRD CLOWES,

Fellow of King's College, London, Gold Medal'ist U.S. Naval Institute, Hon. Member R.U.S. Institution.

Assisted by Sir C. R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, &c. 5 vols. with very numerous Illustrations, royal 8vo. cloth extra, 25s. each, net.

The First Volume of the History brings the narrative to the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and will be followed at short intervals by the subsequent Volumes. Full Prospectus sent on application.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

"Extremely interesting.....A brilliant picture of a contemporary mania."—Daily Telegraph.

"On English Fashion."—National Observer.

"Clever.....The irreclaimable 'Cocky' is an excellent creation."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Thoroughly interesting, and touches of real pathos mingle with its vigorous satire and strong situations."

"Brilliant, if daring."—Scotsman. Glasgow Herald.

"Incomparably the best the author has ever written."—National Observer.

LOW'S 2s. 6d. LIBRARY OF TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

TWO NEW VOLUMES.

Uniform crown 8vo. volumes, fully illustrated, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

HAUSALAND; or, Fifteen Hundred Miles through the Central Soudan. By the Rev. C. H. ROBINSON, M.A. With Map, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations.

TWO KINGS of UGANDA; or, Life by the Shores of the Victoria Nyanza. By the Rev. R. P. ASHE, M.A. With Map and Illustration.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

THE HANDSOME HUMES.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of this Popular Writer's Books.

FOR A BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED PAPER ON MR. WILLIAM QUILLER ORCHARDSON, R.A.,

Written by Mr. COSMO MONKHOUSE,

and Illustrated with Reproductions from the Artist's Work.

See the APRIL NUMBER of

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

At all Booksellers', price ONE SHILLING.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

FARTHEST NORTH. By Fridtjof Nansen.

In Two Volumes, with about 200 Illustrations, Photogravures, and Coloured Plates, large demy 8vo. Two Guineas net.

"Altogether it is not too much to say that the book is a masterpiece of story-telling."—Times.

"Certainly it will remain for many a year to come as an Arctic classic, and the narrative which beats its record will be the sensation of a future age." Academy.

"The genius of a Defoe could scarcely contrive a more absorbing story than we have in the second volume of the book."—Spectator.

"Dr. Nansen is a writer of singular capacity; he enlists the sympathies of his readers and makes their hearts go out to him."—Athenæum.

THE "PLEASURE SERIES" OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

An ENGLISH GARNER: Ingatherings from our History and Literature. By EDWARD ARBER, F.S.A., Fellow of King's College, London, late English Examiner at the London University and also at the Victoria University, Manchester, Emeritus Professor of English Language and Literature, Mason College, Birmingham. Now ready, in 8 vols. bound in brown buckram, with a handsome Design by A. A. Turbayne in gold. Sold in sets only, 2*l.* net; or single volumes in green cloth, separately, 5*s.* net. Vol. VIII. is also obtainable in the old style, blue and gold binding.

"Prof. Arber's work as a collector of the scattered treasures of our old literature is so highly valued that every student will wish to have the 'Garner' on his shelves in its new dress. The general equipment of the volume, no less than its contents, make it a marvel of cheapness at the price of five shillings."—Glasgow Herald.

The PASTON LETTERS, 1492–1509. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, of the Public Record Office. 3 vols. fcap. 8vo. cloth extra, 15*s.* net.

"Unquestionably the standard edition of these curious literary relics of an age so long ago that the writers speak of the battles between the contending forces of York and Lancaster as occurrences of the moment."—Daily News.

"One of the monuments of English historical scholarship that needs no commendation."—Manchester Guardian.

BOSWELL'S LIFE of JOHNSON. Edited by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL. With Frontispieces by Alex. Ansted, and a Reproduction of Sir Joshua Reynolds's Portrait. 6 vols. fcap 8vo. cloth, paper label, or gilt extra, 2*s.* net per volume; also half-morocco, 3*s.* net per volume. Sold in Sets only.

"Far and away the best Boswell, I should say, for the ordinary book-lover now on the market." Illustrated London News.

COMPLETION OF THE ISSUE IN 48 VOLUMES.

Constable's Reprint of THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

THE FAVOURITE EDITION OF SIR WALTER SCOTT.

With all the Original Plates and Vignettes (Re-engraved).

In Forty-eight Volumes.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, paper label title, 1*s.* 6*d.* net per Volume, or 3*l.* 12*s.* the Set. Also cloth gilt, gilt top, 2*s.* net per Volume, or 4*l.* 16*s.* the Set; and half-leather gilt, 2*s.* 6*d.* net per Volume, or 6*l.* the Set.

"A delightful reprint. The price is lower than that of many inferior editions."—Athenæum.

The POPULAR RELIGION and FOLK-LORE of NORTHERN INDIA. By WILLIAM CROOKE. With numerous Full-Page Plates. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.

"The book is in every respect an admirable one, full of insight and knowledge at first hand."—Times.

The PREACHING of ISLAM. By T. W. ARNOLD, B.A. With Two Maps. Demy 8vo. 12*s.* net.

"One of the most elaborate and careful accounts of the spread of Mahomedanism that we remember to have seen in any language. As Professor Arnold rightly says, his subject is a vast one. The writer has condensed into less than four hundred pages a mass of material that might have alarmed a German professor, let alone an English one."—Times.

CONSTABLE'S LIBRARY OF HISTORICAL NOVELS AND ROMANCES.

Edited by LAURENCE GOMME.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE FIRST OF THE SERIES.

HAROLD, the Last of the Saxons.

By LORD LYTTON.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra.

After a Design by A. A. Turbayne.

IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

By the Right Hon. Sir CHARLES WENTWORTH DILKE, Bart., M.P., and SPENSER WILKINSON.

New Edition, Revised and in part Rewritten.

12mo. cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE NATION'S AWAKENING.

By SPENSER WILKINSON.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

AN ESSAY ON COMEDY AND THE USES OF THE COMIC SPIRIT.

By GEORGE MEREDITH. 5*s.* net.

"May, without hesitation, be set down as one of the subtlest, wittiest, and most luminous pieces of criticism in the English language."

MR. WILLIAM ARCHER in the Westminster Gazette.

WHITMAN: a Study.

By JOHN BURROUGHS.

12mo. cloth gilt, 6*s.* net.

"Of all the books which have been published on Whitman this is the best."—Daily Chronicle.

THE CHRONICLE OF VILLANI.

A Book for Dante Students.

Translated by ROSE E. SELFE.

Edited by the Rev. P. H. WICKSTEED.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"We welcome the book not only as a real help to students of Dante, but as revealing to all English readers the leading characteristics of one of the most fascinating and lifelike of mediæval chronicles.....Mr. Wicksteed's introduction is brief, sober, competent, and workmanlike."—Manchester Guardian.

PROBLEMS OF MODERN DEMOCRACY.

By EDWIN LAURENCE GODKIN.

Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"He talks freely, and always sensibly and to the point, and very often with more than ordinary wisdom."—Times.

"The most noteworthy book on Democracy since Mr. Lecky's."—Glasgow Evening News.

CONSTABLE'S SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

SISTER JANE. By "Uncle REMUS."

"Shows the hand of a master."—New Saturday.

"Of all Mr. Harris's recent stories 'Sister Jane' is the best."—Academy.

GREEN FIRE. By Fiona Macleod, Author of 'The Sin Eater,' 'Pharais,' 'The Mountain Lovers,' &c.

The AMAZING MARRIAGE. By GEORGE MEREDITH. Fourth Edition.

The TRAGIC COMEDIANS. By GEORGE MEREDITH. Crown 8vo.

The ENEMIES: a Novel. By E. H. COOPER, Author of 'Richard Escott,' &c.

"A well-written and interesting book." Manchester Courier.

HIS VINDICATION: a Novel. By Mrs. NEWMAN, Author of 'Too Late,' 'Jean,' and 'The Last of the Haddons.'

CONSTABLE'S THREE-AND-SIXPENNY SERIES.

HIS MAJESTY'S GREATEST SUBJECT: a Novel. By S. S. THORBURN, B.C.S.

CHIN-CHIN-WA. By Charles HANNAN, F.R.G.S.

"Chin-Chin-Wa is a cleverly realized study of an Englishman who turns Chinaman."—Daily Chronicle.

"Delightful and dramatic."—British Review.

A STURDY BEGGAR, and LADY BRAMBER'S GHOST. Two Stories by CHARLES CHARRINGTON.

"Two stories full of merit."—Western Mail.

"An original turn of thought and a vivacious style." Globe.

TALES of SOUTH AFRICA. By H. A. BRYDEN, Author of 'Gun and Camera in South Africa,' 'Kloof and Karroo,' &c.

"These admirably told tales give a better conception of the life of the wanderer in South Africa than any formal book of travels. We can hardly speak too cordially of the little volume."—Spectator.

JAMES; or, Virtue Rewarded. By the Author of 'Muggleton College.'

"An exceedingly smart satire upon modern Church life of the over-organized kind. We cannot pretend to like it. .....We wish we could say that the sermon of the warden lacked justification."—Guardian.

"A most amusing novel. Clever, caustic, and amusing." Nottingham Guardian.

"'James' is really wonderful.....A book to be read." Birmingham Post.

"A decided hit.....An exceptionally clever story." Glasgow Herald.

MADGE o' the POOL. By William SHARP. Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

"Of unusual merit."—Daily Mail.

ANGELA'S LOVER. By Dorothea GERARD. Paper, 1*s.*; cloth extra, 2*s.*

A WRITER of FICTION: a Novel. By CLIVE HOLLAND, Author of 'My Japanese Wife.' Cloth extra, 2*s.* 6*d.*

INDISPENSABLE TO EVERY LIBRARY.

NATIONAL BALLAD and SONG: a Complete Anthology of English, Scots, and Irish Lyrics prior to the Year 1800; embracing all previous Collections of Ballad and Song, Garlands, Drolleries, and Merriments, together with many others in Manuscript which have never before been published, the whole Gathering arranged according to Subject. By JOHN S. FARMER.

Section I. (now ready), in 1 vol. pp. xv and 253, entitled 'MUSA PEDESTRIS. Three Centuries of Canting Songs and Slang Rhymes (1566-1896).' in Large Paper, 1/. 1s. net, or Small Paper, 10s. 6d. net.

Section II. (now in progress in monthly vols., the first having appeared April 1, 1897), comprising the "loose and humorous" Songs and Ballads is privately printed for issue to Subscribers only and is entitled 'MERRY SONGS and BALLADS,' in 10 vols. Large Paper only, at 1/. 1s. net per vol., or 9/. the set if paid in advance on delivery of Vol. I.

Section III. (in preparation), 'HUNTING SONGS and SPORTING BALLADS.'

SLANG and its ANALOGUES: a Dictionary of the Heterodox and Colloquial Speech of the last Three Hundred Years, treated Historically, and including Synonyms in English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c. By JOHN S. FARMER and W. ERNEST HENLEY. In 6 vols. (4 vols. A to MYZ, now ready), fcap. 4to. in Sets only, at 10/. 10s. net.

This work (the final vols. of which are in the press) has been pronounced by Dr J. A. H. Murray, the Editor of the 'Oxford Dictionary,' to be "the completest and most scholarly of its kind." It cannot be superseded for many years to come, and the number of unsold Sets being extremely limited, it will not fail to become very scarce. Vols. I. to IV. can be supplied at once, or orders may be booked for delivery on completion, after which the price will be raised.

CHOICE REPRINTS of SCARCE BOOKS and UNIQUE MSS. Each in 1 vol. fcap. 4to. half-Roxburghe, t. e. g. at 10s. 6d. net.

No. 1 (now ready), entitled 'A SATIRYCALL DIALOGVE; or, a Sharplye invective conference, betweene Allexander the Great, and that truelye woman-hater Diogynes. By WILLIAM GODDARD.' Imprinted in the Low Countryes for all such gentlewomen as are not altogeather Idle nor yet well occypied. [? Dort, ? 1615.] Edited by JOHN S. FARMER. (Goddard's 'Satirycall Dialogve' is one of the rarest of books, one copy only being known to exist.)

No. 2 'ON the CHOOSING of VALENTINES.' This, a unique and curious MS. of Thomas Nash, is his only unpublished work and not included in Dr. Grosart's edition of Nash, when a single stanza of a long poem is there given as the whole.

A Complete 20 pp. Prospectus post free on application to

GIBBINGS & CO., LIMITED,
18, Bury-street, Bloomsbury, London, W.C.

JARROLD & SONS' LIST.

MAURUS JOKAI'S NEW NOVEL.

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom under the Snow. By the Author of 'Black Diamonds,' 'Pretty Michal,' 'Midst the Wild Carpathians.' With Engraved Portrait of Author. 6s. [Fifth Edition.

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season." Pall Mall Gazette.

"In its panoramic width of outlook, its inexhaustible fertility of invention and barbaric splendour of colouring, Maurus Jókai's great novel challenges comparison with Tolstoi's 'War and Peace.' There is a succession of brilliant tableaux. To read this remarkable book is like witnessing a magnificent Oriental pageant. It is of enthralling interest and takes rank with the great novels of the century." Spectator.

"The author has given us a group of striking personalities, of every one of whom it is not too much to say that it is brilliantly drawn and vividly presented. From every point of view 'The Green Book' is a book to be read. It is a work of fine art."—Daily Chronicle.

MR. COURTNEY says in the Daily Telegraph:—"It is truly an astounding book. In force and fire and prodigal variety he reminds one of the elder Dumas."

HIS DOUBLE SELF; or, the Transformation of Keith Winstanley. By E. CURTIS, Author of 'Dr. Malchi,' 'Queen or Bondwoman,' 'Lamar the Witch,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

NEW "GREENBACK" NOVELS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

ALLANSON'S LITTLE WOMAN. By EASTWOOD KIDSON.

"A story which can be enjoyed by every lover of wholesome fiction. The book is well put together and is a welcome relief from the novels of the hysterical school of writers." Publishers' Circular.

The THIRTEENTH BRYDAIN. By MARGARET MOULE, Author of 'Wingrove's Ways,' 'Dick's Wife,' 'Miss Maidment,' &c.

"The story is very cleverly told. The manner in which the curse came to pass is very finely worked out by the gifted authoress. The characters are so splendidly presented as to become very real persons to the reader. It has been so with all this lady's books, but her best qualities and gifts as a writer are more fully shown in this, her latest work." Western Daily Mercury.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C.
At all Libraries and of the Booksellers.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

In demy 8vo. strongly bound in buckram, and printed on good paper, with broad margin for Notes and Additions, 1/. 7s. 6d. net.

THE NEW (TENTH) VOLUME OF BOOK PRICES CURRENT.

Being a Record of the Prices at which Books have been Sold at Auction, with the Titles and Descriptions in Full, the Catalogue Numbers, and the Names of the Purchasers from December, 1895, to November, 1896.

 The New Volume contains, for the first time in the History of BOOK PRICES CURRENT, a Subject Index of an extensive character; and a large number of entries, which seem to stand in need of elucidation or explanation, have been carefully Annotated, either Bibliographically or Historically, and Collations of many of the Books have also been given.

An INDEX to the First Ten Volumes of BOOK PRICES CURRENT is preparing. The names of intending Subscribers should be sent to the Publisher without delay.

"The record is extremely useful for buyers and collectors of books, and is a valuable index to current phases of book-collecting and to fluctuations in the market."—Saturday Review.

In crown 4to. cloth, gilt edges, 6s.

HUGO of AVENDON. A Drama in Four Acts. By E. L. M.

"The work reads well, and should be enjoyed by those who patronize the drama without leaving their own firesides."—Scotsman.

NEW VOLUMES OF VERSE.

In fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

JENNIFRED, and other Verses. By SEPTIMUS G. GREEN.

"The title poem is finely, even richly, coloured, and is even suggestive of the romantic period in which its scenes are set. Mr. Green infuses considerable vigour into his lines."—Dundee Advertiser.

In crown 8vo cloth, 5s.

The HUIA'S HOMELAND, and other Verses. By ROSLYN.

"These poems are welcome in that they evince a genuine love of national beauty and a poetic perception of its effect. They are beautifully coloured, and bring home to the reader a sense of what constitutes the charm of New Zealand."—Dundee Advertiser.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

WILL BE READY SHORTLY.

WANDERINGS in BURMA.

By GEORGE BIRD,
Of the Education Department, Burma.

Super-royal 8vo. cloth, gilt designs and top edges, 400 pages, superior paper, nearly 100 beautiful Illustrations and Maps, 21s. net.

The above work, which is dedicated by special permission to his Excellency the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, K.P., treats exhaustively of the History, Administration, Geography, Climate, Language, People, Religion, Commerce, Places of Interest, Animals and Sport in Burma. The History dates from the first occupation by the East India Co. to the present day, its Administration by the Burmese, and latterly under British rule, being given in full.

The reader is conducted throughout the length and breadth of the Province, and the Old Cities, Villages, Pagodas, Monasteries, and other places of note are dealt with in a deeply interesting manner.

The author, having had an experience of twenty years' residence and study of the country and its inhabitants, and having had every facility afforded him in the compilation of statistics, has been able to procure a thoroughly authentic work in every detail.

TO BE HAD OF ANY BOOKSELLER.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S NEW BOOKS.

WILL BE READY NEXT WEEK.

LIFE of SIR HENRY PARKES, G.C.M.G. By CHARLES E. LYNE, formerly Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald. Cloth, 16s.

WILL BE READY NEXT WEEK.

SKETCHES AWHEEL in FIN de SIECLE IBERIA. By FANNY BULLOCK WORKMAN and WILLIAM HUNTER WORKMAN, Authors of 'Algerian Memories.' Thirty Illustrations and Large Map. Cloth, 6s.

WILL BE READY NEXT WEEK.

A POT of HONEY. By Susan CHRISTIAN, Author of 'Silhouettes.' Cloth, 3s. 6d.

WILL BE READY NEXT WEEK.

IN an ANCIENT MIRROR: a Satire. By HERBERT FLOWERDEW. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

A NOVEL BY A NEW WRITER.

A FARRAGO of FOLLY. By George GAMBLE. Large crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"To railway travellers who know good nonsense from bad we heartily recommend 'A Farrago of Folly.'" Manchester Guardian.

NOW READY.

A NOBLE HAUL. By W. Clark RUSSELL. (The New Number of "Little Novels.") Paper, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

NOW READY.

S. MARK'S INDEBTEDNESS to S. MATTHEW. By F. P. BADHAM. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

Catalogues post free on application.

London:
T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

MEMORY. PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM. The last, most complete and perfect Edition. Arranged for Self-Instruction. Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading. Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10s. 6d. English, post free. Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free. Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London. NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN. Made in Three Sizes.

10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen. A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen. Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95a, Regent-street, W. London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo. price 2s. 6d.

A WOMAN'S PART IN A REVOLUTION.

By Mrs. JOHN HAYS HAMMOND.

 This book consists mainly of extracts from Mrs. Hammond's diary, and refers to the incidents of Dr. Jameson's raid, and the subsequent imprisonment, trial, and sentence of the Reform Committee of which Mrs. Hammond's husband was a prominent member.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. London, New York, and Bombay.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LTD.

SELECTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF SIR LEWIS MORRIS.

WITH LATEST PORTRAIT.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth plain, 4s. 6d.; watered silk, gilt edges, 5s.

"A high purpose can be discerned in all that he has written.....This volume of selections made by the writer himself and including all, or nearly all, the pieces that are generally conceded to show him at his best, will probably make him known to many more readers."—Times.

Paternoster House, Charing Cross-road, London.

WALTER SCOTT'S NEW BOOKS.

IBSEN.

In view of the approaching Ibsen season in London, the announcement of the following cheap editions of Separate Plays by Ibsen will be of interest:—

Crown 8vo. paper covers, price 1*s.* each.

The LADY from the SEA. (1888.) Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

The WILD DUCK. (1884.) Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

GHOSTS. (1881.) Translated by WILLIAM ARCHER.

ROSMERSHOLM. (1886.) Translated by CHARLES ARCHER.

An ENEMY of the PEOPLE. (1882.) Translated by Mrs. ELEANOR MARX AVELING.

Paper covers, 2*s.*

A DOLL'S HOUSE. With a number of Photographic Illustrations.

COUNT TOLSTOY'S LONGEST AND MOST MAGNIFICENT WORK.
IN TWO DOUBLE VOLUMES, 7*s.*

WAR and PEACE. By Count TOLSTOY. Contains 1600 pages, printed in very clear type.

This is not only one of the finest, but probably one of the longest novels ever written, occupying, as it does in this edition, 1600 large and closely printed pages. Notwithstanding its vast length, its multitude of figures, the number of events it deals with, the interest of 'War and Peace' is not only intense, but unbroken throughout the immense march of the story, so that no reader, great though the undertaking is, will fail to read to the end once he has started on the book.

THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE SERIES.

NEW EDITIONS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.* With numerous Illustrations.

MAN and WOMAN: a Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters. By HAVELOCK ELLIS. Second Edition.

"Mr. Havelock Ellis belongs, in some measure, to the continental school of anthropologists; but while equally methodical in the collection of facts, he is far more cautious in the invention of theories, and he has the further distinction of being not only able to think, but able to write. His book is a sane and impartial consideration, from a psychological and anthropological point of view, of a subject which is certainly of primary interest."—Athenæum.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

FOURTH EDITION, COMPLETELY REVISED.

HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll.

"Marks a step of some importance in the study of some difficult physiological and psychological problems which have not yet received much attention in the scientific world of England."—Nature.

THE TWO CYCLING BOOKS OF THE SEASON.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, elegant, 2*s.* 6*d.*

LADY CYCLING. By Miss F. J. ERSKINE.

"Should be useful to many a novice, and, indeed, if they would only act on the advice it gives, to many who are not novices."—Times.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, eelgant, 2*s.* 6*d.*

ALL ROUND CYCLING. By Sir B. W. RICHARDSON, G. LACY HILLIER, EVELYN EVERETT GREEN, C. RIVERS VINE, JOHN WATSON, F.C.S., P. A. THOMAS, B.A.

"A little book that cyclists will know how to value, of whatever description they may be."—National Observer.
"A useful and entertaining volume."—Daily Mail.
"Bound to interest all cyclists."—Black and White.

THE CANTERBURY POETS.

IMPORTANT ADDITIONS.

WORKS BY ROBERT BROWNING.

THREE VOLS. NOW READY.

VOL. I.

PIPPA PASSES, and other Poetic Dramas. By ROBERT BROWNING. With an Introductory Note by FRANK RINDER.

VOL. II.

A BLOT in the 'SCUTCHEON, and other Poetic Dramas. By ROBERT BROWNING. With an Introductory Note by FRANK RINDER.

VOL. III.

DRAMATIC ROMANCES and LYRICS, and SORDELLO. By ROBERT BROWNING. To which is Prefixed an Appreciation of Browning by Miss E. DIXON.

BINDINGS.

The above Volumes are supplied in the following Bindings: IN GREEN ROAN, Boxed, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.
IN ART LINEN, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2*s.*
IN WHITE LINEN, with Frontispiece in Photogravure, 2*s.*
IN BROCADE, 2 vols. in Shell Case to match (each vol. with Frontispiece), 4*s.* per Set, or 3 vols. 6*s.* per Set.
And in the ordinary SHILLING BINDINGS, green cloth, cut edges, and blue cloth, uncut edges (without Photogravure).

London:
WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED, Paternoster-square.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

BY THE LATE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

CYPRIAN:

HIS LIFE, HIS TIMES, HIS WORK.

By EDWARD WHITE BENSON, D.D. D.C.L., Sometime Archbishop of Canterbury.

8vo. 21*s.* net.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"On the whole, and with all reservations which can possibly be made, this weighty volume is a contribution to criticism and learning on which we can but congratulate the Anglican Church. We wish more of her bishops were capable or desirous of descending into that arena of pure intellect from which Dr. Benson returns with these posthumous laurels."

FIFTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

Demy 8vo. 21*s.* net.

MISS KINGSLEY'S TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.

With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"One of the most amusing, instructive, and delightful books of travel which the Dark Continent has ever given us."

BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE.

ANCIENT VOLCANOES of GREAT BRITAIN. By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, F.R.S., &c. With 7 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. 36*s.* net.

BY THE LATE EDWARD A. FREEMAN.

SKETCHES of TRAVEL in NORMANDY and MAINE. By EDWARD A. FREEMAN. With Illustrations from Drawings by the Author, and a Preface by W. H. HUTTON, B.D. Crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The book abounds with historical research and antiquarian erudition."

BY THE LATE REV. F. J. A. HORT, D.D.

The CHRISTIAN ECCLESIA. A Course of Lectures on the Early History and Early Conceptions of the Ecclesia, and Four Sermons. By FENTON JOHN ANTHONY HORT, D.D., Lady Margaret's Reader in Divinity in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

Globe 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

RELIGIOUS TEACHING in SECONDARY SCHOOLS. Suggestions to Teachers and Parents for Lessons on the Old and New Testaments, Early Church History, Christian Evidences, &c. By Rev. GEORGE C. BELL, M.A., Master of Marlborough College.

VOLUME II. NOW READY.

A SYSTEM of MEDICINE. By Many Writers. Edited by THOMAS CLIFFORD ALLBUTT, M.A. M.D. F.R.S. Vol. II. Containing INFECTIOUS DISEASES (continued); INTOXICATIONS; and INTERNAL PARASITES. Demy 8vo. 25*s.* net.

Extra crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

The ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. A Commentary on its Nature and Growth. By JESSE MACY, M.A., Professor of Political Science in Iowa College.

VOLUME IX. NOW READY.

LIFE and LABOUR of the PEOPLE in LONDON. Edited by CHARLES BOOTH. Vol. IX. Comparisons, Survey, and Conclusions (with an Abstract of Vols. I.-IX.). Extra crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

SECOND EDITION, REVISED, NOW READY.

The THEORY of INTERNATIONAL TRADE with SOME of its APPLICATIONS to ECONOMIC POLICY. By Professor C. F. BASTABLE, M.A. LL.D., Author of 'Public Finance,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

NEW EDITION NOW READY.

ENGLISH LITERATURE from A.D. 670 to A.D. 1832. By STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A. Partly Rewritten and largely Revised and Corrected. Globe 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Globe 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

GOLDSMITH'S VICAR of WAKE- FIELD. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Professor MICHAEL MACMILLAN.

[English Classics.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

STANFORD'S NEW MAPS OF LONDON.

Just published.

STANFORD'S MAP OF CENTRAL LONDON.

On the scale of 4 inches to 1 mile.

Extending from Kentish Town on the North to Clapham Common on the South, and from Bethnal Green on the East to Acton on the West, and showing Main Roads, Omnibus and Tramway Routes, Parks and Open Spaces, with the greatest accuracy and detail.

One sheet, 40 by 27 inches.

Prices: In flat sheet, or folded in case, 2*s.*
Mounted to fold in case, 3*s.* 6*d.*
Mounted on rollers and varnished, 7*s.* 6*d.*

Recently published.

STANFORD'S NEW MAP OF THE COUNTY OF LONDON.

On the scale of 4 inches to 1 mile.

Twenty sheets, 84 by 57 inches.

Prices: Coloured sheets, 15*s.* Flat in portfolio, 16*s.*
Mounted to fold in case in five divisions, 45*s.*
Mounted on mahogany rollers, 45*s.*
Mounted on spring roller, 6*l.*

Separate Sheets can be bought, 18 by 16 inches, price One Shilling each.

Complete List of Maps of London sent post free on application.

London: EDWARD STANFORD,
26 and 27, Cockspur-street, S.W.,
Geographer to the Queen.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
Established 1849.
Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

LIVERPOOL and LONDON and GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.
Invested Funds £9,067,182
FIRE. LIFE. ENDOWMENTS. ANNUITIES.
Fire Insurances effected on most favourable terms.
LIFE BONUSES LARGE, either in Cash or Additions to Sum Assured.
Policy holders incur no Liability of Partnership, and may so insure as to participate in NINE-TENTHS OF THE PROFITS of their Class.
EQUITABLE RATES. MODERATE EXPENSES.
Head Offices:
1, DALE-STREET, LIVERPOOL; 7, CORNHILL, LONDON.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins, 7½*d.* and 1*s.* 1½*d.*, labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION,
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

SIR WALTER BESANT'S NEW NOVEL.

A FOUNTAIN SEALED. By Sir Walter Besant, Author of 'All Sorts and Conditions of Men.' With Frontispiece by H. G. Burgess. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [May.

The following NEW and CHEAPER EDITIONS are now ready:—

The MASTER CRAFTSMAN. By Sir Walter Besant. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

MR. JERVIS. By B. M. Croker. Post 8vo. boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

LIFE on the MISSISSIPPI. By Mark Twain. With 312 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Also, uniform, crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 200 Illustrations.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.
The £1,000,000 BANK-NOTE.
A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.
The GILDED AGE. With 212 Illustrations. [May 6.

 Others to follows.

FIFTY YEARS AGO. By Sir Walter Besant. With 144 Plates and Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

GHETTO TRAGEDIES. By I. Zangwill. With 3 Illustrations by A. S. Boyd. Long fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. net.

A LEVANTINE FAMILY. By Bayle St. John. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A POINT of CONSCIENCE. By Mrs. Hungerford. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The HARDING SCANDAL. By Frank Barrett. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

LOVICE. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"In 'Dolly' and the rest we recognize the old, light, humorous touch which is distinctly Mrs. Hungerford's own.....'Lovice' will not fail of widening the popularity of its author." Glasgow Herald.

Also by Mrs. HUNGERFORD, NEW EDITIONS, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

An ANXIOUS MOMENT, &c.

The PROFESSOR'S EXPERIMENT. | APRIL'S LADY.
NORA CREINA. | A POINT of CONSCIENCE.

 For others see Catalogue.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. Lynn Linton. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

CAVALRY LIFE and REGIMENTAL LEGENDS. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. A New Edition, the Two Series in One Volume. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
"A tale brim-full of exciting incident."—Spectator.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. Waller. Illustrated by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
"A bright love tale, with two charming heroines"—Black and White.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank Barrett, Author of 'The Sin of Olga Zassoulich.' With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

The WHITE VIRGIN By G. Manville Fenn.
The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. Clark Russell.
MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie Murray.
BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.
LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

MADAME SANS GENE. (Founded on Sardou and MOREAU'S Play.) By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

By BRET HARTE. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. each.

BARKER'S LUCK, and other Stories With 39 Illustrations.
DEVIL'S FORD, &c. With a Frontispiece by W. H. Overend.
The CRUSADE of the "EXCELSIOR." Frontispiece by J. Bernard Partridge.

 For others see Catalogue.

A CAPFUL o' NAILS: a North-Country Story. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

NULMA: a Romance. By Mrs. Campbell Praed. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [May 7.

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY. By Richard Dowling. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [April 22.

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the Russian Secret Service. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [April 29.

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugène Rougon). By Emile Zola. Authorized Version. With a Preface by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3s. 6d. [April 29.

Also by E. ZOLA, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

The FAT and the THIN. | The DREAM.
MONEY. | DOCTOR PASCAL.
The DOWNFALL. | LOURDES. | ROME.

The NARRATIVE of CAPTAIN COIGNET, SOLDIER of the EMPIRE, 1776-1850. With 100 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

CLARK RUSSELL'S LATEST NOVEL.—On May 13, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The LAST ENTRY. By W. Clark Russell.

Also by CLARK RUSSELL, NEW EDITIONS, crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

HEART of OAK. | The TALE of the TEN. 12 Illustrations by G. Montbard.

SHAKESPEARE the BOY. With Sketches of the Home and School Life, the Games and Sports, the Manners, Customs, and Folk-lore of the Time. By WILLIAM J. ROLFE, Litt D. With 42 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. [In the press.

RIE'S DIARY. By Anne Coates. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

CARLTON PRIORS. By John Stafford. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s. [Shortly.

HIS DEAD PAST. By C. J. Wills. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt top, 6s. [Shortly.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY MIRACLE. By Z. Z (LOUIS ZANGWILL). Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

PHIL MAY'S SKETCH-BOOK. Containing 54 Humorous Drawings by the Artist. Crown folio, cloth, 2s. 6d.

LIBRARY EDITION OF CHARLES READE'S NOVELS.

Complete in 17 vols. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. each.

1. PEG WOFFINGTON; and CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE.
2. HARD CASH.
3. The CLOISTER and the HEARTH.
4. "IT IS NEVER TOO LATE to MEND."
5. The COURSE of TRUE LOVE NEVER DID RUN SMOOTH; and SINGLE-HEART and DOUBLEFACE.
6. The AUTOBIOGRAPHY of a THIEF; and The WANDERING HEIR.
7. LOVE ME LITTLE, LOVE ME LONG.
8. The DOUBLE MARRIAGE.
9. GRIFFITH GAUNT.
10. FOUL PLAY.
11. PUT YOURSELF in HIS PLACE.
12. A TERRIBLE TEMPTATION.
13. A SIMPLETON.
14. A WOMAN-HATER.
15. The JILT; and GOOD STORIES.
16. A PERILOUS SECRET.
17. READIANA; and BIBLE CHARACTERS.

NEW EDITIONS.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.
A LIFE INTEREST.
BY WOMAN'S WIT.
MONA'S CHOICE.

By JUSTIN McCARTHY.
The RIDDLE RING. [May 6.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT.
The SORCERESS.

By CHARLES GIBBON.
OF HIGH DEGREE. [Shortly.

By HAWLEY SMART.
LONG ODDS.
The MASTER of RATHKELLY.
The OUTSIDER.
BEATRICE and BENEDICK. [Shortly.

By T. W. SPEIGHT.
The MASTER of TRENANCE.
A MINION of the MOON.

By Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED.
Mrs. TREGASKISS.

In MAY. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 12s. (Uniform with the previous four volumes.)

A HISTORY of OUR OWN TIMES from 1880 to th DIAMOND JUBILEE. By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

DICTIONARY of WORDS, FACTS, and PHRASES By ELIEZER EDWARDS. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s 6d. [Shortly.

ENGLISH SURNAMES: their Sources and Significa tions. By CHARLES WARING BARDSLEY, M.A., Hon. Canon of Carlisle. Fif Edition. With a New Preface. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE.

ONE SHILLING MONTHLY.—Contents for APRIL.

KAMBULA'S WAR CLUB. By J. R. Werner.—CERAMIC ART at DERBY. I James Cassidy.—NOTES from the SOUTH. By Clare Sorel Strong.—A BOOKMAN ROMANCE. By Charles Lusted.—ROUND PEVENSEY MARSH By Thomas H. Graham.—GOETHE and WEIMAR. By H. Schutz Wilson.—HISTORICAL MONUMEN of CALCUTTA. By Kathleen Blechynden.—A BROAD-CHESTED SOUL. By T Russell.—"EIGHTEENTH CENTURY VIGNETTES." By Sylvanus Urban.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, April 17, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3626. SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

TUESDAY NEXT (April 27), at 3 o'clock, TEMPEST ANDERSON, M.D., B.Sc., FIRST of FOUR LECTURES on 'Volcanoes.' (The Tyndall Lectures.) Half-a-Guinea the Course.

THURSDAY (April 29), the Rev. CANON AINGER, M.A. LL.D., will be UNABLE to deliver his Four Lectures on 'Some Leaders in the Poetic Revival of 1760–1820—Cowper, Burns, Wordsworth, Scott.'

SATURDAY (May 1), at 3 o'clock, the Rev. J. P. MAHAFFY, D.D., FIRST of THREE LECTURES on 'The Greek Theatre according to Recent Discoveries.' Half-a-Guinea.

Subscription to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

FRIDAY EVENING (April 30), at 9 o'clock, Professor J. J. THOMSON, M.A. LL.D. F.R.S., on 'Cathode Rays.' To these Meetings Members and their Friends only are admitted.

ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON.—A Course of TEN POPULAR LECTURES on BIRDS will be delivered in the Lecture-Room, in the Society's Gardens, Regent's Park, on THURSDAYS, at 5 P.M., commencing May 6, by Mr. F. E. BEDDARD, M.A. F.R.S., Prosector to the Society.

Tickets for the whole Course, including entrance to the Gardens, 0s. each; or 1s. each Lecture, not including entrance, to be obtained at the Society's Office, 3, Hanover-square, W. Fellows admitted free.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.

The NEXT MEETING of the FOLK-LORE SOCIETY will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE-STREET, PICCADILLY, on TUESDAY, April 27, at 8 P.M., when the following Papers will be read, viz.:—

1. 'Folk-lore Parallels and Coincidences,' by Mr. M. J. WALHOUSE.
2. 'Folk-lore of the Hebrides,' by Miss A. GOODRICH FREER.

F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old-square, Lincoln's Inn.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5a, Pall Mall East.—The ANNUAL EXHIBITION will OPEN MONDAY, April 26.

SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE, 1897.

President—
The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.

Hon. Treasurer—
HENRY R. TEDDER, Esq., Athenæum, Pall Mall, S.W.

Hon. Secretary—
J. Y. W. MAC ALISTER, Esq., 20, Hanover-square, W.

The Conference will be held (by the kind permission of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Corporation) in the COUNCIL CHAMBER, GUILDHALL, LONDON, on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Lord Mayor has invited the members of the Conference to a Conversazione in the Mansion House on the evening of July 13.

Offers of Papers should be sent to the Hon. Secretary of the Papers Committee, J. D. BROWN, Esq., Clerkenwell Public Library, E.C. An Exhibition of Library Appliances will be an important feature of the Conference. Intending exhibitors should communicate with the Hon. Secretary of the Exhibition Committee, THOMAS MASON, Esq., 115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to attend all meetings and social gatherings. Applications for membership should be sent at once to the HON. SECRETARY.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)
Arrangements are made to provide Members with seats to view the QUEEN'S PROCESSION on the line of route at moderate prices.—For terms, &c., apply Secretary's Offices, 60, Haymarket, S.W.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Estd. 1893.)
The Committee propose (prior to entering on New and Larger Premises) to elect FIVE HUNDRED NEW TOWN MEMBERS and ONE THOUSAND NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS at the Original Subscription of 3*l.* 3*s.* and 1*l.* 1*s.* per annum respectively.

The Subscription for Future Members will then be raised to 5*l.* 5*s.* (Town) and 2*l.* 2*s.* (Country).

For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY,
PALL MALL CLUB OFFICES, 60, HAYMARKET, S.W.

SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING.—YOUNG LADY, three years' experience, desires PRIVATE or LITERARY ENGAGEMENT. Fair knowledge of French.—L., 39, Holland-road, W.

AS SECRETARY or CLERK, at Seaside or in Country, a YOUNG LADY. Typist and Shorthand Writer; accustomed to literary and business work.—Address C. S., Teignmouth House, Humber-road, Blackheath, S.E.

PRIVATE SECRETARY (University Man) seeks FORENOON ENGAGEMENT during absence abroad of present employer (Novelist) for May, June, and July. Verbatim Shorthand; Type Writer (Remington and Yost); Phonograph.—SECRETARY, 19, Beaumont-street, Portland-place, W.

AN OXFORD GRADUATE, with a knowledge of Ancient and Modern Languages, Author of a Philosophical Work, desires OCCUPATION in PROMOTING the CAUSE of GREECE.—Apply GRADUATE, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

SUB-EDITOR WANTED on a WEEKLY LONDON NEWSPAPER of a light and bright character. Although young he must be a thoroughly experienced and practical Journalist, a smart Writer and capable of taking entire charge of and producing the paper if necessary. Will be required to give his whole time to the work. To a man of energy and resource this is a very good opening.—State age, experience, salary required, and all other particulars, to LAGOS, care of Street & Co., 164, Piccadilly, W.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT and PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Patron—The Right Hon. the EARL of ROSEBERY, K.G.
Presidents—The Right Hon. LORD GLENESK and Sir W. J. RICHMOND COTTON.

The Right Hon. the EARL of CREWE will preside at the RECORD REIGN FESTIVAL, in aid of the ROYAL VICTORIA PENSION FUND for the benefit of Widows of Newsvendors, at the HOLBORN RESTAURANT, on WEDNESDAY, April 28, 1897, at 6.30 o'clock. The Right Hon. the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE of ENGLAND will attend the Dinner, and the Chairman is promised the support of Arthur D. Acland, Esq.

J. Q. Adams, Esq.
Messrs. Ashley & Smith, Ltd.
Sir John Austin, Bart., M.P.
Charles Awdry, Esq.
Robert J. Aylward, Esq.
G. Binney-Diblee, Esq.
Thomas F. Blackwell, Esq.
Messrs. Blades, East & Blades.
John B. Boyle, Esq.
Sir W. Cuniffe Brooks, Bart.
Charles L. Carson, Esq.
Messrs. W. H. & L. Collingridge.
J. J. Colman, Esq., M.P.
E. T. Cook, Esq.
Sir Daniel Cooper, Bart.
John Corlett, Esq.
Sir W. J. Richmond Cotton.
J. Maskall Cottrell, Esq.
Horace Cox, Esq.
Gilbert Dalziel, Esq.
James Denington, Esq.
Edward Dicey, Esq., C.B.
John Diprose, Esq.
T. Mullett Ellis, Esq.
Arthur Everett, Esq.
Sydney Evershed, Esq., M.P.
Messrs. Farrington & Co.
Louis Felbermann, Esq.
Edgar Fifoot, Esq.
John Fleuret, Esq.
John C. Francis, Esq.
John E. Francis, Esq.
John Galpin, Esq.
L. Upcott Gill, Esq.
Tresham Gilbey, Esq.
George Golding, Esq.
Arthur G. Gravatt, Esq.
Robert Gravatt, Esq.
Edward Grimwood, Esq.
T. Anstey Guthrie, Esq.
Alfred H. Hance, Esq.
Alfred C. Harmsworth, Esq.
Harold Harmsworth, Esq.
Augustus Helder, Esq., M.P.
C. H. St. John Hornby, Esq.
William Howe, Esq.
Mrs. Humphreys.
Sir John Hutton.
Kennedy Jones, Esq.
W. G. Kingsbury, Esq.
John Latey, Esq.
Charles Layton, Esq.
Sir John Leng, M.P.
Messrs. Lepard & Smiths, Ltd.
Frank Lloyd, Esq.
John Lobb, Esq., F.R.G.S. C.C.
Norman Maccoll, Esq.
Horace B. Marshall, Esq., M.A. J.P. D.L.
W. T. Madge, Esq.
Messrs. Miller & Richard.
Thomas Miles, Esq.
Frederick D. Mocatta, Esq.
W. J. P. Monckton, Esq.
John Morgan, Esq.
Messrs. Morgan & Scott.
D. W. Mortimer, Esq.
T. P. O'Connor, Esq., M.P.
R. J. Pottle, Esq.
Robert Redpath, Esq.
Sir T. Wemyss Reid.
J. Compton Rickett, Esq., M.P.
Sir John R. Robinson.
Alfred Rothschild, Esq.
Henry Sarson, Esq.
John Shaylor, Esq.
The Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P.
James A. Spender, Esq.
Peter Terry, Esq.
Percy M. Thornton, Esq., M.P.
Mr. Alderman W. P. Treloar.
The Rt. Hon. C. P. Villiers, M.P.
John W. Willans, Esq.
Henry Williams, Esq.
Messrs. Willing & Co., Ltd.
Christopher E. Weldon, Esq.
Charles H. Walter, Esq.
T. Humphry Ward, Esq.
Walter J. Woods, Esq.
C. Dickens Yates, Esq.

W. W. JONES, Secretary.

Memorial Hall Buildings, Farringdon-street, E.C.

ROYAL LITERARY FUND.

LORD LISTER, President R.S., will preside at the ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY DINNER of the ROYAL LITERARY FUND, on WEDNESDAY, May 5, at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL MÉTROPOLE, S.W., at 7 for 7.30 P.M. precisely.

SECOND LIST OF STEWARDS.

John Anderson, Esq., M.D. LL.D. F.R.S.
R. Rowand Anderson, Esq., LL.D. F.R.S.E.
Robert Barnes, Esq., M.D. F.R.C.P. F.R.C.S.
R. S. Fancourt Barnes, Esq., M.D. F.R.S.E.
Richard Bentley, Esq.
Sir Henry Bessemer, F.R.S.
William Blackwood, Esq.
B. Edward Brodhurst, Esq., F.R.C.S.
Thomas Buzzard, Esq., M.D. F.R.C.P.
Henry W. Cave, Esq.
Prof. John Cleland, M.D. D.Sc. F.R.S.
The Rev. the President of Corpus.
George Cowell, Esq., F.R.C.S.
The Lord Davey, F.R.S.
Clinton T. Dent, Esq., F.R.C.S.
Francis Elgar, Esq., LL.D. F.R.S.
Hon. Arthur D. Elliot
Sir John Evans, K.C.B. F.R.S.
Wickham Flower, Esq.
Michael Foster, Esq., M.D. D.C.L. F.R.S.
J. P. Gassiot, Esq.
F. W. Gibbs, Esq., C.B. Q.C.
Sir Robert Giffen, K.C.B. LL.D. F.R.S.
I. Gollancz, Esq.
A. Pearce Gould, Esq., F.R.C.S. M.B.
W. E. Green, Esq.
Jonathan Hutchinson, Esq. LL.D. M.D. F.R.C.S. F.R.S.
Dr. Henry Jackson, Litt.D.
The Lord Kelvin, F.R.S.
John Leighton, Esq., F.S.A.
J. Norman Lockyer, Esq., C.B. F.R.S.
T. Norton Longman, Esq.
H. Lowenfeld, Esq.
Frank McClean, Esq., LL.D. F.R.S.
John Macintyre, Esq., M.D. F.R.S.E.
George W. Mackenzie, Esq., F.R.C.S.
Frederick Macmillan, Esq.
Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B. K.C.V.O.
N. Story Maskelyne, Esq., F.R.S.
Prof. Henry A. Miers, F.R.S.
C. Lloyd Morgan, Esq.
John Murray, Esq., F.S.A.
Dr. John Murray, Sc.D. LL.D. F.R.S.
Edward Nettleship, Esq., F.R.C.S.
John W. Ogle, Esq., M.D. F.S.A.
Prof. Thomas Oliver, M.D. F.R.C.P. F.R.S.E.
Herbert W. Page, Esq., F.R.C.S.
J. C. Parkinson, Esq.
Sir Richard Quain, Bart., M.D. LL.D. F.R.S.
Thomas Raleigh, Esq.
Major F. J. Ricarde-Seaver, F.R.S.E.
Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, M.P.
Sir William Roberts, M.D. F.R.S.
The Rev. the Master of St. John's, Cambridge.
Prof. C. S. Sherrington, M.D. F.R.S.
Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P.
William Stebbing, Esq.
W. Domett Stone, Esq., M.D. F.R.C.S.
J. Wilson Swan, Esq., F.R.S.
R. Lawson Tait, Esq., M.D. F.R.C.S.
T. Slingsby Tanner, Esq.
The Lord Walsingham, F.R.S.
The Rev. Dr. Wace.
C. Knight Watson, Esq., F.S.A.
Hermann Weber, Esq., M.D. F.R.C.P.
Henry Wilde, Esq., F.R.S.
C. Theodore Williams, Esq., M.D. F.R.C.P.
E. Perceval Wright, Esq., M.D.
Prof. Sydney Young, D.Sc. F.R.S.

Gentlemen invited to be Stewards are requested to be so kind as to reply as soon as possible to the Secretary,

A. LLEWELYN ROBERTS.

7, Adelphi-terrace, W.C.

TO JOURNALISTS.—Mr. BINGHAM-COX (eighteen years Proprietor of the Licensed Victuallers' Gazette) is desirous of AUGMENTING the STAFF of the ROCKET by the addition of several Young and able Men who can introduce fresh features of a light, bright, and original character into the latter Paper. For such men and such work a constant place can be found; but it is earnestly hoped that Authors who deal in second-hand material and dug-up stuff will refrain from troubling the Proprietor of the Rocket with their MSS.—Tales, Stories, Anecdotes, Incidents, &c., to be sent to MR. BINGHAM-COX, 26, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

MERTHYR TYDFIL COUNTY SCHOOL.

MATHEMATICAL MASTER, able to teach Welsh, WANTED EARLY IN MAY. Salary 130*l.*—Application, with one copy of testimonials, to be sent before 28th inst. to CHARLES OWEN, M.A., Head Master.

CITY of BIRMINGHAM MUNICIPAL TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

The Corporation of Birmingham require the services in SEPTEMBER NEXT of a HEAD MASTER for the NEW TECHNICAL DAY SCHOOL. Salary 300*l.* per annum.—Full particulars of the post will be forwarded on receipt of a stamped addressed foolscap envelope. Personal canvassing of members of the Committee by applicants or their friends will be a disqualification. GEO. MELLOR, Secretary.

Offices of the School, Suffolk-street, April 12, 1897.

HEAD MASTERSHIP VACANT.

ARMAGH ROYAL SCHOOL.

The Armagh Protestant Board of Education will meet on Monday, June 14, to consider applications for the HEAD MASTERSHIP of ARMAGH ROYAL SCHOOL, now about to become vacant.

The School Premises are capable of lodging a Hundred Boarders, and are equal to any in Ireland.

Further particulars can be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, JAMES H. STRONGE, Esq., Hockley Lodge, Armagh, by whom all applications must be received on or before Saturday, June 12.

ST. DAVID'S COLLEGE, LAMPETER.

The Council invite applications for the Office of PRINCIPAL, about to be vacated. The Principal is required by the Charter of Incorporation to be an M.A. of either Oxford or Cambridge, and in Holy Orders. Salary 800*l.* a year, together with a share of Tuition Fees and a House rent free.—Further particulars may be obtained from the Clerk to the College Council, to whom applications, with thirty printed copies of testimonials, should be sent on or before May 15, 1897.

WILLIAM DAVIES, Clerk to the Council.

St. David's College, Lampeter.

CENTRAL WELSH BOARD for INTERMEDIATE EDUCATION.

EXAMINATION OF SCHOOLS, 1897.

APPOINTMENT OF CHIEF EXAMINERS.

The Executive Committee of the Central Welsh Board will shortly proceed to the appointment of FIVE CHIEF EXAMINERS.

Candidates must have special knowledge of at least one of the following Departments:—

1. CLASSICS.
2. MATHEMATICS.
3. ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE.
4. WELSH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE.
5. HISTORY.
6. MODERN LANGUAGES.
7. PHYSICS.
8. CHEMISTRY.
9. BOTANY.

Candidates are requested to send in their applications not later than April 30 next to the undersigned, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

OWEN OWEN, Chief Inspector.

Oswestry, March 25, 1897.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

GROCERS' COMPANY.—MEDICAL RESEARCH SCHOLARSHIPS.—These Scholarships, Three in number, each of the value of 250*l.*, and open only to British Subjects, have been instituted by the Company as an encouragement to the making of exact researches into the Causes and Prevention of important Diseases. The Company appoint annually. At the next Election Two of the present Scholars, should they renew their applications, will be entitled to a preference.

Applications may be made at any time before the end of April by letter addressed to THE CLERK OF THE COMPANY, Grocers' Hall, Princes-street, E.C., from whom particulars may be obtained.

April 7, 1897.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

MOUNT VIEW, HAMPSTEAD.—The NEXT TERM will BEGIN on THURSDAY, May 6. Reference kindly allowed to Professor Ruskin, Brantwood, Coniston; Mrs. Boyd Carpenter, The Palace, Ripon; Professor Carey Foster, 18, Dalcham-gardens, N.W.; and others.—For Prospectus apply to Miss HELEN E. HAYNES.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The SUMMER SESSION BEGINS on MAY 3. The work is arranged so that a Student may advantageously begin his Medical Curriculum then.

Full information may be obtained from either of the undersigned.

A. E. BARKER, F.R.C.S., Dean of the Faculty.
J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON (for WOMEN), York-place, Baker-street, W.
Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.
The EASTER TERM, 1897, BEGINS on THURSDAY, April 29. Special Classes for Students who matriculated in January.
Dr. DRYSDALE will begin a Course on BACTERIOLOGY.
Two Entrance Scholarships will be offered for competition in June.
LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

LONDON SCHOOL of MEDICINE for WOMEN, in Association with the Royal Free Hospital Gray's Inn-road.—For Prospectus, Scholarships, &c., apply to THE SECRETARY, at the School, 30, Handel-street, Brunswick-square, W.C.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL and COLLEGE.
The SUMMER SESSION will BEGIN on MAY 1, 1897.
Students can reside in the College within the Hospital walls, subject to the collegiate regulations.
The Hospital contains a service of 750 beds. Scholarships and Prizes of the aggregate value of nearly 800*l.* are awarded annually.
The Medical school contains large Lecture-Rooms and well-appointed Laboratories for practical teaching, as well as Dissecting Rooms, Museum, Library, &c.
A large recreation ground has recently been purchased.
For further particulars apply, personally or by letter, to the WARDEN of the College, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, E.C.
A Handbook forwarded on application.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—Hon. Sec., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

GOVERNESSES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can RECOMMEND several highly qualified English and Foreign GOVERNESSES for Resident and Daily Engagements.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

BRITISH MUSEUM ART DEMONSTRATIONS, Mausoleum-Room, April 27 and 29, May 4 and 6, at 3 o'clock. Course, 10*s.*; Two Tickets, 15*s.*—For particulars address Miss K. RALEIGH, 1, Campden Houses, Peel-street, W.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—NEW-MARCH LECTURES.—A COURSE of SIX LECTURES—open to the Public without payment or ticket—will be given on TUESDAY, May 4. The title of the Course will be 'Accuracy of Statistical Measurement.' A Syllabus of the Lectures may be obtained at the Office.
J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

GREEK and ROMAN RELIGION.—A COURSE of LECTURES at UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON, will be given on this subject by ERNEST GARDNER, M.A., Yates Professor of Archæology, on FRIDAYS, at 4 P.M., beginning April 30. There will also be Demonstrations in the British Museum. Fee, for Lectures or Demonstrations only, 1*l.* 1*s.*; for both, 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*—For Prospectus apply to J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Literary Articles, &c., COPIED with accuracy and despatch. 1*d.* per folio. Manifold or Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TIGAR, 23, Maitland Park-villas, Haverstock-hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER.—Authors' MSS. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Circulars, &c., by Copying Process. Authors' references.—Miss SIXES, West Kensington Type writing Agency, 13, Wolverton-gardens, Hammersmith, W.

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,
49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,
WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.
SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6890. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.
WILL BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.
THE NORWICH SCHOOL OF PAINTING.
A Series of Autotype Reproductions of Works by John Sell Cotman, Old Crome, Stark, Ladbrooke, Bright, Middleton, Daniell, Leman, Lound, &c. Forty Autotype Plates, mounted on grey boards, in Portfolio. Price Ten Guineas, net.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.
This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.
An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to
THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,
16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.
(nearly opposite the National Gallery).
Inspection invited.
REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.
CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.
MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for establishment, with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every Facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Literati, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS. or offering to place MSS. without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6*d.*, by HORACE COX, Breams-buildings, E.C.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. Mss. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' personal experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.
Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each. 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

LONDON LIBRARY, 8T. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.
Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.
Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.
Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.
The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription, 3*l.* a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo, price 2*l.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.
SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.
All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.
CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.
Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,
30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.
BRANCH OFFICES:—
241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).
Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

Catalogues.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.
CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3d. post free.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO. 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.
CATALOGUES of NEW PURCHASES issued at frequent intervals.
Libraries Arranged, Catalogued, Valued, and Purchased.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

CHOICE OLD ENGRAVINGS in COLOURS, Rare Sporting Prints, Theatrical and other Portraits, Americana, Scarce Books, Autographs, Drawings, &c., ON SALE by FRANK T. SABIN, 118, Shaftesbury avenue, W.

R. L. STEVENSON.—SKERRYVORE, BOURNEMOUTH.—Bijou Residence, which was for many years the property and favourite home of Robert Louis Stevenson. TO BE SOLD PRIVATELY. Well-wooded grounds, Stabling, &c.—Full particulars from the Owner, H. LEWIS, Skerryvore, Bournemouth.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

A Portion of the Valuable Library of Manuscripts and Printed Books, the Property of the late Professor MIDDLETON, Litt.D. D.C.L. V.P.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 26 and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS of the late Professor MIDDLETON, Litt.D. (Camb.), D.C.L. (Oxon), V.P.S.A., formerly Slade Professor in Cambridge and Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum, late Director of the South Kensington Art Museum, comprising some fine Illuminated Manuscripts on Vellum, including Two Latin Bibles by Anglo-Norman Scribes of the Thirteenth Century, and One of the Fifteenth—Horæ and Offices, MS. and Printed—Breviaria—Missalia—Queen Mary Sarum Missal, 1555—Early Printed Books with Woodcuts—fine Works on Art, Archæology, and Architecture—Arundel Society's Publications; also an interesting Series of Letters of Thomas Carlyle—Picture Galleries—a Collection of Sixty Rare Pamphlets relating to George Washington, 1783-1808.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of the Engraved Works of William Woollett, the Property of the late Dr. G. J. VINE.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 28, at 1 o'clock precisely, the well-known COLLECTION of the ENGRAVED WORKS of WILLIAM WOOLLETT, the Property of Dr. G. J. VINE (late of 3, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden); also Engravings after J. M. W. Turner, J. Constable, and others, including a Portion of the Collection of the late David Cox, the celebrated Artist.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Books and Manuscripts, including a Portion of the Library of the late Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 29, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising a Selection from the Library of the late Sir AUGUSTUS HARRIS, and various other Properties, including Thackeray's Second Funeral of Napoleon—Valuable Topographical Works by Hutchins and Clutterbuck—Sporting Books and several important Early Publications relating to America—Byron's Hours of Idleness, First Edition—Autograph Letters of Cowper, Wordsworth, and others—Books of Emblems—First Editions of American Authors—Charles Lamb's Beauty and the Beast—The Paradise of Daints, Devices—Rare Tracts and Manuscripts—the Original Proof-Sheets of De Quincey's Leaders in Literature, with Notes and Corrections in De Quincey's Handwriting.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Engravings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, comprising English and Foreign Portraits, including an extensive Collection of the Works of Robert Nanteuil, many in very early states—Fancy Subjects after English Masters—Sporting Prints—Framed Engravings &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Book-Plates, the Property of a well-known Collector.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES (EX-LIBRIS), including Specimens of the Jacobean, Chippendale, Wreath and Ribbon, and other styles; also a few Books relating to Heraldry and Book-Plates, comprising a Complete Set of the Ex-Libris Journal, the Property of a well-known COLLECTOR.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Engravings formed at the end of the last century, the Property of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS formed at the end of the last century, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, comprising Fancy Subjects by F. Bartolozzi and others—Sporting Prints—and an extensive Collection of Mezzotints by Masters of the English School, including some fine Specimens from the Works of Sir J. Reynolds.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts, including a Portion of the Library of Sir CECIL DOMVILLE, Bart., and a Selection from the Library of J. S. BURRA, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 12, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a Selection from the Library of Sir CECIL DOMVILLE, Bart., comprising County Histories and Archæological Works, the Property of a LADY of TITLE, including Whitaker's History of Richmondshire, 2 vols. Large Paper—Whitaker's Loidis and Elmete, and Thoresby's Ducatus Leodiensis, 2 vols.—Rare Books relating to America, &c.; a Selection from the Library of J. S. BURRA, Esq., comprising Manuscript Horæ, with finely painted Miniatures—Evangeliarum, MS. on Vellum—Columna, La Hypnerotomachia, 1545—Pontificale Romanum, MS. on Vellum, Sæc. XV.; &c.; a Selection of Valuable Books from a Library in Essex, the Property of a COUNTY FAMILY, including Burns's Poems, First Edition, Kilmarnock, 1786—Byron's Hours of Idleness, First Edition, Large Paper—Bishop Hall's Virgidemiarum, 1602-1599—Heywood's Fourth Hundred of Epygrams, 1560—Coryat's Crudities, First Edition, 1611—Tennyson, Poems by Two Brothers, uncut—Gascoigne's Works, 1587—Milton's Paradise Lost, First Edition, 1669—More's Utopia, First Edition, 1516—Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice, the excessively rare First Edition, 1600—Sir John Oldcastle, First Edition, 1600—Spenser's Complaints, 1591—Coverdale's Bible, 1525—Caxton, Vitæ Patrum, First Edition, 1485—Voragine, Legenda Aurea, 1527—and other extremely rare Books—a large Collection of Books relating to Gardening, &c.—an extensive and unique Collection illustrating the celebrated South Sea Bubble.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

BIBLIOTHECA PHILLIPPICA.
A FURTHER PORTION of the Famous Collection of Manuscripts and Autograph Letters of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the FAMOUS COLLECTION of MANUSCRIPTS and AUTOGRAPH LETTERS of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c., of Middle Hill, Worcestershire, and Thirlestaine House, Cheltenham, including nearly 120 MSS. on Vellum, dating from the Ninth Century, together with valuable Works relating to Scotland and Ireland—a fine Series of State Letters and Papers of the Reigns of Charles II., William III., and Queen Anne—Illuminated Biblia, Psalters, Missals, &c.—Wardrobe Books of Edward II., Richard II., Thos. Duke of Gloucester, Prince Henry, &c.—Collections relating to Queen Elizabeth and Mary, Queen of Scots—Early English Poetry and Literature, together with an important Series of Shakespeare Quartos; also fine Topographical Collections relating to the Counties of Cornwall, Derby, Hants, Lancaster, Norfolk, Salop, York, &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books selected from the Library of a Gentleman, deceased.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, May 21, at 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS selected from the LIBRARY of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, comprising Early Editions of the English Dramatists—Books on Witchcraft, including the First Edition of Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, Dr. Dee, &c.—several remarkable Collections of Early Chap-Books—Tracts relating to Mary Tofts, the Rabbit Woman of Godalming, from the Nassau Collection—Richard Brathwait's various Works—Jest Books—Chalkhill's Thealma and Clearchus, 1683—Defoe's Moll Flanders, First Edition—Sir John Mennis's Musarum Deliciæ, 1656—Simon Grahame's The Anatomie of Humors, First Edition—A Mirror for Magistrates, 1610—Boccaccio's Decameron, 1620—Brant's Stultifera Navis, 1570—Johnson's Highwaymen, First Edition, &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.
The Valuable and Extensive Collection of Medals commemorative of British History.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 24, and Five Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very valuable and extensive COLLECTION of MEDALS commemorative of British History, the Property of the late HYMAN MONTAGU, Esq., F.S.A., Vice-President of the Numismatic Society.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues, illustrated with Nine Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3s. each.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, April 26, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, rare BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.
Catalogues on application.

Musical Instruments, including the Property of the late J. BLAND, Esq. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 27, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES—Harmoniums—Double and Single Action Harps—Violins, Violas, Violoncellos, and Double Basses, with the Bows, Cases, and Fittings, including the Collection of the late J. BLAND, Esq.—Guitars, Mandolines, and Banjos—Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments—and Music (both Old and Modern).
Catalogues on application.

Musical Copyrights.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 28, and One Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the COPYRIGHTS and ENGRAVED MUSIC PLATES of Messrs. B. WILLIAMS & CO., of 19, Ivy-lane, E.C. (by order of the Mortgagee).
Catalogues on application.

Engravings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 30, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, consisting of Mezzotint and other Portraits, many in fine states—Fancy Subjects, principally in Colours, by and after Bartolozzi, Cipriani, Kauffman, Cosway, Reynolds, Buck, &c.—Scarce Old Sporting Subjects—and a few Water-Colour Drawings.
Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Property, including the Collection of the late W. A. O'NEILL, Esq., of Dublin (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a fine COLLECTION of ANTIQUE SILVER, comprising Tankards, Waiters, Rat-Tail and other Spoons, Cream Ewers, &c.—Antique Jewellery, consisting of Rings, Brooches, Ear-rings, Lockets and Scarf-Pins set with Diamonds and other Precious Stones—Scarce Old War Medals—Miniatures and Watches—Inlaid Ivory and Tortoiseshell Snuff-Boxes—and Sheffield and other Plate.
Catalogues on application.

Library of the late Sir TRAVERS TWISS.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 5, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Sir TRAVERS TWISS, amongst which will be found Gilfillan's British Poets, 42 vols. cloth—Professor Wilson's Works, 12 vols.—Chambers's Encyclopædia, 10 vols. cloth—Knight's Pictorial England, 8 vols.—Walton and Cotton's Complete Angler, by Nicolas—Digby's Broad Stone of Honour, Large Paper, 5 vols.—Freeman's Norman Conquest, 5 vols.—Froude's England and English in Ireland, Library Edition, 15 vols.—Works of Fielding, Smollett, and Swift, illustrated by G. Cruikshank—Waring's Masterpieces, 3 vols.—Fernandez, Historia del Peru, Original Edition, calf, 1571—Sporting by Nimrod, half-morocco—Cox's Churches of Derbyshire, &c.
Catalogues on application.

Ex-Libris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS formed by WALTER HAMILTON, Esq., Vice-President of the Ex-Libris Society; also his valuable Reference Library of Works on Heraldry and Book-Plates.
Catalogues may be had on receipt of six stamps.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, April 26, the REMAINING WORKS of E. K. JOHNSON, R.W.S., deceased.

On MONDAY, April 26, OBJECTS of ART, DECORATIVE FURNITURE, and TAPESTRY.

On TUESDAY, April 27th, COLLECTION of OLD CHINESE PORCELAIN, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; and Two other small COLLECTIONS of ORIENTAL OBJECTS.

On TUESDAY, April 27, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS after LANDSEER of the late Sir GEORGE JOHNSON, and the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS of the late GEORGE JAMES, Esq.

On WEDNESDAY, April 28, SILVER, JEWELLERY, LACE, PORCELAIN, ARMS, &c., of the late Mrs. ANNA GALLENGA.

On THURSDAY, April 29, the COLLECTION of MEZZOTINTS after Sir J. REYNOLDS of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A., and the REMAINING WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A.

On FRIDAY, April 30, CHOICE WINES, the Property of the MARQUIS of WORCESTER, Major the Hon. A. H. HENNIKER, and PERCY S. BOULT, Esq.; and large Bins of Old Vintage Ports, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, deceased.

On FRIDAY, April 30, a COLLECTION of OBJECTS of ART and VERTU, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On SATURDAY, May 1, the WORKS and COLLECTION of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A.; the WORKS and COLLECTION of the late Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A.; and a few High-Class Modern Pictures from different sources.

On MONDAY, May 3, the WORKS of the late J. F. LEWIS, R.A.

On TUESDAY, May 4, and Following Days, the valuable LIBRARY formed by FREDERIC, THIRD EARL of BESSBOROUGH, the Property of the Hon. ASHLEY PONSONBY.

On WEDNESDAY, May 5, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, the Property of the late Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A.; OLD FRENCH DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late Sir HENRY EDWARDS; DECORATIVE FURNITURE of the late CHARLES E. LEES, Esq.; and PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late K. R. MURCHISON, Esq.

On SATURDAY, May 8, important EARLY ENGLISH PICTURES from MULGRAVE CASTLE and other famous Collections.

On MONDAY, May 10, and Two Following Days, COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS of the Early English School, formed by a well-known Amateur.

On WEDNESDAY, May 12, the CELLAR of WINES of the late HENRY J. STOURTON, Esq., of Holme Hall, York; and other fine Wines from various Private Cellars.

On SATURDAY, May 15, the COLLECTION of PICTURES and DRAWINGS formed by the late ELI LEES, Esq.

On SATURDAY, May 22, Fifty important ENGLISH and FOREIGN PICTURES, the Property of BENJAMIN ARMITAGE, Esq., of Manchester; the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late Sir HENRY EDWARDS; and the important COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of F. W. ARMITAGE, Esq., of Melbourne.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 400 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.
Illustrated Catalogues will be ready shortly, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

Sales by Auction.

Library of a Clergyman, removed from the Country, and Three other Private Collections.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms 115 Chancery lane W C on WEDNESDAY, April 28 and Two Following Days at 1 o'clock THEOLOGICAL and MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS comprising Swift's Works 19 vols—Milton's Works 7 vols—Walpole's Letters, 10 vols—Jesse's Selwyn, 4 vols—Johnson's Lives of the Poets 3 vols—Lecky's European Morals, 2 vols—Motley's John of Barneveld 2 vols—Milman's History of Christianity &c 15 vols—Grotes Greece 12 vols—D'Aubigné La Reformation 13 vols—Rosenmuller Scholia in Vet. Test. 13 vols—Buxtorfii Lexicon Chaldaicum—Evelyn's Memoirs, by Bray, 5 vols—Gould's Freemasonry 6 vols—Speeches of British Statesmen—Smith and Sowerby's English Botany 36 vols—Scott's Novels, &c., 60 vols—extra-illustrated Topographical Works on Kent, Essex Beds Somerset, &c—Scrap-books of Prints Postage Stamps and Book-Plates. To which are added Books recently published (from a Reviewer's Library), and Standard French Historical Works, Books of Travel, Novels, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Handsome Suite of Oak Library Furniture, the Property of a Gentleman; Carved Oak and Mahogany Bookcases, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms 115, Chancery-lane, W C., DURING the MONTH of MAY, the above valuable LIBRARY FURNITURE, comprising a handsome Winged Bookcase, with Glazed Doors; handsome Secretaire-Bookcase—Cabinet comprising Iron Safes enclosing Deed Drawers—Knee-hole Library Table with 18 Drawers—an elaborately Carved Antique Oak Bookcase, with Drawers and Cupboards—Two Mahogany Glazed Bookcases, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues sent when ready.

SPECIAL SALE.

THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT, April 29 and 30.

PRIVATE AUCTION WITH CLOSED DOORS. Twenty Seats only at 5*l.* 5*s.* each. All seats must be booked and paid for before view.

HERALDRY: Early English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, Canadian, American, British Colonial, French, German, Italian, Prussian, Danish, Portuguese, Spanish, Russian, Dutch, Anglo-Indian, and other Countries—Orders of European Knighthood, and special Garter Portraits, Chapter Records, and Arms—fine Impressions of Arms from Copper and Wood—old Book-Plates—rare old Portraits, with arms—special Arms of Celebrated Persons, Officials, Cities, Towns, Families, Cardinals, Popes, Kings, Emperors, Queens—Royal Victorian Heraldry and Portraits—very fine First Impressions of John Speed's County Maps, with arms and plans, A.D. 1610, singly—rare original official historic London Gazettes and Gazettes Extraordinary of the Reigns of Charles II., James II, William III., Queen Anne, George II., and George III—rare old Art and Topographical Prints, with armorial dedications to Royal and other distinguished persons by Early Engravers—Queen Elizabeth at St. Paul's—George III. at St. Paul's—early Georgian floreated and adorned Arms of English Nobles—Sixteenth Century Maps from A.D. 1558 by Nicolai, Calamæum, Surhonio, Lannoyo, Rogiero, Ortelius, and Guycto—old Vauxhall, Liverpool, Worcester, Spode, and Oriental Plates, Mugs, Jugs, and Jars—Fail and Spanish MS.—Carving dated A.D. 1621—old Burmese Sculpture and Uncut Gems—old English and Italian Water-Colour Drawings—Coins—Cameos—Paintings—old English Oval Stipple Engravings—early Unprinted Water-marked Pot and Post Horn Paper—impressed English, Irish, and Foreign Newspaper Stamps from A.D. 1735—Autographs from A.D. 1684—early Windsor Castle Views and embossed Playbills—rare Victorian Items for Diamond Jubilee Collectors and Antiquarians—old Coloured Prints after George Morland—old large coloured rare Botanic Prints of India, China, Egypt, South Africa, North and South America—fine Baxter Oil Coloured Prints—early Prints of Aborigines of the British Empire—Original Relievo Portraits of Napoleon I., Gladstone, B. Franklin, Queen Victoria, Paul Jones, Prince Albert, Charles I., Joseph I.—and scarce Literary Items of the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Centuries.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL by AUCTION, at his Literary and Art Sale-Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., at 1 o'clock each day.

On view Wednesday, April 28.

PRIVATE AUCTION WITH CLOSED DOORS Twenty Seats only at 5*l.* 5*s.* each. All seats must be booked and paid for before view.

Prussia, Germany, France, Greece, Hungary, Poland, Russia, Turkey, Persia, India, and America.

MR. JOHN PARNELL is instructed to SELL in the above SALE, APRIL 29 and 30, ELEVEN magnificent historically arranged COLLECTIONS of MAPS during 300 years.

Highly important and extensive Sale of the exceedingly valuable Collection of OIL PAINTINGS and WATER COLOURS by Old Masters and Artists of the highest repute, together with the whole of the superb HOUSEHOLD APPOINTMENTS, Outdoor Effects, Greenhouse Plants, and Miscellaneous Effects, at

GARDEN LODGE, RUABON, NORTH WALES,

On TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, April 27 and 28, 1897.

The Oil Paintings include Examples by—

Rubens	Murillo	Albert Dürer
Teniers	J. M. W. Turner	Wouvermann
Watteau	J. Crome, sen.	Guido
Holbein	Le Croix	Netcher

And many others.

The Water-Colour Drawings are by—

David Cox	J. S. Morland	W. J. Wadham
G. Price	W. H. Deuban	G. D. Callow
McDougall	J. Linnell	A. B. Clayton
Mark Fisher	Herdman	B. B. Wadham

And many others by Royal Academicians.

The HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE includes Dining, Drawing, Morning Room, and Bed Room Suites in various woods—rare Turkey, Axminster, and Brussels Carpets—Tiger, Leopard, and other Skin Rugs—full-size Billiard Table—all Brass and Iron and Brass Bedsteads of elegant design—Office Desks—and the Contents of the Servants' and Domestic Apartments.

FRANK LLOYD has received instructions from HY. JENKS, Esq. (who is going to reside in Surrey), to conduct this important Sale as above.

On view on Monday, April 26, 12 o'clock to 4 P.M. Descriptive Catalogues (6*d* each) from the AUCTIONEER, Eyton House, Wrexham.

TUESDAY NEXT.

The Valuable Collection of Exotic and European Lepidoptera and Coleoptera formed by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., of Condover Hall, near Shrewsbury; also the Cabinets.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY NEXT, April 27, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

Photographic, Scientific, Electrical Apparatus and Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION at his Great Rooms, 38 King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, April 30, at half past 12 o'clock precisely

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had

TUESDAY, May 4.

The Collection of Birds' Skins formed by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., of Condover Hall, Shrewsbury: also a Collection of Birds in Cases, Heads and Horns, Curiosities, Shells, Minerals, and other Natural History Specimens.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY, May 4, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

The Library of the late CHARLES W. FREDERICKSON, Esq.

WILL BE SOLD by AUCTION (by order of the Administrator),

MAY 24, AND FOLLOWING DAYS,

A COLLECTION OF CHOICE ENGLISH LITERATURE,

including many scarce and desirable Editions, particularly of the Works of Shakespeare, Thomas Gray, Charles Lamb, and Shelley.

Also, his COLLECTION of MANUSCRIPTS and AUTOGRAPH LETTERS,

including MSS of Cowper, Lamb, Byron, Keats, Irving, Fenimore Cooper, Abraham Lincoln, and many very desirable Autograph Letters, including over Sixty Letters of Shelley.

Catalogues can be had upon application to the Auctioneers,

BANGS & COMPANY,

91 and 93, FIFTH-AVENUE, NEW YORK.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.
No. 175. MAY, 1897. Price Sixpence.

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. Chaps. 11-13. By S. Levett Yeats, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'
RURAL PROSPERITY. By Sir Edmund Verney, Bart.
The BALLAD of the LITTLE BLACK HOUND. By Mrs. Clement Shorter.
LOOKING ROUND. By A. K. H. B.
SUMMARY PROCEDURE. By Henry Martley.
The NEW CURE for SNAKE-BITES. By Mrs. Percy Frankland.
The FIGHTING TÉMÉRAIRE. By Henry Newbolt.
AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

London: Longmans, Green & Co.

THE CLERGY LIST

For 1897.

NOW READY.

IMPORTANT NEW FEATURES.

Instead of, as hitherto, merely giving the present Benefice or Curacy of a Clergyman, the Book will contain—

A Complete Record of Past and Present Appointments.

It will also give the College, University, and, where necessary, the Private Address of every Clergyman in England, Ireland, Scotland, and the Colonies in one List for the First Time.

Some 500 pages have been added to the book, but owing to the use of a special paper

The bulk will not be increased.

Despite the enormous cost of these Additions,

The price will remain 10s. 6d.

London: KELLY & CO., LIMITED,
182-184, High Holborn, W.C.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S NEW ATLASES.

PHILIPS' NEW HANDY GENERAL ATLAS OF THE WORLD.

Containing 120 pages of Coloured Maps and Plans, dealing exhaustively with Physical, Political, and Commercial Geography, with an Index of over 100,000 Names.

EDITED BY

GEORGE PHILIP, Jun., F.R.G.S.

Size, 15 by 12 inches. Weight, 9 lb.

Handsomely bound in half-morocco, gilt top, £2.

Full bound morocco, gilt edges, £2 12s. 6d.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

1. It is entirely of English origin and manufacture, and has been planned with special reference to the requirements of the British public. For this reason it will be found clearer, more up-to-date, and easier of reference than the Foreign Atlases which are being so extensively advertised in this country.

2. Special care has been taken to show all the British Colonies and Dependencies in great detail.

3. Physical and Commercial Geography are adequately treated in a series of Maps of the World and of the Continents.

Detailed Prospectus on application.

The Daily Mail says:—"In these days, when geographical and political questions are largely intermixed, to the general disturbance of the public mind, a new atlas which, in addition to being complete in every other respect, defines with scrupulous accuracy the most recent frontier limitations, is sure to be liberally welcomed. Such an atlas makes its appearance this week from the house of G. Philip & Son, under the title 'The Handy General Atlas of the World' (40*s.*). For ordinary purposes of study and reference this is the most convenient and complete work of its kind that I know. The index, which comprehends over 100,000 geographical names, quickly guides one to the discovery of the desired place on its particular map, and the maps themselves are in all respects admirable, carefully drawn, and beautifully printed in colours. The physical and climatological maps and the commercial charts are most useful."

The MERCHANT SHIPPERS' and OCEAN TRAVELLERS' ATLAS.

A Series of 15 large Coloured Plates of the various Oceans and Seas, showing clearly Submarine Cables, Steamship and Sailing Ship Routes, distances between Ports, Canals, Lighthouses, Coaling Stations, and much additional information which will be found exceptionally useful to Merchants, Ship Brokers, Insurance Offices, and all those who are interested in Ocean Travels. Large folio, strongly bound in cloth, 1*l.* 10*s.*

Fairplay says:—"No atlas extant will serve the purposes of shipowners, merchants, and underwriters so well as this new one."

PHILIPS' READY REFERENCE ATLAS of the WORLD.

With a Statistical Survey of each Country. Containing 72 Coloured Maps, 100 Pages of Letterpress, and an Index of over 20,000 Names. Edited by E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S., Hon. Fellow of the Geographical Societies of Edinburgh, Amsterdam, Lisbon, and Frankfurt-on-Main. Small 4to. cloth gilt, gilt edges, 10*s.* 6*d.*

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The first cartographical work published for the New Year. The maps are clearly drawn and printed, and all the boundaries affected by recent treaties or political developments are carefully marked. This atlas will be found most useful for immediate reference, and the statistical survey is a great acquisition."

PHILIPS' HANDY VOLUME ATLAS

of the WORLD. An entirely New and Enlarged Edition, containing 72 entirely New Maps, 75 Pages of Commercial and Statistical Notes, and an Index of 20,000 Names. Edited by E. G. RAVENSTEIN, F.R.G.S. Size when closed, 6½ by 4 inches. Cloth, rounded corners, 5*s*; French morocco, gilt edges, in cardboard box, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The National Observer says:—"To bring together within the compass of a volume hardly larger than an ordinary Church Service some seventy-two maps of the world, together with statistical and geographical information accompanying each map, the whole guaranteed by the high authority of so expert a geographer as Mr. E. G. Ravenstein, and procurable at a moderate price, is an undertaking which could hardly fail to commend itself to the English public."

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

A FOUNTAIN SEALED. By Sir WALTER BESANT, Author of 'All Sorts and Conditions of Men.' Frontispiece by H. G. Burgess. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Shortly.

The MASTER CRAFTSMAN. By Sir WALTER BESANT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

FIFTY YEARS AGO. By Sir Walter BESANT. With 144 Plates and Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

The RIDDLE RING. By Justin McCARTHY, M.P. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s 6d. [April 29.

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the Russian Secret Service. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [May 6.

NULMA. By Mrs. Campbell Praed. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [May 7.

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugène Rougon). By ÉMILE ZOLA. Authorized Version, with a Preface by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [April 29.

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY. By RICHARD DOWLING. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

LIFE on the MISSISSIPPI. By Mark TWAIN. With 312 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Also, uniform, crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT, and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 209 Illustrations.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.
The £1,000,000 BANK-NOTE.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.

GHETTO TRAGEDIES. By I. ZANGWILL. With 3 Illustrations by A. S. Boyd. Long fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. net.

A MINION of the MOON. By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of 'The Mysteries of Heron Dyke.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A LEVANTINE FAMILY. By Bayle ST. JOHN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

LOVICE. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. Lynn LINTON. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6s.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By WILLIAM WESTALL. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. Illustrated by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

A MISSING WITNESS. By Frank BARRETT. With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

MR. JERVIS. By B M Croker.
The WHITE VIRGIN. By G Manville Fenn.
The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. Clark Russell.
MOUNT DESPAIR. By D Christie Murray.
BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.
LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

MADAME SANS-GENE. (Founded on SARDOU and MOREAU'S Play.) By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s 6d.

RIE'S DIARY. By Anne Coates. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

CARLTON PRIORS. By John Stafford. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top. 6s. [Shortly.

HIS DEAD PAST. By C. J. Wills. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top. 6s. [Shortly.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY MIRACLE. By Z. Z. (LOUIS ZANGWILL). Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [Shortly.

A HISTORY of OUR OWN TIMES from 1880 to the DIAMOND JUBILEE. By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P. Demy 8vo. cloth extra, 12s. (LIBRARY EDITION, uniform with the previous four volumes.) [Shortly.

DICTIONARY of WORDS, FACTS, and PHRASES. By ELIEZER EDWARDS. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s 6d. [April 29.

ENGLISH SURNAMES: their Sources and Significations. By CHARLES WARELNG BARDSLEY, M.A. Fifth Edition, with New Preface. Crown 8vo. cloth. 7s 6d.

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE.

One Shilling Monthly. Contents for MAY.—PENALISED. By Bernard Pares.—The MAKING of the MAP of EUROPE. By Rev Wray W. Hunt, M.A.—MORE DIABOLICAL FOLK-LORE relating to different LOCALITIES. By R. Bruce Boswell.—WOMAN INSURGENT: a Parisian Séance. By A. Macivor.—ST MARY REDCLIFFE. By Elizabeth Hodges.—OUT with the OLD PILGRIMS. By W C Sydney, M.A.—MEN on a NEW SOUTH WALES STATION. By Hugh Henry.—VENUS and ADONIS. By Thomas H. B Graham.—IN the SHADOW of a CATHEDRAL. By C Wynn Williams.—A TALE to be TOLD to the MARINES. By Sylvanus Urban.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G. Quartermaster-General. With 20 Maps.

"This brilliant and fascinating little book." Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Evelyn Wood is to be congratulated on his excellent book. The service may also be congratulated that amongst its Field-Marshals and General Officers on the active list are so many who can emphasize their leading in the field by their literary counsels in peace. Among that band of able writers the Quartermaster-General to Her Majesty's Forces well holds his own."—Times.

"Will be read with interest and profit both by soldiers and by civilians interested in military history."—Scotsman.

READY NEXT WEEK.
Royal 8vo. 2 vols. 25s. net.

MEMORIALS of CHRISTIE'S. By W. ROBERTS, Author of 'The Book-hunter in London,' 'Printers' Marks,' &c. With 75 Collotype and other Illustrations, and a full Index.

 This history of the famous auctioneers, through whose hands have passed so many important works of art, will be found a reference book of great practical value to all interested in the arts. The chief items in each sale are described, the prices which they fetched under the hammer are recorded, and in all cases of interest the purchaser's name is given. The illustrations of pictures and bric-à-brac are selected chiefly from those objects which obtained "record" prices. In a size uniform with the catalogues of the firm, it should be an indispensable book in all libraries and art schools.

Crown 8vo. 600 pages, 3s. 6d.

ELOCUTION and the DRAMATIC ART. By DAVID J. SMITHSON. New Edition, Revised by the Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, Professor of Elocution at King's College, London.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

GOLF in THEORY and PRACTICE: some Hints to Beginners. By H. S. C. EVERARD. A Practical Manual. With 22 Illustrations from Life.

"We have read the book 'right off,' as the saying goes, and this because, as in the case of a witching tale, it was difficult to stop.....The book is enjoyable and instructive, it is attractive in appearance, clear in its printing, valuable in its contents, and we hope it will have a wide circulation in the world of golf."—Golf.

"One of the very best books of its class."—Referee.

New and Revised Edition, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15s.

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT: a Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang. With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

Pott 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SILVER CROSS. A Selection of Poems for the Sick and Suffering. Edited by HELEN DOUGLAS, with an Introduction by the LORD BISHOP OF ST. ANDREWS. Pott 8vo. printed in red and black on antique paper at the Chiswick Press.

ALDINE POETS.

Completion of Reissue. 81 Volumes, 2s. 6d. net, each.

JAMES THOMSON. Revised Edition, with a New Memoir and Critical Appendix, by the Rev. T. C. TOVEY, M.A., Author of 'Gray and his Friends,' &c. 2 vols. fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net, each.

READY NEXT WEEK.
NEW VOLUME OF BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

HORACE. A New Literal Prose Translation. By A. HAMILTON BRYCE, LL.D., Translator and Editor of 'Vergil,' &c. 3s. 6d.

NOW READY. EDITION LIMITED.
Pott 4to. printed on antique laid paper at the Chiswick Press. 15s. net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896: containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Indexes of Names and Subjects, and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15s. net, each.

"In bulk, in paper and type, and in general thoroughness it strikes us equally favourably."—Academy.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

BY THE LATE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

CYPRIAN:
HIS LIFE, HIS TIMES, HIS WORK.

By EDWARD WHITE BENSON, D.D. D.C.L., Sometime Archbishop of Canterbury.

8vo. 21s. net.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"On the whole, and with all reservations which can possibly be made, this weighty volume is a contribution to criticism and learning on which we can but congratulate the Anglican Church. We wish more of her bishops were capable or desirous of descending into that arena of pure intellect from which Dr. Benson returns with these posthumous laurels."

FIFTH THOUSAND NOW READY.
Demy 8vo. 21s. net.

MISS KINGSLEY'S
TRAVELS IN WEST AFRICA.

By Miss MARY H. KINGSLEY.

With 16 Full-Page and numerous Text Illustrations.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"One of the most amusing, instructive, and delightful books of travel which the Dark Continent has ever given us."

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR.

A TALE OF DARTMOOR IN THE DAYS OF WATERLOO.

By FREDERIC ADYE.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"The book has many exciting scenes, notably that of the revolt within the prison gates which resulted in the escape of Cecil's lover. Fact is very skilfully interwoven with fiction, and altogether 'The Queen of the Moor' is a story to be read and enjoyed."

BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE.

ANCIENT VOLCANOES of GREAT BRITAIN. By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, F.R.S., &c. With 7 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. 36s. net.

TIMES.—"An exhaustive treatise, which may be supplemented by the researches of the future, but which can hardly be superseded.....To the geologist it is unnecessary to commend it; to all who are interested in the checkered career of this earth of ours it will be found to abound with interest."

BY THE LATE REV. F. J. A. HORT, D.D.

The CHRISTIAN ECCLESIA. A Course of Lectures on the Early History and Early Conceptions of the Ecclesia, and Four Sermons. By FENTON JOHN ANTHONY HORT, D.D., Lady Margaret's Reader in Divinity in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

RELIGIOUS TEACHING in SECONDARY SCHOOLS. Suggestions to Teachers and Parents for Lessons on the Old and New Testaments, Early Church History, Christian Evidences, &c. By Rev. GEORGE C. BELL, M.A., Master of Marlborough College.

Extra crown 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

The ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. A Commentary on its Nature and Growth. By JESSE MACY, M.A., Professor of Political Science in Iowa College.

VOLUME IX. NOW READY.

LIFE and LABOUR of the PEOPLE in LONDON. Edited by CHARLES BOOTH. Vol. IX. Comparisons, Survey, and Conclusions (with an Abstract of Vols. I.-IX.). Extra crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

SECOND EDITION, REVISED, NOW READY.

The THEORY of INTERNATIONAL TRADE with SOME of its APPLICATIONS to ECONOMIC POLICY. By Professor C. F. BASTABLE, M.A. LL.D., Author of 'Public Finance,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

NEW EDITION NOW READY.

ENGLISH LITERATURE from A.D. 670 to A.D. 1832. By STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A. Partly Rewritten and largely Revised and Corrected. Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Just ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for MAY, 1897.

1. DEAR FAUSTINA. By Rhoda Broughton. Chaps. 13-15.
2. A POET of SPRING.
3. A HUMAN BUNDLE.
4. A LAND of DERELICTS.
5. DEUS in MACHINA.
6. An UNAPPRECIATED DIARIST.
7. SENT BACK by the SEA.
8. The CARTHUSIANS.
9. TWO TALES from the RUSSIAN of ANTON TSCHECHOW.
10. COLERIDGEIANA.
11. OUR VENETIAN BABY.
12. REDPOLL'S MARRIAGE.

SEVENTEENTH EDITION NOW READY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36*s.*

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

Besides Maps and Plans, the Volumes contain Portraits on Steel and Copper.

NEW NOVELS

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NOW READY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOUR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NEAR NEIGHBOURS.'

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD, Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Not only a clever, but a pleasant novel. The author writes unfrequently, but everything she writes is worth reading. All her novels bear an independent air; they are not turned out on any line or made to order to suit any market."—World.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'EAST LYNNE.'

ASHLEY.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. scarlet cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.*; green cloth, 2*s.*

FLORENCE MONTGOMERY'S STORIES.

I.

MISUNDERSTOOD. Twenty-fifth Edition. With 6 Illustrations by Du Maurier. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

II.

THROWN TOGETHER. Twentieth Thousand. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

III.

SEAFORTH. Ninth Thousand. With Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

IV.

The BLUE VEIL, and Other Stories. Small crown 8vo. 3*s.*

The HEAVENS. An Illustrated Handbook of Popular Astronomy. By AMÉDÉE GUILLEMIN. Edited by J. NORMAN LOCKYER, F.R.S., and RICHARD PROCTOR, F.R.A.S. Demy 8vo. with over 200 Illustrations, 12*s.*

CURIOSITIES of NATURAL HISTORY. By FRANCIS TREVELYAN BUCKLAND, late Her Majesty's Inspector of Fisheries. Popular Edition, with a few Illustrations. Each Series separately, in small 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

The MODERN COOK. By Charles ELMÉ FRANCATELLI, late Maître d'Hôtel to Her Majesty. Demy 8vo. Thirtieth Edition, containing 1,500 Recipes and 60 Illustrations, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The COOK'S GUIDE. By the Author of 'The Modern Cook.' Sixty-fourth Thousand. Small 8vo. containing 1,000 Recipes, with Illustrations, 5*s.*

"An admirable manual for every household."—Times.

A YOUNGER SON'S COOKERY BOOK. By a YOUNGER SON'S DAUGHTER. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,

Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

THE PEOPLE'S EDITION.

PRICE SIXPENCE.

The First Printing of 50,000 copies is now exhausted. A SECOND PRINTING of 50,000 copies is now ready at all Booksellers'.

In medium 8vo. paper cover.

JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.

By Mrs. CRAIK.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s.*

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

WITHOUT ISSUE. By Henry CRESSWELL, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

COUSIN JEM. By L. Higgin, Author of 'A Cornish Maid,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' 'Mistress Beatrice Cope,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"It is in the background and details, in the incidental sketches of character, in the freshness of the atmosphere, that the chief charm of this story lies."—Globe.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"The story depends more on its all-round literary merit than upon variety of incident, though in this regard it is by no means poor; it is sure to be read with warm appreciation by discreet lovers of good fiction."—Scotsman.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"'All in All' is melodramatic, but not without interest and attraction."—Athenæum.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s.*

"An excellent story of a well-imagined mystery, skilfully expounded and wrought out.....Has many light and pleasant passages and is readable throughout."—Globe.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

A. & C. BLACK'S LIST.

HANDBOOK to CHRISTIAN and ECCLESIASTICAL ROME. By H. M. and M. A. R. T. Part I. The CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS. Illustrated with 23 Cuts and Plans. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

NAPLES in the NINETIES. A Sequel to 'Naples in 1888.' By E. NEVILLE ROLFE, B.A., H.B.M. Consul at Naples. With numerous Illustrations. Square crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

FADS of an OLD PHYSICIAN. By Dr. GEORGE S. KEITH, Author of 'Plea for a Simpler Life,' to which this is a Companion Volume. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

FERRETS: their Management in Health and Disease, with Remarks on their Legal Status. By NICHOLAS EVERITT. With numerous Illustrations. Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

A DOZEN WAYS of LOVE. By Miss L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars All.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

OUT of HER SHROUD. By HENRY OCHILTREE, Author of 'Redburn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

A MATTER of TEMPERAMENT. By CAROLINE FOTHERGILL, Author of 'The Comedy of Cecilia' and 'A Question of Degree.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

The JUCKLINS. By Opie Read, Author of 'A Kentucky Colonel.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Archbishop Benson's Cyprian	531
Mr. O'Grady's Historical Romance	533
British Moralists	534
Prof. Maspero on Ancient Oriental History ...	535
New Novels (The Massarenes; Under Love's Rule; The Jessamy Bride; The Whirlpool; Nell and the Actor; The Episode of Alethea; The Faithful City; The Touchstone of Life; Wilt Thou have this Woman? Joies d'Amour; De Toute son Ame)	536—537
Books about Children	537
The Libraries of Fiction	538
Welsh Literature	538
Recent Verse	539
American Fiction	540
School-Books	540
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	541—542
An Obscure Point in English History; The 'Dictionary of National Biography'; 'Travel and Big Game'; An Anglo-Saxon Enigma; Tennyson Bibliography; The Spring Publishing Season; Two Prothalamia; A Poet's Grievance	542—544
Literary Gossip	545
Science—Entomological Literature; Botanical Literature; Zoological Literature; The Papers of Sir Joseph Banks; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	546—548
Fine Arts—G. P. Chalmers; Library Table; Fresh Mycenæan Datings; Pompey's Pillar at Alexandria; Gossip	548—551
Music—The Week; National Festival Music; Gossip; Performances Next Week ...	551—552
Drama—The Week; Library Table; Gossip ...	552

LITERATURE

Cyprian: his Life, his Times, his Work. By Edward White Benson, D.D. (Macmillan & Co.)

The Archbishop's son tells us in a prefatory note that thirty years ago his father resolved to undertake some work which in the midst of his laborious duties "might provide both a contrast to and an illustration of modern tendencies and recent problems." The Archbishop fixed on the life and work of Cyprian, and during the intervals of leisure which he could snatch from the pressing tasks of the day he devoted himself to the elucidation of the various points that arose in connexion with the history of the famous Bishop of Carthage and his times and the exposition of the letters and treatises which have been preserved from his hand. And towards the end of his life he notes in his diary:—

"Have now practically finished a big book, unless I add a few of the Greek comments. If it ever sees the light, many will think it a very odd book."

A book written under such conditions is sure to labour under some disadvantages. The materials which the Archbishop had before him were a series of eighty-one letters written by Cyprian and others, some treatises of his, and a comparatively few contemporary and later notices. In Cyprian's day letters were forged. It is likely that many letters connected with the events of the time have been lost, and that those that are extant would have required personal explanations to be understood accurately. And so the first task that lies before the historian is to examine into the genuineness of all the letters, to endeavour to arrange them chronologically, and to divine the circumstances in which they were written. This must be done by examining the letters one by one, as Archbishop Benson has done, but the judgment of the whole result must be suspended until the entire task has been accomplished, for later work may throw light on earlier. This Archbishop Benson was not able to do. He has written much on the genuineness of the letters and on the chronology of the events; but there is no connected statement of his reasons and conclusions. We accordingly find in the book numerous inconsistencies, both as to minute details and as to some of the principal ideas. Thus, in regard to details, the Archbishop speaks of the first Epistle to Virgins, ascribed to Clement, as "a work of the second century, and probably of the first half of it." But he appends to this note a reference to Lightfoot, probably inserted later, in which the epistle is ascribed to the third century. Again, in referring to O. Ritschl, he remarks, "But when he says that it broke out as a new perception in Ep. 43, he not only overlooks the early Ep. 33...." But in one of the passages in O. Ritschl to which the Archbishop refers not only does Ritschl not overlook Ep. 33, but he discusses it and Ep. 34. To take another instance in the later portion of the book, the Archbishop says, "Salonina, the wife of Gallienus, whom his father Valerian immediately associated with himself, in this October was both a Cornelia and a Christian." But a few pages further on the certainty vanishes into probability:

"Valerian became severely anti-Christian, but we have just seen that Salonina, the wife of his son Gallienus, who at this juncture, succeeded with him to the honours of Consul, Imperator, Cæsar and Augustus, was probably a Christian and of the same great house as the last Bishop."

And in a subsequent passage the assertion is again treated as only probable. These inconsistencies are numerous; but they do not much diminish the value of the book. The Archbishop has in entering into all details relating to Cyprian shown admirable scholarship and produced many highly valuable elucidations, which will be of great help to the future editor or biographer of that father.

In what we may designate as the historical narrative of the work we seem to notice a difference. In his own preface the Archbishop says:—

"I hope that in this study I have not ever been unmindful of the present, and yet have not committed what I hold to be a grievous fault in a historian, the reading of the present into the past."

In the earliest portion of his work he is singularly straightforward in preventing the ideas of the present from affecting his exposition of the past. He exhibits a strong sense of historical veracity. But when he comes to those questions in which he feels a deep personal interest, he allows his judgment to be warped, and he is no longer the scholar or historian, searching only for the truth, but the polemical prelate defending his own position and that of his Church against all adversaries with considerable vehemence.

The doctrine which occupies most space in the book is that of the unity of the Church. He thus quotes Cyprian's account of the matter:—

"The characteristic danger of the age when Christianity is for the first time widely accepted is the presentment of old error under Christian forms. Such danger can be detected only by distinct conceptions as to the abode of truth, clearness as to the Scriptural idea of unity. These are not far to seek. When the Lord gave Peter his commission, 'Whatsoever thou shalt bind shall be bound,' and then renewed the commission to all the Apostles, 'Whosesoever sins ye remit they are remitted,' it is obvious that He placed all alike upon the same level, yet, by first addressing Peter alone, He indicated the Oneness or Unity of the commission itself. So ever since, this tangible bond of the Church's unity is her one united episcopate, an Apostleship universal yet only one—the authority of every bishop perfect in itself and independent, yet not forming with all the others a mere agglomeration of powers, but being a tenure upon a totality, like that of a shareholder in some joint property."

The Archbishop adds in his own words, "Such is his statement of the historic and existent conditions as against the threatening schism." The reader might imagine that the words attributed to Cyprian are a translation from him, but this is not the case. Here and elsewhere the Archbishop encloses within marks of quotation what is a mere paraphrase, and the reader has no means of knowing whether the quotation is really a translation or not. In the passage which the Archbishop paraphrases there is no mention at all of "an Apostleship universal," nor of the "authority of every bishop perfect in itself." The translation of the passage, as given in the Oxford version, runs thus:—

"For the blessed Apostle Paul teaches this same thing, and manifests the sacrament of unity thus speaking; There is One Body, and One Spirit, even as ye are called in One Hope of your calling; One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism, One God. This unity firmly should we hold and maintain, especially we Bishops, presiding in the Church, in order that we may approve the Episcopate itself to be one and undivided. Let no one deceive the Brotherhood by falsehood; no one corrupt the truth of our faith by a faithless treachery. The Episcopate is one; it is a whole, in which each enjoys full possession. The Church is likewise one."

It is evident that the Archbishop has put much into Cyprian which is not to be found in this passage.

He expresses his opinion in regard to Cyprian's services to the cause of unity in this form:—

"Cyprian formulated the 'Theory' as Brahe, Copernicus, or Newton gave the 'Theory' of the Solar System. He 'constructed the Hypothesis'; he 'superinduced the conception upon the facts.' The conception was that the one undivided episcopate constituted not the authority only, but the unity of the Church. Then that followed which follows always in science. The conception 'is a secret, which once uttered, cannot be recalled, even though it be despised by those to whom it is imparted. As soon as the leading term of a new theory has been pronounced and understood, all the phenomena change their aspect. There is a standard to which we cannot help referring them.'"

And he adds that "still that is the 'Theory' which underlies Christendom to-day." This theory is, according to the Archbishop, antagonistic on the one hand to Puritanism in its various forms and on the other hand to Romanism. "Cyprian and his times," he says, "were as innocent of presbyterian and of congregational as they were of papal catholicity." Accordingly, the Archbishop deals severely with both sets of antagonists. Otto Ritschl wrote a book on Cyprian and the constitution of the Church at the instigation of Harnack, and Harnack himself wrote an article on the letters of the Roman clergy of the time. The Archbishop discusses these in the most trenchant style. Of Ritschl he says:—

"But the whole scheme may be characterized as a string of assumed probabilities which have been already negatived by ascertainable facts. The importance assigned to the illiterate Epistle Eight is necessary to the theory, but is wholly unwarrantable."

Of Harnack he says:—

"In the last paragraph I have thought it only right to place before readers such a web of ingenuity spun by so distinguished a scholar. It is the meeting-point of the extremes, Presbyterian Teutonism and Ultramontanism. For I need not add that the supposed position is laid down as a truly historical and logical step from episcopacy toward the supremacy of Rome."

In these remarks the Archbishop never realizes the function of the scholar. Otto Ritschl's work was an investigation. So was Harnack's. The scholar is indifferent whether his results turn out favourable to Presbyterianism or episcopacy, to paganism or Christianity. He seeks simply to ascertain facts and to divine the causes of the facts. And if he makes mistakes, they are mistakes of intellect. But the polemical divine is fighting for what he conceives to be at the present moment a matter of life and death. And he sees in every one who takes another view than his own a bitter antagonist not free from impure motives. Thus the Archbishop says of Ritschl, "Ritschl's quotation is unconsciously not quite candid." There is no question of candour here. The whole point turns on the meaning of "convenientibus in unum pluribus sacerdotibus." The Archbishop thinks that the words mean "because many prelates happened at that time to be present." And he explains, "Now here Cyprian plainly seems to say that he felt obliged to take the opportunity of 'many bishops meeting' to hold 'a Council' in order to arrange." Ritschl translated as the Oxford translation does: "We deemed it necessary, dearest brother, to assemble and hold a Council, whereat many prelates were gathered together."

But the epithets applied to Ritschl are mild compared with those showered on Roman Catholics. They naturally argue that if the unity depends on the unity of the episcopate, the unity of the episcopate depends on its having one head, the Bishop of Rome. The reference to St. Peter in the passage paraphrased by the Archbishop suggests this thought. And a transcriber of a MS. of Cyprian's treatise inserted a sentence or two which gave deliberate expression to the thought. Roman Catholics are unwilling to acknowledge this to be an interpolation or to strike it out of the text, for, at any rate according to their ideas, it contains the truth. The Archbishop rails against this conduct. He calls the interpolations "the grossest forgery in literature." He says that there "never was a viler fraud than the inventor's," that "these interpolations can never have been meant as honest paraphrases," and that "singular, hateful, and in its time effective, has been this forgery as a Papal aggression upon history and literature"; and he concludes with a general denunciation: "This is the true 'Charter of the Investiture of the Papacy' and as authentic as other documents in that cartulary." He expends an immense amount of research on these interpolations, tracks them through all the MSS. in which they occur and all the editions in which they are printed, and assails all who have ventured to defend them. We should think that the efforts will prove quite useless. The Roman Catholic does not base his creed on Cyprian or any other father of the Church. He is glad to find it in Cyprian, but if Cyprian be against him, so much the worse for Cyprian and not for his Church.

The Archbishop's rancour turns up in all parts of the book against the Abbé Freppel, who has published lectures on Cyprian delivered in the Sorbonne, and Johannes Peters, a Roman Catholic who has written a life of the saint, and against all Ultramontanes. Here are a few selected remarks on Freppel and Peters: "See a very profligate blazon of that theory as a historic fact in Freppel." "Dr. J. Peters writes a shameless comment on this passage." After noticing a summary by Peters of a letter, the Archbishop adds, "Mgr. Freppel alone could outdo this, and he does." "This almost incredible juggle is from Freppel's tenth lecture."

It may be noticed that the Archbishop in employing abusive language is imitating Stephen and Cyprian. "Stephen" (the Bishop of Rome), says the Archbishop,

"asserted in it the apostolic authority of a distinct tradition for the Roman usage, magnified the chair of Peter, and vituperated Cyprian as 'a false Christ, a false apostle, a treacherous worker.' Lamentable language: yet Cyprian's qualification of dissentient colleagues as 'Fautors of Antichrist' and 'Traitors to the Church' laid him open to it."

The Archbishop's instinct for historical veracity leads him to bring out a circumstance of the Cyprianic age in connexion with bishops which at first he seems unwilling to accept, but which he finally accepts fully and clearly, and he evidently thinks that this age has to make an advance in the direction indicated. He says of Cyprian:—

"He himself enumerates more than once the requisites of a regular episcopate as three, and says that they were regarded in Africa as essentials; first, the choice of the neighbouring bishops of the province assembled at the see; secondly, the suffrage, that is, the presence and support of the Plebes at that choice; thirdly, the judgment of God."

But he immediately modifies this statement by saying that "it is probable that such a call by acclamation superseded further election"—in other words, that the bishop was elected by the laity. As he proceeds in his work the Archbishop becomes more positive as to this matter. "The bishops," he says,

"were not a college with power to invite or coopt or to increase their numbers at their pleasure. It was the Christian plebes which to every individual bishop was the fountain of his honour. It was they who by the 'aspiration of God' addressed to him the call to enter on the inheritance of that priesthood and the dispensation of that grace. On them rested also the responsibility and duty of withdrawing from him and his administrations if he were a sinner.'

Further on he puts the matter concisely and definitely: "The laity elected: the neighbouring bishops assented and ordained."

The Archbishop does not seem to be so fond of the clerus as of the plebes or laity. He has several hits at the clergy. Here is a warning for innovating clerics:—

"The spirit of Novatus illustrates itself in those presbyters of our own who, if they could, would repel from communion, celebrate or withhold marriage or funeral rites, or fix the age of confirmation, on their own judgment; who revolutionise ritual without respect to either Bishop or 'Plebes'; who admit to vows, direct the persons who take them, and pretend to dispense from them."

The second ecclesiastical subject on which the Archbishop spends an immense amount of pains and which occupies a large space in his book is that of rebaptism. But the upshot here is curious: Cyprian, the man of God, the holy, devout, self-sacrificing bishop, goes entirely wrong; Stephen, the arrogant, insolent, worldly Bishop of Rome, hits on the course which ultimately receives the sanction of the Church and of the Archbishop. And Cyprian not merely errs, but he drags a whole council with him into his error. This is how the Archbishop relates the fact: "Such was that house of bishops. The result it reached was uncharitable, anti-scriptural, uncatholic — and it was unanimous." The Archbishop indulges in reflections on this subject, somewhat vague, indeed, but calculated to exercise the minds of the ecclesiastics of the present day.

In the Archbishop's treatment of this subject we see how difficult it is for the ecclesiastical mind to throw itself into the past. The Archbishop evidently conceives that in the third century bishops could only have two opinions on rebaptism, either that it was right or that it was wrong. And so he has in our opinion misinterpreted letters of Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria, on this matter, which have come down to us in Eusebius. The Archbishop says, "It seems clear, then, that he agreed, as did the two Roman presbyters, with Stephen's theory." Most who have discussed the letters have come to the conclusion that it is probable that he did not agree with Stephen's theory. The fact is that the matter is by no means clear either one way or the other, but the probability is on the side of his belief in rebaptism. The Archbishop bases his inference on a letter which Dionysius wrote to Xystus. In this letter a third point of view is presented. One of the brethren came to Dionysius and said that he felt great grief that he had been baptized by a heretic in a way that was full of impiety and blasphemy. And Dionysius answered him that he should not trouble his mind about the matter, for that a man who had for a long time enjoyed all the benefits of a genuine Christian did not require baptism, as baptism was really a renewal from the beginning of the Christian profession. There is no question here of rebaptizing a man who leaves heretics and enters or re-enters the Church.

The Archbishop's work on these topics seem to us very much like lost labour. He has merely gone over again the work done by Sage in the beginning of last century, and by Poole in the middle of this; and wherein he differs from Poole, it is not unlikely that Poole's opinions would be held by his Church to be sounder than those of the Archbishop. At the same time the scholarship of the Archbishop is quite first-rate, and he has really accumulated all that can be said in behalf of the contentions that he advances.

It is evident from the earlier and later parts of the book that, if the Archbishop had resolved to reproduce the times of Cyprian, and bring a vivid picture of the men and thoughts of those days before his readers without mingling modern ideas with them, he would have succeeded in no ordinary degree. He exhibits a strong individuality. His style is rugged and picturesque, occasionally sprinkled with strange words, but always impressive and intense. He had naturally a passion for the exact truth. And his scholarship was accurate, thorough, and unwearied in its efforts to get to the foundations of things. The book therefore, notwithstanding its defects, will attract attention, will well repay perusal, and will prove highly suggestive. We add three specimens of his style. He thus describes Carthage :—

"Faintly then we may picture to ourselves a material something not wholly unlike what Carthage was. Scarcely any city yields so many scenes. The streets gathering themselves in unique symmetry to the feet of sudden steeps and many-tinted marble heights, or opening full on the glistening quays and the breathless harbour : graceful hills about it crowned with shrines and villas, great levels spreading in chase or garden ; low 'difficult hills' with 'artificial passages,' which yoked the neck of its foreland ; the vast lake where navies of commerce and of pleasure rode close to the streets, severed by a thread from the open sea ; mountain crests in snow watching from the distances ; through all and over all the keen light and intense blue of Africa."

Here is a picture derived from Cyprian of the bishops who for a time helped to constitute the unity of the Church :—

"Not only had he from the first to bear 'contumely toward his office'; not only did opponents, the five presbyters and others, 'turbulent men whom he could scarcely rule,' render his administration difficult ; the glaring abuses of the episcopal office were yet harder to cope with. Socially known as leading men, but unprovided with material independence, or with position equal to that of a provincial magistracy, some bishops were engrossed in agriculture, some absent in commerce, some even engaged in usury. There was the free-living bishop actually enriched by the opportunities of his post, ready to abjure the faith on the prospect of danger, ready to resume his office when peril was past. There was the immoral bishop on the verge of excommunication. Some were secure in their position though notorious for their frauds in the bazaar, or their complicity in the slave-trade of the Sahara. Some again were too ignorant to prepare their catechumens for baptism, or to avoid heretical phrases in their public prayers, too indifferent even to abstain from using in their liturgies the compositions of well-known heretics. Cold and dark are the shades which are flung athwart the bright tracts and around the glowing lights of the scenes of this early church life. If it was possible for such men to be bishops we can understand how among their presbyters they tolerated the makers of idols and the compounders of incense, or among their laity astrologers and theatrical trainers."

The Archbishop has portrayed the last days of Cyprian with much vivacity. Here is a portion of the description :—

"The smooth paved road was deep and silent with dust, as they emerged from the dark close streets on the luxuriant plain. Among the date palms ripening for the gathering, and high above the silver olives, on whose fruit the final bloom was just appearing, the cypresses towered black and still. The stubble of the reaped corn was standing deep, the vines had been relieved of their burdens, the grassy slopes were white with the long summer, and the vast carpets of dazzling flowers had faded, all but the invincible dark green asphodel. Beyond the wide and peerless tract of vegetation were the glowing hills, dense with brushwood of cistus and cytisus, myrtle and lentisk, gaps opening into the world's cornfields, and the solemn aqueduct bringing rivers of living water from mountains leagues away. How much of natural things filled the old man's eye we know not — he was beyond caring for little things, but no man knows whether those things are little. Certainly he had not lost that humorous observation which has sometimes caught us unexpectedly in gravest moments."

The book is printed with great accuracy. There are a few mistakes such as occur in every work, as, for instance, "Autolych." is set down as a contraction for Autolycus, and "Huelsan" is printed for Huelsen. There is a wretched index of works quoted, in which nearly every English writer is omitted, as Kaye, Poole, Wallis, Marshall, and some of the best German authors, as Schwarze. Some books which have been recently published, such as those of Goetz on Cyprian, were not used by the Archbishop in his work, and therefore no note is taken of them.

The Flight of the Eagle. By Standish O'Grady. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

In a preface which does not err on the side of modesty, Mr. O'Grady tells us that "there is probably an Art as well as a Science of History. If that be so, the present work may be regarded as an experiment in that kind of composition, a kind which demands the employment of more than one or two mental faculties on the part both of the reader and of the writer."

Unfortunately these mental faculties are not enumerated, and it may be for the lack of one demanded of the reader that this work appears to be a failure regarded as a work of art, though Mr. O'Grady has brought to its making so profound a knowledge of the period he treats that it is interesting. Like one or two of the same writer's earlier books, this story of the youth of Red Hugh O'Donnell is spoilt by diffuseness, slipshod English, and, above all, by the absence of that first principle of art, selection.

Mr. O'Grady has selected nothing—neither his incidents, his point of view, his adjectives, nor the public for which his book is intended ; it is neither a history, a romance, a work for serious students, nor a book for boys. From the slanginess of its diction it may be supposed to be intended to appeal to the young, yet its real value can only be appreciated by those who already know more of Elizabethan Ireland than does the average schoolboy, for the tale is (or ought to be)

"an actual historic episode, told with hardly a freer use of the historical imagination than is employed by the more popular and picturesque of our professed historians. There is, however, this difference between my method and theirs, viz., that while they write directly, I aim at a similar result through a certain dramatization. The same method has been adopted, I think very effectively, by Carlyle, at times, in his history of Frederick the Great."

Mr. O'Grady has steeped his mind in the history of Elizabethan Ireland, and therefore all that he writes of it has value ; but the knowledge of what to leave out is not his, and his reader's interest is diverted from the entrapment, captivity, and twice attempted flight of Hugh by digressions dealing with episodes yet more exciting. The history of Ireland has few more sympathetic figures than the gallant Hugh O'Donnell ; but the Viceroy who decoyed him possessed a personality as remarkable and a more dramatic destiny. The betrayer of O'Donnell was himself betrayed more basely, and Mr. O'Grady diverts our sympathy from the unstained captivity of the hostage to the fatal imprisonment of poor Perrot, and into this digression he weaves another in the complete history of the family, career, crime, mutilation, imprisonment, and "emergence of the noseless one."

At last we get back to Red Hugh in Dublin Castle, but not to stay ; we are taken to London to study the real character of Elizabeth and her policy, and to hear about her toothache, the massacre of Rathlin, the alliances and amours of that "much married man," Hugh O'Neill, and the fate of a score of chieftains. These and a hundred other matters which have no place here obscure the story and disperse the reader's sympathies, with the result that the Eagle fails to impress his imagination.

No doubt it is "awfully hard" to select any one among the many heroes of Elizabethan Ireland, the period is so dramatic, the personages so picturesque—English courtiers in "copious collars," Irish soldiers "with dreadfully long sleeves," spurred and belted heroes walking with step "quick and light, but awfully assured." No one destiny was pre-eminently dramatic, for "the stormy battle-axe business" was going on in every province, and there was scarcely a family of distinction which had not its traitor to blush for, its martyr to adore, its captive to support, its fugitive to conceal. Ties of friendship, neighbourhood, and policy united border Irish with English of the Pale ; rivalries divided kinsmen at one time, interests united enemies at another ; everywhere there was trickery and double-dealing ; treachery and the fear of treachery went hand in hand with barbarous ferocity.

Men were roughhewn, moulded by great and terrible events ; virtues and vices alike rose to the surface and flourished in the same soil ; even the noblest characters were marred by ugly stains, and Mr. O'Grady has done wisely in choosing for his hero a youth who had not yet revenged himself upon his enemies. But at nineteen years of age Hugh Roe was surely something more mature than the "innocent boy," the "lad," of Mr. O'Grady's imagination. Four years earlier he was already "an object of keen and carnivorous interest to the higher powers," and was esteemed a lad of too great promise to remain at liberty. At fifteen he was old enough to think and to feel—indeed, he was already married—and the towers of Dublin Castle were suggestively adorned with the heads of his countrymen. He and his fellow prisoners "beguiled the time only by lamenting to each other their troubles and listening to the sentences passed on the high-born nobles," say the Four Masters ; and the bitterness of his heart is revealed by the fact that this intelligent young man did not profit by the years of his captivity to learn the English language. Furthermore, it will be remembered that in the third winter the "ordinary rope of commerce" was conveyed into the refectory of the hostages, and that the three youths O'Donnell, O'Gallagher, and Mac Sweeny escaped one wild December night and were piloted by friends to Glendalough, whence O'Gallagher and Mac Sweeny reached O'Byrne's country. But Red Hugh, like a more famous warrior, was vulnerable in the feet; his long imprisonment had made him delicate. Too footsore to stand, he perforce trusted a less tried but nearer neighbour, who, at this appeal to his hospitality, "stood quaking between the devil and the deep sea, between black dishonour on the one hand and the soundless abysses of treason on the other. Dreadfully agitated and uncertain," he did at last receive the fugitive, and strove to steer a middle course by sending a slow messenger to Dublin Castle and a swift one to O'Byrne; but the plan miscarried, and all Hugh gained by his desperate attempt was stricter confinement and irons. His new companions, Henry and Art, sons of Shane O'Neill, were also escaped hostages, punished with chains, and for a whole year the unhappy youths suffered together, till, in December, a file somehow passed into their possession, and on Christmas Eve "the hope of Tir-Connell, every nerve taut, pale, sweaty, with knit brows and bent head, fiercely rasped and rasped, the atoms flying, scintillating in the lamplight," till himself and his comrades were unchained. With no "rope of commerce," but with "serica tela," the hostages got out of the Birmingham tower, and Mr. O'Grady gives a vivid description of their desperate escape along the main sewer and through the icy waters of the moat. Again they fled into Wicklow, and this time none was recaptured, though "of the sons of Shane none ever got rightly over the horizon," for Henry O'Neill only passed from one prison to another, and Art succumbed to the hardship of that bitter flight in winter. O'Donnell was scarcely happier than they, for

> "out of prison, darkness, and the jaws of death where the son of Shane perished, Red Hugh ascended, a historic star, bright but baleful, splendid indeed, but disastrous exceedingly, perplexing a great monarch and many vice-monarchs and provincial presidents, and from horrid locks shook pestilence and war."

Happily all this was in the future, and at the time of his flight Red Hugh was something more human and sympathetic than a bright but baleful star, and Mr. O'Grady has put together a capital description of his flight from Wicklow to Tyrconnell, a dangerous and painful journey in which he was helped by English settlers as well as native Irish. It will be remembered that the cold nights on the Wicklow hills which killed Art O'Neill nearly cost Hugh his life too, and that his feet were so badly frostbitten that he was crippled for months, and during his flight had to be lifted into the saddle and out of it, and on his return to his home was in the hands of the surgeons during March and April. But in May his father made way for the "innocent boy," who, having been installed O'Donnell with the usual ceremonies, proceeded to make war upon his neighbour Tirlogh Suineach, and to lay waste the country round about Strabane.

Mr. O'Grady takes leave of him at the more idyllic moment of his home-coming, when the fierce young eagle of the north appeared to him "so fair and so gentle that at the first I said, This surely is a maid dressed in the attire of a man." We are not able to share that vision, remembering that O'Donnell was now as old as Essex when he became master of the horse, or Anjou at the time of the siege of Rochelle. At nineteen Henry VIII. was married, and Mary Stuart the widow of a husband two years younger than herself; while Edward was but fifteen when he was suffered to take upon himself the responsibility of appointing the successor who at seventeen died for her weakness in accepting the misplaced honour. James of Scotland was a ruler of experience at nineteen. Charles IX. of France and Henry of Navarre were both married at this age; it was a day of young men, and, above all, of young rulers, and Hugh had from his infancy been taught to believe himself the foretold deliverer of Ireland.

But if Mr. O'Grady cannot convince his readers of Hugh's innocent boyhood, he can tell them a vast deal about Elizabethan Ireland, and though this book is far from being one of his most successful stories, it is full of interesting information, and furnishes a vivid picture of Dublin and the cities of the Pale.

British Moralists: being Selections from Writers, principally of the Eighteenth Century. Edited, with an Introduction and Analytical Index, by L. A. Selby-Bigge, M.A. 2 vols. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

In these two volumes Mr. Selby-Bigge has brought together a most useful collection of extracts from the British moralists. It would be easy to object to the insertion of extracts from quite minor authors, themselves disciples of thinkers of the second class, or to complain that while some major writers are represented, others are excluded because their work is on a "totally different level of thought from that adopted by the other moralists of the period"; but Mr. Selby-Bigge himself has frankly anticipated all this kind of criticism. Having discovered by experience that any selection must seem unsatisfactory, he finally abandoned himself, as he tells his readers, "to the guidance of the principle of utility in its vaguest form, and simply tried to make a book which would be useful, and fairly representative of the British moral philosophy of the eighteenth century." In this he has succeeded. The writers he selects from are, for the most part, writers who, though distinctly worth perusal, are not likely to be read through by any but specialists in the period; while students who are not specialists may yet desire to correct the traditional estimate of a moralist by occasional consultation of the sources. The period is really a very fertile and interesting period in ethical thinking—probably more so than the present century will turn out to have been. If study of it did nothing else, it would at least set us free from the narrow and wearisome antithesis of "Intuitional" and "Utilitarian." No doubt we have to some extent got away from this on our own lines; but it could almost equally well be corrected by recurrence to the past, and, merely for the sake of historical insight, it is worth while to know that the past was not dominated by it.

The introduction, which "only pretends to be what it is called," and is not too long, contains several interesting and judicious remarks. Mr. Selby-Bigge divides the moralists of the eighteenth (and latter part of the seventeenth) century broadly into the "intellectual" and the "sentimental" (or "moral sense") schools. Both alike he opposes to the "selfish" school, which would admit no principle of disinterested action in human nature. From the "cynic" and the "sceptic" in morals he distinguishes the "satirist"; for satire, as he points out, "so far as it is an exposure of the sham, rests upon and assumes a reality of some kind or other in virtue." Mandeville he regards as properly a satirist with a taste for paradox rather than an ethical theorist, and this seems on the whole the correct view. Or at least Mandeville's ethical theory is psychology of ethics, and not a moral (or immoral) doctrine. This seems to be the account he himself gives of it in the 'Letter to Dion.' Of the moralists proper in the eighteenth century Mr. Selby-Bigge remarks that they "concentrate their attention on the phenomena of the normal moral consciousness in a cool and impartial manner which reminds us of Aristotle, and had not notably been exhibited since Aristotle." There is perhaps, he goes on to say, "no body of ethical writing which within its own sphere"—namely, the moral consciousness of the "plain man"—"can compare for originality and sincerity with the work of this period." Kant, as he says afterwards,

> "would be a good deal better understood if he were read in connexion with the British Moralists, with whom he was well acquainted. There is little in him that is not in them, though his general attitude towards ethics is a different and more distinguished one."

The high estimate formed of Adam Smith's contributions to ethics is noteworthy, and in particular the observation that "incidentally he makes considerable contributions to the metaphysics of the subject," going, as he does, beyond the "facile individualism" of his age.

The volumes are furnished with an excellent index. At the end of the second volume is a "bibliographical note," giving the dates and principal works of a large number of British ethical writers of the period, "from which those who take pleasure in making lists of 'the best books' may easily compile a rival selection." The first volume is devoted to the "sentimental school" (Shaftesbury, Hutcheson, and Butler), together with Adam Smith and Bentham. The second embraces mainly the "intellectual school" (Samuel Clarke, Price, Balguy, Cudworth, and Wollaston), with the "theological utilitarians" (Brown, J. Clarke, and Paley) in an appendix, extracts being also supplied for convenience of reference from Hobbes, Locke, and Mandeville. "Kames and Gay"—the "Rev. Mr. Gay" who suggested the principle of association to Hartley—"are included as more or less independent critics." That the classification is only approximative is evident from the distribution of the names.

Butler, for example, did not repudiate the "intellectualist" view, though his distinctive appeal is no doubt to "human nature" rather than to the "fitness of things." Still it is on the whole the best classification that could have been made, and it does not, of course, pretend to be exhaustive.

Histoire Ancienne des Peuples de l'Orient Classique.—Les Premières Mêlées des Peuples. Par G. Maspero. (Hachette & Cie.)

The Struggle of the Nations, Egypt, Syria, and Assyria. By G. Maspero. Edited by A. H. Sayce. Translated by M. L. McClure. (S.P.C.K.)

The second volume of the illustrated edition of M. Maspero's great work on Oriental history will appeal to a large class of readers by reason of the vast field which it covers, no less than the lengthy period of time of which it treats. Speaking quite generally, it begins with the period a little anterior to Abraham, and ends with that of Ahab, King of Israel; it describes Egyptians, Babylonians, Elamites, and Syrians, as well as all the neighbouring nations and peoples, and traces their history with care and judgment. The style of the narrative is clear, and as long as M. Maspero is dealing with his own subject—Egypt—his work is as good as one can expect. There is an abundance of reference to the literature of the various countries, both ancient and modern; indeed, it is surprising to see what a number of "authorities" exist on such matters in these days. Ancient documents, Babylonian, Assyrian, and the like, figure with profuseness throughout the book, and the drawings of M. Faucher-Gudin are admirable. M. Maspero endeavours to state the results of the latest researches, either in his text or notes, and although it is not quite clear what principle guides him in selecting his information when derived at second hand, no fault can be found with him for lack of diligence. It is the fate of all general books of this nature to be imperfect in certain sections, the imperfection being caused by no fault of the writer; as an example of what we mean we need only ask the reader to compare M. Maspero's account of the Tell el-Amarna tablets and their contents with the complete translations of the same recently published by Winckler, when it will be clear what substantial additions could at once be made to it. It would, however, be ungenerous to insist much on such points. It is tolerably clear that M. Maspero is quite ready to modify by the light of recent research whatever views he may have held about the historical accuracy of the Bible, and it is a distinctly pleasing feature of the French edition of his book that he succeeds in treating burning questions such as the Hyksos, the Exodus, and the like in such a way that neither the orthodox nor the "advanced thinker" can be offended. But if we trust the evidence which is to be obtained by reading between the lines, we may safely assume that all his sympathy is with those who are trying to draw out the true history which is in the Bible from under a mass of misreadings, mistakes, corrupt texts, and interpolations; the careful reader will see that M. Maspero has himself done so little towards this much-to-be-desired end.

With the translation of the second volume of M. Maspero's work, which the S.P.C.K. have issued under the title 'The Struggle of the Nations,' we cannot express ourselves satisfied, though in form and appearance it is an admirable book. What every one must complain of are the unwarranted alterations in M. Maspero's narrative and notes—alterations which we are disposed to attribute not to want of skill on the part of the translator, Mrs. McClure, but to some meddler whose intention has been to correct the author's heterodoxy. A few mistakes in the translation are the result probably of carelessness, e.g.:—

"Sargon the Elder is credited with having subdued Elam; the kings and vicegerents of Lagash had measured forces with Anshan as well as with Uru and Larsam."—P 30.

"When they began to look back with regret to the 'fleshpots of Egypt' and the abundance of food there, another signal miracle was performed for them."—P. 445.

"On croyait que Sargon l'Ancien avait soumis Suse; les rois et les vicaires de Lagash s'étaient mesurés contre elle avec des chances variées, ainsi que ceux d'Ourou et de Larsam."

"Puis, comme ils regrettaient 'les marmites à viande de l'Egypte et tout ce qu'ils y mangeaient à satiété,' il avait imploré l'Éternel, et l'Éternel lui avait promis de faire pleuvoir le pain et la chair."

On p. 443 M. Maspero, quoting the Bible, says, "la mer Rouge s'ouvrit," but in the English we have, "the Sea parted its waters"; on p. 442 the French has, "il tua le brutal et s'alla cacher au Sinai," and the English, "and slew him in his anger, shortly afterwards fleeing into the land of Midian." Many such examples could be quoted. But now we must turn to a few of the passages where the translator makes M. Maspero to say what he never said, and to minimize, alter, and do away with many of his own settled opinions. "Verax" has already called attention to the matter, so the following instances may suffice:—

"The mention of the covenant of Abraham with Abimelech belongs to the oldest part of the national tradition, and is given to us in the Jehovistic narrative. Many critics have questioned the historical existence of Melchizedek."—P. 66.

"We are told that when the Hebrews left Ramses....."—P. 72.

"I have limited myself here to a summary of the Biblical narrative, without entering into a criticism of the text, which I leave to others."—P. 443, note 1.

"I have given my reasons for assigning the Exodus to this period."—P. 444.

"It has long been recognised that it had a special reference."—P. 448.

"Many critics reject the second version."—P. 720.

"Which some critics would like to....."—P. 723.

"Is probably an amplification of the somewhat obscure wording employed in 2 Sam. viii. 1."—P. 724.

"Is supposed by some to be interpolated."—P. 728.

"Would consider this to have been inserted in the time of Hezekiah."—P. 729.

"They contend that the original words of Solomon are confined to vers. 12 and 13."—P. 747.

"The actual words appear to be of a later date; but even if that be the case, it proves that, at the time they were written, the king still possessed his full sacerdotal powers."—P. 749.

"Is probably a corruption of Rezón."—P. 778.

"La notice des négociations d'Abraham avec Abimélek appartient au vieux fonds de tradition nationale, et nous est parvenue par le rédacteur jéhoviste. La plupart des critiques admettent que Melkisédek n'a rien d'historique."

"La tradition rapportait qu'au moment où les Hébreux partirent de Ramsès....."

"Ici, comme plus haut, à propos d'Abraham et de Joseph, je me borne à résumer très brièvement le récit biblique, sans entrer dans le détail des origines: je renvoie pour les analyses du texte aux différents manuels publiés surtout en Allemagne."

"J'ai développé les raisons qui m'ont porté à reculer l'Exode jusqu'à cette époque."

"On a reconnu depuis longtemps qu'elle avait une portée plus générale."

"Les critiques sont unanimes à rejeter cette seconde version."

"Qui, de l'aveu de la plupart des critiques....."

"N'est certainement qu'une interprétation fautive du texte assez obscur de II Sam. viii. 1."

"Est en partie interpolé."

".....place l'éclosion de cette jolie légende au temps d'Ézéchias....."

"Que précèdent quelques-unes des paroles originelles de Salomon (12, 13)."

"Son discours actuel est une intercalation d'origine prophétique; il prouve, du moins, qu'au temps où il fut composé, vers la fin de l'époque royale, le roi possédait encore la plénitude du pouvoir sacerdotal."

"Peut n'être qu'une corruption du nom de Rézón."

Surely all unprejudiced persons will admit from the evidence here given that M. Maspero's text and notes have suffered much at the hands of his friends, but we must now say a word or two on the editor's notes and preface. Prof. Sayce repeats the statements which he made at the Church Congress in 1895 (see the Times, October 10th) to the effect that Mr. Pinches has discovered a mention of Chedorlaomer, Tidal, and Arioch in Babylonian tablets. We have made inquiries and have reason to believe that Prof. Sayce has been led astray. The facts are these. On two fragments of tablets of the Persian period, about B.C. 300, we find mentioned a name which cannot be read,* a name which may be transcribed by Tu-ud-khul-a, and a name (broken) which Mr. Pinches identifies with a name read in Accadian as Eri-aku or Erim-aku, and in Semitic as Arad-Sin or Rim-Sin. Mr. Pinches communicated these names to Prof. Schrader, who wrote a paper ('Ueber einen altorientalischen Herrschernamen'†) upon them at the end of 1895; but Schrader's opinions rested solely on second-hand knowledge, and were of little value, for he never saw the tablets. Similarly Prof. Sayce accepted Mr. Pinches's statements without, apparently, examining the fragments, and so what is at the best but a guess, or a theory, is gravely called a "discovery" in M. Maspero's book. The greatest living authority on Babylonian tablets holds the opinion that the two fragments formed part of tablets of an astrological nature wherein matters of various kinds were mentioned, from the price of garden stuff upwards; in any case, they have absolutely no historical value, for they belong to so late a period that they might well have been written by scribes who were conversant with the Hebrew narrative of Genesis as possessed by the Jews in Babylon about B.C. 300. Mr. Pinches read a paper upon this discovery in January, 1896, at the Victoria Institute, but, at the time of writing, it is not yet published, and favoured persons only have seen proofs of it, such proofs being marked as "under revision." It is a pity that M. Maspero has adopted the theory (see p. 39, note 6), and it is a greater pity that he has repeated Prof. Sayce's view that there is any reference to Melchizedek in the letters of Abdi-Khiba, King of Jerusalem, which were found at Tell el-Amarna; the reference is to the King of Egypt, and not to the "Most high God" (see Zimmern in Bezold's Zeitschrift, Bd. vi. p. 245 ff.; Winckler, 'Tell el-Amarna Letters,' p. 303). Other points ought to be mentioned, but this notice is already long, and we must conclude by expressing renewed regret that the good work of so able a scholar as M. Maspero should have received the treatment which it has received at the hands of those who have altered his text, mutilated his notes, and put into his mouth opinions which he does not hold.

* The identification of this name with the Ku-dur-nu-ukhga-mar of Khammurabi's letters (published by Scheil) is conjectural (see Zeitschrift fur Assyriologie, Bd. xi. p. 344).

† See Sitzungsberichte of the Berlin Academy, 1895, No. xli.

NEW NOVELS.

The Massarenes. By Ouida. (Sampson Low & Co.)

Todgers's, we know, could do it when it chose; and it must have been with something of the feeling indicated in that classical sentence that Ouida sat down to compose 'The Massarenes.' We can imagine her artistic soul—long vexed by the feeble, half-hearted toying with the baser elements of human nature in which a well-advertised school of modern fiction has for some years been finding a scope for its energies—saying to itself: "Go to; if the public likes this sort of thing, let us show it that in the purveyance of it the veterans of fiction are at least as deft as these young people who prate of modelling their style on French masters." Ouida certainly models her style on no French master, not even when she drops into the French language and talks about women with a past. Ouida's principal character is a duchess who has not only a past, but a present, and, as it appears, a future; and her past, present, and future are those of what the author delicately terms "a horizontale"—"they are called by a much coarser name out of doors." She is besides a liar and a spendthrift, ill-bred and heartless. There is an apophthegm in the book to the effect that "there is a class of sins which are well-bred; there is another class which is caddish." The sins of Lady Kenilworth—or the Duchess of Otterbourne, as she becomes in the course of the story—are all of the latter class. Yet Ouida seems to regard her as a fair average specimen of English ladies of high rank and ancient lineage. As a foil to her and to the society which she represents we have the family who, though they play, on the whole, a subordinate part, give their name to the story. William Massarene is an American millionaire, who, having emigrated in his youth from Ireland, has made a fortune by means more or less disreputable, and returns, still in the prime of life, to enjoy it in England. A coarse, illiterate brute, he is, of course, received with open arms by people of fashion and politicians. Lady Kenilworth launches him, bleeds him, and becomes his mistress, escaping a public scandal only through the chance of his being shot on his own doorstep by one of his early victims. Massarene leaves a daughter, who has been brought up in Europe with all the advantages that wealth can procure, and has turned into a young lady of the highest culture (she even talks Latin to her poor mother, who has made no advance in that respect since she milked the cows in Ireland), the strictest principles, and the purest type of beauty. Between her and Lady Kenilworth there is a natural antagonism, which in the hands of a really skilful novelist might have afforded an opportunity for some study of contrasted character; but, of course, one does not look for that kind of thing from Ouida, whose warmest admirers would hardly claim for her any very profound insight into the human heart. Indeed, she has not yet begun to be able to observe or conceive the most outward and obvious phenomena with accuracy, or she would not have told us on a certain occasion that "there was no wind" (thereby stultifying her own account of a train blocked by snow, for snow without wind never blocked a train in England) and five pages later made two people able to converse "only when the wind lulled, which was not very often," nor would she have made the Eton eight practise in February. Was this the same eight that once trained on venison and champagne at Christopher's?

Under Love's Rule. By Miss Braddon. (Simpkin, Marshall & Co.)

Miss Braddon in her latest novel castigates the rich, and conclusively demonstrates how weak and empty is their life when their money has gone. She seems to have studied the subject thoroughly. None but a student of the "high" and "smart" life of the day could sum up the feelings and ambition of the fashionable lady better than this: "Indeed, we are gradually getting into a really nice set—a set that it pays one to entertain thoroughly well, even if one does not get very intimate with them." The feather-brained hostess neglects her children, and her character is contrasted with that of her sister, who has not married a rich man, and who loves the children. It is curious to note how the writer reprobates the vulgar slang which the children learn from the servants, and yet speaks in her own narrative of a "cake in good cut," thereby committing the offence which she condemns. In one place Miss Braddon says ironically: "There is an innate vulgarity in children only to be eradicated by early association with smart people"; but it seems that the characteristic is not confined to those of tender years. The novel as a whole has little to recommend it. Though fluently and pleasantly written, it is composed of the slightest materials, and excites little more than passing interest. The best point in the book is the humour associated with the talk of children who are spoilt, badly brought up, though not ill-natured; and in these passages the reader will recognize the hand of a clever novelist, and of one, we may add, who is rapidly approaching the completion of her sixtieth novel.

The Jessamy Bride. By F. Frankfort Moore. (Hutchinson & Co.)

The historical novel will pass muster either if it deals with a period remote enough or personages obscure enough to allow fiction and fact to be blended without instant detection; or if the historical element is merely used as a framework in which to set the doings of purely imaginary people. But when an author peoples his story with personages whose careers are familiar in minute detail to many readers of average information, shifting the dates of real events, introducing fictitious and improbable events and motives, and generally transmogrifying a perfectly well-known history, the reader cannot but feel that a liberty is being taken with him. This, however, is what Mr. Moore has done in 'The Jessamy Bride.' He has taken for his hero no less a person than Goldsmith; has introduced all the best-known members of the Johnsonian circle; has transposed events in a reckless manner, putting, for instance, Baretti's trial after the first performance of 'She Stoops to Conquer,' which, of course, it really preceded by some four years; and has woven into the framework thus reconstructed an imaginary tale, in which the chief part is played by the Horneck family. For this purpose he not only depicts Goldsmith as consumed by an unconfessed passion for Miss Mary Horneck, the young lady to whom he once refers in one of his lighter pieces as "the jessamy bride" (whatever that may mean), and of whom, with her family, he is otherwise known to have been a friend, but also imagines the far more improbable circumstance of a similar affection for him on the part of the lady, as well as a previous indiscretion on her part from the consequences of which Goldsmith is the means of delivering her. Possibly some readers may like this sort of thing; to us it is irritating. Irritating, too, are the little parentheses in which the author communicates facts in the future career of his personages. Thus he makes Baretti say to Goldsmith, who has consulted him as to the choice of a fencing-master, "When you run your first man through, you need not ask me to attend the court as a witness to your pacific character"; and adds, "When the two did appear in court it was Goldsmith that had been called as a witness on behalf of Baretti." This would be clumsy in a work of pure fiction; but as all the world knows what did happen to Baretti, it would surely have been better to let the irony, such as it is, of the unlucky Italian's remark speak for itself. Independently of this, as we think it, vital mistake, the book is by no means a bad one. If Mr. Moore had but carried the fiction a little further, substituting John Jones for Oliver Goldsmith and Jane Smith for Mary Horneck, omitting one or two speeches too closely identified with actual people to be justly assigned to fictitious characters, and making the story a picture of an imaginary literary man's life in the last century, it would have been read with no feeling but pleasure. As it is, we feel that he has incurred the anathema pronounced on those who add to the word or diminish aught from it; for surely all that deals with Johnson or Goldsmith, Boswell or Garrick, is among the sacred books of literature.

The Whirlpool. By George Gissing. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

Mr. Gissing has often hesitated in his stories between the commonplace and the impassioned; yet even when he was most commonplace it has been easy to perceive how closely and faithfully he can reproduce the phenomena which have passed before his eyes, and how conscientiously he strives to place upon his canvas the figures and expressions which attract him. In his last novel he seems to have worked with greater perspicacity than before. His chief characters are more highly strung; he shows them more completely subservient to their temperaments, and more automatic under their physiological constraint. In much of his delineation he is successful, and his success would have been all the more apparent if he had kept his zeal within narrower limits. Clearly it does not help us to the analysis of a human character, however composite, to make a side-study of his landlord; and Mr. Gissing is always ready to drag in irrelevant side-studies. But he shows a distinct advance in his art.

Nell and the Actor. By Lilian Street. (Skeffington & Son.)

There are signs of subtle observation in this book in spite of a somewhat commonplace setting. The heroine is a perfectly uninteresting doll, for though she performs self-sacrificing acts and is quite estimable, her character is never made at all distinctive; her brother is likewise a type of the much exaggerated spoilt boy of feminine fiction. But the weakly sentimental doctor, with his long periods of self-repression after an outbreak of unmanly affection, is strongly conceived and remarkably direct and true. The author seems in her quite short sketch to penetrate into the inmost recesses of the man, and to show up the weak and transitory character of the love which, for the time, burns so fiercely and prompts him to the meanest actions. Also, in spite of an occasional vulgarity of note, there is a clever sketch of a light-headed young American girl, who seems very genuine. With a careful avoidance of melodrama and strong situations Miss Street ought to produce a good novel. This is a bad novel with some very good points in it.

The Episode of Alethea. By Isabel Clarke. (Innes & Co.)

This is a disappointing book, for it contains the elements of a good story which are allowed to run to waste. The relations of Gilbert Lennox and Alethea might be made much of in good hands, but here they lead to a most futile and absurd conclusion. To encumber Gilbert with an insane wife in the south of France is in itself a clumsy and well-worn device to make the chief characters unhappy; but all sympathy is diverted from them, first by Gilbert's inexplicable weakness in declaring his love and making his unpardonable proposal to Alethea, and then by Alethea's own indecision and her misplaced philanderings with him; and suicide is a violent solution of a difficulty even in a novel. The weakness of these two is bad art, not because of its immorality, but because the author seems so absolutely unconscious of it as to convey the impression by her method that it was meritorious. Another fault in the book is the author's inability to use her subsidiary characters: they all seem to come and go without any fixed object or utility. Even Morna, Alethea's consumptive sister, has no very appreciable part in the main story, and most of the others, though sometimes amusingly sketched, might just as well not be there at all. A good novel requires more directness and strenuous thought than Miss Clarke can have devoted to this.

The Faithful City. By Herbert Morrah. (Methuen & Co.)

This is an impressive tale which enforces attention in spite of a somewhat tiresome and long-winded method of narration. On beginning to read it, one is inclined to think that the whole idea is absurd of this city somewhere in South America, which forms a state by itself and is ruled as a republic by one man; but as the story proceeds the absurd aspect fades away, and the city is accepted without reference to its possibility. Mr. Morrah has indeed succeeded admirably in the difficult task of separating his scene from the ocean of reality, and making it stand as a solid fact by itself; and at the same time he conveys a suggestion of weirdness and horror as if he were presenting some tremendous fantasy of dreamland, until finally he convinces and enthrals the reader with his mysterious savages, his gigantic tower, and his uncompromising men and women. Probably one secret of the success of his method is his apparent carelessness to obtain conviction; the reader is simply thrust into this city, with its strange customs and mysterious oaths, as if the whole thing were a matter of course and required no explanation at all. This is a haunting, mysterious book not without an element of stupendous grandeur.

The Touchstone of Life. By Ella MacMahon. (Hutchinson & Co.)

When Miss MacMahon has got over the bombastic introduction of her hero in his first interview with the solicitor, and some rather feeble love-making by him on the banks of the Cam, she does well with her two chief characters, Ivor Clay and his half-brother Lord Sithrington. It is a fine idea to bring them to close quarters in the way she does (one of them being ignorant of the relationship) as Governor and Prime Minister of a colony, and both in love with the same woman. The Governor, the weaker of the two, is unexpectedly stiffened and ennobled by his struggle for love and political mastery, and is really the more interesting; for though he loses, he proves by his end that the contest had made him worthy to succeed. Indeed, the second part of the book is most vivid and exciting in all its details. Among other delightful features of the narrative there is a knowing and malicious old aunt who is most amusing.

Wilt Thou have this Woman? By J. Maclaren Cobban. (Methuen & Co.)

This is quite an old-fashioned novel, with all the paraphernalia of lost papers, a secret marriage, and an unrecognized son. There are the wicked cousin, the masculine but generous aunt, the sleuth hound of the law in the shape of a solicitor who makes great play with his single eyeglass and is an amateur of pictures (mark the modern touch!), the thief who walks in his sleep, and the grand situation at the end, when the son defends his mother on a charge of murder without knowing his relationship. As a corollary to all this the characters are no more like living characters than are pieces of wood; but that hardly interferes with the charm of the varied imbroglio. There is, of course, a certain amount of love-making, and one young lady seems to be rather badly treated in the end; but that part of the book is of an unimportant character, and need only be regarded as a piece of unavoidable business. The book may most confidently be recommended to the gentlemen who adapt plays for the Adelphi Theatre.

Joies d'Amour. Par Gyp. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

Gyp's novel is perhaps her best—sad, like all her longer stories. It is certainly the most complete of her books, conveying to the reader the exact impression that she wished to make. There is in 'Joies d'Amour' no person who has appeared in any other of Gyp's books, and the characters include some excellently drawn rich French and exotic snobs and a delightful dowager, full of indulgence for those who follow in her steps. In a young cavalry officer we seem to recognize what Petit Bob would become, if he turned out as well as could be expected. The moral, if it be allowable to seek in Gyp for morals, is the simple one that a woman's course is difficult if she has brains and nerves, for she will not pass happily through both youth and early middle life unless she loves, and, in love, is not likely to chance to fall on the man she needs. One happy married couple figure in the volume, but both are below the average in brain power.

De Toute son Ame. Par René Bazin. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

M. Bazin has done good work in several of his books which from time to time have had our praise, but his new novel is remarkably superior even to his previous excellent 'La Sarcelle Bleue' and 'Terre d'Espagne.' The novel before us is intensely sad, and full of teaching which will be helpful to what we here call "Christian Socialists," although the book is not apparently written with a distinct object of aiding any particular school of ideas. The scene is laid among the working class and the manufacturers of Nantes, but has less local colour than have M. Bazin's other books. The picture of the hatred existing between a portion of the working class and their employers, too general in France, is not unrelieved, and some pleasanter relations between the two classes are as well drawn as are the more painful portions of the book.

BOOKS ABOUT CHILDREN.

The Children. By Alice Meynell. (Lane.)—"To attend to a living child is to be baffled in your humour, disappointed of your pathos, and set freshly free from all the preoccupations." So says Mrs. Meynell, whose meaning is a little obscure. To our mind, to attend to clever children is to be in daily contact with little creatures whose opinions are formed irrespective of everything said, done, or written, and who rarely speak without saying something suggestive or stimulating. However, Mrs. Meynell has studied her children well, and the result is these attractive essays. "Time was when childhood was but borne with," she writes, but we do not quite know when that period was. It was certainly not in the days of Evelyn, whose infant son—"that pretty person," as Jeremy Taylor called him in his letter of condolence—has supplied her with the subject of a good essay. Poor little "pretty person"! He was born with quick parts, as the phrase then was, and his father at once began to quench the light of life in him by educating him with such frenzied haste that "at two and a half years of age he pronounced English, Latin, and French exactly, and could perfectly read in these three languages." After that

"he got by heart almost the entire vocabulary of Latin and French primitives and words, could make congruous syntax, turn English into Latin, and vice versâ, construe and prove what he read, and did the government and use of relatives, verbs, substantives, ellipses, and many figures and tropes, and made a considerable progress in Comenius's 'Janua,' and had a strong passion for Greek."

At the age of five he not unnaturally died. The child in him was destroyed almost in babyhood, and the man never lived. "They lost the timely perfection," writes Mrs. Meynell, "the while they were intent on their hopes." The essay 'Under the Early Star' is good too:—

"There is a tide in the affairs of children. Civilization is cruel in sending them to bed at the most stimulating time of dusk. Summer dusk especially is the frolic moment for children, baffle them how you may. They may have been in a pottering mood all day, intent upon all kinds of close industries, breathing hard over choppings and poundings. But when late twilight comes there comes also the punctual wildness."

This is well put; but "the heart is for saving what it can," and we are not sure that "the punctual wildness" is not caused by the knowledge that bedtime is at hand, and the wish to crowd intenser joy into the last moments. Mrs. Meynell herself seems to have a love for life "under the early stars." "Nothing in the world," she writes,

"is more uninteresting than eleven o'clock. It is the hour of mediocrity under the best conditions. .....Twelve has a dignity always, and everywhere its name is great. The noon of every day that ever dawned is in its place heroic; but eleven is worldly."

The reasons for this mysterious remark are not forthcoming.

Mr. Henry Smith, who has just published Steps to the Temple of Happiness (Sonnenschein & Co.), is much concerned because "books are being put into the hands of children which in many cases contain not one word of truth..... Fairy tales are not facts," he writes, and grieves that children are taught "what in after life will have to be unlearned." Unlearned, says Mr. Smith. "Grand old Martin Luther" said, "I would not for any money part with the wonderful stories which I have kept in my memory since my earliest childhood, or have met with in my progress through life." Mr. Smith's feeling is the reverse, and he assures us that "the sensible father endeavours to find gift-books free from tales of enchanters, hobgoblins, fairies, and impossible nonsense, believing that childhood is the time to impress on the mind moral truths and common sense." If Mr. Smith were a little more familiar with folk-tales he would recognize that they nearly always inculcate a moral. Cinderella promised to leave the ball-room before twelve, Red-Ridinghood promised not to speak to the wolf, Mrs. Bluebeard promised not to enter the forbidden room during her husband's absence. All broke their word, and all suffered. Why should not children learn the penalty of disobedience from a good folk-tale instead of from a dull commonplace story like 'Nina the Disobedient'? It is certain, too, that children will read fairy tales many times, and by no means certain that they will read Mr. Smith's stories even once.

In artistic parlance there is "a great deal of ground to let" in Mrs. Moulton's volume, In Childhood's Country (Bowden). In other words, large expanses of blank white paper confront the would-be reader. As to the verses themselves, we mainly feel that Mrs. Moulton has never penetrated into "Childhood's Country." Her verses will not appeal to youthful readers, nor yet be greatly liked by older ones, being much below the author's usually high level. The prettiest of them is perhaps 'O Latest Rose,' a rondeau. We do not like the illustrations, which are neither good nor decorative.

THE LIBRARIES OF FICTION.

The narrow pages of the "Autonym Library" (Fisher Unwin), which limit the lines to a maximum of six words, seem to have had the effect on Miss Constance Cotterell of compelling her to write in a jerky style. She tells her little story of An Impossible Person briskly, with a certain sarcastic humour which is rather excessive. It is a mistake in artistic tact to run down one's own characters too much. Far better is it to flatter the reader by letting him fancy that his own intelligence discovers the nature of the characters. Miss Cotterell has her story well in hand, and works it out with considerable skill. The iteration of "little Elizabeth" whenever the heroine is mentioned is tiresome.

Volumes of short stories are increasingly abundant. A dozen tales are contained in Mr. A. J. Dawson's More Sentiment, which is included in the "Keynotes Series" (Lane). The best relate to the rich pastoral country on the borders of New South Wales and Queensland; a few deal with life and scenery in other parts of the globe. Love, with unhappy consequences, forms the subject of nearly all. They are well written as regards composition, and are for the most part cleverly constructed; they seem to indicate the hand of a practised traveller and a competent man of letters. The best, which is also the longest, is entitled 'Mother Carey's Chickens.' Were there fewer publications of the type of this volume, Mr. Dawson's collection of stories would unquestionably attract more attention than it is likely to receive. Though in places there is a note that jars on the reader, the book as a whole is easy and agreeable literature, and is distinguished by a wide knowledge of the world.

Under the somewhat absurd title of "The Fin de Siècle Library" Mr. H. S. Nichols is publishing some translations of French works, with illustrations in the style of those with which the works of M. Uzanne have made us familiar. The first of the series, a translation (whether original or not does not appear) of Amyot's version of the Daphnis and Chloe of Longus, is now before us. Though more than one English rendering of the story have appeared, the first being as early as 1657, it has always had more vogue in France than in England. Indeed, it may almost be called a French book, having been printed in a French translation many years earlier than in the original. Its artificial rusticity and very genuine pruriency were exactly the qualities to commend it to the sentimental and corrupt society of the last century. It was the product of one decaying civilization, and just suited the taste of another. The discovery by Paul Louis Courier at Florence in 1807 of a passage long known to be missing in the published editions, and his subsequent troubles, called fresh attention to the work, which has, however, in all probability been more talked about than read. The best account of it is still that by the late Prof. Malden in Knight's Quarterly Magazine, though the learned writer is perhaps unduly lenient to the licentiousness of the work, which he thinks need not offend "those who are familiar with the classical authors of antiquity." The difference, as it seems to us, is that while in the greatest classical authors an occasional licentiousness is merely an excrescence, or at most (as in the case of Ovid) infects only portions of their work, it is the very essence of the romance of Longus. The "love" of Daphnis, at all events, is as merely animal a passion as that of his own herds; and pace M. Courier, we cannot agree that "it is a book to put into the hands of young ladies next after the Catechism." In the present version, it is fair to say, this characteristic, at least in its more offensive manifestations, has been studiously suppressed, and the "young person" might read it with little detriment to her innocence; but we suspect she would find it rather dull. The Lesbian shepherd and shepherdess business is a trifle lacking in "actuality" for these times, though there are pretty enough bits of description here and there. But who now reads the 'Aminta,' or the 'Gentle Shepherd,' or 'Paul et Virginie'? These are the descendants of 'Daphnis and Chloe' on its sentimental side. The illustrations, by M. Raphael Collin, have a certain evanescent prettiness. They are, however, little more than opportunities for studies in the nude, not always over well drawn, and sometimes sailing rather near the wind. M. Jules Claretie's introduction was evidently written for a French, not an English reprint, and might with advantage have been edited. English readers will wonder where "the text of the translator" has been modified "by changing o's into a's"!

WELSH LITERATURE.

Welsh Folk-lore: a Collection of the Folk-Tales and Legends of North Wales. By the Rev. Elias Owen, F.S.A. (Oswestry, Woodall, Minshall & Co.)—The study of folk-lore, owing to its timely encouragement by the National Eisteddfod, has of recent years acquired much popularity in Wales. Collections for separate counties have already made their appearance in South Wales, and the present volume, which is the result of many years' note-taking, is intended to do a similar service for North Wales. So vast, however, is the subject, if exhaustively treated, that the present collection is confined to only one branch of popular superstitions, namely, those connected with fairies and the spirit-world generally. Ancient customs and superstitions associated with particular days and seasons are only incidentally referred to; while the holy wells of the district—itself a large subject—are to be dealt with in another volume, which the author has already all but finished. But within the limits thus described the work is remarkably complete, its most valuable feature being the large number of local versions which it gives of the same type of story. Its wealth in this respect may be inferred when we say that there are five "taboo" stories of the swan-maiden type, best known in the form of the legend of 'The Lady of the Van Lake'; the capture of men by fairy ladies appears in seven variants, the fairy changeling legend in six, while there are four versions of the story where human midwives are summoned to the aid of fairy mothers. Though tedious and uninviting for the general reader, this repetition of what is essentially the same story in some half a dozen forms, differing, perhaps, only in one detail, is of the greatest importance to the student of comparative folk-lore. No less important also is the scrupulous exactitude with which Mr. Owen has reproduced his materials, rigidly abstaining from elaborating his stories, so that "for every single bit of folk-lore recorded" he has "authority," which in most cases he also cites. Very often his task was merely that of translator, for "most of his information, derived from the people, was spoken in Welsh, but he has given in every instance a literal rendering of the narrative, just as he heard it, without embellishments or additions of any kind whatsoever."

Quite one-third of the tales here recorded seem to have been thus taken down by Mr. Owen himself, while the remainder are drawn from many scattered sources in the shape of published works, chiefly in Welsh, special use, however, being made of Prof. Rhys's English collection of 'Welsh Fairy Tales,' printed in the Cymmrodor a few years ago. As to the tales themselves, little need be said; they belong to a widely spread family, and possess few, if, indeed, any, features not found in the fairy legends of other races. Being survivals of ancient beliefs, and not the conscious creations of the imagination, they have none of the fanciful imagery of the 'Mabinogion' and other Welsh mediæval romances. But the question of their origin and their bearing on ethnic problems might well have been left by the local collector to the expert, who is not likely to be misled by such crude generalizations as Mr. Owen occasionally puts forth, as, for example, the statement that

"the fairy race belonged to a period anterior to the Iron Age. Polygamy apparently was unknown in the distant times we are considering. But the marriage bond was not indissoluble, and the initiative in the separation was taken by the woman."

In addition to the more definite types of legends to which we have alluded, the author has gathered a large mass of fragmentary traditions relating to fairies generally, their dances and the tricks they played with mortals, their visits to markets and fairs, and the illusory nature of many of their gifts. A more obscure branch of Welsh folk-lore is that relating to demonology and witchcraft, and Mr. Owen appears to be almost the first Welsh writer to put on record the many stories and sayings that circle round the personality of the devil, or "Satan" as he prefers to call him. The evil spirit was, of course, supposed to be capable of assuming the form of any animal, though he had his preferences; but it was only occasionally that he appeared in human form, and what is curious is that he is represented as being outwitted by the men he tried to circumvent. A story of the kind, which is here told of the poet Dafydd Ddu Hiraddug, is more commonly associated with the name of the Lollard poet-priest Dr. John Kent. Another Welsh poet who in later times frequently worsted the devil was Huw Llwyd, but he was a soldier, and not a clergyman as stated in the text. At his dying request his magical books were thrown into a neighbouring pool, under exactly the same kind of circumstances as Arthur's sword was disposed of. The references to the practice of magic and witchcraft are, however, mostly modern, and touch but the fringe of an interesting question. Glendower's boast that he could call "spirits from the vasty deep" suggests that the black art was specially studied in Wales, and many of the leading astrologers of Shakspeare's time were undoubtedly of Welsh extraction. Whether witches were persecuted in Wales with the same ferocity as in other countries, especially Scotland, is not discussed in this book, and a search among the records of the Great Sessions could alone perhaps settle the question. We are inclined to think that Wales formed an exception in this respect, and that consequently witchcraft died a more natural death there than in other parts of Britain, so that now it is almost wholly unknown even in the remotest parts of the country. Even the memory of these and similar beliefs will soon have completely died out, and Mr. Owen deserves many thanks for his timely rescue of so many specimens of genuine folk-lore. For purposes of reference his book is, however, sadly marred by not being divided into chapters, or otherwise arranged in suitable divisions. There is consequently no table of contents, though its place at the commencement is taken by an index. But the excellence of Mr. Owen's method of giving the ipsissima verba of his aged informants goes a long way towards condoning his lack of method in presenting them to the public.

Gwen and Gwladys. By William Rees, D.D. (Gwilym Hiraethog). Translated from the Welsh by W. Rees Evans. (Stock.)—The series of loosely connected sketches of Welsh rural life, of which this work is a free translation, appeared originally in the columns of a Welsh newspaper nearly thirty years ago. They were chiefly reminiscences of a life that was even then passing away, but they were also made the vehicle for searching criticisms of the foibles and shortcomings of the humble society which was mirrored in them. The narrative was put in the mouth of a superannuated journeyman tailor, who moralized sententiously, but with mingled pathos and humour, on what he had seen and heard at the various homesteads where he had plied his needle, seated, according to custom, on the kitchen table. The local setting and colouring of the original, the colloquialisms of its dialogues, and the seeming artlessness of the tailor's own narrative would appear to place these sketches in the category of untranslatable works. The racy humour which is so marked a characteristic of the Welsh version, and, indeed, of all that Hiraethog wrote, has, therefore, been largely—we might almost say wholly—lost in translation, and we have instead a tame and colourless story in which all the characters speak scrupulously correct, but frequently ponderous English, and even the names of their dwellings have been changed from Havod and Hendre into such forms as Mid-Valley Farm, and the like. To the English reader unacquainted with the Principality the story, as it now appears, can convey no vivid picture of the former life of the Welsh people, but for "English-speaking Welshmen," an ever-increasing class to whom the translation is not inappropriately dedicated, it may revive many memories of their "homeland in the times of their fathers." The volume, it may be mentioned, has also a special interest as an early example of an indigenous work of fiction in Welsh literature subsequent to the religious revivals of the opening decades of this century. Since Hiraethog's days, and possibly owing to his example, quite a large number of tales have, however, been written in Welsh, dealing chiefly with domestic or religious life.

RECENT VERSE.

The Chaurapanchāsika: an Indian Love Lament. Translated from the Sanskrit by Sir Edwin Arnold. (Kegan Paul & Co.)—This poem, of which Sir Edwin Arnold has produced a somewhat free English rendering, may be regarded as a typical specimen of Indian erotic poetry. According to tradition it was the effusion of a Brahman, Chauras, who, having been intrepid enough to fall in love with a princess of Kāñchīpuram, was condemned to death by her father King Sundava. The young Brahman devoted his last moments to composing this pæan in praise of his love, and the same tradition affirms that the irate father, won over by the beauty of the verses, forgave their author his indiscretion in having aspired to the hand of his daughter. The poem possesses all that sensuous beauty with which Indian love poetry has made us familiar. The writer is fain to exhaust his vocabulary in finding fitting words for the praise of his bride. All nature is laid under contribution to supply images with which her varied charms may be compared. The delight in physical beauty, the keen appreciation of all that appeals directly to the senses, is here free from the least taint of coarseness. There is a childlike rapture in the abandonment with which the lover pours forth his lament, in the joy with which he recalls the charms of his beloved, and those traits of character which most endear her to him. To produce an adequate rendering into English verse of a poem like the 'Chaurapanchāsika' is a matter of some difficulty, and though no great fault may be found with the translator's version, it is doubtful whether he has been as successful at the task as might have been expected. Some of the verses read tolerably well, but there are others in which the clumsiness of construction and crudeness of rhyme jar painfully upon the reader. For such a subject blank verse is probably a better medium than rhyme, which tends too often to sink to the level of versified prose. As to the date of the poem, if the tradition which assigns it to the time of Bhartrihari be really true, it must belong not to the beginning of the Christian era, as stated in his preface by Sir Edwin Arnold, but to the seventh century A.D., since we know from the testimony of the Chinese pilgrim I-tsing that Bhartrihari died about A.D. 651. To trust to such traditions is, however, very unsafe in dealing with Indian literature, and in the present instance there is no reason to suppose that the statement in question rests on a sounder basis than is usual in such cases.

Mr. A. J. Munby's experiment in "pedestrian verse," Ann Morgan's Love (Reeves & Turner), is a most interesting experiment, which it is impossible not to treat with respect, even while we are compelled to consider it an experiment in the wrong direction. He has written a poem describing the love and marriage of a servant girl and her master, and the curious, it would appear (from their own point of view) the successful, attempt which they make to mould their lives somewhat after the gospel of Mr. Edward Carpenter. It is written in blank verse, which, though a little tame and formal in some parts, and a little clogged by dialect in others, has a certain dignity, a certain "pedestrian" swing. Mr. Munby is an accomplished writer, but he has set himself so hard a task that we can hardly be surprised, either at occasional lapses into the conventional colloquialism of > —— you and your big arms

> Speak volumes for you, or at the occasional digressions into language which is not colloquial at all, such as:—

> You should share
> The knowledge that your Master has; the grace
> Of his fair life should also brighten yours.

Yet, in spite of a certain humanity which we really find in even the most cumbered of these pages, we cannot admit that there is any excuse for the hideousness of such dialect as this:—

> He med have easy thowt
> 'At Ah was well—wi' sich a deal to do,
> Joost what Ah like; an' him a-coomin whoam
> Three weeks temorrer!

This is simply realism of the photographic kind, the lowest kind of realism; and for realism of any kind there is no place in poetry. Fine poets have written in dialect, certainly: Burns, Mistral, Barnes. But they have not used dialect in this way, for a mere effect of verisimilitude; and what they have written has been lifted by a lyrical imagination. Mr. Munby has been too carefully resolved to be "pedestrian" at all hazards. He has made an interesting experiment, which we hope, all the same, that he will not repeat.

A Life's History, told in Homely Verse (Bentley & Son), is a book which has none of the distinction which hovers about Mr. Munby's; but it aims, in quite another way, at somewhat the same mark: "To present to the imagination, by means of unaffected language, that spirit of romance which surrounds some of the commonest experiences of every-day life." Mr. J. Reddie Mallett writes with painful facility, and this is a fair specimen of what he writes:—

> There hangs her picture—by the clock—
> As life-like as could be;
> Sometimes indeed, when I look up,
> It seems to speak to me!
> Love sparkles in those kindly eyes,
> And smoothes the wrinkled brow;—
> Ah me! what would I give to have
> My dear old grandma now!

This kind of thing may no doubt find willing victims in those strange beings who go with apparent pleasure to listen to recitations; the writer tells us that "many of the chapters" of his book have already been recited. It is more difficult to imagine any cultivated reader taking the trouble to read page after page of quite inoffensive and sometimes quite humorous verse about 'My First Trouser Suit,' 'The Morning of the Wedding,' and 'Our Next-Door Invalid.'

In his translation of the Fables of Florian (Longmans & Co.) Sir Philip Perring has done perhaps a somewhat unnecessary piece of work, but he has done it with extreme fluency, ease, and ingenuity. His lines run in the most facile, and really the aptest couplets, and in the suitable jingle of their homely measures have almost the air of original work.

The anonymous Graduate of Balliol who has made a five-act lyrical drama out of the story of Sintram (Kegan Paul & Co.) must have nearly as much diligence as the translator of Florian. He has fancy, is not without thought, and his verse is most elaborately diversified. But he has not really mastered his subject; has been, on the contrary, to some extent mastered by it; and when he comes to write another book, he will do well to choose a simpler scheme of action, and more workable characters than these "Lost Souls," "Death," and the "Evil Spirit known some time as the Little Master." He is not without a certain promise, for he has already conceived of poetry as an atmosphere, and not merely as a sequence of rhymed lines.

Mr. Herbert E. Clarke has, in the past, written some verse which has seemed to many critics strong and vigorous. We cannot see any real vigour or strength in his latest book of Poems and Sonnets (Simpkin, Marshall & Co.). It is unequal, and for the most part second-hand. Not only Mr. Swinburne, but Philip Bourke Marston, is echoed in these empty and echoing pages. Mr. Clarke writes page after page of this kind of verse :—

So in this night of deedless days,
Idle I stand with listening ear,
Idle I stand with straining gaze,
And far before me see and hear
The Future sound and shine and blaze
With hope and love and hate and fear,
And know not if therein shall be
Death and defeat or victory.

This, and such as this, if it means anything, means very little. Mr. Clarke seems to use words almost at random, not even being certain to take care of the sound while he is letting the meaning take care of itself.

Night-long we 've waited
In Night's dark land,
Despised and hated
And cursed and bann'd :

this can scarcely be said to atone for its absence of any profound thought by the presence of any very noticeable music. Mr. Clarke is at his best in the sonnets ; it is a pity that they, too, have so imitative an air.

But if Mr. Clarke imitates many, Mr. F. P. Osmaston imitates one alone ; his Dramatic Monologues (Kegan Paul & Co.) are modelled upon Browning with a really amusing closeness ; one of them even tells an episode in Browning's life. Mr. Osmaston is evidently a person of intelligence, but he has certainly not found himself as a poet. A book of this kind is really painful reading, the ability in it is so obvious, and yet that ability is so obviously and so hopelessly wasted. Let Mr. Osmaston close his Browning and open—well, Mr. Bullen's 'Elizabethan Song-Books.'

It is a relief to turn from most of this English verse to even so juvenile a book of French verse as Le Sang des Crépuscules, by M. Charles Guérin (Paris, Office of 'Le Mercure de France'), or so esoteric a book as Prière, by M. Jules Bois (Paris, Office of 'L'Art Indépendant'). M. Guérin is extravagant, even pretentious ; he places at the beginning of his book a long and confused "musical prelude" by a Mr. Percy Pitt ; the titles of his sections, the titles of his poems, are sometimes a trifle ecstatic and affected. But he approaches poetry as an art ; he has at least the gift of reverie ; he can be vaguely touching, and with really a semblance of thought behind his record of sensations. He has studied M. Mallarmé, and to good purpose, learning from him some of the secrets of his strange power over words, his jewelled and yet delicate and insinuating lines. He can be extravagant, thus :—

Laissez-moi ; le soleil, fardé de brume, teinte
De sang tiède et mourant l'or glauque des rochers.

But there are times when he can add a certain simplicity to the general over-subtlety of his manner ; and at such times his verse has something of genuine charm.

M. Mallarmé once described M. Jules Bois as "un poète, mystagogue de noble vol et conférencier occultiste," and the little book of strange and elaborately simple verse which the writer of 'Les Noces de Sathan : Drame Ésotérique,' and the learned prose study of 'Le Satanisme et la Magie,' has recently published will come with something of surprise to many readers. M. Bois has adopted a sort of vers libre which is not like any other vers libre—a broken, touching, almost infantile rhythm, which wavers in accordance with every wavering of a troubled and sincere spirit, a very human mysticism. "Une jeunesse dévorée d'inquiétudes et de passions, puis exaltée par la compassion divine—tel est le sujet," says the author, "de ce livre d'où toute frivolité est chassée et où j'ai voulu proclamer la royauté unique, celle de l'esprit au-dessus de la chair aveugle, au-delà de l'âme aveuglée." And the book is, as he says, a book at once natural and mystical. It has something, alike in its passionate and in its devout songs, of that ecstasy, that abandonment, which is part of the very substance of poetry.

The Black Riders, and other Lines, by Mr. Stephen Crane, hardly deserved the pretty printing and get-up which Mr. Heinemann has given it. These lines have no rhyme or rhythm, but are occasionally forcible by sheer abruptness Mr. Crane is too young in experience to write apologues and fables of destiny and man. The futility of human wisdom and the doctrine that every man is a law unto himself are themes so well worn as to need a master hand to illuminate them afresh, to which Mr. Crane, with all his promise, cannot pretend.

The Captain of the "Dolphin," and other Poems of the Sea, by Frederick J. Johnston-Smith (Digby, Long & Co.), can hardly be recommended, except for a genuine love of the sea. The author's vocabulary and style are somewhat unusual. "Polyspast" and "periscope" are new to us in poetry. At times he suggests Calverley. When the tide comes up, he "dismounts" from his "mind's hippogriff," —— like a lover who goes

From the side of the maid of his choice,
By whom he is held with a chord actuose
Spun out of her beauty and voice.

He was unwise to enter the lists with a long poem which suggests 'The Ancient Mariner' ; and in the "glossary" at the end he underrates the knowledge of landsmen in supposing "hull," "starboard," and even "keel" and "wheel" to be unfamiliar nautical terms.

Rural Rhymes and the Sheep Thief, by Eric Duncan (Toronto, Briggs), is interesting as the record of a "rancher" at first hand. The verses are rough, but occasionally, as in 'An Elegy,' show a genuine vigour and simplicity which is not unsuccessful.

AMERICAN FICTION.

With a brave and very skilful disregard of probability in details Mr. Stockton tells an amusing and exciting story. Mrs. Cliff's Yacht (Cassell) opens with the dejection of Mrs. Cliff, widow of a village merchant. She had become a millionaire, and did not know what to do with her wealth. Half the book deals with her struggles to get the better of her income. By the help of a sailor who had also come into a fortune she finds a few ways of getting over her difficulties. The reader, of course, mistrusts the sailor and puts him down as the villain of the piece, especially when he persuades Mrs. Cliff to buy a steam yacht and give him the command. But this is a little jest of Mr. Stockton's. The sailor becomes the hero. Mrs. Cliff is induced to buy the yacht only to use it for taking hard-worked people for summer cruises. She finds a synod of ministers, and takes fourteen of them for a voyage. Part of the crew desert, and some of the ministers volunteer to take their place. The story then becomes rather elaborate, and the yacht is engaged in chasing a pirate crew who have got possession of a ship loaded with bars of gold—the treasure of the Incas. Then come exciting episodes, sea fights between merchant vessels, hairbreadth 'scapes, and the sinking of the vessel with the gold. The exact place where the gold went down is marked on the chart, and possibly Mr. Stockton will fish it up and tell some further exciting story about it. His readers will not examine too curiously into his method of recovering the treasure, and if he can make as good a tale out of the finding as he has done out of the losing of the gold he will deserve hearty applause.

One of the many communistic experiments in the United States has been selected by Mrs. Orpen as the scene of her story, Perfection City (Hutchinson & Co.), and she has written a clever and readable volume. The curiously assorted folk who are dependent on the bounty of a lady who is a rich member of the community, while they fondly imagine that all things are owned in common, provide the writer with some excellent studies in character. Into the midst of these people comes a well-educated, clever New England girl, whose presence in this Oneida-like community leads to infinite trouble. She saves an unhappy "Britisher's" life by her skill and courage, and almost loses her husband in the effort—the husband having been nearly captured by the benevolent lady who has provided the community with its means of subsistence. There is much originality, a bright sense of humour, and no little skill in 'Perfection City.' The book is unquestionably interesting.

Chimmie Fadden, by Mr. Edward W. Townsend (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.), has had a great success in America. In a few modest words by the author, introducing the book to English readers, he says it has been favourably received not only in New York, but in distant American towns. This is less than the truth. The writer might have asserted (what is the fact) that it has cheered some dull hours on ranches in Wyoming. It would be popular in England but for the difficulty of the language in which it is written. The dialect of the Irish waif of New York streets is not easy to master. When one has mastered it one is ready to say 'Chimmie Fadden' repays the labour. In the form of reported conversations it tells the experiences of a waif picked up in the gutter and converted into a footman, and incidentally it sketches a good many incidents of American life and manners. It is full of humour, and it is lively from first to last.

The author of 'Mr. Barnes of New York' has achieved considerable popularity with his sensational stories of contemporary life. In order to be quite "up to date," Don Balasco of Key West (Routledge & Sons), his latest novel, deals with the Cuban insurrection and the intrigues of the Americans at Key West, the nearest United States port. A résumé of the story would seriously affect the interest in the book. It is attractive (as are most of Mr. Gunter's narratives) mainly by reason of adventures, fighting, and hairbreadth escapes ; but like its predecessors, the story is lacking in literary skill. It may be anticipated that Mr. Gunter's next publication will deal with the fighting between Turkey and Greece.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

Res Romanae, by E. P. Coleridge (Bell & Sons), is a collection of miscellaneous information such as is required by candidates for classical scholarships in the universities. It contains in 166 pages a summary of Roman history, geography, biography, political and domestic antiquities, topography of Rome, and much more besides. The index, if there were one, would be nearly as large as the book. In turning over the leaves, for it is impossible to read them, we have not noticed any mistakes except some that occur in works of more authority ; in fact, Mr. Coleridge says so little on any topic that it would be impossible for a good scholar, as he is, to fall into a considerable error. The one chapter in which he has relied on his own resources is a collection of the historical allusions in Roman poetry from Virgil to Juvenal. This is a rather superior piece of "cram," not to be had elsewhere.

Selections from the 'Spectator.' Edited by H. Evans, D.D. (Blackie & Son.)—Addison was one of the most polished scholars of his day, and it is impossible to write notes on the 'Spectator' without a scholarly knowledge of the classics. This Dr. Evans does not seem to possess. When we have credited the printer with such things as Pindar's "Hemean" Odes and the Latin preposition af, the statement, twice repeated, that Martial was a "Latin epic poet" is a fair specimen of the editor's accuracy. "Nodding places" (p. 111) is quite incompletely annotated without a reference to Horace's "quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus." The English notes are not adequate either: "assassin" has a definite and interesting history; why not give it clearly? On Charing Cross the wrong explanation is said to be wrong, but why is not the right one added? i.e., "charing" as in "charwoman," Shakspeare's "chare," American "chore." A note on the letters Addison used to sign his papers should have been added, and a slight study of his life would have informed Dr. Evans that the success of 'Cato' was an accident, due not to the merits of the author or his work, but to the fact that both sides chose to regard it as a political pamphlet aimed at Marlborough and others.

Athenæum Press Series.—Carlyle: Sartor Resartus. Edited by A. MacMeehan. (Ginn & Co.)—If people who read 'Sartor Resartus' for the first time need to have Carlyle's allusions explained for them, they cannot do better than look at the notes of Prof. MacMeehan, who has evidently devoted a great deal of labour to a task the utility of which is dubious.

French Prose Composition for Middle Forms. By J. Duhamel and B. Minssen. (Rivington & Percival.)—This volume by two Harrow masters is, on the whole, a fairly useful book of its kind. The introductory remarks are sensible and to the point. On the other hand, the number of exercises is, as usual, needlessly great, and the English of some of them is clumsy and by no means idiomatic, while the subjects are occasionally ill chosen.

A Collection of the French Homonyms, Synonyms, &c. With Notes by H. de Larmoyer. (Beeman.)—A useful little volume, which will be a real help to intelligent pupils.

Macmillan's Foreign School Classics.—French Plays for Schools. With Explanatory Notes by Mrs. J. G. Frazer.—Some three months ago we noticed with approval Mrs. Frazer's 'Scenes of Familiar Life,' and the same excellent qualities—sprightliness, an eye for a dramatic situation, an intimate knowledge of her native tongue—characterize this volume, and also a singular talent for explaining French idiom to British schoolboys and schoolgirls. Generations of both have suffered from the unintelligent study of Racine and Corneille, and they will learn far more from these amusing little pieces written in contemporary French, and if they also act them they will acquire a command of French conversation greatly superior, probably, to that possessed by their fathers and mothers.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

The ninth volume of Mr. Charles Booth's Life and Labour of the People in London is published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. Although it does not conclude the series, it contains a general survey of the previous volumes, as well as comparisons of crowding with apparent poverty and with earnings; figures of proportions of employers to employed, and of those working on their own account in various industries; and some interesting statistics as to increasing and decreasing trades. The volume ends with a survey and "conclusions" on the characteristics of modern industry, on London as a centre of trades, on trades unions, hours of labour, rates of wage, and so forth. The general impression left by the book is perhaps a little confused, but this is almost a necessary result of the patient search through details for facts which themselves support conclusions which do not by any means all tell the same way; and the value of the book to those who know how to use it is not impaired by a certain absence of standpoint.

Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen publish The Trial of Shama Charan Pal, with an introduction by Miss Orme—a book which is both interesting in itself, as illustrating village life in Bengal and the practice of the Indian law, and remarkable for the insight which it affords into the mode in which our Indian police get up evidence. Our readers may possibly remember our review of a work by a distinguished Bengal civilian, in which, writing as a strong supporter of that rule in India of which he was one of the pillars, he attacked the police at their notoriously weak points; and the book now before us comes to confirm his teaching, and to show how terrible is the habit of producing perjured evidence—often evidence of children of tender age—to procure a conviction in murder cases in the supposed interest of the administration and of the police. Incidentally the book furnishes a good picture of the mode of pleading and of the working of the jury system in Bengal.

The Months: Descriptive of the Successive Beauties of the Year. By Leigh Hunt. With Biographical Introduction by William Andrews. (Andrews & Co.)—The so-called cockney poet was a true lover of nature, and put forth some of his best work in her service. He could not, indeed, appreciate the lofty grandeur and rugged majesty of her highest moods, but he loved the brook, the hedge, the lane, the "little glow-worm lighting up her trusting lamp, to show her lover where she is"—in a word, the suburb of our grandfathers' days. In the advertisement to the first edition of 'The Months' he repudiated the ambition of superseding Messrs. Aikin's 'Natural History of the Year': "The predominant feature of their work is information,—its account of the causes or operation of things; the main one of the present is attraction,—the diffusion of the love of their appearances and effects." Leigh Hunt's "information" was not always trustworthy; he wrote from old gardening books, which represented the flowers as blooming much earlier than he could ever have seen them; but he was well versed in the "appearances and effects" of nature, which he observed and described with enthusiastic appreciation. In 'The Months' and his numerous miscellaneous papers on kindred subjects he dwells upon the same kind of cheerful detail, preaching, by the mere expression of happiness, "the art of making the best of what is before us." The fields were further linked in his mind with humanity and literature. Cottages and fair maidens were necessary to complete the picture, and the favourite volume under his arm was opened and lingered over in every walk. 'The Months' abounds in graceful quotations from the poets. This reprint is a pleasant volume to read and to handle, though the leaves are not very strongly sewn. The biographical introduction is brief and perfunctory.

Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son publish The Municipal Year-Book of the United Kingdom for 1897, edited by Mr. Robert Donald, who is the editor of the newspaper London. The work contains a directory of Town Councils, with a good deal of other matter, and is accurate in the points in which we have tested it.

In The Lady Ecclesia (Hodder & Stoughton) the Rev. George Matheson, D.D., has written one of those allegories which are so difficult to embody in an attractive literary form. The young lady who looks in the glass and finds herself fair, and then loses her heart in a semi-physical way to the Sacred Deliverer of the plague-stricken people of the valleys, is not, to our thinking, an artistic figure as literature, whether or not she be acceptable as an image of the Church. The narrative is, of course, all that one expects from a man of education and gravity; but the author has not the light touch which made Bishop Wilberforce's 'Agathos' readable, and his treatise fails to interest us.

M. Félix Alcan, of Paris, issues a third edition of La Turquie et l'Hellénisme Contemporain, by M. Victor Bérard, a volume in which he deals with Macedonia, and the respective claims of Greeks, Slavs, Albanians, and others. The book is of considerable value at the present moment, which is the reason why we depart from our custom in mentioning its reissue. The author is neither pro-Slav nor pro-Greek, and relates with complacency that the Slavs look upon him as a Greek, and the Greeks as a Slav, while the Turks have prohibited the circulation of his book. From these facts he argues that he is impartial. It is remarkable to notice the extent to which in some parts of Macedonia the Slav propaganda is gaining people of Greek race, while in other parts of Macedonia the Greek propaganda is winning peoples of Slav race. Both sides are working through their admirable schools, the Greeks having perhaps the advantage in this respect. The Slavs draw a good deal of money from Russian sources to aid their efforts, while the Greeks have the subscriptions of Greek merchants in all parts of the world. Each side prefers the Turks to the other.

The house of Calmann Lévy publishes Hortense de Beauharnais, by M. d'Arjuzon, a life of the daughter of Joséphine up to her wedding with Louis Bonaparte. The work is fairly executed, and the author is probably related to Comtesse d'Arjuzon, who was a lady-in-waiting to Queen Hortense.

We have on our table Notes on Copyright, Domestic and International, by R. T. Lancefield (Sotheran), — Karma, a Story of Early Buddhism, by Paul Carus (Chicago, Open Court Publishing Co.),—Modern Greek Mastery, by T. L. Stedman (New York, Harper Brothers),—The Birds of Aristophanes, in English Rhyme for English Readers, translated by G. S. Hodges (Houlston), — Memorabilia, or Summary of French Rules for Examination Purposes, by L. M. Jullien (Hachette),—The Rational, or Scientific, Ideal of Morality, by P. F. Fitzgerald (Sonnenschein),—The Knowledge of Life, by H. J. Harald (Constable),—Transcendental Magic, its Doctrine and Ritual, by E. Lévi, translated by A. E. Waite (Redway),—A Book of Scoundrels, by C. Whibley (Heinemann),—Diagramettes: Hygiene, by W. H. Knight (Chapman & Hall), — A Study of Sex, by P. Herbert (Lamley & Co.),—The Fur Traders of the West, by E. R. Suffling (Warne),—A Reluctant Evangelist, and other Stories, by A. Spinner (Arnold),—A Daughter's Grief, by F. H. Cliffe (Bellairs),—The Man who Became a Savage, by W. T. Hornaday (Kegan Paul),—Six Stories and some Verses, by R. B. Hale (Boston, U.S., Bowles),—On the World's Roof, by J. M. Oxley (Nisbet), — The Vagaries of Love, by F. H. Hudson (Digby & Long),—Sweet Lilac, by Marie L. Eveson (Roxburghe Press),—Catalina, Art Student, by L. T. Meade (Chambers), — Jack's Yarn, or Perils in the Pacific, by R. Brown (Griffith & Farran),—Outskerry, the Story of an Island, by Helen Waters (Chambers),—New Reciter and Reader, by R. Overton (Jarrold),—Songs and Ballads of Young Ireland, by M. Macdermott (Downey & Co.),—The Church-Worker, Vol. XV. (C E S S.I.), —The Nicene Creed, by J. J. Lias, M.A. (Sonnenschein),—The Work of the Church in London (Murray),—Memoir of the Rev. Richard Chew, by the Rev. E. Boaden (Crombie),—The International Critical Commentary: The Gospel according to St. Luke, by the Rev. Alfred Plummer, D.D. (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—Simplicity in Christ, sermons by the Venerable William Macdonald Sinclair, D.D. (Constable),—The Treasury of American Sacred Song, edited by W. Garrett Horder (Frowde),—Eranos: Acta Philologica Suecana, by V. Lundström, Vol. I. Part II. (Williams & Norgate),—Studi di Storia Antica e di Topografia Storica, by G. Grasso, Part II. (Ariano, Appulo-Irpino),—La Troisième Chambre, by H. Garland (Paris, Lévy),—Goetheschriften, by F. Zarncke (Leipzig, Avenarius),—and Die Geschichte der deutschen Uni- versitaten, by G. Kaufmann, Vol. II. (Stuttgart, Cotta). Among New Editions we have Writings of Severn Teackle Wallis, Vols. I. to IV. (Baltimore, U.S., John Murphy & Co.), —Ab o' th'-Yate Sketches, by Ben Brierley, 3 vols., edited by J. Dronsfield (Oldham, Clegg),—Flaubert's Bouvard and Pécuchet, translated by D. F. Hannigan (Nichols),—The Life and Times of Sydney Smith, by S. J. Reid (Low),—Elijah the Prophet, and other Sacred Poems, by G. W. Moon (Longmans),—Spring Floods, by I. S. Turgénev, translated from the Russian by E. Richter (Lamley & Co.),—and Fallen Angels, by One of Them (Gay & Bird).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Gordon's (G. A.) Immortality and the New Theodicy, 4/ cl.
Horton's (R. F.) Oliver Cromwell, a Study in Personal Religion, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Modern Readers' Bible: Jeremiah, ed. R. G. Moulton, 2/6 cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Tyack's (Rev. G. S.) Historic Dress of the Clergy, 3/6 cl.

Poetry.

Osmaston's (F.) Poems, 12mo. 5/ cl.
Warren's (Rev. C. F. S.) The Dies Iræ, on this Hymn and its English Versions, Part 1, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Philosophy.

Cecil's (H. M.) Pseudo-Philosophy at the End of the Nineteenth Century: Kidd, Drummond, Balfour, 10/ net, cl.
Harris's (G.) Moral Evolution, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Mill, John Stuart, Ethics of, edited, with Introductory Essays, by C. Douglas, 8vo. 6/ net, cl.
Robertson's (J. M.) The Saxon and the Celt, a Study in Sociology, 8vo. 8/ net, cl.

History and Biography.

Wright's (H. C.) American Men of Letters, 1660–1860, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.; 1861–1896, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

Bickerdyke's (J.) Wild Sports in Ireland, illus. cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Philology.

Serraillier's (L.) Railway Technical Vocabulary, 7/6 net, cl.
Thucydides, edited by E. C. Marchant, 12mo. 3/6 cl.

Science.

Davies's (A. M.) First Stage Physiography, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Fulcher's (F. A.) Birds of our Island, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Maycock's (W. P.) The Alternating-Current Circuit, 2/6 cl.
Merrill's (G. P.) A Treatise on Rocks, Rock-Weathering, and Soils, 8vo. 17/ net, cl.

General Literature.

Bickerdyke's (J.) Daughters of Thespis, a Story of the Green-Room, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Burgin's (G. B.) Old Man's Marriage, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Dowling's (R.) Old Corcoran's Money, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Edgeworth's (M.) The Parents' Assistant, illustrated by C. Hammond, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Glyn's (Hon. C.) A Drama in Dregs, a Life Study, cr. 8vo. 6/
Hunter's (P. H.) John Armiger's Revenge, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Mortimer's (G.) The Blight of Respectability, 8vo. 2/6 net, cl.
Municipal Year-Book of the United Kingdom, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Murray's (D. C.) A Rogue's Conscience, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Salmon's (L. M.) Domestic Service, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Speight's (T. W.) A Minion of the Moon, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Goyau (G.): Autour du Catholicisme Social, 3fr. 50.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Bode (W.): Rembrandt, beschreibendes Verzeichniss seiner Gemälde m. den heliograph. Nachbildgn., Geschichte seines Lebens u. seiner Kunst, Vol. 1, 125m.
Martin (J.): Nos Peintres et Sculpteurs, 2fr. 50.
Milchsack (G.): Historia D. Johannis Fausti des Zauberer, nach der Wolfenbütteler Handschrift hrsg., 10m.
Roger-Milès (L.): Art et Nature, 40fr.

Poetry and the Drama.

Weil (H.): Études sur le Drame Antique, 3fr. 50.

Bibliography.

Annuaire de la Société des Amis des Livres, 7fr.

Philosophy.

Gomperz (H.): Grundlegung der neusokratischen Philosophie, 2m. 50.

History and Biography.

Ayme (F.): Une Éducation Impériale, Guillaume II., 3fr. 50.
Beautemps-Beaupré (C. J.): Coutumes et Institutions de l'Anjou et du Maine antérieures au XVI. Siècle, Part 2, Vol. 4, 12fr.
Chalendar (Col de): Les Hussards de Chamborant, 2e Hussards, 1735–1897, 20fr.
Hallays (A.): Beaumarchais, 2fr.
Jonquière (C. de la): Les Italiens en Erythrée, 5fr.
Lamberti (Général): Rapport sur la Bataille d'Adoua, 1fr. 50.
Luchaire (Prof.): Mélanges d'Histoire du Moyen Age, Vol. 3, 3fr. 50.
Luzeux (Général): Études Critiques sur la Guerre entre l'Italie et l'Abyssinie, 1fr. 50.
Seillière (E.): Études sur Ferdinand Lassalle, 7fr. 50.
Septans (Lieut.-Col.): Les Expéditions Anglaises en Asie, 7fr. 50; en Afrique, 7fr. 50.

Philology.

Glachant (V.): Lucien, Extraits, 3fr. 50.
Nestour (P. Le): Tacite, Dialogue des Orateurs, 2fr.

Science.

Braun (C.): Die Gravitations Constante, die Masse u. mittlere Dichte der Erde nach e. neuen experimentellen Bestimmung, 5m. 60.
Demoor (J.), Massart (J.), et Vandervelde (É.): L'Évolution Regressive en Biologie et en Sociologie, 6fr.
Lecomte (G.): La Navigation Astronomique et la Navigation Estimee, 15fr.

General Literature.

Bezançon (H.): Bas Bleu, 3fr. 50.
Bonnemain (H.): Pages Choisies de Jules Claretie, 3fr. 50.
Demolins (E.): A quoi tient la Superiorité des Anglo-Saxons?, 3fr. 50.
Dubarry (A.): Hystérique, 3fr. 50.
Lasserre (H.): Mgr Pevramale, 3fr. 50.
Malot (H.): Conscience, 3fr. 50.
Muhlbrecht (O.): Uebersicht der gesammten staats- u. rechtswissenschaftlichen Litteratur des J. 1896, 6m.
Musette: Histoires de Corps de Garde, 3fr. 50.
Ohnet (G.): Le Curé de Favières, 3fr. 50.
Pont-Jest (R. de): Grand Mariage, 3fr. 50.
Tissot (V.): Un Lys dans la Neige, 3fr.
Vincent (C.): Crime Vivant, 3fr. 50.

AN OBSCURE POINT IN ENGLISH HISTORY.

Bamff, Alyth, N.B.

General Wrottesley is quite right in assuming that "Vaucler" in Lenglet's edition of Comines should be read Wenlock. The right reading is given in Dupont's edition. But the man who kept Warwick and Clarence out of Calais was not Wenlock, but a subordinate, Duras, captain of the town (as distinguished from the castle) of Calais, who had been secured by Edward IV. Duras was supported by the merchants of the Staple, who clung to the Burgundian alliance, and by the garrison, who were dependent for their pay on the merchants. The facts and authorities will be found 'Lancaster and York,' ii. 352. J. H. Ramsay.

THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

The 'Dictionary of National Biography' is now rapidly approaching completion. Below we publish a further instalment of the final list of names which it is proposed to insert. Cross-references are excluded. When one date is given, it is the date of death, unless otherwise stated. An asterisk is affixed to a date when it is only approximate. The editor of the 'Dictionary' will be obliged by any notice of omissions addressed to him at Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.'s, 15, Waterloo Place, S.W. He particularly requests that when new names are suggested, an indication may be given of the source from which they are derived.

Willan, Robert, physician, 1757-1812
Willehad or Wilhead, Northumbrian missionary, 789
Willement, Thomas, heraldic writer, 1786*-1871
Willes, George Wickens, captain R.N., 1785-1846
Willes, Sir James Shaw, judge, 1814-1872
Willes, Sir John, Chief Justice, 1685-1761
Willes or Wills, Richard, author, fl. 1575
Willet, Andrew, Puritan divine, 1562-1621
Willett, Ralph, book collector, 1795
William I., King of England, 1027-1087
William II., King of England, 1056-1100
William III., King of England, 1650-1702
William IV., King of England, 1765-1837
William "the Lion," King of Scotland, 1143-1214
William the Etheling, son of Henry I., 1120
William Augustus, Duke of Cumberland, 1721-1765
William Henry, Duke of Gloucester and Edinburgh, 1743-1805
William Frederick, 2nd Duke of Gloucester, 1776-1834
William, Bishop of London, 1075
William of St. Calais, Bishop of Durham, 1096
William of Chester, poet, fl. 1110
William of Tyre, historian, 1130
William of Malmesbury, historian, 1095*-1143*
William the Trouvere, Anglo-Norman poet, fl. 1150*
William de Conches, scientific writer, 1155*
William of Wycumb, biographer, fl. 1160
William of Ypres, Earl of Kent, 1162
William of Peterborough, theologian, fl. 1168
William of St. Albans, hagiologist, fl. 1170
William de Turbe or Turbus, Bishop of Norwich, 1175
William of Newburgh, chronicler, 1136-1208
William the Clerk, Anglo-Norman poet, fl. 1210
William of Ramsey, hagiologist, fl. 1210
William de Leicester, or William du Mont, Chancellor of Lincoln, 1213
William, Bishop of London, 1224
William de Fortibus, Earl of Aumale, 1242
William de Valence, uncle to Queen Eleanor, fl. 1250
William of York, Bishop of Salisbury, 1256
William of Lidlington, theologian, fl. 1290
William of Wheatley, divine and author, fl. 1315
William of Coventry, Carmelite, fl. 1360
Williams, Sir Charles Hanbury, diplomatist, 1709-1759
Williams, Sir Charles James Watkin, judge, 1828-1884
Williams, Daniel, Presbyterian divine, 1644*-1716
Williams, Sir David, judge, 1530*-1613
Williams, David, founder of the "Literary Fund," 1738-1816
Williams, David, geologist, 1792-1850
Williams, Edward ('Virgo-Triumphans'), fl. 1650
Williams, Edward, Nonconformist divine, 1750-1813
Williams, Edward, poet, 1746-1826
Williams, Sir Edward Vaughan, judge of the Court of Common Pleas, 1789-1875
Williams, Eliezer, author, 1754-1820
Williams, George, Professor of Botany at Oxford, 1762-1834
Williams, George, divine and author, 1814-1878
Williams, George James, wit, 1790-1860
Williams, Griffith, Bishop of Ossory, 1589-1672
Williams, Helen Maria, author, 1762*-1827
Williams, Henry, missionary, 1792-1867
Williams, Hugh William, landscape painter and author, 1773-1829
Williams, Isaac, Tractarian, 1802-1865
Williams, John, Baron Williams of Thame, 1559
Williams, John, Archbishop of York, 1582-1650
Williams, John, Bishop of Chichester, 1634-1709
Williams, John, Nonconformist divine, 1727-1795
Williams, John, legal writer, 1787-1859
Williams, John ("Anthony Pasquin"), fl. 1785-1810
Williams, John, missionary, 1796-1839
Williams, John, F.R.S., engineer, 1753-1841
Williams, Sir John, judge, 1777-1846
Williams, John, Archdeacon of Cardigan and author, 1792-1858
Williams, John, Welsh scholar, 1811-1862
Williams, Sir John Bickerton, Nonconformist writer, 1792-1855
Williams, Joseph, actor, fl. 1660
Williams, Joshua, lawyer, 1813-1881
Williams, Montagu, Q.C., police magistrate, 1834-1892
Williams, Moses, Welsh antiquary, 1685-1742
Williams, Penry, painter, 1885
Williams, Peter, Biblical scholar, 1722-1796
Williams, Richard Dalton, Irish minor poet, 1822-1862
Williams, Robert, rear-admiral, 1827
Williams, Robert, physician, 1831
Williams, Robert, Welsh poet, 1767-1850
Williams, Robert, Welsh biographer, 1811-1881
Williams, Sir Roger, soldier and military writer, 1595
Williams, Roger, founder of the colony of Rhode Island, 1599-1683
Williams, Roger, mezzotint engraver, fl. 1690
Williams, Rev. Rowland, divine, 1817-1870
Williams, Samuel, wood engraver, 1788-1853
Williams, Solomon, history and portrait painter, 1824
Williams, Taliesin, Welsh antiquary, 1787-1847
Williams, Thomas, Speaker of the House of Commons, fl. 1562
Williams, Sir Thomas, Welsh scholar, fl. 1600
Williams, Thomas, Dominican friar, 1740
Williams, Thomas, Calvinistic divine, 1828*
Williams, Sir Thomas, admiral, 1761-1841
Williams, Thomas Walter, legal writer, fl. 1810
Williams, Sir Watkin, judge, 1828-1884
Williams, Sir William, Speaker of the House of Commons, 1634-1700
Williams, William, Welsh hymn-writer, 1717-1791
Williams, William, Welsh antiquary, 1738-1817
Williams, Sir William Fenwick, general, 1800-1883
Williams, William Henry, physician, 1841
Williams, W. Mattieu, metallurgist and scientific writer, 1819-1892
Williams, William Peere, lawyer, 1736
Williams, Zachariah, author and friend of Dr. Johnson, 1755
Williams-Freeman, William Peere, admiral, 1742-1832
Williamson, George, king's messenger for Scotland, 1750-1823
Williamson, John, captain R.N., 1799
Williamson, Sir Joseph, diplomatist, 1701
Williamson, Peter, author and publisher, 1798
Williamson, William Crawford, botanist, 1816-1895
Willibald, bishop and traveller, 700*-786*
Willibrord, St., first Bishop of Utrecht, 657-738
Willis, Browne, antiquary, 1682-1760
Willis, Francis, physician, 1718*-1807
Willis, Henry Brittan, water-colourist, 1810-1884
Willis, John, stenographer, fl. 1618
Willis, John Walpole, legal writer, 1793-1877
Willis, Richard, Bishop of Winchester, 1663-1734
Willis, Robert, Jacksonian Professor at Cambridge, 1800-1875
Willis, Robert, physician and biographer, 1799-1878
Willis, Thomas, schoolmaster, fl. 1650
Willis, Thomas, physician, 1621-1675
Willis, Timothy, alchemist, fl. 1615
Willisel, Thomas, naturalist, fl. 1670
Willison, George, portrait painter, 1797
Willison, John, Scottish divine, 1680-1750
Willman, Thomas Lindsay, clarinet player, 1783-1840
Willmore, James Tibbits, engraver, 1800-1863
Willmot, Robert Aris, divine and author, 1863
Willock, John, Scots Reformer, 1510*-1570*
Willoughby, Charles, Lord Willoughby of Parham, 1603
Willoughby or Willoble, Henry, poet, 1596*
Willoughby, Sir Hugh, admiral, 1554
Willoughby, Sir Nisbet Josiah, naval commander, 1777-1849
Willoughby, Robert, Lord Willoughby de Broke, 1502
Willoughby, Thomas, 1st Baron Middleton, 1729
Wills, Sir Charles, field-marshal, 1666-1741
Wills, James, author, 1790-1858
Wills, John, Warden and benefactor of Wadham College, 1741-1806
Wills, Thomas, Dissenting divine, 1740-1802
Wills, William Gorman, dramatist, 1828-1891
Wills, William Henry, essayist, 1810-1880
Wills, William John, Australian explorer, 1834-1861
Willshire, Sir Thomas, Bart., major-general, 1790-1862
Willson, Edward John, architect, 1787-1854
Willson, Isaac, inventor, 1852
Willson, Robert, Catholic Bishop of Tasmania, 1795-1866
Willughby, Francis, naturalist, 1635-1672
Willughby or Wilughby, Richard de, judge, 1363*
Willyams, Cooper, topographer, 1762-1816
Willymat, William, 'A Prince's Looking-Glass,' fl. 1603
Willymott, William, grammarian, 1737
Wilmot, Charles, Viscount Wilmot, fl. 1614-1643
Wilmot, Sir Edward, Bart., physician, 1693-1787
Wimot, Henry, Earl of Rochester, 1610*-1659
Wilmot, John, 2nd Earl of Rochester, 1648-1680
Wilmot, Sir John Eardley, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, 1709-1792

Wilmot, John Eardley, Master in Chancery, 1750-1815
Wilmot, Sir John Eardley Eardley-, legal writer, 1810-1892
Wilmot, the Hon. Lemuel Allen, Governor of New Brunswick, 1809-1878
Wilmot, Robert, 'Tragedy of Tancred and Gismund,' fl. 1568
Wilmot, Robert, commodore, 1695
Wilson, Mrs., actress, fl. 1780
Wilson, Sir Adam, Canadian judge, 1814-1891
Wilson, Alexander, Professor of Astronomy at Glasgow, 1714-1786
Wilson, Alexander, ornithologist, 1766-1813
Wilson, Andrew, philosophical writer, fl. 1788
Wilson, Andrew, landscape painter, 1780-1848
Wilson, Andrew, traveller, 1831-1831
Wilson, Anthony, alias Henry Bromley, 'Catalogue of Engraved British Portraits,' b. 1750
Wilson, Sir Archdale, "Conqueror of Delhi," 1803-1874
Wilson, Arthur, author and secretary to the 3rd Earl of Essex, 1596-1652
Wilson, Benjamin, painter and writer on electricity, 1722-1788
Wilson, Bernard, pamphleteer and prebendary of Worcester, 1689-1772
Wilson, Caroline, author of 'The Listener,' 1787-1846
Wilson, Charles Heath, writer on art, 1809-1882
Wilson, Charles Henry, miscellaneous writer, 1808
Wilson, Mrs. Cornwell Baron, miscellaneous writer, 1846
Wilson, Daniel, Bishop of Calcutta, 1778-1858
Wilson, Sir Daniel, Canadian statesman, 1816-1892
Wilson, Edward, "Beau Wilson," 1674
Wilson, Edward, Australian politician, 1814-1878
Wilson, Florence, or Volusinus, Florentius, classical scholar and poet, 1547
Wilson, Frederick Richard, architect, 1827-1894
Wilson, George, 'Commendation of Cockefighting,' 1607
Wilson, George, chemist, 1818-1859
Wilson, George, chairman of Anti-Corn-law League, 1808-1870
Wilson, Harry Bristow, antiquarian writer, 1774-1853
Wilson, Horace Hayman, Sanskrit scholar, 1786-1860
Wilson, James, naturalist, 1795-1856
Wilson, Rt. Hon. James, economist and politician, 1805-1860
Wilson, James Arthur, physician, 1795-1882
Wilson, Sir James Erasmus, surgeon, 1809-1884
Wilson, John, musician, 1594-1673
Wilson, John, botanist, 1751
Wilson, John, author of 'The Clyde,' 1720-1789
Wilson, John, F.R.S., judge, 1741-1793
Wilson, John, engineer, 1834
Wilson, John, Scottish vocalist, 1800-1849
Wilson, John, "Christopher North," 1785-1854
Wilson, John, landscape and marine painter, 1774-1855
Wilson, John, missionary and Orientalist, 1804-1875
Wilson, John, Professor of Agriculture at Edinburgh, 1887
Wilson, John Mackay, 'Tales of the Borders,' 1803-1835
Wilson, John Matthias, President of C.C.C. Oxford, 1816-1882
Wilson, Nicholas, divine, fl. 1534
Wilson, Richard, landscape painter, 1713-1782
Wilson, Robert, playwright, 1600
Wilson, Robert, alleged inventor of the screw, 1804-1882
Wilson, Robert A., journalist, 1820*-1875
Wilson, Sir Robert Thomas, general, 1777-1849
Wilson, Rowland, regicide, fl. 1650
Wilson, Sir Thomas, statesman and scholar, 1581
Wilson, Thomas, divine, 1621
Wilson, Thomas, Bishop of Sodor and Man, 1663-1755
Wilson, Thomas, 'Archæological Dictionary,' 1747-1813
Wilson, Thomas, 'The Pitman's Play,' 1773-1858
Wilson, Walter, 'Life and Times of Defoe,' 1780-1847
Wilson, William, Scots divine, 1690-1741
Wilson, William, F.R.S., bryologist, 1799-1871
Wilson, Rev. William Carus, Evangelical divine, 1859
Wilson, William Rae, 'Travels,' 1772-1849
Wilson, Sir Wiltshire, general, 1763*-1842
Wilson-Patten, John, Baron Winmarleigh, 1802-1892
Wilton, John, furniture maker, 1722-1790
Wilton, Joseph, sculptor, 1722-1803
Wilton, William de, judge, 1264

(To be continued.)

'TRAVEL AND BIG GAME.'

Constitutional Club, Northumberland Avenue.

Some weeks since I observed among notices of forthcoming books the announcement of a work to be published by Mr. George Redway, on 'Travel and Big Game,' by Percy Selous and H. A. Bryden. I wrote at once to the paper in which I saw the notice to say that I knew nothing of Mr. Percy Selous or of any such work. I see that this book has been sent round to the press for review, but that its present publisher appears to be Mr. G. Bellairs. The work is now described as 'Travel and Big Game, by Percy Selous, with two chapters by H. A. Bryden.'

In fairness to myself I ought to explain that the two chapters for which I am thus held responsible were written for a news syndicate, with no idea of subsequent publication in book form. I have never been consulted in the matter of the book in question; I am not acquainted with Mr. Percy Selous (his namesake, Mr. F. C. Selous, of South African fame, I know very well); and I have objected, as far as I was able, to the inclusion of the two articles in the present volume.

I understand that Mr. George Redway acquired from the news syndicate I have mentioned the copyright in these two articles. He (or Mr. Bellairs, who now appears as publisher) is probably legally within his rights in throwing my articles—notwithstanding my protests—into Mr. Percy Selous's book. But it is surely scarcely fair to an author (by virtue of thus securing a couple of stray articles) to include his name, against his will, with an author of whom he knows nothing, in a work of this kind.

My experience is probably a rare one, but it seems to me that here is another instance of the necessity, now more than ever incumbent upon authors, of looking more closely after their copyrights.

H. A. Bryden.

AN ANGLO-SAXON ENIGMA.

There is a curious Anglo-Saxon enigma in MS. Titus D. 27 (in the Cottonian collection), fol. 55, back, of which I can find no explanation.

The MS. was carefully described in an article by Mr. W. de Gray Birch in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature (vol. xi. New Series), from which the present copy has been transcribed. Mr. Birch notes that the enigma has also been printed by Sievers; but I cannot find that any one has given any explanation of what it all means. I must first give the original, and I will then submit my explanation for the consideration of scholars. The text is as follows (with the substitution of th for the two A.-S. characters which are usually employed):—

A.—He gangeth and bith his sithfæt gesund.
B.—God thu fintst, gyf thu hit onginst, and the bith wel.
C.—Blithnysse getacnath; nis hit on thissum leohte.
D.—Ne gewealdest thu thæs thu wilt, ne thu hit æfre fintst.
E.—Becume blisse the; and thu bist symble gesund.
F.—Tacnath death fram deathe. [a stop here] on thyssum geare bide god godes.
G.—Thu sceal getheon be thisse gethohtunge.
H.—Thæt the ne bith geseald; thenc thu on other.
I.—Ongin thæt thu wille, thæt the bith geendod.
K.—Beorh the thæt thu ne gange on frecnysse.
L.—Hera thu god on ealle tid thines lifes.
M.—God the gemiclath, thæt the forth gespewth thæt thu don wilt.
N.—Hylt thu thæt to donne: ne bith seald thinum dædum.
O.—Ealle frithsumath god on eallum his mihtum.
P.—Gyf thu riht nimst, nelt thu wifes wesan.
Q.—For tham micel god is, and nergendlic swythe; and thu fintst blisse.
R.—Forlæt al tha syn.
S.—Thu bist hal, gyf thu to gode gehwyfst, se sit hal and mihtig.
T.—Ne fyrhteth tha the on synnum lyfiath and yfel thencath.
U.—Blis seo the bith geseald, and weg on geweald.
X.—Blisse and weg and ece lif.
Y.—Bycna[th] sibbe and gesynta.
Z.—

Wuldor sy the and wurthmynt, wereda drihten, fæder on foldan, fægere gemæne
mid sylfan sunu and sothum gaste.—Amen.

It is obvious that each letter denotes some word that begins with that letter; and my solution is that all the words are Latin. I do not understand all the English, and some of the answers are guesses; but I think I have the right idea, which scholars with more leisure and superior acumen can easily improve upon. I give the Latin word instead of the letter in each case, with an attempt at a translation.

Avis (?).—He goes, and his path will be uninjured.
Bonum.—Good shalt thou find, if thou beginnest (to do) it; and it shall be well with thee.
Calum.—It betokens happiness; it is not in this world (lit. light).
Desiderium.—Thou wilt not obtain that which thou desirest; nor wilt thou ever find it.
Ecclesia (?).—May it become thy happiness, and thou shalt ever be safe.
Funus (?).—It betokens death; from death in this year pray God for good. [This seems to me very obscure.]
Gratia (?).—Thou shalt prosper in this contemplation (when contemplating this).
Honos (?).—That shall not be given thee; think of something else.
Initium.—Begin that which thou desirest to come to an end for thee. (Begin what you wish were ended.)
Kaue, i.e. Cave.—Take heed that thou go not into danger.
Lauda.—Praise God every hour of thy life.
Magnificat.—God shall magnify thee, so that all that thou wilt do shall prosper.
Nuta (?).—Hesitate (?) to do that (which?) will not be delivered over to thy deeds (given thee to do). [Obscure; I can but guess.]
Omnia.—All things make peace with (obey) God in all His powers.
Puritas (?).—If thou wilt keep the right course, be not thrall to a woman. [A guess.]
Quære.—Because God is great and full of salvation; and thou shalt find bliss. (I.e., ask, and have.)
Renuncia.—Renounce all sin.
Salus or Salvus.—Thou shalt be saved if thou turnest to God, who sits (as) a Saviour and a mighty one.
Timete.—Fear ye not those who live in sins and think evil.
Uita.—Bliss shall be given thee, and a way to dominion.
Xtus, i.e. Christus.—(He is) joy, and the Way, and eternal life.
Ymnus.—(It) indicates peace and salvation.
Z.—The final letter, indicating the conclusion, which is expressed in the usual way, viz., by a doxology:—

Glory be to Thee, and worship, O Lord of hosts,
Father on earth, fittingly in common
With Thy very Son and the true Spirit. Amen.

Walter W. Skeat.

TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Part I.—Contributions to Periodical Literature, &c.

37.

'Sermons,' by the late Rev. William Henry Brookfield (London: Smith, Elder & Co., 1875), p. xxxviii.

Sonnet included in Lord Lyttelton's Memoir of W. H. Brookfield. ("Brooks, for they call'd you so that knew you best.")

Reprinted (under the title of 'To the Rev. W. H. Brookfield') in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, p. 163.

38.

The Nineteenth Century, vol. i. No. 1, March, 1877, p. 1.

Prefatory Sonnet. ("Those that of late had fleeted far and fast.")

Reprinted in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, p. 162.

39.

The Nineteenth Century, vol. i. No. 3, May, 1877, p. 359.

Montenegro. [A Sonnet.] ("They rose to where their sovran eagle sails.")

Reprinted in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, p. 164.

40.

Punch, vol. lxxii., May 19th, 1877, p. 228.

Two Stanzas. ("'Has forgot Britain?' Blatant bunkum shapes.")

Reprinted in the posthumous edition of R. H. Shepherd's 'Bibliography of Tennyson,' 1896, p. 53. These stanzas were never acknowledged by the late Lord Tennyson, neither have they ever been claimed as his by any of the poet's representatives. They are also not to be found in any authorized edition of his collected works. They were attributed by Mr. Shepherd to the late Laureate solely upon the evidence of style. That the reader may be enabled to form his own opinion as to their authenticity, they are here given in full:—

'The Reproach of Iachimo.'

["The country will sadly say of him (Mr. Gladstone) what Imogen says in 'Cymbeline,' 'My lord, I fear, has forgot Britain,' while history will add, as Iachimo does, 'And himself.'"—Daily Telegraph]

"Has forgot Britain?" Blatant bunkum shapes
A Britain generous Britons would disown—
A mock-Britannia, whose stage ermine drapes
A sham of frothy selfishness up-blown.
The truest lover of his land is not
The tap-room patriot of the pipe and pot.

"Forgot himself?" Aye, in a nobler sort
Than sordid self-regard can understand.
What? Brave the loud reproach, the foul report,
The taunt of treason to his native land!
Bah! how should base Iachimo do less
Than scoff at such fine self-forgetfulness?

41.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. i. No. 4, June, 1877, p. 547.

To Victor Hugo. [A Sonnet.] ("Victor in Drama, Victor in Romance.")

Reprinted in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, p. 165.

42.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. ii. No. 6, August, 1877, pp. 1-2.

Achilles over the Trench. Iliad, xviii. 202. ("So saying, light-foot Iris pass'd away.")

Reprinted in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, pp. 179-181.

43.
'Greek Literature' (Primer), by R. C. Jebb, M.A. (London, Macmillan & Co., 1877), p. 60.

Sapphic Stanza. [Four lines.]

Faded every violet, all the roses;
Gone the glorious promise, and the victim
Broken in this anger of Aphrodite
Yields to the victor.

The above lines have never been reprinted.

44.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. iii. No. 13, March, 1878, pp. 425-432.

The Revenge: a Ballad of the Fleet. ("At Flores in the Azores Sir Richard Grenville lay.")

Reprinted in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, pp. 40-52.

45.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. v. No. 26, April, 1879, pp. 575-582.

The Defence of Lucknow, with a Dedicatory Poem to the Princess Alice.

Reprinted in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, as follows:—

Dedicatory Poem to the Princess Alice ("Dead Princess, living Power, if that, which lived"), pp. 97-98.

The Defence of Lucknow ("Banner of England, not for a season, O banner of Britain, hast thou"), pp. 99-111.

46.
'Tennysoniana,' edited by Richard Herne Shepherd, second edition (London: Pickering and Co., 1879), p. 52.

Sonnet on Cambridge University. ("Therefore your Halls, your ancient Colleges.")

This sonnet (the original of which is written in pencil on the fly-leaf of the copy of Tennyson's 'Poems,' 1833, in the Dyce collection at South Kensington) has not been included in any of the authorized editions of Tennyson's poetical works.

In the Times for March 15th, 1884 (No. 31,082, p. 9), the sonnet was again reprinted, accompanied by the following explanatory letter addressed by the present Lord Tennyson to the late Mr. J. Dykes Campbell:—

Farringford,
Freshwater, Isle of Wight,
March 4th, 1884.

Dear Sir,—

I write for my father, as he is suffering from his eyes. He knows nothing of 'Tennysoniana,' but I copy the old Sonnet for you which you desire, with the missing words supplied. There is a note appended, as follows: "I have a great affection for my old University, and can only regret that this spirit of undergraduate irritability against the Cambridge of that day ever found its way into print."

[Transcript of the sonnet.]

My father is sorry to hear that it has again been reprinted,* and thanks you for your courteous letter. Yours faithfully,

Hallam Tennyson.

47.
'Collected Sonnets, Old and New,' by Charles Tennyson Turner (London, C. Kegan Paul and Co., 1880), pp. vii-viii.

Midnight, June 30, 1879.

Midnight—in no midsummer tune
The breakers lash the shores.

Reprinted (under the title 'Prefatory Poem to my Brother's Sonnets, Midnight, June 30th, 1879') in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 185-187.

48.
St. Nicholas, New York, vol. vii. No. 4, February, 1880, p. 281. (See also pp. 349 and 428-430, where musical settings of the songs are given.)

Child Songs.

Both reprinted in the 'Collected Works of Alfred Tennyson,' 1884, vol. ii., as follows:—

(I.) The City Child ("Dainty little maiden, whither would you wander?"), p. 278.

(II.) Minnie and Winnie ("Minnie and Winnie slept in a shell"), p. 279.

49.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. vii. No. 39, May, 1880, pp. 737-741.

De Profundis: (I.) The Two Greetings, and (II.) The Human Cry.

Reprinted in 'Ballads, and other Poems,' 1880, as follows:—

The Two Greetings ("Out of the deep, my child, out of the deep"), pp. 156-160.

The Human Cry ("Hallowed be Thy name—Halleluiah!—"), p. 161.

50.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. x. No. 57, November, 1881, pp. 629-640.

Despair: a Dramatic Monologue. ("Is it you, that preach'd in the chapel there looking over the sand?")

Reprinted in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 37-52.

'Despair' aroused no small amount of controversy upon its publication in 1881, and quite a small literature grew, and has since grown, around it. Perhaps the most striking contribution to this literature is Mr. Swinburne's famous parody (never since reprinted) 'Disgust: A Dramatic Monologue,' which appeared in the Fortnightly Review for December, 1881 (vol. xxx. No. clxxx. N.S., pp. 715-717).

The following three pamphlets were also induced by the poem:—

(I.) "Atheism and Suicide. | A Reply to | Alfred Tennyson, Poet Laureate. | By | G. W. Foote. | 1881." Crown 8vo., pp. 8.

(II.) "Mr. Tennyson's 'Despair.' | A Lecture | on its | Religious Significance. | By | Thomas Walker. | London: | Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster Row. | mdccclxxxii." Crown 8vo., pp. 32.

(III.) "The | De Profundis | of | Alfred Tennyson. | Remodelled | by | Metamorphosis. | London: | E. W. Allen, | Stationers' Hall Court. | One Shilling." [1882.] Crown 8vo., pp. 7.

51.
Macmillan's Magazine, vol. xlv. No. 269, March, 1882, pp. 337-339.

The Charge of the Heavy Brigade at Balaclava, October 25th, 1854. ("The charge of the gallant three hundred, the Heavy Brigade!")

Reprinted in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 158-163; with a 'Prologue, To General Hamley,' pp. 155-157, and an 'Epilogue,' pp. 164-169.

52.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. xii. No. 67, November, 1882, pp. 321-323.

To Virgil.

Roman Virgil, thou that singest
Ilion's lofty temples robed in fire.

Reprinted in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 170-173.

53.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. xiii. No. 73, March, 1883, p. 357.

"Frater Ave atque Vale." ("Row us out from Desenzano, to your Sirmione row!")

Reprinted in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 188-189.

54.
Good Words, January, 1884, p. 25.

Helen's Tower. [See ante, No. 26.]

55.
'Shaksperean Show-Book,' May, 1884, p. 13.

Stanza.

Not he that breaks the dams, but he
That thro' the channels of the State
Convoys the people's wish, is great;
His name is pure, his fame is free.

This stanza is given (with the poet's signature in facsimile appended) in the 'Shaksperean Show-Book.' It has not been included in any of Lord Tennyson's authorized collected volumes.

56.
Macmillan's Magazine, vol. li. No. 302, December, 1884, pp. 81-83.

Freedom. ("O thou so fair in summers gone.")

Reprinted in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 198-201.

Thomas J. Wise.

* The sonnet had been "lifted" from 'Tennysoniana,' and inserted in the columns of certain contemporary newspapers.

THE SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON.

Mr. John Murray's list of forthcoming books contains, among other announcements, the following works: 'Korea and her Neighbours,' by Mrs. Bishop (Miss Bird),—'Australian Sketches,' by Mrs. Rowan,—Mr. Gladstone's 'Later Gleanings: Theological and Ecclesiastical,'—'Waste and Repair in Modern Life,' by Dr. Robson Roose,—'How to Listen to Music,' by Mr. Krehbiel, with an introduction by Sir George Grove,—and 'The Story of a Great Agricultural Estate,' by the Duke of Bedford.

TWO PROTHALAMIA.

Clifton Club, Clifton, Bristol, April 13, 1897.

Can it be that the Mr. Wickham Flower who wrote the letter that appears above that signature in your last number is the same Mr. Wickham Flower who made himself responsible for the statement "Hatfield is now passed, where Cecil" (then follows the rest of the quotation from Vallans), in his letter of three weeks before? After a careful perusal of his last letter I must at least doubt the identity of the two. So absolutely serene an insensibility as pervades this last to having been the original sinner in the business, combined with the extreme difficulty of realizing the spectacle of a man solemnly punching his own head, ought to dispose, one would think, the most incorrigible sceptic respecting the virtue of internal evidence towards the notion that the two letters could not have been written by one and the same person. I approached the subject of Vallans's verses from the historical standpoint only, and after being completely taken in by the air of consummate knowledge worn by the writer of the first letter, and accepting his account of a very simple fact as beyond question, am now gravely informed by the writer of another letter bearing the same signature that I was wrong, and a most ignorant person indeed.

In any case, if the writer of those two letters is one and the same person, that person is either a humourist of a high order, or has unconsciously supplied to the comic sense—whose separate existence Mr. George Meredith has demonstrated in his recently republished essay—as rich a feast as any of the racy examples given in that delightful piece of expository criticism.

There is, however, a third—rather, perhaps, a fourth—solution of the problem conceivable: that the words in the first letter were, "Theobalds is now passed," and that it is my memory that has been at fault throughout.

J. Rowley.

A POET'S GRIEVANCE.

Three Gables, Grove Park, Kent.

It seems to me that the following facts should be made known in the interest of all authors who are concerned in the question of copyright. On March 28th a poem from one of my books was printed in the Weekly Sun. No acknowledgment of its source was appended, and the name affixed was E. Nesbitt (the name, I believe, of another author). I wrote to the editor, pointing out these facts, and asking for a cheque to the amount of my usual fee for the use of a poem. I received in reply a letter stating that it was an advantage to an author to have his poems "taken" by the Weekly Sun, and that the editor "preferred to regard the advantage as mutual." To this I replied that the question of advantage need not be considered, as no acknowledgment of the source of the poem had been made and the name was misspelt, and again I asked for a cheque. The reply from the Weekly Sun regretted Mr. Chas. Watney's inability to endorse this suggestion.

Then I wrote remarking that as yet I had claimed no damages, and named a date on which I should—unless I received a cheque—place the matter in the hands of my solicitor. By return of post came the cheque, together with the following interesting letter, in which Mr. Charles Watney plainly puts the alternatives, robbery or boycott. The boycott of the Weekly Sun is perhaps not important, but the principle is:—

The Weekly Sun, Temple House, Temple Avenue, April 9.

MADAM,—As I have no wish to protract this unpleasantness, I enclose the cheque for 2*l.* 2*s.* At the same time I take leave to reaffirm my view of the position, and, to avoid any recurrence of any incident of the kind, have given instructions that no future reference, either direct or indirect, shall be made to you or your works in the numerous publications with which I am connected.—Yours truly,

CHAS. WATNEY.

Comment is superfluous. E. NESBIT.

Literary Gossip.

SEQUELS are proverbially dangerous; yet, in spite of this, Anthony Hope, it is rumoured, is writing one to 'The Prisoner of Zenda.'

MR. VERE FOSTER is going to publish, under the title of 'The Two Duchesses,' a selection from the correspondence of the famous Georgiana (born Spencer), Duchess of Devonshire, and Elizabeth (born Hervey), Duchess of Devonshire. Among the people who figure in the letters are Lord and Lady Byron, the Bishop of Derry, the Countess of Bristol, Sir Augustus Foster, and other notable persons. Mr. Foster intends to annotate the correspondence.

IT is said that the Rev. John Verschoyle, late assistant editor of the Fortnightly Review, is the "Imperialist" whose account of Mr. Cecil Rhodes's career has been one of the sensations of the present publishing season.

Two new novels will be commenced in the May number of Macmillan's Magazine: 'The House by the Howff,' by Mr. W. L. Watson, and 'A Chapter of Accidents,' by Mrs. Fraser, author of 'Palladia.' 'The House by the Howff' is a Scotch tale (but not of the Kailyard school) of the time immediately succeeding Culloden, the scene being laid in and about Dundee. Mrs. Fraser's is a story of our own time, the accidents, which are of a comical rather than a tragical complexion, occurring mostly in a country house in Devonshire. The number will also include 'A British Prisoner in America,' by Mr. A. G. Bradley, the prisoner being Capt. Oxburey of Burgoyne's army which surrendered at Saratoga; and a paper on 'The Theory and Practice of Local Colour,' by Mr. W. P. James.

MR. AND MRS. SIDNEY WEBB are writing an exhaustive analysis of trade unionism and its relation to other Democratic movements, to which 'The History of Trade Unionism,' published in 1894, may be regarded as an introduction. It is called 'Industrial Democracy: a Study in Trade Unionism,' and will fill two volumes. Messrs. Longman are the publishers.

THE May number of the Cornhill Magazine has for its anniversary study an article from Mr. Lew Rosen entitled 'Napoleon on England and the English.' Mr. P. C. Standing contributes a summary, with copious extracts, of the hitherto unpublished diary of George Townley Fullam, the boarding officer of the Alabama; and Mr. Andrew Lang, in 'Ghosts and Right Reason,' pleads for a "sportsmanlike" treatment of apparitions. Sir Edmund Du Cane draws upon his own experiences in an account of 'Early Days in Westralia,' a remark which, mutatis mutandis, also applies to Mr. Frank T. Bullen's article on the perils and fascinations of the sperm whale fishery. Mr. Hartley Withers writes on 'The Mysteries of the Money Articles,' with a view to enlightening the lay reader; and Mr. A. J. Butler, in 'A Colonel of the Grand Army,' gives the pith of Baron Pouget's recently published memoirs. The 'Famous Trial' this month is that of Courvoisier; and amongst other papers mention may be made of 'After Late Supper,' a study in nightmares, by Mrs. H. Meyer Henne.

IN the May number of the Fortnightly Review will appear a series of hitherto unpublished letters of John Stuart Mill addressed to Prof. Nichol. The same number will include also 'A Study in Turkish Reform,' by the author of 'A Study in Turkish Finance,' and a paper on 'Crete and the Cretans,' by Dr. E. J. Dillon.

THE following guests are expected at the Booksellers' Dinner on the 8th of May: Lord Roberts, the Archdeacon of London, Sir Henry Cunningham, Mr. H. H. Bemrose, M.P., Mr. T. E. Taylor (author of 'Running the Blockade'), Anthony Hope, General McLeod Innes, Mr. L. F. Austin, the Hon. A. D. Elliot, and Mr. Sydney Gedge, M.P. A wish has been generally expressed by members of the trade that the galleries of the King's Hall should be open to ladies, and the committee have consequently arranged for this. Tickets for the galleries may be obtained gratis, by any one attending the dinner, from the secretary at 8, Paternoster Row, E.C. We regret to hear that Mr. George Larner is suffering from influenza.

THE Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P., is to take the chair at the dinner of the Bookbinders' Pension and Asylum Society, to take place on May 13th. We are glad to say that "The Special Appeal Fund" promises to be successful. Among the contributors are Mr. W. C. Straker, Messrs. Longman, and Messrs. James Burn & Co., 100*l.* each; Mr. F. E. Bailey, Mr. John Diprose, and Mr. Robert Peck, 50*l.* each; Messrs. Leighton & Hodge have given 35*l.* 4*s.*, and their workpeople the same sum, while those of Messrs. Burn have already subscribed over 50*l.*

MR. HENRY JAMES has promised to write an introduction to the volume by the late Hubert Crackanthorpe which Mr. Heinemann will publish shortly.

MR. DALLAS writes from the Albert Memorial Museum at Exeter to make yet another proposal to commemorate the Jubilee:—

"Any one acquainted with the publications of local—indeed, of almost any—societies established for the dissemination of knowledge must frequently have been put out of temper by the absence of anything like a real index to the many Transactions, Journals, and Proceedings which are annually published. I do not wish to specify any particular society, but in general terms I would point out that the indexes of these serials are totally unworthy of the mass of valuable information to which they profess to be a key. I would, therefore, suggest that every society established for the elucidation of local or county history, archæology, art, literature, or natural history should undertake during the present year the publication of a complete index to its proceedings, as a memorial of the completion of the sixtieth year of Her Majesty's reign. I am aware that indexing is not quite the easy matter that ignorant people imagine, but probably in all societies members could be found fully qualified to undertake the labour without emolument. The only expense would then be for printing, and probably there would be no difficulty in any county or district in raising a fund sufficient for so useful a purpose."

THE May number of Blackwood will contain a paper, à propos of the Queen's reign, entitled ''Tis Sixty Years Since'; also two articles dealing with the literature of the period, one of them by Mr. Frederick Greenwood on 'The Newspaper Press.'

THE decreasing number of students at the Scottish universities is creating a certain amount of concern. At one of the four, it seems, there were only eighteen graduates in Arts last year, inclusive of women.

THE Welsh University Court meets at Shrewsbury at the end of this week, and is expected to decide upon the whereabouts of its permanent offices. It is, however, now understood that the selection of a town for the Registrar's office will not imply that the Senate, Court, or Guild of Graduates will be restricted to any particular place of meeting.

THE Literary Committee of the Welsh Guild of Graduates propose, as part of their programme of work for the year, to pay special attention to a couple of Elizabethan writers, Dr. John Dafydd Rhys, a grammarian, and Dr. Thomas Prys. A manuscript collection of the poems of Prys, in a defective condition, exists in the British Museum, and the Guild Committee hope to prepare it for publication.

Apropos of the discussion in these columns of the editions of Leland's 'Itinerary,' it may be of interest to mention that Messrs. Bell & Sons are going to publish a new edition of the 'Itinerary' under the editorship of Mr. Laurence Gomme. The text is being carefully collated with the Leland, Stow, and Burton MSS. at the Bodleian Library by Miss Toulmin Smith, and the first volume is now passing through the press.

THE Glasgow Athenæum, which for the past half-century has maintained in the west of Scotland a considerable reputation, will celebrate its jubilee in October next, when it is intended to publish an historical sketch of the institution. Any persons having in their possession letters or documents relating to it, especially during its earlier years, will greatly oblige by forwarding these to the secretary, Mr. James Lauder, St. George's Place, Glasgow, who will be responsible for their safe custody, and will return them to their respective owners with as little delay as possible.

THE death is announced of M. Berardi, of the Indépendance Belge. A native of Marseilles, he clung to his French nationality, although his life's work was the management of the well-known Belgian newspaper.

THE publication of the documents of the Archbishop of Mayence, after a long cessation, is to be again taken up. The collection, annotating, and editing of the 'Regesten der Erzbischöfe von Mainz,' many of which are scattered in different archives and libraries, have been entrusted to Prof. Höhlbaum, of the University of Giessen, and Dr.

J. R. Dieterich, of the same university, who was formerly a collaborator on the 'Monumenta Germaniæ Historica.' The earlier instalment of the work ('Regesten zur Geschichte der Mainzer Erzbischöfe,' 1877-86) ended with the year 1288. The new editors propose to make the work a complete history of the archbishops, in the widest sense, until the death of Berthold von Henneberg at the beginning of the sixteenth century.

A memoir of "Roddy Owen," the well-known officer, is promised by his sister (Mrs. Bovill) and Mr. G. R. Askwith. Mr. Murray, who is the publisher, has also in the press a narrative of ambulance experiences in the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-8, by Dr. Charles Ryan.

A prolific novelist and essayist, H. Rosenthal-Bonin, born in 1840, has just died at Stuttgart. He was successively the editor of the illustrated journals Ueber Land und Meer, Illustrirte Welt, and Vom Fels zum Meer. He was also the author of a number of Reisebilder.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include the Report of the Trustees and Director of the National Gallery for 1896 (2*d.*); Final Report of the Committee upon an International Code of Signals (3*d.*); and a Return with regard to Scotch Education, showing Expenditure from the Grant for Public Education, &c. (3*d.*).

SCIENCE

ENTOMOLOGICAL LITERATURE.

The Hemiptera-Homoptera of the British Islands. By James Edwards, F.E.S. (Reeve & Co.)—This book may be accepted as the companion and supplement of Mr. Saunders's 'Hemiptera-Heteroptera,' published in 1892, and reviewed in these columns in 1893. Together they form a descriptive monograph of the Rhynchota of the British Islands so far as the present material due to the labours of British collectors will allow. Although the British Homoptera have been much neglected, in the years 1890-1 two illustrated volumes written by Mr. Buckton and devoted to these insects appeared; but Mr. Edwards seems to have quite ignored this work, which we think an omission, for though he fully explains in his preface the necessity he was under to avoid all synonymic and bibliographical references, still the book should have been mentioned amongst others, at least for the coloured illustrations, which will assist the worker in comparison with the more academic pages under notice. The literature of the British Homoptera is so scanty that we cannot afford to neglect anything. A publication may correct some errors of previous writers, but may also omit much interesting matter which they have compiled. Mr. Edwards has made these insects such a special study that no better choice of an author could be found. In the Catalogue of Douglas and Scott, published in 1876, the number of the species—including the Psyllinæ—was given as 268; in the present work the enumeration is increased to about 307, whilst four are described for the first time. The classification is that of some continental authorities; but systems are at present in such a state of flux that we need not feel surprised if the method which was once believed to be essential to a proper recognition of families and genera is here discarded. Amidst the many new arrangements proposed by taxonomists, we are not always informed whether evolution or cabinet convenience has been the guiding principle. Meanwhile all who study our British entomological fauna will welcome this manual.

The Lepidoptera of the British Islands. By C. G. Barrett, F.E.S. Vol. III. (Reeve & Co.)—With commendable regularity the third volume of this painstaking work has appeared, completing the description of the Bombyces and commencing the systematic narrative of the Noctuæ. We use the last expression advisedly, for the work is not curtailed to bald descriptions in which only a specialist could revel, but contains that rarer compilation of life histories and habits which may well attract the perusal of the general naturalist. We know no other publication in British entomology where this feature has been more fully or successfully carried out. As regards the classification, nothing can better exhibit the divergent views held on the subject than the fact that this conservative worker, amidst the plethora of new schemes and suggestions, should nevertheless with the Noctuina be compelled to "attempt to produce an arrangement of this group differing in some details from those at present in use." It will be long indeed before our British moths acquire a canonical sequence in cabinet arrangement, for the "natural system" has yet—at least in its entirety—to be discovered. We noticed the previous volumes when they appeared, but we may again commend the practice—not carried out in other volumes of the series—of giving the full habitats of the species beyond the purely British localities.

Allen's Naturalists' Library.—A Handbook to the Order Lepidoptera. Vol. III. By W. F. Kirby, F.L.S. (Allen & Co.)—With vol. iii. Mr. Kirby concludes his summary of the butterflies with a somewhat concise and necessarily hasty treatment of the Hesperiidæ, and commences the survey of the moths, which not only occupies the greater portion of the volume, but will require two more volumes for its completion. The recrudescence of uncertainty in classification is apparent in this as in all modern writings on the Lepidoptera. Mr. Kirby in his preface states that as regards the moths he has followed that adopted in his 'Catalogue of Lepidoptera Heterocera'; and we are informed that the next volume will begin with the true Sphingidæ. To be dissatisfied with the old taxonomy in Lepidoptera is now unavoidable; to be in complete agreement with any of the newly proposed systems seems most unusual; while some novelty in arrangement appears to be almost inevitable at the hands of any worker who seeks to grasp the natural affinities of so heterogeneous a group as the moths. We have recently considered propositions for not only amalgamating the butterflies with the moths in classification, but even including the former in the midst of the latter, and Mr. Kirby expresses his own views on the point. He observes that he has always considered that if the distinction between the Rhopalocera and Heterocera "was worth retaining at all, except as a matter of convenience, the line of demarcation should be drawn before, instead of after, the Hesperiidæ." We have no room for such a discussion in these columns, but we shall welcome in the introductory portion of the next volume a promised résumé by the author "of the more important systems of classification of the Lepidoptera (especially in regard to moths) which have been proposed since the time of Linnæus." In such a narrative we ought to trace the steady growth of evolutionary conceptions acquired by entomologists during that period. The woodcuts representing British species are acknowledged as derived from Newman's well-known work, and the coloured illustrations are distinctly helpful to a primary study of the moths of the world.

The Fauna of British India, including Ceylon and Burma.—Moths. Vol. IV. By Sir G. F. Hampson, Bart. (Taylor & Francis.)—This volume forms the fourth and concluding part of this great work on the Indian moths, in which 5,618 species are described, the genera clearly diagnosed and structurally illustrated, the writings of previous lepidopterists compared and incorporated, and intelligent if tentative order obtained out of the chaos of the varied systems of many students of the Oriental Heterocera. Without anticipating a rigid adherence to all the author's specific views by other lepidopterists, it cannot be gainsaid that these volumes constitute a distinct epoch in the study, and will be the rallying-point for future work and reference. Finality in arrangement is scarcely expected or desirable, a canonicity in nomenclature is still a phase of idealism; but we welcome an exposition which has the merit of lucidity. The first volume of this monograph was reviewed in these pages in 1893, and the general method of the work—which has since been followed throughout—was then detailed with some comment on its tendency. This concluding part is devoted to the family Pyralidæ, with an appendix including what has been published elsewhere on the subject since the first instalment appeared. Apart from his other merits, the author shows remarkable industry by the completion of such an exhaustive work in so short a time, and this contribution to a knowledge of the fauna of British India will also prove a great addition to those zoological statistics on which the study of the distribution of species so largely depends.

BOTANICAL LITERATURE.

Botanical Microtechnique. By Dr. A. Zimmermann. Translated from the German by James Ellis Humphrey. (Constable & Co.)—Few things are more remarkable than the progress that has been made within the last quarter of a century or less in the investigation of the nature and office of the vegetable tissues. From this point of view the changes that take place in the nucleus are of extreme importance, and these could not have been made known without the help of fixing and staining methods such as are described in this book. A similar remark applies to the sieve-tubes and to other tissues. The preparation and application of chemical and dyeing matters demand much time and practice, so that the work is becoming more and more specialized. The general botanist will, however, always find it necessary to know the principles of chemical microscopy, and will find in this volume the most varied and complete account of them that we have met with, whilst for laboratory purposes it will be even more useful.

The True Grasses. By Edward Hackel. (Constable & Co.)—This is a translation made by two American botanists, Mr. F. Lamson-Scribner and Miss Effie A. Southworth, of Dr. Hackel's monographic account of the grasses in Engler and Prantl's 'Die natürlichen Pflanzenfamilien.' Dr. Hackel is generally acknowledged to be the botanist who has the most accurate and comprehensive knowledge of grasses, and English readers will feel no ordinary satisfaction in having his views thus conveniently put before them. Dr. Hackel computes that there are some 3,500 well-defined species, but he adds that "no single tribe, no large genus numbering over fifty species, can be definitely characterized." This is rather deterring to the student, and for practical reasons is the more unfortunate as it is certain that among the three or four thousand species there must be many which might be made available for some purpose or another. The comparatively few cereal and pasture grasses, though of first-rate importance, cannot surely comprise all the resources of this wonderful family.

How to Study Wild Flowers. By the Rev. George Henslow. (Religious Tract Society.)—The object of this book, we are told in the preface, is to enable students to acquire rapidly an accurate knowledge of typical British wild flowers. Accuracy is to be secured by the careful analysis of flowers, by their comparison one with another, and by their orderly classification. But if this were all, plant study would not hold a much higher position as a mental exercise than the collection of postage stamps. The history and the sequence of phenomena, the "reason why" and the methods in which they manifest themselves, all require to be studied before the student can really be said to possess anything beyond the most superficial and barren acquaintance with plants. The name is indispensable, but only as a matter of convenience. The introduction contains an account of floral structure so condensed as to be difficult of apprehension by novices. A few illustrations in this part of the book would much facilitate its comprehension. It is true that references to woodcuts in other parts of the volume are supplied; but it would have been preferable to place them exactly where required, even at the expense of repetition. Great use is made of floral formulas, and, indeed, they are useful contrivances; but experience leads us to the conclusion that it is much better for the student to make out his own tabular statements, and to have them corrected by the teacher, than to have them made for him. The artificial key to the orders and genera is not free from pitfalls; for instance, we find in one place, "frt. mast in cupule"; but we have failed to find in the introductory portion any reference to "mast" or "cupule," and we cannot understand how the "catkins" of the yew can be called peltate. These are, of course, trifles to the expert, but they are serious hindrances to the tyro. Briefly, we consider Mr. Henslow's latest book as likely to be much more serviceable to the teacher, by supplying him with valuable hints, than to the student who has to work with little or no assistance. In either case fresh specimens are absolutely essential.

Schlich's Manual of Forestry.—Vol. V. Forest Utilization. By W. R. Fisher. With 343 Illustrations. (Bradbury & Agnew.)—Dr. Schlich's valuable manual relieves us from the reproach of not possessing a scientific treatise on general forestry. The present volume completes the work. It is not original, but translated by Mr. Fisher from the eighth edition of Dr. Karl Gayer's 'Forstbenutzung.' It represents the "high-water level" of modern practical forestry, and though it may seem needlessly elaborate in this country, with its relatively small area of forest, yet in North America, India, parts of Australia, and other colonies it will be of the greatest value, as showing the most scientific and economic ways of turning forest products to account. Timber by no means constitutes the only resource at the disposal of the forester. A reader of the present volume not previously acquainted with the subject will be astonished at the number and variety of the "by-products" and the ingenuity employed in dealing with them.

ZOOLOGICAL LITERATURE.

The Royal Natural History. Edited by R. Lydekker.—Vol. V. Reptiles, Fishes, &c.; Vol. VI. Invertebrates. (Warne & Co.)—Bacon, it is clear, can never have been acquainted with a man of the type of the editor of this 'Natural History,' or we may be sure he never would have taught that "writing makes an exact man"; for example, it cannot have been ignorance that led Mr. Lydekker to assert that "the average length of the common viper is about 10 inches," for he must often have seen specimens at least 20 inches long. His own account of the breeding habits of the midwife-frog shows that he has some idea of its essentially terrestrial habit of life, yet he must say that it is "aquatic"; we presume it is the artist's figures that led him astray here. Curiously enough, he appears to go wrong even when he is correcting others, for the account to which he inclines with regard to the "throwing fish" (Toxotes jaculator) has long since been explained by Dr. Günther as due to "an erroneous notion." We are perfectly willing to see a writer on popular zoology keep well within the limits of accuracy; but when he tells us that a cod may weigh as much as 100 lb. we are reminded that the late Mr. Brown Goode has quoted several cases in which this weight has been exceeded; similar remarks might be made as to the length which that fish may attain or the number of eggs that may be found in its roe. We think that we can easily find the cause of work so inaccurate. The writer would seem to have been working at top speed all the time, and to have checked neither his manuscript nor his proofs. For example, Mr. Boulenger, in some most interesting observations on the differences between poisonous and non-poisonous snakes, wrote, "There is no sure method of distinguishing the two kinds by external characters"; Mr. Lydekker by writing "of" for by makes nonsense of the whole sentence. It is unnecessary to cite further examples; it will suffice to say that a good opportunity of preparing a careful account of reptiles and fishes has been wasted. In noticing earlier parts of the present so-called 'Natural History' we ventured to warn the editor that he was not leaving space enough for what he calls the invertebrate animals; it is quite certain that we now know enough of the structure, modes of development, and habits of life of animals other than those with a backbone to justify a more liberal treatment of them than is possible in one volume. At the same time, so many of the groups are dealt with by writers who are obviously not specially qualified to deal with them that it is perhaps as well that they were not given too long a rope. No one, for example, who has had any practical acquaintance with trichinosis would have any doubt as to trichina being the most dangerous human entozoon, or would not rather have said hundreds than "thousands" in speaking of the progeny of Trichina spiralis; as to the presence of this worm in birds, except after feeding experiments, there is no sufficient evidence. Villot's statement as to the hair-worm passing part of its life in freshwater fishes has not been accepted by any competent helminthologist. Similarly, a specialist would be acquainted with Dr. von Marenzeller's interesting discovery of the injuries done to starfishes by that aberrant worm Myzostoma. For all that one could learn to the contrary, there are no swimming sea anemones, while the statement that Umbellula groenlandica has long been well known is too funny in face of the facts that the two specimens of U. encrinus, as the creature should be more correctly called, discovered by Adrians in 1753, have long since disappeared, and that the species was not rediscovered till the Swedish expedition of 1871; some of these facts the authors appear to have discovered when correcting their proofs, but they have left their original statement unchanged. To call Acineta a curious marine animalcule is to argue ignorance of the common A. lemnarum of our brooks and ponds. The account given of the respiratory organs of the regular sea-urchins is not complete, and it may be remarked that Dr. Théel, being something of a scholar, called Scotoplanes what is here called Scotoplane. We have said enough to show that the last volumes of this undertaking are not to be blindly trusted, and, indeed, in some cases we have noted unpardonable errors. We greatly regret that this should be so, for an excellent supply of figures far above the average has been at the disposal of the publishers, who have had free access to the clichés which illustrate the last edition of Brehm's admirable 'Thierleben,' as Mr. Sclater told us in his preface to the first volume. We wonder whether he would now endorse all he said in that preface; for ourselves, we can only regret that the result should be so obviously inferior to the last popular history of animals that was "made in Germany."

The Natural History of the Marketable Marine Fishes of the British Islands. By J. T. Cunningham, M.A. (Macmillan & Co.)—Mr. Cunningham is to be sincerely thanked for the useful and really interesting book which he has "prepared by order of the Council of the Marine Biological Association, especially for the use of those interested in the sea-fishing industries." The work is a typical example of the peculiarities of our race; no other marine biological laboratory—we except of course Fish Commissions—has devoted any part of its activity to the production of such a volume as this. It is hardly ten years since Mr. Cunningham was appointed as Naturalist to the Plymouth Laboratory, and already we see a fulfilment of Lord Playfair's promise, made when the Association was first started, that "those who know science only through its useful applications to man may feel fully confident that any encouragement which they give to this undertaking will be repaid a hundredfold in proximate, if not in immediate, benefits to the human race." Prof. Lankester, the President of the Association, writes a short preface, in which he supplies a sketch of what that body has already done, and what he thinks should be done to improve our fishing industry. Mr. Cunningham commences with an excellent history of modern investigations into sea fisheries. The account of the characteristics of fish in general, of valuable marine fishes and of the regions in which they dwell, appears to be well adapted for those for whom it is intended; they that go out to trawl in boats get to know the ways of thinking of fisher-folk, and, from this point of view, we are inclined to think that Mr. Cunningham has scored a success. Yet with all the author tells us, one cannot lay down this volume without the reflection that the sum of what we know about British food-fishes is but a tithe of what we ought to know; this book will best serve its purpose if, after all, it is soon found to be out of date. It would be an interesting question for a statistician to compare the increase in our knowledge of food-fishes with the increase in the population of the United Kingdom. The economist might discuss with advantage the amount of British money which goes to pay for foreign food-supplies, and how far the hardy race of our seafaring folk would have been enriched had well-equipped vessels solved some of the problems of the movements and habits of the fish that throng our seas.

The Natural History of the Year, by J. Arthur Thomson (Melrose), is divided into four sections corresponding with the seasons. We are told in the preface that the component chapters appeared as articles in Young England, and were originally addressed to the scholars at Charlotte Square Institution, Edinburgh. They are pleasantly worded, and there are illustrations which ought to make the book acceptable to the young people for whom it is designed.

Feathered Friends, Old and New, by Dr. W. T. Greene (Upcott Gill), is another popular work, treating of birds which are kept in cages or as pets. Perhaps the most interesting portion is that in which the rearing of nightingales is described, though we would not encourage the practice; there are also directions for keeping many other and more easily reared species.

THE PAPERS OF SIR JOSEPH BANKS.

The Camp, Sunningdale, April 17, 1897.

In the course of my endeavours to ascertain the depositaries of the rich correspondence of Sir Joseph Banks, which was partly disposed of by auction in 1886, I have been favoured with the enclosed communication from Sir Saul Samuel, Agent-General for the colony of New South Wales, which will, I think, interest your readers, and which may lead to the forthcoming of further information on the subject of the scattered correspondence.

Jos. D. Hooker.

Dear Sir Joseph Hooker.—I have read with great interest your recently published work entitled 'Journal of the Right Honourable Sir Joseph Banks.'

Having observed in the preface to the book a reference made to the missing papers belonging to the late Sir Joseph Banks, and in this connexion the name of the late Lord Brabourne mentioned as having obtained possession of certain of these documents from the custody of the British Museum, and offering the same for sale, in 1886, by auction, I would like you to know that, on behalf of the Government of New South Wales, I purchased in 1884, for 375*l.*, from the late Lord Brabourne, a large collection of papers relating to the early history of Australia, on the understanding, in writing, that if he discovered any more papers relating to the same subject he would send them to me, for the colony, without further payment.

The collection consisted mainly of letters in the possession of the late Sir Joseph Banks, and covered a period between 1772 and 1815. An article (which I append) appeared in the Times of July 26th, 1884 describing this collection, under the title of 'Old Colonial Records.'

In April, 1886, I observed in a catalogue sent to me that Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Co. were about to sell at their auction rooms, by order of the late Lord Brabourne, certain correspondence of Sir Joseph Banks, amongst which were papers relating to New South Wales, which I considered were included in my purchase. I thereupon wrote to Lord Brabourne, requesting him to cause the documents to be withdrawn from sale and handed over to me for my Government. Receiving no reply, I subsequently wrote to Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Co. protesting against the sale of the papers, and claiming them as the property of the Government of New South Wales. The papers were withdrawn at the time. What became of them I never heard, except that when I was in Auckland, New Zealand, in 1888, I visited the Public Library in that city, and saw a number of the papers which I believe had been withdrawn from the sale to which I have referred. I was informed that these papers had been presented to the Auckland Library by Sir George Grey, by whose agent they had been purchased in London.

My desire to bring to your notice the fact that a large number of papers formerly belonging to the late Sir Joseph Banks, and forming part of his 'Journal,' are now in the possession of the Government of New South Wales, purchased, as I have said, by me from the late Lord Brabourne, must be my excuse for troubling you with this letter.

Yours very truly,

Saul Samuel.

SOCIETIES.

Geological.—April 7.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Capt. J. H. Anderson and Capt. A. H. McMahon were elected Fellows; and Dr. A. Koch, of Budapest, Prof. A. Lacroix, of Paris, and Prof. Count H. zu Solms-Laubach, of Strassburg, were elected Foreign Correspondents. — The following communications were read: 'On the Morte Slates and Associated Beds in North Devon and West Somerset,' Part II., by Dr. H. Hicks, with descriptions of the fossils by the Rev. G. F. Whidborne (Prof. Bonney in the chair),—and 'The Glacio-Marine Drift of the Vale of Clwyd,' by Mr. T. Mellard Reade (the President in the chair).

Entomological.—April 7.—Mr. R. Trimen, President, in the chair.—A memorandum of an Association for the Protection of Insects in danger of extermination, which had been drawn up by a committee appointed for the purpose and approved by the Council, was laid before the Society and signed generally by those present.—Mr. McLachlan showed, on behalf of Mr. G. Strickland, a magnified photograph of Brachycerus apterus, obtained by direct enlargement in the camera, and extremely clear in definition and detail.—Mr. Tutt exhibited some of the silk used by Tephrosia bistorta to cover its ova, discovered by Dr. Riding. It was contained in a pouch at the extremity of the abdomen in the form of dense bundles about 2 mm. long, and resembling in miniature locks of wavy flaxen hair. Hitherto all such coverings were supposed to consist of scales from the anal segment.—Papers were communicated by Prof. Miall, 'On the Structure and Life-history of Limnobia replicata,' and by Messrs. Godman and Salvin, 'On New Species of Central and South American Rhopalocera.'

Meteorological.—April 21.—Mr. E. Mawley, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. H. Dines read a paper 'On the Relation between Cold Periods and Anti-Cyclonic Conditions of Weather in England during the Winter.' There seems to be a generally accepted belief that anti-cyclonic conditions during the winter are likely to be accompanied by exceptional cold; but in so far as England is concerned the author's observation has led him to the opposite conclusion, and he always expects a frost to break up as soon as the barometer gets much above 30·00 in. To test the truth of this theory he tabulated the height of the barometer during all the cold periods during the three winter months of the fifty years 1841-90. Out of seventy-four frosts he found that sixteen only had a pressure exceeding 30·20 in., and the majority of these were of very short duration. Thirty-three—or less than half—had a pressure exceeding 30·00 in. Twenty-one had a pressure below 29·80 in., and these included almost every frost in the period remarkable for its length or severity.—A paper by Mr. A. L. Rotch, of the Blue Hill Observatory, Mass., U.S., was read, describing the use of kites at that observatory to obtain meteorological records in the upper air. Three kinds have been employed: the Malay kite, which presents a convex surface to the wind; the Hargrave cellular kite; and a flat kite with a fin or keel on the front, devised by Mr. Clayton. These kites are attached to a wire carrying self-recording meteorological instruments, and a steam winch automatically distributes the wire on the drum and records its pull. The instruments have been elevated more than one hundred times, and valuable data as to the changes of temperature, humidity, and wind, up to an altitude of 8,740 ft. above Blue Hill, have been obtained.—A paper by Mr. A. B. MacDowall 'On Suggestions of Sunspot Influence on the Weather of Western Europe' was also read. The author believes that there is a tendency to greater heat in the summer half year, and to greater cold in the winter half year, near the phases of minimum sunspots than near the phases of maximum, the contrast between the cold and heat of the year thus tending to be intensified about the time of minimum sunspots.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon.	Actuaries, 7.—'Lost Policies, Certified Copy Policies, Certificates of Title, Possession of a Policy, Notice, Bankruptcy, and some other Practical Considerations with regard to the Titles to Policies,' Dr T. B Sprague
—	Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Local Authorities and the Building Laws,' Mr. W H Payne
—	Aristotelian, 8.—'The Logical Subject of the Proposition,' Mr. E C Benecke.
Tues.	Royal Institution, 3.—'Volcanoes,' Dr. T Anderson.
—	Statistical, 5½.—'Savings Banks at Home and Abroad,' Mr H. W. Wolff
—	Civil Engineers, 8.—Annual General Meeting.
—	Society of Arts, 8.—'Delft Ware,' Dr. J W. L Glaisher
—	Folk-lore, 8.—'Folk-lore Parallels and Coincidences,' Mr. M. J. Walhouse; 'Folk-lore of the Hebrides,' Miss A. G. Freer.
Wed.	Geological, 8.—'Origin of some of the Gneisses of Anglesey,' Dr C. Callaway; 'Note on a Portion of the Nubian Desert south-east of Korosko,' Capt. H. G. Lyons, Miss C A. Raisin, and Miss E Aston.
—	Society of Arts, 8.—'Asbestos and Asbestic: with some Account of the Recent Discovery of the latter at Danville, in Lower Canada,' Mr R. H. Jones.
Thurs.	Chemical, 8.—'Monochlordiparaconic Acid and some Condensations,' Dr H C. Myers; 'Decomposition of Iron Pyrites,' Mr. W. A. Caldecott.
Fri.	Royal Institution, 9.—'Cathode Rays,' Prof. J. J. Thomson.
Sat.	Royal Institution.—3. 'The Greek Theatre according to Recent Discoveries,' Rev. J. P. Mahaffy.—5. Annual Meeting.

Science Gossip.

The Institution of Civil Engineers have just announced an Engineering Conference to take place this year, and in future annually, it is believed. The date fixed is May 25th, 26th, and 27th, the morning of each being set apart for the discussion of impromptu papers, and the afternoon for visits to various engineering works. The idea seems to be an excellent one, suggestive as it is of an informal gathering (after the manner of the British Association) of men from all parts of the kingdom to consider and discuss kindred subjects in a way that cannot be done at the ordinary meetings held during the winter session. A conversazione of the Institution is also announced for May 25th.

The causes of breaks in submarine cables formed the subject of a recent paper by Mr. H. Benest at the Institution of Electrical Engineers. Subsequent to its reading various opinions were expressed by Admiral Wharton, Mr. G. Y. Buchanan, F.R.S., Mr. Charles Bright, F.R.S.E., and others, the result being that much light was brought to bear on the question from an oceanographic point of view; and there seems to be no doubt that many of the sudden interruptions in our telegraph lines beneath the sea are due to volcanic upheavals and depression of the ocean-bed.

A new observatory is to be built at Odessa. It will form a branch of the magnificent central observatory at Pulkowa.

The Fifty-first Annual Report of the Harvard College Observatory has recently been issued, giving an account of the progress of the work, on the same lines as heretofore, up to the end of last September. It also records the safe transport of the Bruce photographic telescope to Arequipa in Peru, where highly satisfactory results have already been obtained with it.

FINE ARTS

George Paul Chalmers, R.S.A., and the Art of his Time. By E. Pinnington. Illustrated. (Glasgow, Annan & Sons.)

This ponderous quarto of more than four hundred and fifty rather closely printed pages is quite appalling, for Mr. Chalmers was, at best, but a third-rate painter of genre and landscape in the vein which finds its ablest exponent in M. Israëls. To rank Chalmers with Corot, as some of his enthusiastic admirers have ventured to do, is wholly without justification; nor would the sympathetic and by no means boastful Scottish painter himself have listened to such folly for a moment. It is to his honour that the last words pronounced by him in public were uttered at a banquet of artists in praise of the illustrious Frenchman. What sort of hearers he had may be judged from the fact recorded by Mr. Pinnington, that they listened to the best man among them with such evident impatience that Chalmers, "hurt and angry," sat down in a huff, rose again almost immediately, and left the room. An hour afterwards he was found seriously wounded about the head, speechless, without a watch, money, or valuables of any sort, at the foot of a flight of stone steps in an area in South Castle Street, Edinburgh. Under ordinary circumstances he had no business at the spot; it was in the opposite direction to his way home, and no one has accounted for his deviation from his route. However this may be, he never recovered consciousness enough to explain what had happened to him, and four days later, February 20th, 1878, he expired in the Infirmary. Mr. Pinnington, after his wont, labours the incidents of the disaster, and gives us the pros and cons of the question. Did Chalmers, who seems to have been perfectly sober and not subject to fits, accidentally fall down the steps? or was he attacked, beaten, robbed, and thrown down where he was found dying? Public indignation and pity inclined, of course, to the latter alternative, and has to be content with it, for nothing more is known about the accident by which the Scottish Academy lost one of its ablest and most esteemed members, and British art a sympathetic and, within his range, accomplished landscapist and a decidedly good portrait painter.

The merits of Chalmers were sufficient to entitle him to the esteem which has prompted Mr. Pinnington to write this monstrous volume; but the mass of trivial details which fill its pages might well be spared. Now and then the writer's enthusiasm seduces him into delicious absurdities, such as, "Chalmers' flesh painting is entirely different from Gainsborough's," which is exactly what we thought, but never expected to read. Such gleams of unconscious humour are few and far between. The book resembles some popular Scottish views of moorland, wealthy in stones, half (or more than half) shrouded in mist, crowded with patches of furze and heather, and dashed with gleams of sunlight which are almost as easy to paint as the mists themselves, and go so far towards the making of the pictures.

Nor is the volume confined to Chalmers and his doings; on the contrary, dozens of pages—printed in small type, too!—contain what was written on the smallest occasions by Chalmers to personal friends of next to no account, and by these personal friends about nothing anybody else cares about. No doubt the reader comes now and then upon a passage showing good sense and insight he would not willingly lose. Moreover, the book, though intolerably wordy, shows why Chalmers was not a greater artist and more worthy of Mr. Pinnington's prodigious industry. In speaking of the development of Chalmers's powers and aims, Mr. Pinnington says:—

"With this uprising of ambition, another and less attractive influence upon Chalmers discloses itself. In the passage from the struggle of adversity to that with prosperity, he merely made an exchange of one rankling cause of disquiet for another. Before the turn of the tide he worried himself about both artistic and material results; afterwards, he was overdriven. From 1864–5 the demand for his works increased so rapidly that he strove in vain to meet it. He contracted a habit, which he could not shake off, of painting pictures for which there was no urgent necessity other than that which prompted him to comply with dealers' demands. He temporarily abandoned his ideal, and felt ashamed. He frittered away his strength upon trifles, and realised with agonising remorse that it was his life he was trifling away. He gave too much of himself and his time to works which, to a man of his gifts, were nothing more than the delusive refinements of artistic dissipation. He was apt to plunge recklessly into works which, with all their beauty, were unworthy of his genius, in order to escape from the annoyance of flattering importunity. He made friends of dealers who followed him about, frequented his studio, lived with him, and carried away every scrap of painted canvas which contained a suggestion of a finished picture. They were true to their instincts, and compelled Chalmers to be untrue to his. There was no possibility of reconciling their interests with his. They were honourable men who, with the best possible intentions, and in the most unconscious innocence, were led, in the particular case of Chalmers, to play the vampire. They patronised him without counting the cost to him of their cruel patronage. Often after they had gone with all the pictures they could find, Chalmers, sitting in his denuded studio, sank into the deepest melancholy. He felt that he was really doing nothing, that he was standing still while others were flying past. He was perfectly well aware that their demands would increase with gratification. He sat like a Hercules charmed into inaction under a flimsy net of silken thread. The situation was new, but speedily became irksome. The present was at war with the future. Continuance in his present course plainly involved the abandonment of any great and exhaustive work. Then Chalmers fell into the mistake of allowing himself to be hurried, to be cheated out of his opportunities. He was tossed about between the market, the exhibition-room, and his secret ambitions. He made many resolves—to content himself with nothing below the highest attainable excellence, to give his time and labour ungrudgingly to worthy works—and made many contributions to the nether pavement. Work was the only nepenthe; reflection was pain. In such fashion the struggle went on, and there were times when Chalmers' self-dissatisfaction became so intense as to steep him in acutest misery."

Probably the greater part of this elaborate apology for Chalmers's taking to "pot-boiling" is fanciful. At the best, whatever there may be of truth in it, it leaves Mr. Pinnington's hero in a sorry case, because the fit for "pot-boiling" did not come on until he was no longer poor. He had achieved considerable success during 1863; that was the year preceding his yielding to the seductions of the picture dealer; and the picture dealers, whose "best possible intentions" hastened the degradation of a hitherto heroic and devoted painter, ought to be very much obliged to Mr. Pinnington for what he has said of their "unconscious innocence."

The weakness of his will, his morbid self-depreciation, alternating with outbursts of a sort of enthusiasm, an engaging personality, the courage and steady rectitude which enabled him to make his way to a good position in Edinburgh, give Chalmers claims upon our regard. He was the son of the skipper of a small Scottish coaster, who died while the painter to be was yet a child. The busy seaport of Montrose was not an artistic paradise, but its topography, as our author gives it, has little to do with Chalmers's career in art. It is more to the purpose that his widowed mother, reading ruin in her son's fondness for art, first procured him employment as shop-boy to a kindly doctor, then apprenticed him to a local grocer and ship-chandler, whose service was diversified by furtive drawing and painting. He was without the means which ensure more than the smallest fragment of schooling. "Chalmers," says our author, "never had a taste for book-lore, and consequently acquired little." However this may be, it is certain that he spoke and wrote well, and doubtless, as others do, obtained by means of art a considerable share of culture, or the best results of culture.

His condition had not improved when his mother, who was "still young at forty-two," married a moody carpenter, a neighbour, who threatened to commit suicide if she rejected him. Her condition was improved, and she was not so poor as she had been. The carpenter, whose name was Collie, backed Chalmers's mother in resisting the boy's desire to become an artist, but he painted and played on the concertina, notwithstanding. At last there was a quarrel with the stepfather, who turned George and his mother out of doors for a time, took them back again, set the latter up as the hostess and "barmaid" of a small tavern, and sheltered the former under the same roof, and on the whole, though a domestic tyrant, does not seem to have been quite so black as he has been painted. He died in 1869, while the boy had been driven from home in 1853, having, at nineteen years of age, set off for Edinburgh, where he entered the Trustees' Academy, and was trained in the rudiments of art. Before this came about he began to paint portraits for a living, and, gaining thirteen guineas by a raffle of some pictures, got that start in life which assured him success and Mr. Pinnington the opportunity he has, literally, made much of.

Mr. Pinnington wanders far from his province when, having started his hero, he ventures upon the history of art and art teaching in Britain, and describes the Scottish Academy, which obtained funds from the sale of estates escheated after the Jacobite rising in 1745, as "the earliest school of practical art in the United Kingdom." If he had inquired into the history of the St. Martin's Lane Academy, which was maintained and frequented by cabinet makers, decorative painters, enamellers, and chasers, besides artists properly so called; or if he had gone back so far as the days of Charles I., when Sir Balthasar Gerbier started an art academy at Bethnal Green, and Sir Francis Crane, under the king's auspices, was at work on tapestries at Mortlake, he would have known better. He would, perhaps, have restricted himself to echoing the more cautious assertion of Sir W. Stirling Maxwell that the Trustees' Academy was the first institution of the kind established in the three kingdoms "at the public expense." This was in 1761. We are not convinced of the truth even of this limited assertion, but we do not care to quarrel with it until it is settled what "at the public expense" means. At any rate, it is to the credit of the artists and artisans of London that, long before 1761, they paid for their own academy.

As to the Trustees' Academy, it is true, as Mr. Pinnington tells us, that until the days of John Graham (1798–1817) the instruction there given was extremely restricted, and adapted to the "convenience and assumed requirements of artisans, house-painters, and the like." The original intention of the Board under whose auspices the Academy came into existence was to promote the improvement of fishing, wool-growing, and, we believe, dyeing. It was not till 1760 that attention was paid to "drawing of patterns for linens and woollens." Humble as these aims were, thirty years and more had to go by before Graham "introduced oil-painting, began a collection of casts from the antique, and won for his academy a high reputation for artistic training by sending out such pupils as Sir William Allan and Wilkie."

Posters in Miniature. With an Introduction by E. Penfield. Illustrated. (Lane.)—A highly demonstrative sort of art, largely taken up with bare bosoms and bare legs, fills the pages of this collection of reduced versions of the specimens of the powers of M. Chéret, M. Pal, and M. Toulouse-Lautrec. The silhouettes, more curious than beautiful, of Mr. Aubrey Beardsley and Mr. W. H. Bradley remind us, so far as their execution goes, of those marvels in black paper which itinerant voyagers on Thames steamers were wont to cut with scissors for the admiration of the public, especially of Thackeray and his friends; their boldness, the wildness of their fancy, and their chic, to say nothing of their prurience, remove these posters into quite another category of art. Of course, the chief motive of the greater number of their authors is identical with that which dominates the painters of many pictures in the Champ de Mars and in the Champs Elysées, that is, an irrepressible passion for notice, modestly, and, if possible, by tasteful means; but, if not so, by any means which shall attract attention. But such being the case, it cannot be said that Mr. Penfield, who acts as sponsor for this book, is quite devoid of a sense of humour, whatever may be our opinion of his taste and sense of beauty; accordingly he quotes an authority in his chosen line to the following effect: "Our designs may not look as if much time had been spent upon them, but I can assure you that it has taken all the artistic knowledge we possess to bring them to the simple state in which you see them." We can well believe it. On the other hand, Mr. Penfield wisely writes: "A poster should tell its story at once—a design that needs study is not a poster, no matter how well it is executed." It is, of course, desirable that the designer of a good poster, at least equally with the designer of any other sort of paper-hanging, should be a tolerably good draughtsman, entertain a preference for harmonious colouring, and, most of all, be able to tell his story, however trivial or vulgar it may be, with clearness and emphasis. Nevertheless at least two-thirds of the picked examples before us, being merely inchoate, tell no story at all. It is impossible, for instance, to say what the young female, or rather her silhouette in white, which Mr. M. Greiffenhagen designed for a local journal, is doing, or what she has to do with a journal or other literary production. On the other hand, the cleverness not less than the impudence of M. Chéret's posters is not to be challenged; they neither lack meaning nor fail of a purpose of a sort. Apart from these this book contains a considerable number of excellent and even elegant examples of what pictorial affiches ought to be. The first (in fact, the archetype) of the modern posters was undoubtedly Frederick Walker's stately design at life size intended to call attention to Wilkie Collins's novel 'The Woman in White.' First of the choicer and artistic affiches (if it be such, and not a book cover) is Mr. E. A. Abbey's design of Sir Galahad, intended for 'The Quest of the Holy Grail.' A vigorous but bewildering design made by Mr. W. H. Bradley for the Inland Printer Company of Chicago; a cleverly designed semi-nudity by Mr. Brice; and a spirited 'Artist's Model,' by Mr. H. Davie, deserve praise. Mr. C. D. Gibson's 'Sketch for a Poster' is a reduced version of one of his best-known designs, and in its way faultless. Several of the cuts of M. E. Grasset are better than the majority in this volume, while Miss F. Lundborg's figure of a mediæval mother and child is graceful and good in style, and for the January Century M. L. Métivet designed a striking figure of the first Napoleon, and M. Mucha has treated admirably two female figures. Mr. Penfield is not behindhand in showing that he is capable of designing posters in a mode analogous to the staple of his collection and quite as good, while the poster designed for "The Greatest Show on Earth," to wit, the Barnum and Bailey display, being a spirited and natural figure of a woman horse-rider, is first rate. There is a good deal of taste and elegance about M. Realier-Dumas's figure to illustrate the virtues of 'Incandescence par le Gaz.' Miss E. Reed's designs are meaningless, still they are not without merits of their own. We need not pursue this inquiry and enumeration further than to praise the grace of Mr. L. J. Rhead's female figure of Winter, Mr. A. Ronee's 'Columbia,' and some of the clever but unequal contributions of M. A. Steinlen, who of all the artists in Europe comes nearest to Mr. Phil May.

Achtzehntes Hallisches Winckelmannsprogramm: Die Marathonschlacht in der Poikile und Weiteres über Polygnot. Von Carl Robert. Mit einer Tafel und zwölf Textabbildungen. (Halle, Niemeyer.)—Dr. Robert's present monograph concludes a series of careful and elaborate studies on the art of Polygnotus, illustrated by restorations—necessarily in the main imaginary—of his lost mural paintings. The practice of making these restorations—based on literary notices, analogous designs in extant reliefs, and vase paintings—is prevalent in Germany, but regarded with considerable suspicion in England. Given a single bone, we are willing to attempt the reconstruction of the whole animal, but given no bone at all, as is undoubtedly the case with Polygnotus, and what can the restoration be but a dexterous exercise of misplaced ingenuity? Against such a charge Dr. Robert carefully guards himself. He states emphatically the limitations of the task he attempts. "To be works of art my illustrations lay no claim." They attempt only to aid the mind in grasping a complex composition by a visual presentation of the designs described, each design being represented in the typical forms known to have been current in the time of Polygnotus. One thing is certain: no one who reads the monograph of Dr. Robert but will own that whether the restoration be beneficial as aiding, or pernicious as misleading, the imagination, the elaborate study needful for its construction has brought to light much that is valuable. We may take a simple example. The third picture in the Stoa Pœcile represented the fight at Marathon. This, according to the description of Pausanias, was depicted in three scenes (P. i. 15, 3): the attack on the Persians by the Platæans and Athenians, the flight of the barbarians, the battle at the ships; above, as always in analogous compositions, were figures of gods and heroes interested in the contest. Of these Pausanias mentions just those that caught his attention—i.e., the hero Marathon, who is the local genius; Theseus, Heracles, and the plough-hero Echetlus; of the gods, Athene. But, says Dr. Robert, these are wholly inadequate to fill the required space; and these mural paintings, like contemporary vase paintings, abhorred a vacuum. What other gods would naturally be present. To whom did the Athenians offer their yearly sacrifice in gratitude for the victory? To Artemis Agrotera and to Pan. If it seems too bold to add these divinities because space requires filling and ritual prescribes them, we turn to Tarentine vase paintings, in which manifestly we have echoes of the work of Polygnotus, and there we find Pan and Artemis, with Athene in the upper row, watching the Persian fight beneath. Again, the question arises, How is the somewhat enigmatic plough-hero Echetlus to be represented, and where exactly was his place in the picture? This question forces Dr. Robert to consider the precise mythological significance of the hero. We know nothing of Echetlus beyond this one mention by Pausanias, but we know much of Buzyges, his Athenian counterpart—Buzyges, the plough-hero, priest of Athene. Echetlus, because he is but the local Marathonian correlative of Buzyges, must stand near Athene. Just such a figure appears fighting, with his plough for weapon, on Etruscan urns. In primitive days, it seems, men beat their ploughshares into spears. Turning to the Lesche, Dr. Robert believes that its shape was quite different from that of the stoa; it was a closed building, not an open portico. It is spoken of in Greek as an οἴκημα, in Latin (Pliny, xxxv. 59) as œdes, not as porticus. This would accord with what was probably the original purport of a Lesche, i. e., a burial-place and place of meeting for the tribesmen. As regards the Lesche, as the French excavators are just upon the site, we may hope shortly to have its actual ground plan before us. So far a few fragments of its plastered walls have come to light, but no trace of painting. In discussing the Nekuia depicted on the Lesche walls, Dr. Robert again makes a number of ingenious suggestions. Pausanias noted as surprising the figured Eurynomus, the Hades demon with blue-black flesh, showing his teeth, and he adds καθέζονται δὲ ὑπὸ τοῦτον ἐπὶ στρωταὶ αἱ δέρμα γυπός. It is acknowledged on all hands that Eurynomus is the primitive form of Hades himself, the wide-ruler regarded as sarcophagant. But why seated on a vulture's skin? Simply because that is the Greek way of indicating metamorphosis. Callisto, the bear goddess, Actæon, the stag man, are represented sitting on the skins of their animal forms. Eurynomus, when he appears in the upper world, is the vulture who eats dead men. As to the technique of the painting of Polygnotus, space only allows us to resume in Dr. Robert's own words:—

"The paintings of Polygnotus consist of pictures designed for the decoration of wall spaces. In size they are about 3 mètres high, and of various breadth. The figures are life size (τέλειοι). They are painted sometimes on a prepared surface, sometimes on separate wooden panels, which are fitted together and fixed to the wall. The ground is white, the figures are painted in flat tones without shading or modelling, and no indication of background or perspective is given. The only treatment of the background consists in waved lines at intervals, such as appear on vases and indicate a hill country. Occasionally the figures are placed behind these lines, so that a portion of them is concealed. The colours employed are black, white, red, and yellow in various shades, green, and a sort of blackish blue."

Dr. Robert ends with the hope (alas! now proved fallacious) that his speculations may be superseded by certainty from Delphi.

FRESH MYCENÆAN DATINGS.

University College, W.C.

A short time ago a paragraph went round the papers that a Mycenæan vase had been found with a scarab of the twenty-sixth dynasty; and a label to that effect is placed with the vase in the case of objects from Curium, at present exhibited in the British Museum. One isolated example of a dating which contradicts all other evidence is not very serious, unless every other circumstance about it is known. But lately the opportunity was most courteously afforded me to examine the question at the Museum.

The scarab was identified by the register (and is now placed by the vase), and it proves to bear no dating whatever by its inscription, as it has simply a figure of the god Thoth with the common title "the great god." The date of it rests, therefore, entirely on questions of style, material, &c.; and the attribution of it to the twenty-sixth dynasty depends on an opinion which is outside of Greek archæology.

As a matter of opinion, I venture also to state the conclusions which I at once formed about it. The scarab is of sard, a material commoner in the nineteenth than the twenty-sixth dynasty. The size, shape, and detail are those of other scarabs of Ramessu II. And the cutting is the same as that of Ramessu II., and quite unlike the work of the twenty-sixth dynasty. Hence I must conclude that it is probably of about 1200 B.C., a date which accords well with all our other evidence about the vase dating. Thus the one instance of late Mycenæan dating passes over to the majority.

But some dating of excellent character appears among the recent Mycenæan finds from Enkomi, at present in the Gem Room. In tomb 93 was a fine gold collar, inlaid with coloured pastes. There are nine different patterns in the collar, and eight of them are the constant devices of the time of Amenhotep III. and IV., and none are known at any later age. This collar is then fixed to about 1380 B.C.; it seems to be pure Egyptian work. In the same tomb was a scarab of Queen Tyi, who was contemporary with the same two reigns. And the Mycenæan pottery there was identical in pattern, colour, and lustre with the pieces found with remains of the same reigns at Tell el-Amarna. This tomb may then be dated within the fourteenth century B.C. with all the certainty possible in such inquiries

Tomb 66 contained many jars and dishes of blue glazed Egyptian ware of the same style and designs as those of about 1250 B.C. in Egypt; the glass vases found in it are also of the same age; and the pottery is of the later Mycenæan decoration. This tomb may then be put to the thirteenth century B.C.

General evidence of the date of the cemetery is also given by carnelian pendants of about 1300 B.C.; by a fine bronze ring of Amenhotep IV., about 1380 B.C.; and by a base gold ring imitated from one of the same king. The massive fabric of these rings is peculiar to that date, independently of the devices; and hence any theory of later copying is the more unlikely.

The recent evidence of the Mycenæan period is thus entirely in accord with all that has been already determined on good authority.

W. M. Flinders Petrie.

POMPEY'S PILLAR AT ALEXANDRIA.

University College, W.C.

Allow me to correct a personal statement that Prof. Mahaffy makes. My visit to Pompey's Pillar two years ago was after Dr. Botti had made his excavations, and was in company with the excavator. I then saw the pieces of red granite referred to, which appeared to me, from the quality and work, to be certainly of Roman age. I also went into the excavation of the rock cistern under the column, which was certainly an ancient cistern and not due to blasting, and was filled with ancient rubbish.

W. M. Flinders Petrie.

Fine-Art Gossip.

The private view of the Royal Academy Exhibition is appointed for Friday next; on the Monday following the public will be admitted. In order to have room for noticing the principal works, we shall next week give a supplement, for which no charge will be made.

We are glad to hear that the authorities concerned in the decoration of the Houses of Parliament are at last proposing to complete the group of mosaics originally intended for the Central Hall in that building. Mr. Poynter's large panel of St. George has hitherto been the only part of the group in existence, although it was designed as a companion to similar pictures of SS. Andrew, Patrick, and David. The proposal that the new members should be executed in the same manner as that employed by Mr. Richmond in St. Paul's is peculiarly wild. St. George is executed in Venetian mosaic, a highly suitable method for the subject and the great Gothic hall. The works at St. Paul's are, on the other hand, of glass mosaic, characteristically glittering and vivid in their colouring, but quite out of keeping with works of the other sort. In short, each process is excellent, but they do not agree. On its own merits the Venetian is preferable.

Mr. Richmond's decorations of the choir of St. Paul's are now, after nearly six years' labour upon them, practically complete. The quarter-domes will next be taken in hand.

It is said that the proposal to extend the group of public buildings in the neighbourhood of the Horse Guards may, and probably must, involve the destruction of that historic edifice as well as the really beautiful hall of Dover House. Both these results are to be regretted. We are not sorry to find that strong opinions have been expressed in condemnation of that portion of the new Admiralty which has been built; these opinions more than confirm our criticism some years ago, when the competing designs were on view.

On Thursday next the Tudor Exhibition, comprising pictures and relics of all sorts connected with the dynasty, will be opened in the Art Gallery at Manchester. It will include a large proportion of the examples which made the similar exhibition at the New Gallery so attractive and interesting.

Shortly will be published by Messrs. Chapman & Hall 'The Art of Painting in the Queen's Reign: being a Glance at some of the Chief Painters and Paintings of the Realm,' by Mr. A. G. Temple, to whom we are indebted for the valuable collection of pictures on loan now open in Guildhall and its predecessors. His new work will be illustrated by reproductions in collotype of sixty of the most noteworthy examples exhibiting there.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 14th inst. 'Rome,' by Mr. Alma Tadema, for 121*l.*

On Monday evening next the Old Society of Painters in Water Colours will proceed to the election of five new Members from the class of Associate Exhibitors. The election of a Deputy-President will take place later.

The exhibition of the Ex-Libris Society is to be held on June 10th and 11th, at the same time as the annual meeting.

Mr. Eyre Evans has finished his investigations regarding the plate belonging to the Presbyterian and Unitarian churches in Great Britain and Ireland. It will appear in May under the title of 'Vestiges of Protestant Dissent.' The book deals with the ministers, plate, registers, antiquities, &c., of some three hundred and fifty chapels, dating mainly from 1662. The numerous illustrations of vessels, pulpits, &c., are by Mr. George H. Burgess, of Ipswich.

We regret to hear of the death of that modest and industrious antiquary the Rev. W. F. Creeny, of Norwich, whose handsome monograph upon 'Monumental Brasses on the Continent of Europe' we reviewed in 1885.

The decease is also announced of M. P. Blondel, the architect in charge of the Louvre. He won the Prix de Rome in 1876, a Third-Class Medal in 1880, a First-Class Medal in 1881, and a Silver Medal at the Exhibition of 1889.—M. Charles O. de Penne died on Sunday evening. He was born at Paris in 1831, and was a pupil of Léon Cogniet and Ch. Jacque. He began to exhibit at the Salon in 1855. He gained a Third-Class Medal in 1875, a Second-Class one in 1883, and a Silver Medal at the Exhibition of 1889. A picture by him, 'Le Cerf à l'Eau,' is at the Champs Élysées this year.

Among recent additions to the Louvre artists will be glad to notice the small versions, executed by the painter himself, of Ingres's 'Venus Anadyomene' and 'La Source.' The larger version of the latter masterpiece has during many years past been a chief ornament of the great Parisian gallery. Here too, we may add, Ingres's noble portrait of M. Bertin aîné has been hung. Like all Ingres's works these renowned pieces are in perfect condition.

Under the auspices of the Société des Amis des Monuments Parisiens (a French analogue of the Society for the Preservation of Ancient Buildings) M. C. Normand, the distinguished architect, has examined the ancient Romanesque church of St. Pierre de Montmartre, which many official iconoclasts wish to destroy owing to its tottering condition. M. Normand's report is to the effect that the work of preservation is quite feasible, and the cost would not be great.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Crystal Palace.—Saturday Concerts.

A quiet season of these valuable performances ended in what may be termed a quiet manner last Saturday afternoon, and for once the programme did not contain a symphony. Still, Brahms's impressive 'Tragic' Overture and Wagner's exquisite 'Siegfried Idyl,' both played to perfection, made amends; and it was pleasant to hear once more Tschaïkowsky's fine Pianoforte Concerto in B flat minor, Op. 23, as the work has certainly not become hackneyed by too frequent performance. In spite of the unquestionable fact that Tschaïkowsky did not subject his genius to the measure of restraint that such a master as Brahms imposed upon himself, the freshness and virility of the Russian composer's music generally exercise a potent effect on the hearer, and M. Siloti's interpretation of the B flat Concerto was full of the fire and force which the Slavonic style of writing so frequently demands. Equal success, in its way, was won in minor solos by Rachmanioff and Arensky, with Rubinstein's Barcarolle in G minor as an encore. The vocalists were the Misses Florence and Bertha Salter, their contributions, which were fairly well received, including the duet "Quis est homo?" from Rossini's 'Stabat Mater,' and other items by Bohm, Bemberg, and F. H. Cowen. Auber's light Overture to 'Zanetta' ended the programme. Mr. August Manns's annual benefit concert is fixed for to-day, and a programme of exceptional interest has been arranged.

NATIONAL FESTIVAL MUSIC.

We are in receipt of a considerable quantity of music suitable for use in connexion with the celebrations in June next. The Flag of England, words by Rudyard Kipling, music by J. Frederick Bridge, and Victoria; or, the Bard's Prophecy, written by the Rev. Charles Kent, music by G. F. Huntley, both published by Messrs. Novello, Ewer & Co., are brief cantatas, comparatively unpretentious, and of no great difficulty. Mr. Rudyard Kipling's poetry, taken from 'Barrack-Room Ballads, and other Verses,' is distinctly aggressive in sentiment, and Prof. Bridge's music is appropriately bold and martial in character. It is written for soprano solo, chorus, and orchestra, the accompaniments being to a considerable extent independent of the voice parts. Sung with the requisite spirit and energy, the "ballad," as it is termed, could not fail to prove effective. Dr. Huntley's cantata deals with ancient Britain, and the last stand against the Romans in the time of Queen Boadicea. Though resistance is in vain against the powerful enemy, a bard predicts that in the ages to come England will be invincible, and a queen named Victoria will rule over the nation. The words we cannot speak of in terms of high praise, for they are for the most part bombastic to an unpleasant degree. The music, for mezzo-soprano, tenor, and bass soli, chorus, and orchestral accompaniment is stirring, with distinctly modern feeling in matters of detail. The peroration, ending with a portion of the National Anthem, shows clearly that the composer knows how to write for popular audiences. From the same firm we have several other compositions, chiefly for choralists, some of which have been published for a considerable time: the late Sir Joseph Barnby's patriotic chorus, Victoria our Queen, words by A. C. Ainger; The Queen's Song, a very bright part-song, written by Sir Edwin Arnold, with music by Eaton Faning; All Hail the Glorious Reign, words by Clifton Bingham, music by F. H. Cowen, written in that composer's graceful and tuneful style; arrangements of the two last-named compositions for female voices in three parts; for male voices No. 307 of 'The Orpheus' (new series), The Queen, God Bless Her, by Myles B. Foster; the same composer's festival anthem My heart is inditing, for soprano solo, chorus, orchestra, and organ; and Twelve Hymns with tunes, written by various able hymnologists, with music by Church composers of the present generation.

Musical Gossip.

Full particulars of the Royal Opera season at Covent Garden, which will open on May 10th, cannot as yet be given; but it may be said with a considerable measure of confidence that the theatre will open with 'Tannhäuser,' in which Madame Eames and M. Van Dyck will sustain the leading parts in French. Among other projected novelties are Signor Mancinelli's 'Hero and Leander' (first produced as an oratorio with much success at the Norwich Festival in October last) and Herr Kinzl's 'Der Evangelimann,' a tragic work that proved very successful when produced in Germany three years ago. No formal prospectus as to the season has as yet been published.

The concerts of sacred music on Good Friday were more numerous than ever, several of the so-called "variety" theatres deeming it an advantage to offer entertainments more or less in consonance with the occasion. These performances do not call for criticism; but record should be made of the fact that high-class music continues to grow in favour on the most solemn day of the Christian year.

Those who are wont to attend the triennial festivals at Leeds will rejoice to learn that Sir Arthur Sullivan intends to offer a new work of about the same dimensions as 'The Golden Legend,' if he can discover a subject that will suggest inspiration.

There is a probability of our hearing Berlioz's opera 'Béatrice et Bénédict' in London before very long, under the auspices of a newly projected operatic society. The performance will be welcome, for the work, although slight, is not unworthy of the brilliant French composer.

We regret to learn that the directors of the Scottish Orchestra have decided, in consequence of heavy losses, not to resume the concerts next season without a further guarantee of 8,000*l*. According to a Glasgow paper the total losses amount to nearly 20,000*l*. Schemes, however, are already in an early stage for the continued existence of the concerts.

Among M. Massenet's latest compositions is a Fantasia for pianoforte and orchestra, dedicated to Herr Josef Hofmann, by whom it will, of course, be played at the earliest opportunity.

Herr Humperdinck has completed his 'Moorish' Symphony, which is to be performed at the Leeds Festival next year. The composer has adapted some Moorish melodies which he heard at Tangiers some fifteen years ago.

We regret to learn from Germany that Herr Otto Hegner has suddenly been seized with illness, and that his pianoforte recitals announced for the 1st, 8th, and 15th prox. cannot take place.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall
—	National Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
Tues.	Mrs Faulkner Alleyne's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Walenn Chamber Concert, 8.30, Queen's Small Hall.
Wed.	Mr George Grossmith's Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Lecture, 'Sixty Years of Music,' by Prof. Bridge, 8, Crystal Palace.
Thurs.	Miss Kate Flinn's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Mr Hans Brousil's Chamber Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Miss Sophie Freeman's Pianoforte Recital, 8, Steinway Hall.
Fri.	Messrs C. Ross and J. Moore's Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mrs Webster and Mr Pascal's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
Sat.	Herr Otto Hegner's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3.
—	Mr J. H. Bonawitz's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Caxton House Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Avenue.—'On Leave,' a Farce in Three Acts. Adapted from 'Le Sursis' by Fred Horner.

Simple in the extreme are the processes of so-called adaptation employed by Mr. Horner in fitting to the English stage the latest, "spiciest," and most equivocal of Parisian farces. He supplies the characters with English names and occupations, places his action somewhere in London or the country, and—"there you are." Convert Lestamboudois, notary, into Bernard Vaughan, solicitor; call Mlle. Marinette—of no very easily mentionable profession—Miss Kathleen Metcalfe; and deal similarly with all the characters of the original, and 'Le Sursis' is 'On Leave.' A slight knowledge of French, and perhaps of English, with some consultation of a directory and a topographical gazetteer, and the thing is done. So easy is all this, and so handsome are the rewards of success, that the only reason we are not all adapters seems to be that as first in the field Mr. Horner buys up every French farce so soon as it comes out. Some few cases, however, present themselves when this primeval simplicity of treatment fails to ensure perfect intelligibility. One aim of dramatist and translator is always accomplished. We see a married citizen compromising himself to the best of his ability with a lady of easy virtue, that is to say of no virtue at all; we contemplate the series of more or less comic accidents by which his efforts at enjoyment are baffled; and we see him crawl home, abject and ashamed, to implore, and finally extort conjugal forgiveness, or it may even be to evade discovery. Our enjoyment of these familiar and conventional sources of hilarity is impaired when we cannot by any stretch of imagination conceive a man in the situation in which he is supposed to be placed. When Mr. Horner asks us to accept a wealthy and respectable solicitor, whose home is a model of comfort and even of luxury, as being also a private in a militia regiment, we refuse, because the supposition is too wild even for farce. In burlesque we might perhaps accept the idea—something like it has been put forward—of a man sweeping a crossing in the City and passing in the evening for a man of wealth and fashion. Only in the case of a stage career are transitions so violent accepted. A man thereon counterfeits a king, and without half-a-crown in his pocket assists at sumptuous repasts or bestows wealth and honours. There may Hamlet's father's ghost cry,

> List! list! O list!
> Who all the day enacts—a young tobacconist.

Not only have we in 'On Leave' this private in the militia who lives in splendour, we have his clerk, who almost dies of terror on account of the military penalties he supposes himself to have incurred without ever having been a soldier. Devices more ingenious than these are necessary to commend to us Mr. Horner's "adaptation." In the absence of these, we are not greatly exhilarated by the spectacle of two men on the stage making an all but complete change of attire, or that of a young lady, however shapely her proportions, revealing them indiscreetly and liberally as an intentional means of seduction. Laughter in abundance is stirred by 'On Leave,' but it is laughter that is not pleasant to hear. We are reluctant to test slight and amusing pieces by any very strict rules of art. Mr. Horner's piece, however, leaves behind it an unpleasant taste, and the clever acting of Miss Esmé Beringer, Mr. Playfair, and other members of the company fails to commend it to us.

Mr. A. H. Beesly's Danton (Longmans & Co.) is quite formless as a dramatic composition; and it is no excuse on his part to say that he did not intend it to be a drama. But there is real power in it; a considerable knowledge of the period has gone to the making of these rough, unfinished scenes; and there are touches of genuine humanity now and again. Here, for instance, is a speech of Danton which shows Mr. Beesly at his best:—

> He loves life more than I, though I too grieve
> At leaving wife and babe, but when a life
> Has dragged to dry-rot, better it should rot
> Under the earth than on it; death 's for all,
> But oft-times there are other deaths than one—
> You may die daily, some old part of you
> Each day shed off,—the courage of your youth
> Gone first, then faith, then open-heartedness,
> Till he who once cast caution to the winds,
> Spake all his soul, indifferent to blame,
> Made friends, made foes, crossed swords, was reconciled,
> And nursed his pride of honour through it all,
> Who, had he died in youth, had lived enshrined
> In many men's affections, dismally
> To crafty dotage moulders, all intent
> On petty feats of dexterous finesse,
> Vainglorious moderation, slippered stealth,
> Fireside malevolence, and chuckled scraps
> Of scandal, and, in brief, a base old age.

Some of the lyrics at the end of the book have not less vigour and humanity than the blank verse. 'Hay-making' is a song which is really a song.

Dramatic Gossip.

'The Manxman' was revived at the Lyric on the afternoon of last Saturday, and has been played during the present week, Mr. Wilson Barrett reappearing as Pete Quilliam and Miss Maud Jeffries as Kate Cregeen. The play is intended to serve a temporary purpose, and will in turn, it is said, give way to 'Hamlet' and 'Virginius,' and possibly to a production of 'Othello.'

The Strand has reopened with a revival of 'The Queen's Proctor,' Mr. Herman Merivale's adaptation of 'Divorçons,' Mr. Arthur Bourchier reappearing as the hero and Miss Violet Vanbrugh as his Italian wife; Mr. Charles Troode is now the lover, and Mr. Fred Thorne is seen for the first time in London as Joseph Popplecombe. 'Kitty Clive,' with Miss Irene Vanbrugh as the heroine, was also played, but gives way forthwith to 'Dr. Johnson.'

Mlle. Réjane's season, it is now determined, will begin at the Lyric on June 25th with the production of 'Madame Sans-Gêne,' and will last three weeks. Whether further entertainments will be given will probably depend on the reception of the first.

In the forthcoming performance at the New Century Theatre of 'John Gabriel Borkman' Mr. W. H. Vernon will, it is now arranged, play the eponymous hero, and Mrs. Beerbohm Tree, Mrs. Wilton; Miss Genevieve Ward is to be Mrs. Borkman, and Miss Elizabeth Robins, Ella Rontheim.

Madame Lloyd, formerly a sociétaire of the Comédie Française, from which body she is said to have retired on her marriage with M. Vibert the painter, has died in Paris at the age of fifty-four. Among her characters in the classic drama were Philaminthe in 'Les Femmes Savantes' and Elmire in 'Tartuffe.' Madame Lloyd became a sociétaire in 1881.

In the June number of the Fortnightly Review will commence a series of articles by M. Augustin Filon on the French stage, being a companion study to the articles on the English stage which were published in the Revue des Deux Mondes.

To Correspondents.—J. K. M.—H. R. B.—H. M.—F. V.—received.

G. B. B.—Next week.

W. G. B.—Many thanks, but we have no intention of reviewing the work.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

From the TIMES of April 2, 1897.

"'The DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY' reaches its jubilee with the volume just issued. Like several of its immediate predecessors, the fiftieth volume contains no very large number of pre-eminent names, but, unlike many of them, it contains an unusual number of names of great interest though not quite of first rank.....We may take the occasion of the appearance of the fiftieth volume to say once for all that the excellence of the Dictionary is not less conspicuous in its general workmanship than in its treatment of those more famous names which naturally attract the larger share of individual interest and attention."

JUST PUBLISHED, royal 8vo. 15*s.* net, in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20*s.* net. Volume 50 (RUSSEN—SCOBELL) of

THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

Fifty Volumes, comprising ABBADIE—SCOBELL, have been published, and a further Volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work, which it is confidently expected will be effected within three years from the present time.

NOTE.—A full Prospectus of 'The Dictionary of National Biography,' with Specimen Pages, will be sent upon application.

From the DAILY NEWS of April 3.—"The goal may now fairly be said to be in sight, and, incomplete though it still is, the work is already by far the most valuable of all existing publications of its class."

NEARLY READY, with Portraits, demy 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

ISABELLA the CATHOLIC, QUEEN of SPAIN, her LIFE, REIGN, and TIMES, 1451–1504. By M. le BARON DE NERVO. Translated from the Original French by Lieut.-Colonel TEMPLE-WEST (Retired).

The REVIVAL of LEARNING. By the late JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. Large crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* [Immediately.

 This is Volume II. of a NEW and CHEAPER EDITION of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* each. The remaining volumes will be published at intervals.

FROM GRAVE to GAY: being Essays and Studies concerned with Certain Subjects of Serious Interest, with the Puritans, with Literature, and with the Humours of Life, now for the first time Collected and Arranged. By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Undeniably clever, well-informed, brightly written, and in many ways interesting." Times.

GABRIELE VON BÜLOW, Daughter of Wilhelm von Humboldt. A Memoir compiled from the Family Papers of Wilhelm von Humboldt and his Children, 1791–1887. Translated by CLARA NORDLINGER. With Portraits and a Preface by Sir EDWARD B. MALET, G.C.B. G.C.M.G., &c. Demy 8vo. 16*s.* [In May.

NEW VOLUME BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

Next week, with a Preface entitled 'ON the EBB TIDE,' crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The WAYS of LIFE. Two Stories:—1. MR. SANDFORD. 2. THE WONDERFUL HISTORY of MR. ROBERT DALYELL. By Mrs. OLIPHANT.

NEW NOVEL BY ALEXANDER INNES SHAND.

Next week, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The LADY GRANGE. By ALEXANDER INNES SHAND, Author of 'Kilcarra: a Novel,' 'Half a Century; or, Changes in Men and Manners,' &c.

CONAN DOYLE'S NEW NOVEL.

On May 14, with 12 Full-Page Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6s.

UNCLE BERNAC:

A Memory of the Empire.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

AUTHOR OF 'THE WHITE COMPANY,' 'RODNEY STONE,' &c.

CAPTAIN CASTLE: a Tale of the China Seas. By CARLTON DAWE, Author of 'Yellow and White,' 'Mount Desolation,' 'Kakemonos,' &c. With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Crammed with vivid incident, graphically portrayed."—Punch.

The CORNHILL MAGAZINE for MAY.

Price ONE SHILLING. Contents.

The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (May).
NAPOLEON on ENGLAND and the ENGLISH: an Anniversary Study. By Lew Rosen.
The BOARDING-OFFICER of the "ALABAMA." By Percy Cross Standing.
FAMOUS TRIALS: the Queen against Courvoisier. By J. B. Atlay.
EARLY DAYS in WESTRALIA. By Major-General Sir Edmund Du Cane, K.C.B.
GHOSTS and RIGHT REASON. By Andrew Lang.
SOME INCIDENTS of the SPERM WHALE FISHERY. By Frank T. Bullen.
AFTER LATE SUPPER. By Mrs. H. Meyer Henne.
A COLONEL of the GRAND ARMY. By A. J. Butler.
WOLD JIMMY and ZAIREY. By Orme Agnus.
The MYSTERIES of the MONEY ARTICLES. By Hartley Withers.
PAGES from a PRIVATE DIARY.
IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chaps. 13–15. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.

W. M. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

THE POPULAR EDITION.

In Thirteen Volumes, crown 8vo. with Frontispiece to each Volume, 5*s.* each. Sets, handsomely bound in scarlet cloth, gilt top, 3*l.* 5*s.*; or in half-morocco, gilt, 5*l.* 10*s.*

CONTENTS OF THE VOLUMES.

1. VANITY FAIR.
2. The HISTORY of PENDENNIS.
3. The NEWCOMES.
4. ESMOND and BARRY LYNDON.
5. The VIRGINIANS.
6. The ADVENTURES of PHILIP, to which is prefixed A Shabby Genteel Story.
7. PARIS, IRISH, and EASTERN SKETCHES:—Paris Sketch-Book; Irish Sketch-Book; Cornhill to Cairo.
8. HOGGARTY DIAMOND, YELLOWPLUSH PAPERS, and BURLESQUES.—The Great Hoggarty Diamond; Yellowplush Papers; Novels by Eminent Hands; Jeames's Diary; Adventures of Major Gahagan; A Legend of the Rhine; Rebecca and Rowena; The History of the next French Revolution; Cox's Diary; The Fatal Boots.
9. The BOOK of SNOBS and SKETCHES of LIFE and CHARACTER:—The Book of Snobs; Sketches and Travels in London; Character-Sketches; Men's Wives; The Fitzboodle Papers; The Hedford Row Conspiracy; A Little Dinner at Timmins's.
10. ROUNDABOUT PAPERS and LECTURES:—Roundabout Papers; The Four Georges; The English Humourists of the Eighteenth Century; The Second Funeral of Napoleon.
11. CATHERINE, &c.:—Catherine; Lovell the Widower; Denis Duval; Ballads; The Wolves and the Lamb; Critical Reviews; Little Travels and Roadside Sketches.
12. CHRISTMAS BOOKS:—Mrs. Perkins's Ball; Dr. Birch; Our Street; The Kickleburys on the Rhine; The Rose and the Ring.
13. MISCELLANEOUS ESSAYS: Sketches and Reviews; Contributions to Punch.

OTHER EDITIONS OF MR. THACKERAY'S WORKS.

The STANDARD EDITION. 26 vols. large 8vo. 10*s.* 6*d.* each.

 This Edition contains some of Mr Thackeray's Writings not previously collected, with many additional Illustrations.

The LIBRARY EDITION. 24 vols. large crown 8vo. handsomely bound in cloth, 9*l.*, or half-russia, marbled edges, 13*l.* 13*s.* With Illustrations by the Author, Richard Doyle, and Frederick Walker

 The Volumes are sold separately, in cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.* each.

The CHEAPER ILLUSTRATED EDITION. 26 vols. crown 8vo 3*s.* 6*d.* each, sets in cloth, 4*l.* 11*s.*; or handsomely bound in half morocco, 8*l.* 8*s.* Containing nearly all the small Woodcut Illustrations of the former Editions, and many new Illustrations by Eminent Artists This Edition contains altogether 1 773 Illustrations.

The POCKET EDITION. 27 vols. small fcap. 8vo. bound in cloth, with gilt top, 1*s.* 6*d.* each

 The Volumes are also supplied as follows:—

The NOVELS. 13 vols. in gold-lettered cloth case, 21*s.*

The MISCELLANIES. 14 vols. in gold-lettered cloth case, 21*s.*

ROBERT BROWNING'S COMPLETE WORKS. New and Cheaper Edition. Edited and Annotated by AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Q.C. M.P., and FREDERIC G. KENYON. In 2 vols. large crown 8vo. bound in cloth, gilt top, with a Portrait-Frontispiece to each volume, 7*s.* 6*d.* per volume.

"Not only a cheap, but a handy, useful, and eminently presentable edition....Altogether a most satisfactory and creditable production."—Globe.

 Also the UNIFORM EDITION of ROBERT BROWNING'S WORKS, 17 vols. crown 8vo. bound in Sets, 4*l.* 5*s.*; or the volumes bound separately, 5*s.* each.

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING'S POETICAL WORKS. UNIFORM EDITION. In 6 vols. small crown 8vo. 5*s.* each. This Edition contains Five Portraits of Mrs. Browning at different periods of life and a few Illustrations.

 Volume VI.—AURORA LEIGH—can also be had bound and lettered as a separate Volume.

MISS THACKERAY'S WORKS. UNIFORM EDITION. Each Volume illustrated by a Vignette Title-Page. 10 vols. large crown 8vo. 6*s.* each.

Contents:—Old Kensington—The Village on the Cliff—Five Old Friends and a Young Prince—To Esther, &c.—Bluebeard's Keys, &c.—The Story of Elizabeth, Two Hours; From an Island—Toilers and Spinsters—Miss Angel; Fulham Lawn—Miss Williamson's Divagations—Mrs. Dymond.

LIFE and WORKS of the SISTERS BRONTË. LIBRARY EDITION. 7 vols. each containing 5 Illustrations, large crown 8vo. 5*s.* each.

Contents:—Jane Eyre—Shirley—Villette—Tenant of Wildfell Hall—Wuthering Heights—The Professor and Poems—Life of Charlotte Brontë.

 Also the POPULAR EDITION, in 7 vols small post 8vo. limp cloth, or cloth boards, gilt top, 2*s.* 6*d.* each. And the POCKET EDITION, in 7 vols. small fcap 8vo. each with a Frontispiece, bound in half-cloth, with cut or uncut edges, 1*s.* 6*d.* per Volume; or the set bound in cloth, with gilt top, in gold-lettered cloth case, 12*s.* 6*d.*

MRS. GASKELL'S WORKS. ILLUSTRATED EDITION. 7 vols. containing 4 Illustrations, 3*s.* 6*d.* each, bound in cloth.

Contents:—Wives and Daughters—North and South—Sylvia's Lovers—Cranford, and other Tales—Mary Barton, and other Tales—Ruth, and other Tales—Lizzie Leigh, and other Tales.

 Also the POPULAR EDITION, in 7 vols small post 8vo. limp cloth, or cloth boards, gilt top, 2*s.* 6*d.* each. And the POCKET EDITION, in 8 vols. small fcap. 8vo. bound in half-cloth, with cut or uncut edges, 1*s.* 6*d.* per volume; or the set bound in cloth, with gilt top, in gold-lettered cloth case, 14*s.*

LEIGH HUNT'S WORKS. 7 vols. fcap. 8vo. limp cloth, or cloth boards, gilt top, 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

Contents:—Imagination and Fancy—The Town—Autobiography of Leigh Hunt—Men, Women, and Books—Wit and Humour—A Jar of Honey from Mount Hyola—Table Talk.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS' WORKS. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* each.

Contents:—Friends in Council, First Series—Friends in Council, Second Series—Companions of my Solitude, Essays written during the Intervals of Business, an Essay on Organization in Daily Life.

LIFE and WRITINGS of JOSEPH MAZZINI. 6 vols. crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* each.

 Messrs. SMITH, ELDER & CO. will be happy to forward a CATALOGUE of their Publications post free on application.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

VOLUME I. NOW READY.

Royal 8vo. 700 pp. 25s. net.

THE ROYAL NAVY

From the Earliest Times to the Present.

By WM. LAIRD CLOWES.

 Each Volume will be complete in itself, with an Index, and orders will be taken either for Sets or for separate Volumes.

In 5 handsome royal 8vo. vols. 25s. each, net.

PUBLISHERS' NOTE.

THE CONTRIBUTORS.—The present work, in the preparation of which Mr. LAIRD CLOWES is being assisted by Sir CLEMENTS MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, Author of 'Ironclads in Action'; Mr. THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Mr. E. FRASER, and many other competent writers, aims at being a trustworthy and, so far as space allows, a complete history, from the earliest times to the present.

SCOPE OF THE WORK.—Hitherto there has been no complete history of the Royal Navy of Great Britain. Moreover, no British Naval History extant is thoroughly well illustrated with portraits, maps, plans, and pictures taken from contemporary and authentic sources.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

THE LIFE OF NELSON THE EMBODIMENT OF THE SEA POWER OF GREAT BRITAIN.

By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.,
Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c.

2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."
Times.

"A great biography, and one to be read by all men."—Spectator.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

"Extremely interesting.....A brilliant picture of a contemporary mania."—Daily Telegraph.
"On English Fashion."—National Observer.
"Clever.....The irreclaimable 'Cocky' is an excellent creation."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"Thoroughly interesting, and touches of real pathos mingle with its vigorous satire and strong situations."
"Brilliant, if daring."—Scotsman. Glasgow Herald.
"Incomparably the best the author has ever written."
National Observer.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

THE HANDSOME HUMES.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

LOW'S 2s. 6d. LIBRARY OF TRAVEL AND ADVENTURE.

TWO NEW VOLUMES.

Uniform crown 8vo. volumes, fully illustrated, cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

HAUSALAND; or, Fifteen Hundred Miles through the Central Soudan. By the Rev. C. H. ROBINSON, M.A. With Map, Portrait, and numerous Illustrations.

TWO KINGS of UGANDA; or, Life by the Shores of the Victoria Nyanza. By the Rev. R. P. ASHE, M.A. With Map and Illustration.

A NILE VOYAGE. By Charles and SUSAN BOWLES. Printed in Tokyo by T. Hasegawa, on Crêped Paper, with numerous Charming Pictures, printed in Colours, of Nile Views, Character Sketches, &c. With a Preface by the Rev. A. H. SAYCE, LL.D. Bound in Japanese fashion in crêpe or crisped paper, sewn with silk, fcap. 4to. 7s. 6d.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore, NOTES AND QUERIES."
Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."
Quarterly Review.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d., of all Booksellers,

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY,
Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY,
Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY,
More especially of English Authors, with Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE,
Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY,
With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,
Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY,
Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY,
Including Histories of Old Families, completion of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES,
On points of ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPOGRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MISCELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATICS, PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and Newsvendors.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."
Illustrated London News.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."
Bookseller.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."
Manchester Examiner.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—Shakespeare's 'Macbeth'—Religion of Queen Elizabeth—National Anthem—"Classes and Masses"—Stonehenge Bird—Letter-paper Heading—"Busiet"—"Warta"—Lord Beaconsfield—Pronunciation—Pope's Villa—Dog Row—Lady Hamilton—French Psalter—Version of Epitaph.

QUERIES:—Sir E. Littleton—"Little Dick of Belle Vue"—Tourgenieff—Haselden—Drawings—Seal of Sligo—"Duddery"—Vernons of Haddon—Walsinghams—Heraldic—Silver Plate—Author of Fable—French Song—Judge Davis—Haydon's Diaries—St Dunstan—Marriage Custom—Door-plates—Spanish Armada—Allhallows—Posy Ring—Lord Bowen—Stepney—Roman Steelyards—First Ship Named—Swinton—A. Blayney—St. Paul's Parochial Society—Children of Sir H. Percy.

REPLIES:—Virgil's Epitaph—"Ha'porth of tar"—"Handicap"—"Tongue-batteries"—Earls of Derwentwater—Umbrella Folk-lore—Proverb—Topographical Collections—Gillman Family—Cagots—Politician—'Fasesying'—"Animalcule"—Avis and Joyce—"Joffing Steps"—Age of Yew Trees—'Middlemarch'—"Barghest"—Keck Family—Miss Farebrother—"I remember"—'Mag-astromancer'—First Easter—"Between the shrine and the stone"—'Vicar of Wakefield'—Henrietta Maria—T. Bolas—Louis Panormo—Names of Drugs—H. Walter—Vespasian—Copying Machine—Trials at Bar—Lancashire Hornpipe—Longest Reign—"Under the weather"—Best Ghost Story—Gretna Green Marriages—Carrick.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Baring-Gould's 'Lives of the Saints'—Barrère and Leland's 'Dictionary of Slang, Jargon, and Cant'—Farmer's 'Merry Songs and Ballads'—Hiatt's 'Cathedral Church of Chester'—'The Bacon Mania.'

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d.*; by post, 4½*d.*

Published by John C. Francis, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

CAPT. MAHAN'S LIFE of NELSON.

REPORTS of STATE TRIALS.

The EPIC of the FALL of MAN.

HISTORY of ROME in the MIDDLE AGES.

A GERMAN HISTORY of ENGLAND in the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

NEW NOVELS—Guavas the Tinner; Christine of the Hills; The Career of Claudia; St. Eva; Beyond the Pale; Sworn Allies; An Australian Duchess; From Grub to Butterfly; The Sound of a Voice.

CHINESE STORIES.

BIBLICAL and PATRISTIC LITERATURE.

CATALOGUES of MANUSCRIPTS.

TRANSLATIONS from the GREEK POETS.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.

UBALDINO and the ARMADA; The 'DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY'; The SPRING PUBLISHING SEASON; CHAUCER and KING RENÉ of ANJOU; SALE; TWO PROTHALAMIA.

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.

SCIENCE—Red Deer; Anthropological Notes; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.

FINE ARTS—The Ruined Cities of Ceylon; Library Table; Sir E. Burne-Jones at the New Gallery; Vitruviani; Pompey's Pillar at Alexandria; Sales; Gossip.

MUSIC—The Week; Recent Publications; Gossip; Performances Next Week.

DRAMA—John Gabriel Borkman; Library Table; The Week; Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY, price THREEPENCE, of

John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

Now ready, 8vo. 6*s.*

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, No. 370,

APRIL, 1897.

Contents.

1. QUEEN VICTORIA.
2. The PSALMS in HISTORY.
3. BENJAMIN JOWETT.
4. FRENCH ART.
5. The JERNINGHAM LETTERS.
6. CRIME in ENGLAND.
7. The POETRY of SPORT.
8. LAMMENAIS.
9. The HUMAN MIND and ANIMAL INTELLIGENCE.
10. RISE of the GERMAN INFANTRY.
11. HISTORICAL WRITINGS of FRANCIS PARKMAN.
12. The POLITICAL SITUATION.

London: John Murray, Albemarle-street.

NEW MAGAZINE OF GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY.
No. I. on MAY 1st.
Monthly, price One Shilling.

THE GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE:

a Journal of Family History, Heraldry, and Pedigrees.

Contents for MAY.

The SURRENDER of the ISLE of WIGHT. By J. H. Round.
WILLIAM BRADFORD'S HISTORY of PLYMOUTH PLANTATION, commonly known as 'The LOG of the "MAYFLOWER."' By J. L. Otter.
An ANCIENT AUGMENTATION.
The SOBIESKI STUARTS. By Henry Jenner, F.S.A.
SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY. Part I. By Mrs. Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.
A DEVONSHIRE MANUSCRIPT. By James Dallas, F.L.S.
A LIST of STRANGERS. By Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen.
NELSON and his ENCHANTRESS.
FINALITY.
QUERIES and CORRESPONDENCE.
A GAZETTE of the MONTH: being a Chronicle of Creations, Deaths, and other Matters.
BY THE WAY.

Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

NORTHAMPTON ARCHITECTURE.—See the BUILDER of April 24 (4*d*; by post, 4½*d.*) for fully illustrated Article on Northampton, being the Sixth of a Series, appearing at intervals, on the Architecture of our large Provincial Towns.

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2*s.*

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum.—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr. Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post.—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News.—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette.—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser.—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull.—"Very successful."
Metropolitan.—"Instinct with patriotic fire."
Illustrated London News.—"Right well done."
News of the World.—"There is real poetry in these songs."
Mirror.—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

Just published, pp. 112, cloth, 1*s.* post free,

HÆMORRHOIDS and HABITUAL CONSTIPATION:

their Constitutional Cure. By JOHN H. CLARKE, M.D. London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

MEMORY.

PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM. The last, most complete, and perfect Edition. Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading. Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10*s* 6*d*. English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy.

Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. GOULD, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2*s.*; or free by post, 2*s.* 3*d.*

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1*s.* 4*d.*; or free by post, 1*s.* 6*d.*

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10*s.* 6*d.*, 16*s.* 6*d.*, and 25*s.* each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.

ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.

THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.

EPPS'S COCOA.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN,
HEADACHE, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION,
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

This day, 400 pp. crown 8vo. price 7*s.* 6*d.* cloth.

A HANDBOOK OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Originally Compiled by AUSTIN DOBSON.

NEW EDITION, REVISED, WITH NEW CHAPTERS, AND EXTENDED TO THE PRESENT TIME.

By W. HALL GRIFFIN, B.A.,
Professor of English Language and Literature at King's College, London.

"For truth of criticism it is about the best book of the kind."—Westminster Review.
"An excellent handbook of English literature."—Athenæum.

London: CROSBY LOCKWOOD & SON, 7, Stationers' Hall-court, E.C.

JUST PUBLISHED. 8vo. price 15*s.*

THE BIBLE: its Meaning and Supremacy.

By F. W. FARRAR, D.D. F.R.S., Dean of Canterbury.

Contents: Introduction. Chap. 1. The Bible is not one Homogeneous Book, but a gradually collected Canon. 2. The Bible represents the remains of a much wider Literature. 3. The Bible combines immense Variety with essential Unity. 4. The "Allegorical Method" of Exegesis Untenable. 5. The Bible is not Homogeneous in its Morality. 6. Antitheses of Scripture. 7. "Verbal Dictation" an Untrue and Unspiritual Hypothesis. 8. "Plenary Inspiration." 9. The Higher Criticism. 10. The Bible contains the Word of God. 11. Biblical Infallibility. 12. Dangerous Results of the "Supernatural Dictation" Theory. 13. The Bible not the only Source from which we can Learn of God. 14. Misinterpretation of Scripture. True and False Views of Scripture. 15. Further Misinterpretation of the Bible. 16. The Wresting of Texts. 17. Scripture Difficulties. 18. Supremacy of the Bible. 19. The Bible and Individual Souls. 20. The Bible the Chief Source of Human Consolation. 21. Special Consolations of Scripture. 22. The Bible and the Nations. 23. Conclusion. Index.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. London, New York, and Bombay.

MURRAY'S HANDBOOKS.

MR. MURRAY begs to call attention to the "INDEX and DIRECTORY" with which the newer Editions of his Handbooks are supplied. These contain all information as to Hotels, Conveyances, &c., and are constantly kept up to date, so that purchasers of his Guide-Books are always supplied with the very latest information.

EUROPEAN HANDBOOKS FOR SPRING TRAVEL.

FRANCE, Part I.: Normandy, Brittany, The Seine and Loire, Bordeaux, The Pyrenees, &c. 36 Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

FRANCE, Part II.: Central France, Auvergne, The Cevennes, Burgundy, The Rhone and Saone, Provence, Marseilles, Alsace-Lorraine, Champagne, &c. 25 Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

HOLLAND and BELGIUM. 18 Maps and Plans. 6s.

DENMARK and ICELAND, Schleswig, Holstein, Copen- hagen, Jutland, and Iceland. Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

SWEDEN, Stockholm, Upsala, Gothenburg, The Shores of the Baltic, &c. Maps and Plans. 6s.

NORWAY, Christiania, Bergen, Trondhjem, The Fjelds and Fjords. With Special Information for Fishermen and Cyclists. By T. MICHELL, C.B., H.B.M. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

RUSSIA, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Finland, Crimea, Caucasus, &c. Edited by T. MICHELL, C.B., H.B.M. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 18s.

The RHINE and NORTH GERMANY, The Black Forest, The Hartz, Saxon Switzerland, The Giant Mountains, Elsass, and Lothringen. 82 Maps and Plans. 10s.

SOUTH GERMANY, AUSTRIA, Tyrol, Wurtemberg, Bavaria, Salsburg, Styria, Hungary, and the Danube, from Ulm to the Black Sea. Two Parts, 34 Maps and Plans. Part I. 7s. 6d.; Part II. 6s.

SWITZERLAND, Alps of Savoy and Piedmont, Italian Lakes, and Part of Dauphiné. Maps. Two Parts.
Part I. The Bernese Oberland, Geneva, Lucerne, Engadine, &c. 6s.
Part II. The Alps of Savoy and Piedmont, Italian Lakes, and Part of Dauphiné. 6s.

NORTH ITALY and VENICE, Turin, Milan, The Italian Lakes, Verona, Padua, Venice, Genoa, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A., Author of 'Dame Europa's School.' With 34 Maps and Plans. 10s.

CENTRAL ITALY and FLORENCE, Tuscany, Umbria, The Marches, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With 24 Maps and Plans. 6s.

HANDBOOK for INDIA, CEYLON, and BURMA: including the Provinces of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras (The Punjab, North-West Provinces, Rajputana, The Central Provinces, Mysore, &c.), The Native States, and Assam. With 55 Maps and Plans of Towns and Buildings, and a New Chapter on Cashmere. Post 8vo. 20s.

"Of the general arrangement of the book, and the skill with which an immense mass of interesting and valuable material has been crowded into a small space, it would be difficult to speak too highly."—St. James's Gazette.
"We have no fault to find with the new volume. One of the most praiseworthy features of the book is the unusually ample supply of excellent maps and plans."—Speaker.
"No visitor to India should start without a 'Murray.'"—Pall Mall Gazette.

HANDBOOK for JAPAN. Fourth Edition. By Basil Hall Chamberlain and W. B. Mason. With Maps and Plans. 15s. net.

HANDBOOK for NEW ZEALAND, Auckland, Wellington, The Hot Lakes District, Wanganui, Christ Church, Dunedin, The West Coast Road, The Cold Lakes, The Sounds, &c. By F. W. PENNEFATHER, LL.D. Maps and Plans. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"We have naught but praise for Murray's 'Handbook for New Zealand.'"—Athenæum.
"The book is in every way worthy of the publishers and the country concerned."—British Australasian.
"A book which is now easily first as a trustworthy guide to the finest of the colonies of the Empire."—Spectator.

ENGLISH HANDBOOKS.

"The general quality of Murray, the scientific character of the information, the accuracy and interest of the historical particulars, to say nothing of the lowness of the price, place his Guides far ahead of any competitors."—Saturday Review.

HANDBOOK for ENGLAND and WALES. Arranged alphabetically, with List of Railway Stations, Hotels, and all Places and Objects worth seeing. 1 vol. Maps, 12s.

HANDBOOK for SCOTLAND. Thoroughly Revised, with Special Detailed Information for Pedestrians, and entirely New Maps. Printed on specially thin and light paper. 9s.

"In spite of the enterprise devoted to the production of guide-books in the past fifteen years, Murray's Handbooks still maintain their place as facile princeps, and of all, this Guide to Scotland is the high-water mark of guide-book excellence for tourists of intelligence."—Observer.

HANDBOOK for IRELAND. New and Thoroughly Revised Edition. With entirely New Set of Maps and Plans. Printed on specially light and thin paper. 9s.

EASTERN COUNTIES: Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, and Cambridge. 12s.
KENT. 7s. 6d.
SUSSEX. 6s.
SURREY, HANTS, and the ISLE of WIGHT.
HERTS, BEDS, and HUNTS. 7s. 6d.
OXFORDSHIRE. Oxford with its Colleges. 6s.
WILTS, DORSET, and SOMERSET. 12s.
CORNWALL, PENZANCE, FALMOUTH, &c. 6s.
WORCESTER and HEREFORD. 5s.
GLOUCESTER. 6s.
DEVON. 7s. 6d.
NORTH WALES. 6s.
SOUTH WALES. 6s.
NORTHAMPTON and RUTLAND. 7s. 6d.
DERBY, NOTTS, LEICESTER, and STAFFORD.
SHROPSHIRE and CHESHIRE. 6s.
LANCASHIRE. 6s.
YORKSHIRE. 12s.
LINCOLNSHIRE. 7s. 6d.
DURHAM and NORTHUMBERLAND. 10s.
The LAKE DISTRICT of WESTMORELAND and CUMBERLAND. 6s.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, April 24, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3627. SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

The Rev. J. P. MAHAFFY, D.D., Professor of Ancient History in the University of Dublin, will THIS DAY (SATURDAY), May 1, at 3 o'clock, begin a COURSE of THREE LECTURES on 'The Greek Theatre according to Recent Discoveries.'

Subscription to this Course, Half-a-Guinea; to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

The ANNUAL MEETING of the Members of the Royal Institution will be held THIS DAY (SATURDAY), May 1, at 5 o'clock.

ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON.—A Course of TEN POPULAR LECTURES on BIRDS will be delivered in the Lecture-Room, in the Society's Gardens, Regent's Park, on THURSDAYS, at 5 P.M., commencing May 6, by Mr. F. E. BEDDARD, M.A. F.R.S., Prosector to the Society.

Tickets for the whole Course, including entrance to the Gardens, 10s. each; or 1s. each Lecture, not including entrance, to be obtained at the Society's Office, 3, Hanover-square, W. Fellows admitted free.

ROYAL ACADEMY of ARTS.—The EXHIBITION will OPEN on MONDAY, May 3.—Admission (from 8 A.M. to 7 P.M., except on the First Day, when it opens at 10), 1s. Catalogues, 1s. and 1s. 6d. Season Tickets, 5s.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—SUMMER EXHIBITION NOW OPEN.

SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Secretary (pro tem.).

MINIATURES.—The celebrated COLLECTION of HISTORICAL MINIATURES formed by Mr. LUMSDEN PROPERT will be ON EXHIBITION on and after MAY 10 at the FINE-ART SOCIETY'S GALLERY, 148, New Bond-street.

ARTISTS' GENERAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION,
For the Relief of Distressed Artists, their Widows and Orphans.
President—Sir EDWARD J. POYNTER, P.R.A.

The ANNIVERSARY DINNER will take place at the WHITEHALL ROOMS of the HOTEL MÉTROPOLE on SATURDAY, May 8, at half-past 6 o'clock.

Right Reverend the LORD BISHOP OF LONDON in the Chair.

Dinner Tickets, including Wines, One Guinea.

Donations will be received and thankfully acknowledged by ALFRED WATERHOUSE, R.A., Treasurer.
WALTER W. OULESS, R.A., Honorary Secretary.
DOUGLAS GORDON, Secretary.
19, St. James's-street, S.W.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE, 1897.
President—
The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.
Hon. Treasurer—
HENRY R. TEDDER, Esq., Athenæum, Pall Mall, S.W.
Hon. Secretary—
J. Y. W. MAC ALISTER, Esq., 20, Hanover-square, W.

The Conference will be held (by the kind permission of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Corporation) in the COUNCIL CHAMBER, GUILDHALL, LONDON, on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Lord Mayor has invited the members of the Conference to a Conversazione in the Mansion House on the evening of July 13.

Offers of Papers should be sent to the Hon. Secretary of the Papers Committee, J. D. BROWN, Esq., Clerkenwell Public Library, E.C. An Exhibition of Library Appliances will be an important feature of the Conference. Intending exhibitors should communicate with the Hon. Secretary of the Exhibition Committee, THOMAS MASON, Esq., 115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to attend all meetings and social gatherings. Applications for membership should be sent at once to the HON. SECRETARY.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Established 1893.)
Candidates' names are now being received (prior to entering on New Premises) for the election of 500 NEW TOWN MEMBERS and 1,000 NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS.

NOTE.—Windows and Balconies have been secured on the LINE of ROUTE of the QUEEN'S PROCESSION, JUNE 22, to enable MEMBERS and their FRIENDS to have SEATS at MODERATE PRICES.

For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY,
PALL MALL CLUB OFFICES, 60, HAYMARKET, S.W.

YOUNG MAN (20), well educated, with Literary and Commercial experience, desires SECRETARIAL or similar situation. Shorthand, Type-Writing, Cataloguing, Indexing, and French. Good references.—Write LITTÉRAIRE, care of Anderson's Advertising Agency, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

ROYAL IRISH ACADEMY.

Applications for the Academy's TODD PROFESSORSHIP of the CELTIC LANGUAGES which is NOW VACANT, should be sent in to the Secretary of Council before May 31, 1897.

All particulars regarding the Professorship can be obtained from the TREASURER of the Academy, at the Academy House, 19, Dawson-street, Dublin.

ST. DAVID'S COLLEGE, LAMPETER.

The Council invite applications for the Office of PRINCIPAL, about to be vacated. The Principal is required by the Charter of Incorporation to be an M.A. of either Oxford or Cambridge, and in Holy Orders. Salary 800*l.* a year, together with a share of Tuition Fees and a House rent free.—Further particulars may be obtained from the Clerk to the College Council, to whom applications, with thirty printed copies of testimonials, should be sent on or before May 15, 1897.

WILLIAM DAVIES, Clerk to the Council.
St. David's College, Lampeter.

MERTHYR COUNTY SCHOOL.

WANTED AT ONCE MATHEMATICAL MASTER. Salary, 130*l.*
Application, before May 6, to C. OWEN, M.A., Head Master.

HEAD MASTERSHIP VACANT.

ARMAGH ROYAL SCHOOL.

The Armagh Protestant Board of Education will meet on Monday, June 14, to consider applications for the HEAD MASTERSHIP of ARMAGH ROYAL SCHOOL, now about to become vacant.

The School Premises are capable of lodging a Hundred Boarders, and are equal to any in Ireland.

Further particulars can be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, JAMES H. STRONGE, Esq., Hockley Lodge, Armagh, by whom all applications must be received on or before Saturday, June 12.

A GENTLEMAN of literary ability, Author, M.A. Oxon, residing amidst lovely surroundings and influences in the Channel Islands, will receive a YOUTH to prepare for the WRITING PROFESSION, to whom he offers valuable tuition in Composition, Arrangement, and Style, as well as putting him in the way of Publishing or entry to Journalistic work.—Address ORGUEIL, Payn's Library, Jersey.

ADVERTISER requires Short Series of ILLUSTRATED and well-written PRACTICAL ARTICLES on Model Boat Building—Lathes and Simple Turning in Wood—Model Engine Building—Model Theatres, Scenery, &c.—Clock Making—Repoussé and Saw Piercing in Metal. Articles upon other subjects will receive consideration.

Address F. S., 10, Coleridge-road, Crouch End, London, N.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

MOUNT VIEW, HAMPSTEAD.—The NEXT TERM will BEGIN on THURSDAY, May 6. Reference kindly allowed to Professor Ruskin, Brantwood, Coniston; Mrs. Boyd Carpenter, The Palace, Ripon; Professor Carey Foster, 18, Dalehamgardens, N.W.; and others.—For Prospectus apply to MISS HELEN E. BAINES.

LONDON SCHOOL of MEDICINE for WOMEN, in Association with the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's Inn-road.—For Prospectus, Scholarships, &c., apply to THE SECRETARY, at the School, 30, Handel-street, Brunswick-square, W.C.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

ASSISTANT SCHOOLMISTRESSES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can recommend University Graduates, Trained and Certificated High School Teachers, Foreign Teachers, Kindergarten Mistresses, &c.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

TO LECTURE SOCIETIES.

MR. R. WALLACE, M.P. (Edin.), is now making his Lecturing arrangements for the Season 1897–98. Subjects:—'Cant,' 'House of Commons,' 'Mrs. Grundy,' and 'Shams.' Details on application.—9, Edith-villas, London, W.

MR. EDWARD WHYMPER will accept engagements to LECTURE on MOUNTAINEERING and MOUNTAIN TRAVEL during the Season 1897-8.—For full particulars apply to THE LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, London.

TYPE-WRITING UNDERTAKEN PRIVATELY. Copying Work of all kinds. French, Italian, and German Translations. Very moderate charges.—MISS FANSHAW, 51, Thornhill-road, Barnsbury, N.

TYPE-WRITING.—Over 5,000 words 1*s.* per 1,000. Special terms for larger quantities. MSS. carefully Revised. Testimonials, Reports, &c., duplicated. Translations.—E. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, W.C.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.

CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3*d.* post free.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

Now ready,

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS.
DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY
Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.
CATALOGUES of NEW PURCHASES issued at frequent intervals.
Libraries Arranged, Catalogued, Valued, and Purchased.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

NOW READY, FOR MAY,

EDWARD HOWELL'S CATALOGUE of SECOND-HAND BOOKS. The following are some of the items:—
Choice Collection of Book Plates, 20*l.*
Dugdale's Monasticon, 8 vols. 20*l.*
McKenney and Hall's Indian Tribes, 3 vols. folio, 7*l.* 10*s.*
Paxton's Flower Garden, 3 vols. 3*l.* 10*s.*
Sowerby's Botany, 36 vols. 18*l.*
Stothard's Monumental Figures, 4*l.* 15*s.*
Siborne's Waterloo, 2 vols. and Atlas, 10*s.*
Maister Skelton's Pithy, Pleasaunt, and Profitable Workes, 1568, 25*l.*
Staunton's Shakspere, 15 vols. imperial 8vo. half morocco, 10*l.* 10*s.*
Art Journal, 32 vols. cloth, 10*l.*, cost 60*l.*
A magnificent Collection of Illustrated French Books, superbly bound.
Over 1,000 Lots in the Catalogue.
Post free on application to
E. HOWELL, 28, Church-street, Liverpool.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

WILL BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

THE NORWICH SCHOOL OF PAINTING.

A Series of Autotype Reproductions of Works by John Sell Cotman, Old Crome, Stark, Ladbrooke, Bright, Middleton, Daniell, Leman, Lound, &c. Forty Autotype Plates, mounted on grey boards, in Portfolio. Price Ten Guineas, net.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.

This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.

An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS

NOW OFFERED AT

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST

(100 PAGES)

Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,
30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;
241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;
48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at
BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER

AMERICAN

COLONIAL TRACTS.

MONTHLY.

Number One, MAY, 1897.

A DISCOURSE CONCERNING THE DESIGNED ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW COLONY TO THE SOUTH OF CAROLINA, IN THE MOST DELIGHTFUL COUNTRY OF THE UNIVERSE, BY SIR ROBERT MOUNTGOMERY, BARONET, LONDON, 1717.

Price 25 Cents. $3.00 a Year.

PUBLISHED BY

GEORGE P. HUMPHREY,
25, EXCHANGE-STREET,
ROCHESTER,
NEW YORK,
U.S.A.

CHEAP REMAINDERS.

Messrs. GAY & BIRD have bought from Messrs. Macmillan & Co. the entire remainder of the following important works, and for a short time offer them at the following low rates:—

AGASSIZ (LOUIS).—LIFE, LETTERS, and WORKS. By JULES MARCOU. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, with Illustrations (pub. at 17*s.* net), 6*s.* net.

GRAY (ASA), LETTERS of. Edited by JANE LORING GRAY. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, with Illustrations (pub. at 15*s.*), 5*s.* net.

TARR (R. S.).—ECONOMIC GEOLOGY of the UNITED STATES. With Briefer Mention of Foreign Mineral Products. By RALPH S. TARR, B.S. F.G.S.A., Assistant Professor of Geology at Cornell University. Large 8vo. cloth, with Illustrations (pub. at 16*s.*), 4*s.* net.

London: GAY & BIRD, 22, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

CASH OFFERS WANTED for THREE COPIES of Large-Paper Edition of HOLMES'S 'QUEEN VICTORIA.'—Court Circular, 213, Piccadilly, W.

FOR SALE, the TIMES Newspaper, from January, 1838, to December, 1896, inclusive, 269 vols. bound in half-bazil; together with PALMER'S INDEX, complete for same period, 236 vols. small 4to. cloth as issued. Excellent condition.—Offers X. Y. Z., 9, Royal-arcade, Old Bond-street, W.

DORKING.—COUNTRY HOME OFFERED in modern well-furnished house, situated on lovely common. Bracing air. 35*s.* inclusive. Cycle accommodation.—L. W., 69, Talbot-road, Bayswater.

FINE ARTS.—TO CONNOISSEURS ONLY.

Part of an ESTATE of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, under directions of co-Executors, TO BE SOLD PRIVATELY, in whole or in part. It is a small Collection by Ancient and Modern Masters of distinction. Solicitor, HAROLD F. P. ROBERTS, Esq., 7, Gray's Inn-place, Gray's Inn, Holborn, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD, (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Sales by Auction.

A Collection of Engravings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, comprising English and Foreign Portraits, including an extensive Collection of the Works of Robert Nanteuil, many in very early states; Fancy Subjects after English Masters—Sporting Prints—Framed Engravings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Book-Plates, the Property of a well-known Collector.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES—EX-LIBRIS, including Specimens of the Jacobean, Chippendale, Wreath and Ribbon, and other styles; also a few Books relating to Heraldry and Book-Plates, comprising a Complete Set of the Ex-Libris Journal, the Property of a well-known COLLECTOR.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Further Portion of the Library of M. C. SCOTT, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 5, a FURTHER PORTION of the LIBRARY of M. C. SCOTT, Esq., consisting of Early and Rare Almanacs, Newspapers and Pamphlets published in Hobart Town, Van Diemen's Land, Tasmanian and Hobart Town Punch, and other Properties comprising Bartsch, Le Peintre Graveur, 21 vols. 1854, &c.—Rousseau's Novelists' Library—Seymour's New Etchings from Old Authors—Versailles Gallery, &c.—Scarce Sporting Works—Natural History—Books on Art—Transactions of Learned Societies—First Editions of the Writings of George Eliot, Leigh Hunt, Fred Reynolds, Robert Browning, Charles Dickens, W. M. Thackeray, J. Ruskin, &c.—a Collection of Autograph Letters—Broadside Proclamations—Modern Illustrated Publications, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of Mrs. R. L. KAY.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 6, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Mrs. R. L. KAY, of Park House, Earl's Court-road, comprising Extra Illustrated Topographical Works—Old Plays—Illuminated Manuscripts—Books of Hours—Journals of Learned Societies—Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, First Edition—Works Illustrated by Cruikshank—Dibdin's Works—Caricatures—Histories—Finely Illustrated Works of the Last Century—Sporting Books—First Editions of Dickens, George Eliot, Thackeray, Cowper, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Holton Collection of Coins and Medals.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the HOLTON COLLECTION of COINS and MEDALS comprising Greek and Roman Coins in Gold, Silver and Bronze—British Anglo-Saxon and English and Scotch Coins in Gold, Silver, and Bronze—English Patterns and Proofs, including a Fair Example of the Celebrated Petition Crown—Foreign Coins in Gold and Silver—English and Foreign Medals—Coin Cabinets.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Engravings formed at the end of the last century, the Property of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS formed at the end of the last century, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, comprising Fancy Subjects by F. Bartolozzi and others—Sporting Prints—and an extensive Collection of Mezzotints by Masters of the English School, including some fine Specimens from the Works of Sir J. Reynolds.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts, including a Portion of the Library of Sir CECIL DOMVILLE, Bart., and a Selection from the Library of J. S. BURRA, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 12, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a Selection from the Library of Sir CECIL DOMVILLE, Bart., comprising County Histories and Archæological Works the Property of a LADY of TITLE, including Whitaker's History of Richmondshire, 2 vols. Large Paper—Whitaker's Loidis and Elmete, and Thoresby's Ducatus Leodiensis, 2 vols.—Rare Books relating to America &c., a Selection from the Library of J. S. BURRA, Esq. comprising Manuscript Horæ, with finely painted Miniatures—Evangeliarum, MS. on Vellum—Columna, La Hypnerotomachia, 1545—Pontificale Romanum, MS. on Vellum Saec. XV., &c., a Selection of Valuable Books from a Library in Essex, the Property of a COUNTY FAMILY, including Burns's Poems, First Edition, Kilmarnock 1786—Byron's Hours of Idleness, First Edition, Large Paper—Bishop Hall's Virgidemiarum, 1602-1599—Heywood's Fourth Hundred of Epigrams, 1569—Corval's Crudities, First Edition, 1611—Tennyson, Poems by Two Brothers, uncut—Gascoigne's Works, 1587—Milton's Paradise Lost, First Edition, 1669—More's Utopia, First Edition, 1516—Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice, the excessively rare First Edition 1600—Sir John Oldcastle, First Edition, 1600—Spenser's Complaints, 1591—Coverdale's Bible 1535—Caxton, Vitæ Patrum, First Edition, 1485—Voragine, Legenda Aurea, 1527—and other extremely rare Books—a large Collection of Books relating to Gardening, &c.—an extensive and unique Collection illustrating the celebrated South Sea Bubble.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Antique Gems, the Property of Lieut.-Colonel H. H. GODWIN-AUSTEN.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 13, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ANTIQUE GEMS, collected in the Punjab and Afghanistan, the Property of Lieut.-Colonel H. H. GODWIN-AUSTEN, F.R.S.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

BIBLIOTHECA PHILLIPPICA.

A FURTHER PORTION of the Famous Collection of Manuscripts and Autograph Letters of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the FAMOUS COLLECTION of MANUSCRIPTS and AUTOGRAPH LETTERS of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c., of Middle Hill, Worcestershire, and Thirlestaine House, Cheltenham, including nearly 120 MSS. on Vellum, dating from the Ninth Century, together with valuable Works relating to Scotland and Ireland—a fine Series of State Letters and Papers of the Reigns of Charles II., William III., and Queen Anne—Illuminated Biblia, Psalters, Missals, &c.—Wardrobe Books of Edward II., Richard II., Thos. Duke of Gloucester, Prince Henry, &c.—Collections relating to Queen Elizabeth and Mary, Queen of Scots—Early English Poetry and Literature, together with an important Series of Shakespeare Quartos, also fine Topographical Collections relating to the Counties of Cornwall, Derby, Hants, Lancaster, Norfolk, Salop, York, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books selected from the Library of a Gentleman, deceased.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, May 21, at 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS selected from the LIBRARY of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, comprising Early Editions of the English Dramatists—Books on Witchcraft including the First Edition of Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, Dr. Dee, &c., several remarkable Collections of Early Chap-Books—Tracts relating to Mary Tofts, the Rabbit Woman of Godalming from the Nassau Collection—Richard Brathwait's various Works—Jest Books—Chalkhill's Thealma and Clearchus, 1683—Defoe's Moll Flanders, First Edition—Sir John Mennis's Musarum Deliciæ, 1656—Simon Grahame's The Anatomie of Humours, First Edition—A Mirror for Magistrates, 1610—Boccaccio's Decameron, 1620—Brant's Stultifera Navis, 1570—Johnson's Highwaymen, First Edition, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Important Autograph Letters and Historical Documents.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, May 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, important AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS, comprising interesting Specimens of R. Burns, Byron, Garrick, Johnson, John Evelyn, Samuel Pepys, Lord Nelson, Sir Peter Paul Rubens, &c.—a large and most important Collection of Letters addressed to Victor Hugo—an Autograph Manuscript of Dean Swift, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.

The Valuable and Extensive Collection of Medals commemorative of British History.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 24, and Five Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very valuable and extensive COLLECTION of MEDALS commemorative of British History, the Property of the late HYMAN MONTAGU, Esq., F.S.A., Vice-President of the Numismatic Society.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues, illustrated with Nine Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3*s.* each.

The Library of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A. LL.D.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 25, and Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A. LL.D Litt.D., formerly Head Master of Queen Elizabeth's School, Ipswich, Editor of Aristophanes, Plutarch's 'Lives,' &c., consisting of valuable Classical Works—History—Poetry—Critical Treatises—Scientific Periodicals—Educational Books—First Editions of the Writings of A. C. Swinburne, Robert Bridges, Matthew Arnold, Robert Browning, &c.—Firdusi, The Shah Nameh, Manuscript, with Miniatures, Sæc. XVII—Thackeray's The Snob, the Eleven Numbers complete, 1829; also a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Rev. W. WALBRAN, of Pendleton, Clitheroe, comprising Theological and Classical Works—Archæological Publications—Dictionaries, &c.; Horæ Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, Manuscript on Vellum, with finely Painted Miniatures, Sæc. XV.—Rare Books on Gardening, &c.; and other Properties, consisting of Scarce Books relating to America—Chronicles—Voyages, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

A Collection of Miniatures, Enamels, Boxes, Metal Work, fine Ivories, Decorative China, and Effects, the Property of Major J. HAIG RENTON, removed from Holland Park for convenience of Sale.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on WEDNESDAY, May 5, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely each day, a large COLLECTION of ARTICLES of VERTU, comprising Miniatures—Enamels—old French and English Gold and other Boxes—mechanical Bird Box—Silver Articles—Coins—about seventy lots of finely carved Ivories, including several important pieces—Metal Work—Bracket Clocks—Candelabra—a Collection of about Seventy Toby and other Beer Jugs—a large quantity of Decorative China in Groups, Figures, Vases, Plates, and Wall Plaques—and Decorative Effects.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

WILLIS'S-ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

A valuable Collection of Old Embroideries, Brocades, Damasks, Silks, Velvets, and other rich Fabrics (by direction of the Mortgagees).

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will include in their SALE, as above, on THURSDAY, May 6, at 3 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of valuable OLD EMBROIDERIES, comprising Quilts, Coverlets, Table-covers, Vestments, Valances, Pillow-covers, Curtains, and Panels suitable for decorations in Satin, Damask, Brocades, Silks, Velvets, and other rich materials.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

A valuable Casket of Jewels; also about 1,500 ounces of beautiful Old and Modern Chased Plate, the Property of a Lady.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on FRIDAY, May 14, at 1 o'clock precisely, a SMALL CASKET of valuable JEWELS, the Property of a LADY, including an Onyx Cameo, by Pistrucci—a Gold Empire Snuff-Box—a Brilliant Cross—Opal and Pearl Half Suites of elegant design—three large Bouton Pearl Studs—a Ruby Ring—an Emerald and Brilliant Half Suite, with large Emeralds of fine colour. Also about 1,500 ounces of Plate, including a Table Service for thirty-six persons, including Knives with pearl handles—Gilt Dessert Service to match for eighteen persons—fine old Candlesticks—large Two-handled Tray—Tea and Coffee Service, chased in Teniers subjects—four antique Sauce-Boats—fine old Basket—large presentation Inkstand, and a beautiful old Epergne.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

About 1,500 ounces of Chased Plate, also old Sheffield Plated Articles, the Property of a Gentleman (by direction of the Mortgagees).

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on FRIDAY, May 14, at 2 o'clock precisely, about 1,500 ounces of OLD and MODERN CHASED PLATE, including Tea and Coffee Services—Soup Tureen—Butter Boats—Candlesticks and Branches—a very fine Chased Kettle, dated 1736—Boxes—Baskets Candlesticks—Muffineers—Flasks—Scent Bottles—eight dozens of Table Knives—and a quantity of Silver-Mounted Toilet and Writing Table Necessaries. May be viewed, and Catalogues had of MESSRS. DANGERFIELD, BLYTHE & HODGSON, Solicitors, 26, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

THE CONDUIT-STREET AUCTION GALLERIES.—MESSRS.

KNIGHT, FRANK & RUTLEY'S GALLERIES are OPEN DAILY for the reception of Furniture, Pictures, Engravings, Silver Plate, Jewellery, China, Books, Old Lace, Harness, Guns, and other Property intended for PUBLIC AUCTION. Valuations prepared. Sales held at Private Residences in all parts of the country. Libraries and Collections promptly Catalogued and Sold.

WITHOUT RESERVE.—By order of Executors.—A Collection of old English, Dresden, Berlin, Sèvres, Vienna, Japanese, and Chinese Porcelain, old Prints, Silver Plate and Plated Ware, removed from Gunnersbury, rare old Venetian Lace (by order of the Executors of a Lady), an old Flemish Flounce—Spanish, Brussels, Honiton, and other Lace—an interesting Collection of Line and Mezzotint Portraits by McArdell, Val. Green, Woollett, Ward, Cousins, and others after Sir Joshua Reynolds, Hoppner, Opie, Sir T. Lawrence, &c.—old Sporting Prints, a Louis XVI. Clock—Gilt Mirrors—Two Bed Room Suites—Boudoir Grand Pianoforte—and other Items.—MESSRS.

KNIGHT, FRANK & RUTLEY will SELL by AUCTION at their Conduit-street Auction Galleries, on THURSDAY, May 6, at 1 o'clock precisely, CHINA, PRINTS, &c., as above.

On view two days prior. Catalogues free.

Antique Silver and Jewellery, including the Property of the late W. A. O'NEILL, Esq. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, ANTIQUE SILVER, including the Property of the late W. A. O'NEILL, Esq. (by order of the Executors), comprising Tankards, Salvers, Cream Ewers, Rat-Tail and other Spoons, &c., amounting to about 800 ounces; Jewellery, consisting of Brooches, Scarf-Pins, Necklaces, and Bracelets set with Diamonds, Coloured Stones, Pearls, &c.; also a few Rings set with fine old Brazilian Diamonds, inlaid Ivory and Tortoiseshell Snuff-Boxes, Battersea Enamels, Miniatures, China, &c.; scarce Peninsular War Medals, and Sheffield and other Plate.

Catalogues on application.

Library of the late Sir TRAVERS TWISS.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 6, FRIDAY, May 7, and MONDAY, May 10, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARIES of the late Sir TRAVERS TWISS and of a GENTLEMAN, removed from Yorkshire, amongst which will be found Notes and Queries, 75 vols.—L'Art, 37 vols.—Froude's England and English in Ireland, 15 vols.—Portfolio, 19 vols.—Freeman's Norman Conquest, 5 vols.—Walton's Angler, by Nicolas, 2 vols.—Nash's Worcester—Gronovius Opera, 70 vols.—Speaker's Commentary on the Bible, 11 vols.—Digby's Broad Stone of Honour, Large Paper—Baring-Gould's Lives of the Saints, 15 vols.—Gilfillan Poets, 42 vols.—Agricultural Society's Journal, from the Commencement—Cruikshank's Lord Bateman—Adam Bede and Felix Holt, First Editions—Early Printed Books, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Ex-Libris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS formed by WALTER HAMILTON, Esq., Vice-President of the Ex-Libris Society; also his Reference Library of Works on Heraldry and Book-Plates.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Miscellaneous Engravings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 12, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, ANCIENT and MODERN ENGRAVINGS (both Framed and in the Portfolio), removed from various Private Sources, comprising Mezzotint and other Portraits—Fancy Subjects of the Bartolozzi School—Rare Old Topographical Prints—Historical and Scriptural Subjects—Old Sporting Prints, &c.—Water-Colour Drawings and Paintings.

Catalogues in preparation.

Scarce Engravings and Paintings, including the Property of the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a fine COLLECTION of PRINTS, principally printed in Colours, and in fine state. Also the COLLECTION of OIL PAINTINGS formed by the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A.

Catalogues in preparation.

Library of the late Rev. ROBERT CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 19, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. ROBERT CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral, comprising Theological, Classical, Early Printed, and Miscellaneous Books in all Branches of Literature, both English and Foreign.

Catalogues in preparation.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

MR. J. C. STEVENS begs to announce that his Auction-Rooms and Offices, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, are OPEN DAILY for the reception of

MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY OF EVERY DESCRIPTION,

which is included in Sales held every Friday throughout the year.

Established 1760. Telegraphic address: "Auks, London."

TUESDAY NEXT.—Natural History Specimens.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY NEXT, May 4, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of BIRDS' SKINS formed by the late REGINALD CHOLMONDELEY, Esq., of Condover Hall, near Shrewsbury; also Birds and Animals mounted in Cases—Shells and Minerals—Cabinets—Heads and Horns of Animals, &c.—and a Collection of Exotic and other Insects from a Private Gentleman.

On view the day prior 10 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

The Contents of a Laboratory, including a large quantity of Chemical and other Apparatus, Cameras and Lenses, Microscopes, Telescopes, Scientific Instruments, Books, and Miscellaneous Property, from different sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, May 7, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MR. DOWELL will SELL by AUCTION, within his Rooms, No. 18, GEORGE-STREET, EDINBURGH, on THURSDAY and FRIDAY, May 13 and 14, at 12 o'clock, a very valuable and interesting COLLECTION of COINS, MEDALS, WORKS on NUMISMATICS, COIN CABINETS, &c., including the Cabinet formed by the late DUNDAS PORTEOUS, Esq., Paisley, and several others.

The GOLD is an exceptionally large and valuable Collection, and includes Nobles and Half-Nobles of Edward III., Richard II., Henry IV., and VI., and Edward IV.—Salutes of Henry IV. and VI.—Angels of Henry VII. and VIII., Mary, and Elizabeth—Mary and James I. Lions and Half-Lions—Elizabeth Double Rial—James I. and Charles I. Units, and other Pieces—Cromwell Twenty-Shilling Piece—Five-Guinea and Smaller Pieces from William III. to Victoria—George IV. Coronation Medal—Victoria Five-Pound Piece with rev. Una and the Lion—Robert III. St. Andrew—James III. Unicorn and Half-Unicorn—James V. Ecu—James VI. Sword and Sceptre Piece, &c.

EARLY ENGLISH and SCOTTISH SILVER—Charles I. Siege Pieces—fine Cromwell Silver—Anne Pattern Farthing in Silver, 1713, and other Pattern Coins—Gun Money—and Tokens.

A Large Collection of Greek, Bactrian, Parthian, Egyptian, Jewish, Roman, and other Ancient Coins in Gold, Silver and Copper, fine Electrotypes and Casts—Foreign Gold, Silver, and Copper—British and Colonial Coppers, &c.

WAR and other MEDALS—Numismatic Works—Coin Cabinets, &c.

Catalogues in preparation, and will be forwarded on application.

[For Continuation of Sales, see next page.]

A. & C. BLACK'S LIST.

HANDBOOK to CHRISTIAN and ECCLESIASTICAL ROME. By H. M. and M. A. R. T. Part I. The CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS. Illustrated with 23 Cuts and Plans. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

NAPLES in the NINETIES. A Sequel to 'Naples in 1888.' By E. NEVILLE ROLFE, B.A., H.B.M. Consul at Naples. With numerous Illustrations. Square crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

FADS of an OLD PHYSICIAN. By Dr. GEORGE S. KEITH, Author of 'Plea for a Simpler Life,' to which this is a Companion Volume. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

FERRETS: their Management in Health and Disease, with Remarks on their Legal Status. By NICHOLAS EVERITT. With numerous Illustrations. Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

A DOZEN WAYS of LOVE. By Miss L. DOUGALL, Author of 'Beggars All.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

OUT of HER SHROUD. By HENRY OCHILTREE, Author of 'Redburn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

A MATTER of TEMPERAMENT. By CAROLINE FOTHERGILL, Author of 'The Comedy of Cecilia' and 'A Question of Degree.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

The JUCKLINS. By Opie Read, Author of 'A Kentucky Colonel.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

London: A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square.

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely :—

On MONDAY, May 3, the WORKS of the late J. F. LEWIS, R.A.

On TUESDAY, May 4, and Following Days, the valuable LIBRARY formed by FREDERICK, THIRD EARL of BESSBOROUGH, the Property of the Hon. ASHLEY PONSONBY.

On WEDNESDAY, May 5, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, the Property of the late Sir JOHN EVERETT MILLAIS, Bart., P.R.A.; OLD FRENCH DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late Sir HENRY EDWARDS; DECORATIVE FURNITURE of the late ELI LEES, Esq.; and PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late K. R. MURCHISON, Esq.

On SATURDAY, May 8, important EARLY ENGLISH PICTURES from MULGRAVE CASTLE and other famous Collections.

On MONDAY, May 10, and Two Following Days, COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS of the Early English School, formed by a well-known Amateur.

On MONDAY, May 10, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE of the late K. R. MURCHISON, Esq., and of the late Mrs. J. E. WINGFIELD-STRATFORD.

On WEDNESDAY, May 12, the CELLAR of WINES of the late HENRY J. STOURTON, Esq., of Holme Hall, York, and other fine Wines from various Private Cellars.

On SATURDAY, May 15, the COLLECTION of PICTURES and DRAWINGS formed by the late ELI LEES, Esq., and the STARKEY COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES.

On WEDNESDAY, May 19, and Two Following Days, the COLLECTION of ANTIQUE BRONZES and GEMS, ITALIAN CINQUECENTO BRONZES, MAJOLICA, COINS, SILVER, PICTURES, &c., of the late Rev. MONTAGUE TAYLOR.

On FRIDAY, May 21, FINE OLD ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER and SILVER-GILT PLATE, LIMOGES ENAMELS, the GLENLYON BROOCH, and other Early Scotch Relics, &c.

On SATURDAY, May 22, Fifty important ENGLISH and FOREIGN PICTURES, the Property of BENJAMIN ARMITAGE, Esq., of Manchester; the important COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of F. W. ARMITAGE, Esq., of Melbourne; and a choice COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 400 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues may now be had, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

FRIDAY NEXT, May 7.

DIAMOND JUBILEE SALE, No. 1.

PRIVATE AUCTION WITH CLOSED DOORS. Twenty admissions to view and Sale seats only at 5*l.* 5*s.* each.

Scarce Portraits of Queen Victoria—Prints and other Items relating to Her Majesty—old Prints illustrating old London along the Diamond Jubilee Route. Admissions and Seats must be booked and paid for before the View on Thursday, May 6.

MR. JOHN PARNELL will SELL by PRIVATE AUCTION, as above, at 1 o'clock, at his Literary and Art Sale-Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W.

VIVAT REGINA!

The Library of the late CHARLES W. FREDERICKSON, Esq.

WILL BE SOLD by AUCTION (by order of the Administrator),

MAY 24, AND FOLLOWING DAYS,

A COLLECTION OF CHOICE ENGLISH LITERATURE,

including many scarce and desirable Editions, particularly of the Works of Shakespeare, Thomas Gray, Charles Lamb, and Shelley.

Also, his COLLECTION of MANUSCRIPTS and AUTOGRAPH LETTERS,

including MSS. of Cowper, Lamb, Byron, Keats, Irving, Fenimore Cooper, Abraham Lincoln, and many very desirable Autograph Letters, including over Sixty Letters of Shelley.

Catalogues can be had upon application to the Auctioneers,

BANGS & COMPANY,

91 and 93, FIFTH-AVENUE, NEW YORK.

THE OLD MASTERS.

MESSRS. FREDERIK MULLER & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at AMSTERDAM, on TUESDAY, June 1, the very important CABINETS of OLD PICTURES of G. DE CLERCQ, Esq., and of Mrs. JENTINK-FARRET, containing exceedingly fine Specimens by Avercamp, Asselyn, Bakhuysen, Berckheyde, Berghem, Van Beyeren, F. Bol, J. Both, Velvet-Breughel, Pieter Claesz, Codde, Decker, Duck, Van Everdingen, Fyt, Haeckaert (Two pieces), D. Hals, Heda, De Heem, B. Van der Helst (magnificent composition of Four Figures, life size), Hondecoeter, Honthorst, Kominck, Lievens, Maes, Van der Meer, Van der Meulen, J. M. Molenaar (Three pieces), Aert van der Neer (Five pieces), G. Nevts, A. Palamedesz (Three pieces), Pijnacker (Two pieces), G. de Ring, J. Ruysdael, S. Ruysdael, H. Saftleven, Slingelandt, Jan Steen (Three pieces), Stoop (Two pieces), Van Streek, Terborch, A. Van de Velde, W. Van de Velde, jun. (capital Battle-scene of the English and Dutch Fleets), Van de Venne (Five pieces), Verboom, Vinckboons, S. de Vlieger, Mart. de Vos, R. van Vries, Walscappelle, Van de Werf, Weenix, &c.

Illustrated Catalogues are to be had at the Office, Doelenstraat, 10, Amsterdam, price Four Shillings, free by post.

MESSRS. FREDERIK MULLER & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, on the same day, the beautiful COLLECTION of OLD DRAWINGS, the Cabinet of W. F. PIEK, Esq.

Please apply for the Illustrated Catalogue at the said Office, price One Shilling, free by post.

Miscellaneous Books—Portion of the Library of the late W. SHARP, Esq., M.D., F.R.S., of Rugby—Small Stock of Modern Publications, New, in Cloth, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 5, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Le Vaillant Oiseaux de Paradis, &c., 3 vols.—Gould's Humming Birds, a Selection, in 5 vols.—Millingen Vases Grecs, 2 vols.—Biblia Hebraica, 3 vols. 1540, 1 of—Berne Codex Cantabrigiensis, 2 vols.—some Early Printed Books and MS. Horæ—Roare's South and North Wiltshire, 2 vols.—Gregson's Lancashire Portfolio—Hibbert and Wharton's Manchester Foundations, 4 vols.—Gill and Hawker's Commentaries—Spenser's Commentary, 11 vols.—Parker Society, 55 vols.—Harleian Society, 15 vols.—Sussex Archæological Society, 20 vols.—Dickens's Works de Luxe, 30 vols. ditto, 40 vols.—Scott's Novels, 25 vols., and Minstrelsy, Large Paper, illustrated, in 4 vols.—Richardson's Works, 23 vols.—Basil Montagu's Bacon, 17 vols.—Medical and Physical Journal, 70 vols.—and other Scientific Treatises—Old Scripture Engravings, Galleries, &c.; also several Hundred Volumes of Modern Publications, new, in cloth.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

The RUSSELL INSTITUTION, 55, Great Coram-street, Russell-square.—Valuable and Extensive Library of upwards of 20,000 vols. of Books—Two capital Billiard Tables—Statues, Busts, &c.—Mahogany and other Bookcases, and the usual Fittings.

MESSRS. HODGSON have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the end of the present month, on the PREMISES of the RUSSELL INSTITUTION, 55, Great Coram-street, Russell-square, W.C., the above VALUABLE and EXTENSIVE LIBRARY, which comprises Standard Works in Divinity, Classics, Geography, Early Voyages and Travels, History, Biography, Archæology, Topography, Science and Art, Poetry and the Drama, Novels and Romances—Parliamentary Proceedings and Debates—Encyclopædias and Books of Reference—Long Sets of Magazines and Reviews—Transactions of the Learned Societies—a Complete File of the Times Newspaper—interesting Historical, Political, and Religious Tracts and Pamphlets; also the Mahogany and other Bookcases—Two capital Billiard Tables by Thurston, with Marking Boards and Full Sets of Balls—Stone Statues of Antoninus, Hercules, and Euphrosyne—Busts of Heroes, Poets, and Statesmen—Large Board-Room Table—several Card and Occasional Tables, and the usual Fittings.

Catalogues are preparing, and will be forwarded (when ready) on application to the AUCTIONEERS, No. 115, Chancery-lane, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

No. 243. MAY, 1897.

The POWERS and the EAST in the LIGHT of the WAR. By Francis de Pressensé (Foreign Editor of Le Temps).

SIDE-LIGHTS on the CRETAN INSURRECTION. By Ernest N. Bennett.

AMONG the LIARS. By H. Cecil Lowther.

The SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN QUESTION and its PLACE in HISTORY. By the Right Hon. Professor Max Müller.

On BANK HOLIDAYS—and a PLEA for ONE MORE. By the Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P.

MAY CAROLS. By Miss A. M. Wakefield.

The HOME of the CABOTS. By Senator H. Cabot Lodge.

The PROGRESS of MEDICINE during the QUEEN'S REIGN. By Malcolm Morris, F.R.C.S.Ed.

GOREE: a Lost Possession of England. By Walter Frewen Lord.

The APOTHEOSIS of the NOVEL under QUEEN VICTORIA. By Herbert Paul.

The SPEECH of CHILDREN. By S. S. Buckman.

TOBACCO in RELATION to HEALTH and CHARACTER. By Ed. Vincent Heward.

GONGORA. By James Mew.

The SACRIFICE of the MASS. By J. Horace Round.

The DUKE of ARGYLL'S CRITICISMS. By Herbert Spencer.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

THE PROGRESSIVE REVIEW.

Price ONE SHILLING.

No. 8. MAY, 1897.

Contents.

ENDING the HOUSE of LORDS.
OUR NATIONAL DULNESS.
INDUSTRIAL LEGISLATION and LIBERTY.
LOCAL GOVERNMENT by HORSE and TRAP.
ANGELS' WINGS. Edward Carpenter.
KARL MARX and SOCIAL REFORM. Ed. Burnstein.
IS EDUCATION COMPULSORY? T. C. Down.
The PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT ABROAD:—
1. America.
2. France.
3. Italy.
CAUSERIE of the MONTH.
BOOK REVIEWS.

Horace Marshall & Son, Temple House, Temple-avenue, E.C.

Now ready, price One Shilling net.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

Devoted to Literature, Science, Art, and Politics.

Contents, MAY, 1897.

The PROBLEMS of RURAL NEW ENGLAND:—
A Remote Village. Philip Morgan.
A Farming Community. Alvan F. Sanborn.
REAL UTOPIAS in the ARID WEST. William E. Smythe.
NANSEN'S HEROIC JOURNEY. N. S. Shaler.
ART in the PUBLIC SCHOOLS. Sarah W. Whitman.
The RAMPARTS of PORT ROYAL. Charles G. D. Roberts.
MY SIXTY DAYS in GREECE.—III. Basil L. Gildersleeve.
The DEATHLESS DIARY. Agnes Repplier.
The JUGGLER.—9. Charles Egbert Craddock.
CHEERFUL YESTERDAYS.—VII. Thomas Wentworth Higginson.
NOTES of a TRIP to IZUMO. Lafcadio Hearn.
The STORY of an UNTOLD LOVE.—19-22. Paul Leicester Ford.
The ENEMY LISTENS. Josephine Preston Peabody.
COMMENT on RECENT BOOKS of FICTION.
MEN and LETTERS:—
On a Dictum of Matthew Arnold's. John Borroughs.
Mr. KENNAN'S APPRENTICESHIP in COURAGE. Kenyon West.
MILLET and WALT WHITMAN. Henry Childs Merwin.

London: Gay & Bird, 22, Bedford-street, W.C.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

No. 979. MAY, 1897. 2*s.* 6*d.*

'TIS SIXTY YEARS SINCE.
The QUEEN'S OWN GUIDES.
EARLY VICTORIAN FICTION.
The PRISONS of SIBERIA. By J. Y. Simpson.
DARIEL: a Romance of Surrey. By R. D. Blackmore.
An OLD SALMON POACHING STORY. By Gilfrid W. Hartley.
The BUSTED BLUE DOLL. By Zack.
The NEWSPAPER PRESS: Half-a-Century's Survey. By Frederick Greenwood.
Mr. JOWETT and OXFORD LIBERALISM.
"The SENATE and the FIELD."

William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for MAY.

The CONCERT of EUROPE.
The SULTAN and the POWERS.
OUR NAVAL DEMONSTRATION. By W. Laird Clowes.
The POPE and the ARCHBISHOPS. By Principal Rainy.
BRAHMS and the CLASSICAL TRADITION. By W. H. Hadow.
The OBVERSE SIDE of ARISTOPHANES. By R. E. S. Hart.
WAS FENIANISM EVER FORMIDABLE? By William O'Brien.
The DEVIL in MODERN OCCULTISM. By F. Legge.
RUSSIA AS IT IS. By W. Durban.
The AWAKENING of the COPTIC CHURCH. By a Coptic Layman.
The FINANCIAL RELATIONS BETWEEN IRELAND and GREAT BRITAIN. By the Right Hon. L. H. Courtney, M.P.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

Price 2*d.*; by post, 2½*d.* Yearly Subscription (including Supplements), 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE LITERARY GUIDE: a Rationalist Review.

Devoted mainly to Books and Publications which deal with Religion, Philosophy, Science, and Ethics from a Rationalist standpoint.

No. 11, MAY, 1897, contains:—

AGNOSTICISM in the BROAD CHURCH.
PAST FINDING OUT.
RANDOM REFLECTIONS on HEBREW PROBLEMS.
GREEK FOLK-LORE and HISTORICAL THEORY.
CHRISTIAN RATIONALISM.
SCHOPENHAUER'S ESSAYS in ETHICS and POLITICS.
EGYPT'S INFLUENCE on CHRISTIANITY.
RANDOM JOTTINGS.
SIGNS and WARNINGS (gleaned from the Religious Press).
CHATS ABOUT BOOKS.—VI. With MR. THOMAS WHITTAKER.
GERMAN CRITICS at WORK.
RATIONALISM in the MAGAZINES.
The QUARTERLY and MONTHLY REVIEWS.

, Nos. 2 to 11 are still in stock, post free, 2*s.*

London: Watts & Co., 17, Johnson's-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

ASH PARTNERS, LTD.,

PUBLISHERS,

36, ST. MARTIN'S-LANE, CHARING CROSS.

Z A L M A.

By T. MULLETT ELLIS.

Extra large crown, cloth gilt, price 6*s.*

Illustrated by C. Quinnell.

ZALMA.—"This astonishing book has power, pathos, and beauty in it, and certainly enchains the reader's interest to the end."—Pall Mall Gazette.

ZALMA.—"It deals in no equivocal fashion with a late scandal in very high life."—Bookseller.

ZALMA.—"'Zalma,' by T. Mullett Ellis, has the attraction of abounding invention and virility."—Vanity Fair.

ZALMA.—"Sometimes he gives a bit of description which is quite admirable."—Daily Chronicle.

ZALMA.—"Mr. Ellis is already known as a powerful and fearless writer. 'Zalma' will add to his reputation for courage in conception, and manipulation of a difficult and intricate plot."—Manchester Courier.

ZALMA.—"His book is a success."—Standard.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

NEARLY READY.—Price to Subscribers, 12*s.* net, payable in advance.

A SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUME TO "THE OXFORD CHAUCER."

Edited by Prof. SKEAT.

Demy 8vo. pp. lxxxiv-608, uniform in all respects with the Library Edition of Chaucer's Works in Six Volumes, 1894.

CHAUCERIAN AND OTHER PIECES.

Edited from numerous Manuscripts by the Rev. WALTER W. SKEAT, Litt.D. D.C.L. LL.D. Ph.D.,

Elrington and Bosworth Professor of Anglo-Saxon and Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge.

This Selection includes all the most important among the numerous pieces in prose and verse which have been appended to Chaucer's Works in various editions, including those of Thynne, Stowe, Speght, and Tyrwhitt. Nearly every piece reprinted now appears in an improved form; and in several cases MSS. not previously examined have been collated, and have proved to be the best. The NOTES are nearly all new.

 The Subscription List will be closed before the publication of the Work, when the price will be advanced to 18s.

CONTENTS.

INTRODUCTION.
1. THOMAS USK: The TESTAMENT of LOVE.
BOOK I.: PROLOGUE and CHAPTERS 1-10.
BOOK II.: CHAPTERS 1-14.
BOOK III.: CHAPTERS 1-9.
2. The PLOWMANS TALE.
3. JACK UPLAND.
4. JOHN GOWER: The PRAISE of PEACE.
5. THOMAS HOCCLEVE: The LETTER of CUPID.
6. The SAME: To the KINGES MOST NOBLE GRACE.
To the LORDS and KNIGHTES of the GARTER.
7. HENRY SCOGAN: A MORAL BALADE.
8. JOHN LYDGATE: The COMPLAINT of the BLACK KNIGHT; or, the Complaint of a Loveres Lyfe.
9. The SAME: The FLOUR of CURTESYE.
10. The SAME: A BALADE; In COMMENDATION of OUR LADY.
11. The SAME: TO my SOVERAIN LADY.
12. The SAME: BALLAD of GOOD COUNSEL.
13. The SAME: BEWARE of DOUBLENESS.
14. The SAME: A BALADE: WARNING MEN to beware of DECEITFUL WOMEN.
15. The SAME: THREE SAYINGS.
16. Sir RICHARD ROS: La BELLE DAME sans MERCI.
17. ROBERT HENRYSON: The TESTAMENT of CRESSEID.
18. The CUCKOO and the NIGHTINGALE; or, the Book of Cupid, God of Love. (By Clanvowe.)
19. An ENVOY to ALISON.
20. The FLOWER and the LEAF. (By a Lady.)
21. The ASSEMBLY of LADIES. (By the Same.)
22. A GOODLY BALADE. (By John Lydgate.)
23. GO FORTH, KING. (By John Lydgate.)
24. The COURT of LOVE.
25. A VIRELAI.
26. PROSPERITY. (By John Walton.)
27. LEAULTE VAULT RICHESSE.
28. SAYINGS printed by CAXTON.
29. BALADE in PRAISE of CHAUCER.
NOTES to the FOREGOING PIECES.
GLOSSARIAL INDEX.
INDEX of NAMES.
INDEX to SOME SUBJECTS explained in the NOTES.

JUST PUBLISHED, demy 8vo. cloth, Vol. I., 12*s.* 6*d.*

BURNET'S HISTORY of MY OWN TIME: the Reign of Charles II. A New Edition based on that of M. J. ROUTH, D.D., and Edited by OSMUND AIRY, M.A.

TIMES.—"All serious students will commend the laudable enterprise of the Clarendon Press in issuing a new edition of this famous work, and in securing the services of so competent an editor as Mr. Airy."

JUST PUBLISHED, 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, pp. lxx-876, 18*s.*

BRITISH MORALISTS: being Selections from Writers principally of the Eighteenth Century. Edited, with an Introduction and Analytical Index, by L. A. SELBY-BIGGE, M.A., formerly Fellow and Lecturer of University College, Oxford.

SCOTSMAN.—"A reader interested in the ethical thought of this country in the last century could find few books, if any, by which he could be better informed."

ATHENÆUM.—"A most useful collection of extracts....The introduction contains interesting and judicious remarks."

SELECTIONS from ADDISON'S PAPERS in the 'SPECTATOR.' With Notes. By T. ARNOLD, M.A. 4*s.* 6*d.*

SELECT WORKS of BURKE. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by E. J. PAYNE, M.A.

THOUGHTS on the PRESENT DISCONTENTS: the Two Speeches on America. Second Edition. 4*s.* 6*d.*

REFLECTIONS on the FRENCH REVOLUTION. Second Edition. 5*s.*

FOUR LETTERS on the PROPOSALS for PEACE with the REGICIDE DIRECTORY of PARIS. Second Edition. 5*s.*

POEMS of MILTON. Edited by R. C. BROWNE, M.A. 2 vols. New Edition, Revised. 6*s.* 6*d.*

SPECIMENS of ENGLISH LITERATURE, from the 'Plough-man's Crede' to the 'Shepheardes Calender' (A.D. 1394 to A.D. 1579). With Introduction, Notes, and Glossarial Index. By W. W. SKEAT, Litt.D. Fifth Edition. 7*s.* 6*d.*

SELECTIONS from the WORKS of SWIFT. Edited, with Life, Introductions, and Notes, by HENRY CRAIK. 2 vols. 15*s.*

ACADEMY.—"There is not an unnecessary annotation in the book. The short paragraphs in which Mr. Craik explains a reference or summarizes a character or a career are as complete as they are concise."

The VISION of WILLIAM concerning PIERS the PLOWMAN, in Three Parallel Texts: together with RICHARD the REDELESS By WILLIAM LANGLAND (about 1362-1399 A.D.). Edited from numerous Manuscripts, with Preface, Notes, and a Glossary, by W. W. SKEAT, Litt.D. 2 vols. 21*s.* 6*d.*

NOTES and QUERIES.—"In these two handsome volumes we have at last a standard and definitive edition of a great English classic which has scarcely yet received its due recognition. Probably there is not another man in England besides Prof. Skeat who could have produced an edition so satisfactory."

BOSWELL'S LIFE of JOHNSON. With a Journal of a Tour in the Hebrides. Edited by G. BIRKBECK HILL, D.C.L. 6 vols. 3*l.* 3*s.*

ATHENÆUM.—"The patient and diligent research displayed in these notes shows great industry, and such results could only have been obtained by years of devotion to the subject."

HISTORY of the DOMINION of CANADA. By W. PARR GRESWELL, M.A., under the Auspices of the Royal Colonial Institute. With 11 Maps 7*s.* 6*d.*

IMPERIAL FEDERATION LEAGUE JOURNAL.—"The volume is full of interest, pithy and concise, and, as a clear and readable history of the political growth of Canada, we cordially recommend it to our readers."

GEOGRAPHY of the DOMINION of CANADA and NEWFOUNDLAND. By the SAME AUTHOR. With 10 Maps 6*s.*

TIMES.—"The volume is a healthy sign of the increasing interest taken by the people of the mother-country in colonial affairs and colonial questions."

GEOGRAPHY of AFRICA SOUTH of the ZAMBESI. By the SAME AUTHOR. With Maps 7*s* 6*d.*

SOUTH AFRICA.—"One of the most interesting books on South Africa. The author is well known, and is a scholar of high attainments."

THE OXFORD ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

Two New Sections, 4to. paper covers, 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

A NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY on HISTORICAL PRINCIPLES. Founded mainly on the Materials collected by the Philological Society.

DISTRUSTFUL—DOOM. Edited by Dr. MURRAY. 2*s.* 6*d.*

FLEXUOSITY—FOISTER. Edited by Mr. HENRY BRADLEY. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Just published, crown 4to. cloth, 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

A STUDENT'S DICTIONARY of ANGLO-SAXON. By HENRY SWEET, M.A.

Brevity and conciseness have been aimed at throughout. The meanings are given in plain modern English. References have been omitted, irregular forms are noticed very briefly, and cognate words are given only in Old English itself.

GLASGOW HERALD.—"Compiled with the greatest care, and laudably free from those more than doubtful forms which have found their way into the earlier dictionaries."

PERRAULT'S POPULAR TALES. Edited from the Original Editions, with Introduction, &c., by A. LANG, M.A. 5*s.* 6*d.*

ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.—"Mr. Lang has found a congenial task which he has executed with that combination of profound scholarship and bright vivacity of style peculiarly his own....He has treated the whole subject very fully."

PLAYS from BEAUMARCHAIS, CORNEILLE, MOLIÈRE, MUSSET, RACINE, and VOLTAIRE. In Ornamental Case, and bound in imitation parchment, 12*s.* 6*d.*

ATHENÆUM.—"The result is decidedly taking."

The PRINCIPAL SPEECHES of the STATESMEN and ORATORS of the FRENCH REVOLUTIONS, 1789-1795. With Introductions, Notes, &c. By H. MORSE STEPHENS, M.A. 2 vols. 21*s.*

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Mr. Stephens has accomplished his task with a knowledge of the subject which is certainly not surpassed in England, with a very great deal of industry, and with remarkable aptitude."

INTRODUCTION to GREEK SCULPTURE. By L. E. UPCOTT, M.A. 4*s.* 6*d.*

A SELECTION of PASSAGES from PLATO for ENGLISH READERS. From the Translation by B. JOWETT, M.A. Edited, with Introductions, by M. J. KNIGHT. 2 vols. 12*s.*

The ATTIC THEATRE. A Description of the Stage and Theatre of the Athenians, and of the Dramatic Performances at Athens. By A. E. HAIGH, M.A. 12*s.* 6*d.*

SPECTATOR.—"The author of this admirable book has effected his purpose in a masterly manner. His wide reading is set off by a style so lucid that details are invested with a charm that no earnest student will be able to resist."

The TRAGIC DRAMA of the GREEKS. With Illustrations. By A. E. HAIGH. 12*s.* 6*d.*

ALSO PUBLISHED BY HENRY FROWDE.

Cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

The ROBERT BOYLE LECTURES. Vol. I., containing the first five Lectures delivered before the Oxford University Junior Scientific Club during the Years 1892-1893. With a Preface by Sir HENRY W. ACLAND, Bart., K.C.B. F.R.S.

Contents.

Lecture I. INAUGURAL LECTURE. May 27, 1892. By Sir Henry W. Acland, Bart., K.C.B. F.R.S.

Lecture II. The MOLECULAR TACTICS of a CRYSTAL. May 16, 1893. By Lord Kelvin, F.R.S.

Lecture III. SOME MORPHOLOGICAL LESSONS TAUGHT by HUMAN VARIATIONS. May 8, 1894. By Prof. A. Macalister, F.R.S.

Lecture IV. The RELATION BETWEEN the MOVEMENTS of the EYES and the MOVEMENTS of the HEAD. May 13, 1895. By Prof. A. Crum Brown, M.D. F.R.S.

Lecture V. The POSITION of ARGON and HELIUM AMONG the ELEMENTS. June 2, 1896. By Prof. W. Ramsay, F.R.S.

FULL CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

THE

SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Edited by Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P.

VOL. III. NOW READY.

THE

SPORTSMAN IN IRELAND.

By A COSMOPOLITE.

Illustrated by 6 Coloured Plates and numerous other Illustrations by P. Chenevix Trench. Large 8vo. handsomely bound, 15*s*. Also a limited Large-Paper Edition, with Plates on Japanese Vellum, 2*l*. 2*s*. net.

VOLUMES ALREADY ISSUED.

Vol. I. The LIFE of a FOX and the DIARY of a HUNTSMAN. By THOMAS SMITH.

Vol. II. A SPORTING TOUR through the NORTHERN PARTS of ENGLAND and GREAT PART of the HIGHLANDS of SCOTLAND. By Col. T. THORNTON, of Thornville Royal.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WILD SPAIN.'

WILD NORWAY. With Chapters on the Swedish Highlands, Spitzbergen, and Denmark. By ABEL CHAPMAN, Author of 'Wild Spain,' &c. Fully illustrated by the Author and Charles Whymper. Demy 8vo. 16*s*.

BY PROF. KARL PEARSON.

The CHANCES of DEATH, and other Studies in Evolution. By Prof. KARL PEARSON, F.R.S., Author of 'The Ethic of Free Thought,' &c. In 2 vols. with Two Photogravure Frontispieces and other Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 25*s*. net. [Nearly ready.

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL'S NEW BOOK.

MEMORIES of the MONTHS. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Editor of "The Sportsman's Library," &c. With Photogravure Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6*s*. [Ready next week.

OLD ENGLISH GLASSES. An Account of Glass Drinking-Vessels in England from Early Times to the End of the Eighteenth Century, with Notices of Continental Glasses during the same Period. By ALBERT HARTSHORNE, Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. With nearly 70 Full-Page Lithographic Plates and over 400 smaller Illustrations. Super-royal 4to. 3*l*. 3*s*. net.

This magnificent and unique work is dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty the Queen. A full Prospectus can be had on application. [Nearly ready.

The TREATMENT of NATURE in DANTE'S 'DIVINA COMMEDIA.' By L. OSCAR KUHNS, Professor in Wesleyan University, U.S.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s*.

FISH TAILS — and SOME TRUE ONES. By BRADNOCK HALL. With Etched Frontispiece by the Author, and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by T. Hope McLachlan. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

FIELD.—"Witty, in the best of taste, and abounding with sympathetic interest to the angler. The stories are capital, every one."

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

TOMMY ATKINS: a Tale of the Ranks. By ROBERT BLATCHFORD, Author of 'A Son of the Forge,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

THIRD EDITION, with Portrait.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Master of Balliol. A Personal Memoir. By the Hon. LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, Author of 'Safe Studies,' &c. Third Edition, with Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

TIMES.—"Although Mr. Lionel Tollemache is not among the authors who are read by a very wide circle, there are a certain number of readers, and those not the worst judges, who regard him as one of the most stimulating writers of the day, especially in the sketch-portraits of the people who have influenced him. His essay on Mark Pattison is not likely to be forgotten by any Oxford man, or, indeed, by any student of modern letters who has chanced to read it, and it is safe to foretell that the same will be the case with the 'Personal Memoir' in which he has enshrined his recollections of the late Master of Balliol."

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Vol. II. and Part VIII. now ready for Delivery to Subscribers.

LIFE of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. By Professor W. M. SLOANE, Ph.D. L.H.D. Illustrated. In 20 Parts at 4*s*. net each; or in 4 vols. at 24*s*. net each. (Supplied only in Sets.) Also ready, Vol. I. and Parts I.-VII.

"." Subscriptions (sent through a Bookseller) will be received at any time, and the Volumes or Parts delivered at such intervals as may be convenient to the Subscriber.

BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE.

ANCIENT VOLCANOES of GREAT BRITAIN. By Sir Archibald GEIKIE, F.R.S., &c. With 7 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. 36*s*. net.

TIMES.—"An exhaustive treatise, which may be supplemented by the researches of the future, but which can hardly be superseded.....To geologists it is unnecessary to commend it. To all who are interested in the checkered career of this earth of ours it will be found to abound with interest."

Globe 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

RELIGIOUS TEACHING in SECONDARY SCHOOLS. Sug- gestions to Teachers and Parents for Lessons on the Old and New Testaments, Early Church History, Christian Evidences, &c. By Rev. GEORGE C. BELL, M.A., Master of Marlborough College.

SCOTSMAN.—"Just such a book as many young teachers have wished for when in doubt as to what should be taught by way of supplement to the Bible, and it will no doubt be found widely useful."

THE MODERN READER'S BIBLE.—New Volume.

Pott 8vo. 2*s*. 6*d*.

Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by RICHARD G. MOULTON, M.A. (Cantab.).

The Text is that of the Revised Version. It is used by special permission of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge.

JEREMIAH.

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.—New Volume.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3*s*. 6*d*. "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5*s*.

PARENTS' ASSISTANT; or, Stories for Children. By Maria EDGEWORTH. Illustrated by CHRIS. HAMMOND. With an Introduction by ANNE THACKERAY RITCHIE.

Extra crown 8vo. 8*s*. 6*d*. net.

The ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. A Commentary on its Nature and Growth. By JESSE MACY, M.A., Professor of Political Science in Iowa College.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Characterized all through by that careful accuracy, that broad and comprehensive treatment which always marks the true scholar and thinker.....An admirable, lucid, and excellent work."

SECOND EDITION, REVISED, NOW READY.

The THEORY of INTERNATIONAL TRADE with SOME of its APPLICATIONS to ECONOMIC POLICY. By Prof. C. F. BASTABLE, M.A. LL.D., Author of 'Public Finance,' &c. Crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*. net.

NEW EDITION NOW READY.—Globe 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

ENGLISH LITERATURE from A.D. 670 to A.D. 1832. By STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A. Partly Rewritten and largely Revised and Corrected.

SECOND EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED.

READINGS on the PURGATORIO of DANTE, chiefly based on the Commentary of BENVENUTO da IMOLA. By the Hon. WILLIAM WARREN VERNON, M.A. With an Introduction by the late Very Rev. Dean of St. Paul's. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24*s*.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.—MAY.

Price One Shilling.

TWO NEW NOVELS COMMENCE IN THIS NUMBER.

Contents.

1. The HOUSE by the HOWFF. By W. L. Watson. Chaps. 1-4.
2. ON the THEORY and PRACTICE of LOCAL COLOUR. By W. P. James.
3. RAYMOND LULLY. By H. C. Macdowall.
4. SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.
5. NELL: a Biographical Fragment.
6. A BRITISH PRISONER in AMERICA. By A. G. Bradley.
7. PHILOMÈLE.
8. A CHAPTER of ACCIDENTS. By Mrs. Fraser. Chaps. 1-5.

Illustrated, price 1*s*. 4*d*.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE FOR MAY.

Contains, besides many Stories and Articles—

CRETE, the ISLAND of DISCORD. By a Resident of Athens.
The ROYAL FAMILY of GREECE. By B. J. Wheeler.
The WITHDRAWAL of the FRENCH from MEXICO. A Chapter of Secret History. By Lieut.-General John M. Schofield.
The DAYS of JEANNE D'ARC. II. By M. H. Catherwood.

Illustrated, price 1*s*.

THE ST. NICHOLAS MAGAZINE FOR MAY.

Contains, besides many Stories and Articles—

The BIG BOOBOO and the LITTLE BOOBOO. By Gertrude Smith.
The KING'S HIGH WAY. By R. F. Bunner.
A WHITE RED SQUIRREL. By Emily G. Hunt, M.D.

THE JEWISH QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Edited by I. ABRAHAMS and C. G. MONTEFIORE.

No. 35. Vol. IX. APRIL, 1897. Price 3*s*. 6*d*. (Annual Subscription, post free, 11*s*.).

Contents.

DAVID LEVI, POET and PATRIOT. By Miss Helen Zimmern.—The MISSION of JUDAISM: a Reply. By Oswald John Simon.—IBN AL-HITI'S ARABIC CHRONICLE of KARAITE DOCTORS. By the Rev. G. Margoliouth.—CHRISTIAN DEMONOLOGY. III. By F. C. Conybeare.—MASSORETIC STUDIES. IV. By Prof. Ludwig Blau.—A LETTER by MOSES DI ROSSI from PALESTINE, dated 1535. By Prof. D. Kaufmann.—ELIA MENACHEM CHALFAN on JEWS TEACHING HEBREW to NON-JEWS. By the Same.—A PRINCESS as HEBRAIST. By Ober-rabbiner Dr. M. Kayserling.—IMPRECATION against the MINIM in the SYNAGOGUE. By Dr. Samuel Krauss.—MARINUS, a JEWISH PHILOSOPHER of ANTIQUITY. By the Same.—A FRAGMENT of a SHORTHAND HAGADAH. By Dr. M. Friedländer.—CRITICAL NOTICES.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

CHARLES GRIFFIN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SHORTLY, in large 8vo. handsome cloth, with numerous Illustrations.

TECHNICAL MYCOLOGY:

A Practical Handbook on Fermentation.

For the Use of Brewers, Analysts, Technical and Agricultural Chemists, and all interested in the Industries dependent on Fermentation.

By Dr. FRANZ LAFAR,

Of the Technical High School and Physiological Laboratory of the Royal Experimental Station for Industries dependent on Fermentation, Hohenheim, near Stuttgart.

With an Introduction by

Dr. EMIL CHR. HANSEN, Professor at the Carlsberg Laboratory, Copenhagen.

Translated by CHARLES SALTER, Mem.Soc.Chem.Ind.

SHORTLY, in large 8vo. with numerous Illustrations and Three Folding Plates.

ELECTRIC SMELTING AND REFINING:

A Practical Manual of the Extraction and Treatment of Metals by Electrical Methods.

Being the 'Elektro-Metallurgie' of Dr. W. BORCHERS.

Translated from the Second German Edition by WALTER G. M'MILLAN, F.I.C. F.C.S., Lecturer in Metallurgy at Mason College, Birmingham.

 THE PUBLISHERS beg to call attention to this valuable work. Dr. BORCHERS' treatise is PRACTICAL throughout. It confines itself to ONE branch of Electro-Chemistry, viz., ELECTROLYSIS, a subject which is daily becoming of more and more importance to the Practical Metallurgist and Manufacturer. Already in the extraction of Aluminium, the refining of Copper, the treatment of Gold and other metals, electrical processes are fast taking the place of the older methods. Dr. BORCHERS' work is acknowledged as the standard authority on the subject in Germany, and the English version, from the able pen of Mr. W. G. M'MILLAN (author of the well-known Treatise on Electro-Deposition and Electro-Plating), will, it is believed, take equal rank in English-speaking countries.

SHORTLY. AT PRESS.

VALVES AND VALVE GEARING.

A Practical Text-Book for the Use of Engineers, Draughtsmen, and Students.

By CHARLES HURST, Practical Draughtsman.

With numerous Illustrations and Folding Plates.

[Griffin's Engineering Series.

IN PREPARATION.

HEAT EFFICIENCY OF STEAM BOILERS:

Many Experiments on many Types.

Showing Results as to Evaporation, Heating Value of Fuel, Analyses of Gases, &c.

By BRYAN DONKIN, M.Inst.C.E.

With Diagrams and numerous Tables.

[Griffin's Engineering Series.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations from Photographs, cloth, 8*s.* 6*d.*

OPEN AIR STUDIES IN GEOLOGY.

An Introduction to Geology out of Doors.

By GRENVILLE A. J. COLE, M.R.I.A. F.G.S.,

Professor of Geology in the Royal College of Science for Ireland.

"The FASCINATING 'OPEN-AIR STUDIES' of PROF. COLE give the subject a GLOW OF ANIMATION.....Cannot fail to arouse KEEN INTEREST in geology. We would commend the work even to advanced Students and Teachers, for they would assuredly FRESHEN UP THEIR KNOWLEDGE on many a subject."—Geological Magazine.

AT PRESS.—COMPANION VOLUME.

OPEN AIR STUDIES IN BOTANY.

Sketches of British Wildflowers in their Homes.

By R. LLOYD PRAEGER, B.A. M.R.I.A.

Illustrated by Drawings from Nature by S. Rosamond Praeger, and Photographs by R. Welch.

EDITED BY PROF. LE NEVE FOSTER, D.Sc. F.R.S.

MINE ACCOUNTS AND MINING BOOK-KEEPING.

A Manual for the Use of Students, Managers of Metalliferous Mines and Collieries, and others interested in Mining.

With very numerous EXAMPLES taken from the ACTUAL PRACTICE of leading Mining Companies throughout the world.

By JAMES G. LAWN, Assoc.R.S.M.,

Professor of Mining at the South African School of Mines, Capetown, Kimberley, and Johannesburg. In large 8vo.

Crown 8vo. extra, with numerous Illustrations, 3*s.* 6*d.*

GETTING GOLD.

A Practical Treatise for Prospectors, Miners, and Students.

By J. C. F. JOHNSON, F.G.S. A.I.M.E.,

Life Member, Australian Mine-Managers' Association.

"Almost every page bristles with suggestions."—Financial News.

"One is lost in admiration at the wealth of knowledge displayed."—Nature.

"Evidently the well-matured product of a scientist of well trained and tried experience."—South Africa.

NOW READY, FOURTH EDITION, illustrated, 10*s.* 6*d.*

ASSAYING:

For the Use of those connected with Mines.

By J. J. BERINGER, F.I.C. F.C.S.,

Lecturer to the Mining Assoc. and Inst. of Cornwall, and

C. BERINGER, F.C.S.

"Contains ALL the INFORMATION necessary in the ASSAY of MINERALS."—Engineer.

SHORTLY, FOURTH EDITION, Revised and Enlarged, with New Illustrations, Micro-Photographic Plates of Different Varieties of Steel, and Folding Plate.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF METALLURGY.

By W. C. ROBERTS-AUSTEN, C.B. F.R.S.,

Chemist and Assayer to the Royal Mint, Professor of Metallurgy in the Royal College of Science.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK NOW READY.

Royal 8vo. handsome cloth, 21*s.*, with Plates, Illustrations in the Text, and Specimens of Printed Fabrics.

THE PRINTING OF TEXTILE FABRICS:

A Practical Manual on the Printing of Cotton, Woollen, Silk, and Half-Silk Fabrics.

By C. F. SEYMOUR ROTHWELL, F.C.S.,

Mem. Soc. of Chem. Industry, late Lecturer at the Municipal Technical School, Manchester.

THE STANDARD WORK ON DYEING.

In 2 large 8vo. vols. 912 pp. with a Supplementary Volume of Specimens of Dyed Fabrics, handsome cloth, 45*s.*

A MANUAL OF DYEING:

For the Use of Practical Dyers, Manufacturers, and Students.

By E. KNECHT, Ph.D. F.I.C.,

Head of the Chemistry and Dyeing Department of the Technical School, Manchester;

CHR. RAWSON, F.I.C. F.C.S.,

Late Head of the Chemistry and Dyeing Department of the Technical College, Bradford; and

R. LOEWENTHAL, Ph.D.

WORKS BY PROF. ROBERT H. SMITH.

In crown 8vo. extra, 8*s.* 6*d.*

THE CALCULUS FOR ENGINEERS AND PHYSICISTS:

With Applications to Technical Problems;

Classified Reference Tables of Integrals and Methods of Integration;

Diagrams and Folding Plate.

"An able and original book."—Scotsman.

In 4to. boards, 7*s.* 6*d.*

MEASUREMENT CONVERSIONS

(English and French).

Forty-three Graphic Tables or Diagrams.

For the Use of Engineers, Surveyors, Architects, and Contractors.

"The work is INVALUABLE."—Colliery Guardian.

FULL CATALOGUE OF TECHNICAL AND MEDICAL WORKS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: CHARLES GRIFFIN & CO., LIMITED, Exeter-street, Strand.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G. Quartermaster-General. With 20 Maps.

"This brilliant and fascinating little book."
Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Evelyn Wood is to be congratulated on his excellent book. The service may also be congratulated that amongst its Field Marshals and General Officers on the active list are so many who can emphasize their leading in the field by their literary counsels in peace. Among that band of able writers the Quartermaster-General to Her Majesty's Forces well holds his own."—Times.

Royal 8vo. 2 vols. 25s. net.

MEMORIALS of CHRISTIE'S. By W. ROBERTS, Author of 'The Book-hunter in London,' 'Printers' Marks,' &c. With 75 Collotype and other Illustrations, and a full Index. [Next week.

 This history of the famous auctioneers, through whose hands have passed so many important works of art, will be found a reference book of great practical value to all interested in the arts. The chief items in each sale are described, the prices which they fetched under the hammer are recorded, and in all cases of interest the purchaser's name is given. The illustrations of pictures and bric-à-brac are selected chiefly from those objects which obtained "record" prices. In a size uniform with the catalogues of the firm, it should be an indispensable book in all libraries and art schools.

Pott 4to. 15s. net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896: containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Indexes of Names and Subjects, and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15s. net, each.

"In bulk, in paper and type, and in general thoroughness it strikes us equally favourably."—Academy.

Pott 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SILVER CROSS. A Selection of Poems for the Sick and Suffering. Edited by HELEN DOUGLAS, with an Introduction by the LORD BISHOP OF ST. ANDREWS. Pott 8vo. printed in red and black on antique paper at the Chiswick Press.

"The selection has been judiciously made, and to many the volume will be welcome and useful."—Glasgow Herald.

Crown 8vo. 600 pages, 3s. 6d.

ELOCUTION and the DRAMATIC ART. By DAVID J. SMITHSON. New Edition, Revised by the Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, Professor of Elocution at King's College, London.

New and Revised Edition, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15s.

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT: a Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang. With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

"On the whole the work seems to be for all practical purposes quite as good in its cheaper as in its more expensive form. In spite of many defects, it is by far the best existing work of its kind, with the single exception of Messrs. Farmer and Henley's 'Slang and its Analogues,' which is not only much more costly, but contains a great deal of matter unfit for general circulation."—Manchester Guardian.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

Edited by GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.

Fully illustrated, in specially designed green cloth cover, crown 8vo. 1s. 6d. each.

NEW VOLUMES.

ROCHESTER. By G. H. Palmer, B.A. 128 pages. 38 Illustrations.

OXFORD. By the Rev. Percy Dearmer, M.A., Christchurch. 136 pages. 34 Illustrations.

"We have so frequently in these columns urged the want of cheap, well-illustrated, and well-written handbooks to our cathedrals, to take the place of the out-of-date publications of local booksellers, that we are glad to hear that they have been taken in hand by Messrs. George Bell & Sons."
St. James's Gazette.

 Illustrated Prospectus of the Series on application.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

NEW VOLUMES.

The PROSE WORKS of JONATHAN SWIFT. A New Edition, with an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. In about 8 vols. 3s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. A TALE of a TUB, The BATTLE of the BOOKS, and other early works. Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT. With Biographical Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. With Portrait and Facsimile. [Next week.

HORACE. A New Literal Prose Translation. By A. HAMILTON BRYCE, LL.D., Translator and Editor of 'Vergil,' &c. 3s. 6d.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

On WEDNESDAY NEXT, 8vo. 14s.

HISTORY OF INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT.

Vol. I. Containing a History of the Evolution of Greek and Hindoo Thought, of Græco-Roman Paganism, of Judaism, and of Christianity down to the Closing of the Schools of Athens by Justinian 529 A.D.

By JOHN BEATTIE CROZIER, Author of 'Civilisation and Progress.'

 In the present volume, the second of the series of which 'Civilisation and Progress' was the introductory, the author has kept two main objects steadily in view. The first is, to apply the Law of Evolution to the whole field of Intellectual, Moral, and Social Development with the same thoroughgoingness with which it has been applied by Darwin, Huxley, and Spencer, to the Physical World. The second is, to make, if possible, such and every portion of a work written (as was inevitable from the nature of the subjects treated of) for scholars and specialists of the different departments intelligible without effort to the great bulk of general readers.

NEW BOOK BY DEAN FARRAR.

8vo. 15s.

THE BIBLE: its Meaning and Supremacy.

By F. W. FARRAR, D.D. F.R.S., Dean of Canterbury.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the SCIENCE of MYTHOLOGY. By the Right Hon. Professor F. MAX MULLER, K.M., Member of the French Institute. 2 vols. 8vo. 32s.

"There can be no two opinions about the value of the book itself as a permanent contribution to science. The work has many claims to be regarded as the keystone and completion of the arch which its author, by the honoured labour of a long life, has thrown across the gulf of ignorance and prejudice that lies between man's desire and a knowledge of the truth."—Scotsman.

"We are grateful for the graceful scholarship, the massive learning, and valuable phonetics of these two volumes."
Guardian.

The LIFE and TIMES of THOMAS WAKLEY. By S. Squire SPRIGGE, M.B. Cantab. With 2 Portraits. 8vo. 18s. [On Wednesday next.

 Thomas Wakley was Member of Parliament for Finsbury after the passage of the great Reform Bill, and played a prominent part in the politics of the day, but it is as founder of the Lancet and as Coroner for Middlesex that he is best remembered. His efforts in the cause of medical reform, though eventually successful, led at the first to his expulsion from the metropolitan hospitals and the buildings of the College of Surgeons, while his attacks upon professional abuses of all sorts involved him in numerous actions at law. As coroner he was responsible for the abolition of flogging in the Army, and as journalist he exposed such notorious quacks as Chabert, John St. John Long, and the O'Keys. This book is a hitherto unwritten chapter in the social history of the nineteenth century, as it is a description of the development of the medical profession between the years 1820 and 1860.

HARVARD HISTORICAL STUDIES.

NOMINATIONS for ELECTIVE OFFICE in the UNITED STATES. By FREDERICK W. DALLINGER, A.M., Member of the Massachusetts Senate. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

PAPERS and NOTES on the GENESIS and MATRIX of the DIAMOND. By the late HENRY CARVILL LEWIS, M.A. F.G.S., Professor of Mineralogy in the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, Professor of Geology in Haverford College, U.S.A. Edited from his unpublished MSS. by Professor T. G. BONNEY, D.Sc. LL.D. F.R.S., &c. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LECTURES in the LYCEUM; or, Aristotle's Ethics for English Readers. Edited by ST. GEORGE STOCK. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

CROMWELL'S PLACE in HISTORY. Founded on Six Lectures delivered at Oxford. By S. R. GARDINER, D.C.L., Ford's Lecturer, 1896. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [On Wednesday next.

A WOMAN'S PART in a REVOLUTION. By Mrs. John Hays HAMMOND. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

"Flashes of humour, a woman's impatience at the circumlocution of high politics, make Mrs. Hammond's narrative delightful reading."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A good many people have exercised their pens over the South African trouble. No one has done so in a more entertaining manner than Mrs. Hays Hammond."—Westminster Gazette.

NEW BOOK BY MR. S. LEVETT YEATS.

A GALAHAD of the CREEKS, and other Stories. By S. Levett YEATS, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

"It would be difficult to say whether the literary grace, the loftiness and purity of tone, or the inherent interest of the story constitutes the most admirable characteristic of this charming work. In every respect the book is worthy of high praise."—Aberdeen Daily Free Press.

"There is plenty of dash about Mr. Levett Yeats's manner of telling a spirited story."—Academy.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

No. 175. MAY, 1897. 8vo. 6d.

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. Chaps. 11-13. By S. LEVETT YEATS, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.'
RURAL PROSPERITY. By Sir EDMUND VERNEY, Bart.
The BALLAD of the LITTLE BLACK HOUND. By Mrs. CLEMENT SHORTER.
LOOKING ROUND. By A. K. H. B.
SUMMARY PROCEDURE. By HENRY MARTLEY.
The NEW CURE for SNAKE-BITES. By Mrs. PERCY FRANKLAND.
The FIGHTING TÉMÉRAIRE. By HENRY NEWBOLT.
AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By ANDREW LANG.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. London, New York, and Bombay.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW VOLUME OF
'A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.'

On May 20 will be ready, demy 8vo. cloth extra, 12*s*.
Uniform with the LIBRARY EDITION of the first Four Volumes.)

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES,

FROM 1880 TO
THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

BY

JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

The First and Second Volumes of 'A History of our own Times' appeared in 1878, and were received with undoubted public welcome. It had occurred to the Author that one of the most difficult tasks for a young student just then was to get hold of the history of our own times. If anybody wanted to learn something of the facts concerning the reign of Elizabeth, or the reign of Anne, or the reign of George the Third, or the years of the great Reform Bill, there were standard books on every subject which could be got at in every public library, and which indeed stood on the shelves of most men's private libraries; but, to make oneself acquainted with what had happened in the reign of Queen Victoria, there were only the interminable files of newspapers to consult, except, of course, for some special works dealing with particular chapters of history, such as the Crimean War or the Indian Mutiny. This was the want which the author of the History was anxious to supply, and he started upon his task with the conviction that there was no necessity for making even contemporary history a dry record of facts and dates. A third and fourth volume were added to the story somewhat later, and the review of events passing within our own recollection was brought up to the crisis of 1880, when Mr. Gladstone, at the head of the Liberal party, once more returned to power. The Supplemental Volume, now nearly ready, takes up the story at that momentous epoch. It passes in review all that has happened in the affairs of the Empire from that time until the "Diamond Jubilee" of the Queen's long reign. It is hoped that the volume may be found worth reading for the sake of the events described in its pages, and even apart from any interest it might have as a successor to former volumes. That it is written without undue sway of party or partisan feeling, the Publishers trust that the general public, from knowledge of the previous volumes, may be kindly disposed to believe.

TO BE READY ON THE OPENING DAY (MAY 3).

ACADEMY NOTES, 1897. TWENTY-THIRD YEAR. Price 1*s*.

ACADEMY NOTES contains this year, as usual, a number of important copyright Pictures, by Members and Associates of the Royal Academy, which will not be found in any other publication.

ACADEMY NOTES is distinguished from all its imitators by presenting on the Opening Day a summary of the contents of the Exhibition and Illustrations of the principal Pictures, all arranged in their order as they hang on the walls of Burlington House.

ACADEMY NOTES is largely used by collectors, and kept as a permanent record of the Royal Academy Exhibition.

ACADEMY NOTES is the only complete book published on the Opening Day of the Exhibition.

NOW READY, PRICE 3*s*. (NINETEENTH YEAR).

The ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of the PARIS SALON for 1897. Containing about Four Hundred Reproductions in Facsimile after the Original Drawings of the Artists.

NÙLMA, Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED'S New Novel, will be ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries on May 7. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The following NEW and CHEAPER EDITIONS will be ready at all Booksellers' on May 6 :—

The RIDDLE RING. By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

The GILDED AGE. By MARK TWAIN and CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER. With 212 Illustrations Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

The CHARLATAN. By ROBERT BUCHANAN and HENRY MURRAY. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s*.

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the Russian Secret Service. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugène Rougon). By ÉMILE ZOLA. Authorized Version. With a Preface by ERNEST VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

The MASTER CRAFTSMAN. By Sir WALTER BESANT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

FIFTY YEARS AGO. By Sir WALTER BESANT. With 144 Plates and Woodcuts. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s*.

LIFE on the MISSISSIPPI. By MARK TWAIN. With 312 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.
Also, uniform, crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*. each.

A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 200 Illustrations.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.
The 1,000,000*l*. BANK-NOTE.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. LYNN LINTON. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3*s*. 6*d*.
"A strong and impressive story."—Daily Telegraph.

LOVICE. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.
"In 'Dolly' and the rest we recognize the old light, humorous touch which is distinctly Mrs. Hungerford's own....'Lovice' will not fail of widening the popularity of its author."—Glasgow Herald.

BEYOND the PALE. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6*s*.
"The story overbrims with life, and is the best told of Irish stories we have read for many a day."—Daily Chronicle.

WITH the RED EAGLE. By WILLIAM WESTALL. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s*.
"A rattling tale of military adventure, with a pleasant undercurrent of romance....A tale brimfull of exciting incident."—Spectator.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. Illustrated by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*
"He has all the materials for a successful novel—imagination, the power of observation, a pleasant touch in dialogue."—Pall Mall Gazette.

GHETTO TRAGEDIES. By I. ZANGWILL. With 3 Illustrations by A. S. Boyd. Long fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2*s*. net.

A MINION of the MOON. By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of 'The Mysteries of Heron Dyke.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

A LEVANTINE FAMILY. By BAYLE ST. JOHN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

A MISSING WITNESS. By FRANK BARRETT. With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.
"It interests us from the very starting-point."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

The PLUNGER. By HAWLEY SMART.
MR. JERVIS. By B. M. CROKER.
The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. CLARK RUSSELL.
The WHITE VIRGIN. By G. MANVILLE FENN.
MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY.
BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir WALTER BESANT.
AT MARKET VALUE. By GRANT ALLEN.
LADY PATTY. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD.

MADAME SANS-GENE. (Founded on SARDOU and MOREAU'S Play.) By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.
"He has succeeded in translating the most charming of plays into a charming novel."—National Observer

ALLEN UPWARD'S NOVELS.

A CROWN of STRAW. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*. each; post 8vo. boards, 2*s*. each.
The QUEEN AGAINST OWEN. | The PRINCE of BALKISTAN.

DICTIONARY of WORDS, FACTS, and PHRASES. By ELIEZER EDWARDS. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

GAY & BIRD'S LIST.

Just published, price 1s.

The GHOST of WAR and the POTENTATES of PEACE A Satire By ALURED GRAY

A very smart up-to-date political skit

Liverpool Post — "Contains some clever writing"

SECOND EDITION NOW READY price 6s.

AN UP TO DATE STOCK EXCHANGE NOVEL

The EARTH for a DOLLAR. By RUFUS RANDELL Roof Roofer.

Morning Post — "Well calculated to make the scales fall from the eyes that have been hitherto wilfully blind"

SECOND EDITION NOW READY, price 6s.

MARM LISA.

By Mrs. WIGGIN,

Author of 'Timothy's Quest,' &c.

Times — "Wholesome and humorous....Exquisitely told....They (the twins) are delightful to read about"

Baron de Book-worms says — 'Is a story told with that rare combination of humour and pathos that is genius.'"

Daily News — "Is unsurpassed by anything its gifted authoress has yet written....Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin's humour and pathos are as pure and true as any that America is producing nowadays."

Queen — "Is a remarkable book. . . It has the bubbling over wit which characterized 'Timothy's Quest,' the most laughter producing book published in America for years....Mrs. Wiggin has never written a better book unless it be 'Timothy's Quest'"

Liverpool Post — "In 'Marm Lisa' Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin has with keen insight and varied resource sketched the career of a poor semi-imbecile girl in the slums of a great city on the Pacific Slope. Her sympathy with child-life peeps out from every page....Mrs. Wiggin has a graphic and forceful style, and the interest of her work never flags for a moment."

MARM LISA.

Spectator — "Since the death of Miss Alcott, Mrs. Wiggin has reigned without a rival as the most sympathetic and acute American delineator of the joys and sufferings of child-life. Her new story is wholly worthy of her great reputation, and we can hardly give it greater praise....There is genuine fun as well as poignant pathos in this beautiful story, the closing scene of which is handled with a gracious tenderness that recalls the best work of the late Mrs. Ewing.

ALSO BY MRS. WIGGIN.

Timothy's Quest. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Birds' Christmas Carol. Boards, 1s. 6d.

The Story of Patsy. Boards, 1s. 6d.

A Cathedral Courtship. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Polly Oliver's Problem. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

A Summer in a Canon. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

Children's Rights. Cloth, 5s.

The Republic of Childhood. 3 vols. cloth, 5s each.

The Story Hour. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

The STORY of the MINE. As illustrated by the Great Comstock Lode of Nevada By CHARLES HOWARD SHINN. Crown 8vo. pp. 286, 15 Illustrations, art canvas, 6s.

A popular book on mining.

RICHARD HENRY STODDARD.

UNDER the EVENING LAMP. By RICHARD HENRY STODDARD. Crown 8vo. pp. 292, cloth, gilt top, 7s. 6d

Contents:—Scotch Contemporaries of Burns—James Hogg (the Ettrick Shepherd)—William Motherwell—The Early Years of Gifford—Robert Bloomfield—John Clare—Ebenezer Elliott—David Gray—William Blake—Hartley Coleridge—Thomas Lovell Beddoes—George Darley—Thomas Love Peacock—Edward Fitzgerald—Richard Monckton Milnes (Lord Houghton)

At a recent Dinner given by the Authors' Club in New York to R. H. Stoddard, the following Eminent Authors regretted their inability to be present, and wrote:—

HALL CAINE.—"We know him for a poet of true feeling and great charm."

AUSTIN DOBSON.—"A time-tried and distinguished veteran of the muses."

CONAN DOYLE.—"Mr. Stoddard's name is honoured here as in America"

EDMUND GOSSE.—"True singer, true lover of intellectual beauty, true inheritor of the great spirit of the poets"

R. GARNETT.—"To enable me to testify by my presence the respect which I entertain for Mr. Stoddard as a poet and a man of letters."

Just published, 3s 6d net.

ESSAYS from the CHAP-BOOK. By MANY CELEBRATED WRITERS. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, with pretty side design, gilt top, uncut, 3s. 6d. net.

Just published, 10s. net.

IN BAMBOO LANDS. By K. S. BAXTER. Small 4to pp. 382, Map, and 118 Illustrations, beautifully bound in art canvas, gilt, 10s net.

This is a most interesting book of Japanese travel.

London:

GAY & BIRD, 22, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

Agency for American Books.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S LIST.

JUST PUBLISHED.

THE MATABELE CAMPAIGN, 1896.

Being a Narrative of the Campaign in Suppressing the Native Rising in Matabeleland and Mashonaland.

By Colonel R. S. S. BADEN-POWELL, 13th Hussars, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society.

With nearly 100 Illustrations, Maps, &c. Demy 8vo. 15s.

"The actual impression of the moment set down by a keen-sighted actor in the campaign, who has the power of vivid presentment both with pen and pencil. Several of the sketches were made under fire. This interesting book contains a wealth of anecdote."—Daily Chronicle.

"In every way a most valuable contribution to South African history."—Daily News.

"A truly admirable and valuable contribution to the literature and history of South Africa."—Times of Africa.

The FALL of the CONGO ARABS. By Captain SIDNEY L. HINDE. With Map, Portraits, and Plans. Demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

"A graphic sketch of one of the most exciting and important episodes in the struggle for supremacy in Central Africa between the Arabs and their European rivals. Apart from the story of the campaign, Captain Hinde's book is mainly remarkable for the fulness with which he discusses the question of cannibalism. The details given may repel some readers, but for the rest Captain Hinde's book has a distinct and genuine interest for every one who cares, however slightly for Central African affairs. It is, indeed, the only connected narrative—in English, at any rate—which has been published of this particular episode in African History."—Times.

The NORTH-WEST PROVINCES of INDIA: their History, Ethnology, and Administration. By W. CROOKE. With Map and 16 Full-Page Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

An attempt to give a picture, historical and ethnological, of this important district, as well as to describe the remarkable success which has attended British administration.

[Now ready.

FICTION.

THE STORY OF A GREEK ISLAND.

PHROSO: a Romance. By ANTHONY HOPE. Second Edition. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Anthony Hope has produced his latest novel in a happy hour. At a time when the chief theme of conversation is Crete and the islands of the Archipelago, the lawlessness of the Eastern races, and the inveteracy of old racial grudges, he has issued a book with all the elements of romance, recounting the fortunes of an eccentric Englishman, who, because he is tired of ordinary travel, purchases an island belonging to Turkey and inhabited by Greeks."—Daily Telegraph.

A HANDFUL of EXOTICS: Stories and Incidents chiefly of Russo-Jewish Life. By S. GORDON. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Since 'Children of the Ghetto' no more powerful pen has undertaken any Jewish theme in English than Mr. Gordon's."—Glasgow Herald.

GUAVAS the TINNER. By S. BARING-GOULD. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"There is a kind of flavour about this book which alone elevates it far above the ordinary novel. The story itself has a grandeur in harmony with the wild and ragged scenery which is its setting."—Athenæum.

WILT THOU HAVE THIS WOMAN? By J. MACLAREN COBBAN. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"In the present day it is refreshing to come across a novel of this description. The story in its old-world charm and country setting reminds one of Anthony Trollope."—New Saturday.

UNDER SHADOW of the MISSION. By L. STUDDIFORD M'CHESNEY. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Those whose minds are open to the finer issues of life, who can appreciate graceful thought and refined expression of it, from them this volume will receive a welcome as enthusiastic as it will be based on critical knowledge."—Church Times.

The SEATS of the MIGHTY. By GILBERT PARKER. Seventh Edition. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"One of the strongest stories of historical interest and adventure that we have read for many a day.....Through all Mr. Parker moves with an assured step, whilst in his treatment of his subject there is that happy blending of the poetical with the prosaic which has characterized all his writings. A notable and successful book."—Speaker.

CLARISSA FURIOSA. By W. E. NORRIS. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"It ranks with the best of the author's productions; and to say this is, in our opinion, equivalent to placing it with the best novels of our time."—St. James's Gazette.

A MAN with BLACK EYELASHES. By H. A. KENNEDY. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Original in conception, strikingly daring in treatment, and luridly dramatic in its closing incident."—To-day.

The SPECULATORS. By J. BREWER. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"A pretty bit of comedy.....It is undeniably a clever book."—Academy.

"A clever and amusing story. In a word, it cleverly makes capital out of the comic aspects of culture, and will be read with amusement by every intellectual reader who takes it up."—Scotsman.

The FAITHFUL CITY. By H. MORRAH. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Morrah has indeed succeeded admirably in the difficult task of separating his scene from the ocean of reality, and making it stand as a solid fact by itself; and at the same time he conveys a suggestion of weirdness and horror, as if he were presenting some tremendous fantasy of dreamland, until finally he convinces and enthrals the reader with his mysterious savages, his gigantic tower, and his uncompromising men and women. This is a haunting mysterious book, not without an element of stupendous grandeur."—Athenæum.

The SUPPLANTER. By B. P. NEUMANN. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"The story has a very real charm.....A book which it is a pleasure to praise, alike for its fine sentiment, its healthy moral, and its distinct ability."—Speaker.

A CHILD of the JAGO. By ARTHUR MORRISON. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. Morrison has achieved an astonishing success. Take it as a whole, as a picture of a phase of life, and you must admit that it is a masterly achievement—a triumph of art. It is a distinct advance upon his earlier book, 'Tales of Mean Streets,' because, it seems to us, it is truer, more convincing, less dispiriting. The book is a masterpiece."

Pall Mall Gazette.

The PLATTNER STORY, and Others. By H. G. WELLS. Crown 8vo. 6s.

[Immediately.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S NEW CATALOGUE and BOOK GAZETTE sent to any address.

London: METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, Strand.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S SELECTED LIST.

"FROM PAUPER TO PREMIER."

LIFE of SIR HENRY PARKES. By Charles E. Lyne, formerly Editor of the 'Sydney Morning HERALD,' &c. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"Mr. Lyne has told the story of the remarkable career of a remarkable man in such a painstaking and concise manner that it cannot fail to attract.....The book has a clear and distinctive value. Furthermore, its preparation shows much care and literary skill."

THE PARLIAMENT OF DISRAELI AND GLADSTONE.

The INNER LIFE of the HOUSE of COMMONS: selected from the Writings of William White, with a Prefatory Note by his Son, and an Introduction by JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P. 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth, 16s. [Next week.

The late Mr. William White was for many years doorkeeper of the House of Commons, and in this capacity gained a unique knowledge of the parliamentary life of his day. He witnessed the early skirmishes between Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Gladstone, and sketched many a word-portrait, none the less vivid for being un-academical, for the Illustrated Times, from whose pages these extracts are mainly derived. From them it will be gathered that Mr. White was the pioneer of the modern "descriptive reporting" which obtains so largely nowadays.

TWELVE BAD WOMEN. Edited by Arthur Vincent. A Companion Volume to 'Twelve Bad Men.' Illustrated. Cloth, 16s.

The Volume is made up as follows:—I. ALICE PERRERS (the rapacious paramour of Edward III.)—II. ALICE ARDEN (Shakespeare's chosen type of a bad woman)—III. MARY FRITH ("Moll Cutpurse")—IV. The COUNTESS of SOMERSET (Sir Thomas Overbury's murderess)—V. BARBARA, DUCHESS of CLEVELAND—VI. MARY YOUNG ("Jenny Diver")—VII. TERESIA CONSTANTIA PHILLIPS (Walpole's "Con Phillips")—VIII. MISS CHUDLEIGH—IX. MRS. BROWNRIGG (the cruellest of women)—X. ELIZABETH CANNING (impostor)—XI. MARY BATEMAN ("The Yorkshire Witch")—XII. MARY ANNE CLARKE (the baleful genius of "the brave old Duke of York").

BICYCLING IN SPAIN.

SKETCHES AWHEEL in FIN DE SIECLE IBERIA. By Fanny Bullock Workman and William HUNTER WORKMAN, Authors of 'Algerian Memories.' 30 Illustrations and large Map. Cloth, 6s.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NAME THIS CHILD.'

A GREAT LIE. By Wilfrid Hugh Chesson, Author of 'Name this Child.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Next week.

The BURDEN of LIFE. Essays by the late J. Hain Friswell, Author of 'The Gentle Life.' Edited, with a Memoir, by his DAUGHTER. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW SATURDAY.—"Written in a tone and style which is charming."

A NEW STORY BY W. CLARK RUSSELL.

A NOBLE HAUL. (The New Volume of "Little Novels.") Paper, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

PUNCH.—"As one of the excellent series of 'Little Novels,' 'A Noble Haul' is a little novel worth several ordinary big ones. It is a sailor's story, admirably told, and in the smallest compass possible—quite a pocket compass. For rail, road, or trip by sea, strongly recommended."

A NOVEL BY A NEW WRITER.

CRAIKTREES: a Story of Yorkshire Country Life. By Watson Dyke. Cloth, 6s.

BY THE AMERICAN CONSUL AT ATHENS.

APHROESSA, and other Poems. By George Horton, Author of 'Constantine.' Cloth, 3s. 6d.

The QUEEN'S REIGN for CHILDREN. By W. Clarke Hall, Author of 'The Law Relating to Children.' Portrait. With Introduction by BENJAMIN WAUGH. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

No volume of child-life of this nation has ever been written which contains so thrilling, so incredible a story as this, which briefly relates what the Queen's reign has done for children. The condition in which children were living at the beginning of Her Majesty's reign in mines, in brickfields, on canals, &c., are here briefly summarized from authentic documents. The struggle in Parliament on these children's behalf, the defeats and victories, are glanced at, and some practical political suggestions are made in reference to a still better future for children.

A NEW EDITION OF OLIVE SCHREINER'S STORIES.

DREAM LIFE and REAL LIFE. Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED BY SAME AUTHOR.

TROOPER PETER HALKET of MASHONALAND. With Frontispiece, cloth, 6s.

THE TURCO-GREEK WAR.

READ { The BALKANS. By W. Miller, M.A. / TURKEY. By Stanley Lane-Poole. } With Illustrations and Maps. 5s. each.

FOURTH EDITION, REVISED, ENLARGED, AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE.

SOUTH AFRICA. By Geo. McCall Theal, Author of 'The Portuguese in South Africa,' &c. Maps and Illustrations. Cloth, 5s. [Next week.

DAILY TELEGRAPH on First Edition.—"A thoroughly workmanlike and readable volume."

NEW EDITION.

INMATES of MY HOUSE and GARDEN. By Mrs. Brightwen. Many Illustrations. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

COSMOPOLIS: an International and Tri-Lingual Monthly Review.

Edited by F. ORTMANS.

Contents for MAY. Price 2s. 6d.

SLAVES of the LAMP Rudyard Kipling.
LITERARY RECOLLECTIONS Right Hon. Max Müller.
UNPUBLISHED LETTERS to GUSTAVE D'EICHTHAL John Stuart Mill
BULL-FIGHTING and BULL-FIGHTERS. John Pennell.
WALTER VON DER VOGELWEIDE. Karl Blind.
The GLOBE and the ISLAND. Henry Norman.
La "MUIRON." Anatole France.
Un COUP de DÉS JAMAIS N'ABOLIRA le HASARD. Stéphane Mallarmé
LETTRES INÉDITES, publiées par E. Halpérine-Kaminsky. Ivan Tourguénoff
L'ANARCHISME dans l'ART. Eugène Müntz
QUELQUES LETTRES INÉDITES, avec Introduction par Henri Lichtenberger Friedrich Nietzsche
L'INSURRECTION des PHILIPPINES. Edmond Plauchut.
REVUE du MOIS. F. de Pressensé
FREMDES LEID. Hermine Villinger.
TÜRKISCHE REFORMEN und die GEFAHR eines WELTKRIEGES. III. H. Vambéry
MUTTERWURZER, die DUSE und BERLIN. Paul Schlenther
Die BEWEGUNGEN auf dem GEBIET des INTERNATIONALEM BIBLIOTHEKSWESENS. O. Hartwig
THIERS als HISTORIKER. M. Philippson
VOM ENGLISCHEN BUCHERTISCH. Thomas Hardy und Rudyard Kipling. A. Brandl
POLITISCHES in DEUTSCHER BELEUCHTUNG. "Ignotus."

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

The TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE for MAY, 1897, which contains, among other contributions:—DEAR FAUSTINA, by RHODA BROUGHTON (Chaps. 13-15)—A POET of SPRING—A LAND of DERELICTS—An UNAPPRECIATED DIARIST—The CARTHUSIANS—COLERIDGEIANA—and RED POLL'S MARRIAGE.

EIGHTEENTH EDITION NOW READY.

FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

From Subaltern to Commander-in-Chief.

By FIELD-MARSHAL

LORD ROBERTS of KANDAHAR, V.C.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 36*s*.

With Maps, Plans, and Portraits on Steel and Copper.

NEW NOVELS

AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

ON TUESDAY NEXT.

DEAR FAUSTINA.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,
Author of 'Cometh Up as a Flower,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

JUST READY.

PANTALAS.

By EDWARD JENKINS,
Author of 'Ginx's Baby.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

NOW READY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NEAR NEIGHBOURS.'

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD,
Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Not only a clever, but a pleasant novel. The author writes unfrequently, but everything she writes is worth reading. All her novels bear an independent air; they are not turned out on any line, or made to order to suit any market."—World.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'EAST LYNNE.'

ASHLEY.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. scarlet cloth, 2*s*. 6*d*.; green cloth, 2*s*.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7*s*. 6*d*.

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

"Mr. Finch Mason wields with equal facility and effect the pen and the pencil; his narratives are full of 'go' and spirit."—Globe.

"As enjoyable a book of horsey stories as has been written for many a day."—Scotsman.

"To all with a turn for sport I say emphatically procure 'The Tame Fox.'"—Whitehall Review.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s*.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

READY ON FRIDAY NEXT, MAY 7.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c.

WITHOUT ISSUE. By Henry Cresswell, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

COUSIN JEM. By L. Higgin, Author of 'A Cornish Maid,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"'Cousin Jem' is an entertaining tale and contains some excellent character studies."—Black and White.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' 'Mistress Beatrice Cope,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"It is in the background and details, in the incidental sketches of character, in the freshness of the atmosphere, that the chief charm of this story lies."—Globe.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"The story depends more on its all-round literary merit than upon variety of incident, though in this regard it is by no means poor; it is sure to be read with warm appreciation by discreet lovers of good fiction."—Scotsman.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"'All in All' is melodramatic, but not without interest and attraction."—Athenæum.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s*.

"An excellent story of a well-imagined mystery, skilfully expounded and wrought out.....Has many light and pleasant passages and is readable throughout."—Globe.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By AMYOT SAGON, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW MAGAZINE OF GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY.

Published Monthly, price One Shilling, in handsome imperial 8vo. tastefully printed in old face type, and illustrated.

No. I. NOW READY.

THE

GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE.

A Journal of Family History, Heraldry, and Pedigrees.

The GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE combines interesting illustrated family histories with those accurate and detailed evidences which are the real value of genealogical writing. Some curious extracts from notable Parish Registers are given; and many monumental inscriptions, illustrative of family history, are described and explained. Biographies of eminent historical personages, with portraits, also appear occasionally. Considerable space is devoted to inquiries and correspondence.

The Editor will welcome communications on subjects suitable to the pages of the Magazine.

Contents of No. I. for MAY.

The SURRENDER of the ISLE of WIGHT. By J. H. Round.
WILLIAM BRADFORD'S HISTORY of PLYMOUTH PLANTATION, commonly known as 'The LOG of the "MAYFLOWER."' By J. L. Otter.
An ANCIENT AUGMENTATION.
The SOBIESKI STUARTS. By Henry Jenner, F.S.A.
SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY. Part I. By Mrs. Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.
A DEVONSHIRE MANUSCRIPT. By James Dallas, F.L.S.
A LIST of STRANGERS. By Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen.
NELSON and his ENCHANTRESS.
QUERIES and CORRESPONDENCE.
A GAZETTE of the MONTH: being a Chronicle of Creations, Deaths, and other Matters.
BY the WAY.

A Specimen Copy of the Magazine will be sent, post free, for One Shilling in stamps.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 8*s*. 6*d*.; Large-Paper Copies, 21*s*. each.

NATURAL HISTORY IN SHAKESPEARE'S TIME.

Being a Compendium of the Natural History of the Animals, Plants, Minerals, &c., mentioned by Shakespeare, and illustrated by Facsimiles of the Woodcuts in an Early Edition of the 'Hortus Sanitatis.'

Compiled and Edited by
H. W. SEAGER, M.B., &c.

"Mr. Seager's compilation affords an interesting insight into the condition of natural science three centuries ago."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"A quaint idea cleverly carried out. The quotations are admirable. This volume should be an acceptable addition to our bookshelves."—Public Opinion.

NEW TRANSLATION OF BOETHIUS.

In fcap. 8vo. cloth, tastefully printed and bound, price 4*s*. 6*d*. with a Portrait of the Father of Boethius.

The CONSOLATION of PHILOSOPHY: a New Rendering into English Prose and Verse from the Latin of Boethius. By H. R. JAMES, M.A., Christ Church, Oxford.

In crown 4to. cloth, gilt edges, price 6*s*.

HUGO of AVENDON. A Drama in Four Acts. By E. L. M.

"There is good material in the play, and the climax is skilfully planned."—Dundee Advertiser.

"The work reads well, and should be enjoyed by those who patronize the drama without leaving their own firesides."—Scotsman.

ELLIOT STOCK,
62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
A History of the English Navy	569
Europe in the Middle Ages	570
Prof. Saintsbury on Mediæval European Literature	571
Heroes of the Nations—Robert Bruce	572
New Novels (The Pilgrimage of the Ben Beriah; Elementary Jane; Essentially Human; Sweet Irish Eyes; Life Again, Love Again; Cousin Jem; As a Roaring Lion)	573—574
Military Literature	574
Scottish Stories	574
Antiquarian Literature	575
Our Library Table—List of New Books	576—577
'Travel and Big Game'; Two Prothalamia; The International Literary Congress	577—578
Literary Gossip	579
Science—Bicycles; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	580
Fine Arts—The Royal Academy; The New Gallery; Vitruviana; Sale; Gossip	581—586
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	587—588
Drama—The Week	588

LITERATURE

The Royal Navy: a History from the Earliest Times to the Present. By William Laird Clowes, assisted by Sir Clements Markham, Capt. A. T. Mahan, Mr. H. W. Wilson, Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. E. Fraser, &c. Vol. I. (Sampson Low & Co.)

A comprehensive history of the English navy has long been wanted. Those that we possess are as bad as is easily possible: clumsy as to form, untrustworthy as to fact, unscientific and ignorant as to deduction. It is thus scarcely curious that in a country like this, of which the navy is the life, there should be such general ignorance of everything connected with it. It is only within the last few years that the writings of Capt. Mahan have informed our reading public that the work of a navy is not only to fight and win great battles, but also, and perhaps even primarily, to ensure that no battles shall be fought; that in war the slow, unmarked, grinding power of a fleet is tremendous; and that to any country with a large seaboard, but more especially to an island such as this, a strong navy is the truest defence. People have talked about the glories of the Nile and Trafalgar without in the least understanding what was the military, or even the political, importance of those battles, and still more without really knowing that they were parts of a glorious sequence dating back to the reign of Henry III., or even earlier. But for the want we have spoken of, this would be astounding. A year ago Dr. Miller Maguire, speaking at the Royal United Service Institution, said that, at school or at college, he had been "obliged to learn off by heart all the little nautical incidents of the Peloponnesian war and to study the tactics and carrying power of the vessels of the Carthaginians and Romans, while no one ever dreamt of telling him anything about Hawke, or Boscawen, or Collingwood, or our other naval heroes"; and the experience of Dr. Maguire is that of perhaps every other schoolboy in the United Kingdom. How can it have been otherwise? There has not been any book, technical or not technical, which could supply such information as was wanted. Mr. Clowes has rightly said:—

"Our greater historians deal very sparingly with those subjects. Many of them seem to have been deterred by an exaggerated estimate of the attendant difficulties, or by an impression that naval history is far too technical to be understood by lay people. Others have altogether failed to awaken to the importance of the matter, and have, by that very failure, convicted themselves of incompetence. As for the popular historians, the compilers of school histories, text-books, and such like, they have for the most part, and, indeed, almost without exception, bungled, where they have not shamefully scamped, the facts of our naval story."

If the great writers, the men of original research, miss the importance of the facts or do not understand them, they do not relate them; the compilers of text-books necessarily follow their lead; and thus it is that the one feature of our history for the last three centuries which distinctly differentiates it from that of all other nations is silently ignored in our schools, in our universities, and in our ordinary habits of thought. This is illustrated by the nonsense which is so often talked about colonization. Nothing, in fact, is more common than to hear or read in our daily paper that the English have a peculiar genius for colonization which is entirely wanting in the French, as is shown by the failure, wholly or in part, of all French colonies, whilst English colonies have taken root and have flourished in every quarter of the globe. And so we expand our chests, and thank God that we are not as other men are, and that we can accommodate ourselves to the conditions of other climes or to association with other races—a thing which the French have never been able to do: all which is utterly contrary to the teachings of history. The French have repeatedly proved themselves admirable colonists—active, hardy, and ingenious, with a singular aptitude for winning the affection of savage tribes. In Canada, in Nova Scotia—the Acadie of the poet; in Martinique, in Mauritius, they flourished exceedingly. They failed because in time of war France was unable to protect them; they succumbed to England's sea power.

Similarly it is a commonplace of histories and text-books to speak of the wise policy of the great Pitt in sending out the expedition against Quebec in 1759, and of the gallantry and death of Wolfe on the Heights of Abraham, winning Canada to the empire with his life's blood; but no book thinks it necessary to point out that the achievement of Wolfe and the success of the expedition were but illustrations of sea power; that without the fleet in the St. Lawrence Wolfe and his little band of soldiers could not have got near Quebec; that without the fleets off Brest and Toulon they could not have crossed the Atlantic, or, having crossed, have escaped annihilation by the forces of France. Who ever speaks of Saunders, or Hawke, or Osborn, or Boscawen in connexion with the conquest of Canada? And yet it is not too much to say that, from the matter-of-fact point of view, each one of these had immeasurably more to do with it than the heroic Wolfe. Or to speak of our reverses, how many readers have understood, how many schoolboys have been taught, that the independence of our North American colonies was won from us, not by the continental armies under Washington or Gates, but by the French fleets under D'Orvilliers and De Grasse? If they have heard of De Grasse at all, it is as the man who was defeated by Rodney, not as the man who defeated Graves and enforced the surrender of Yorktown.

It would be easy to pile up instance on instance of this ignorance, this misunderstanding of the work and power of the navy, but these are sufficient for our present purpose. The schoolboys are not taught and the men do not understand, because teachers and text-books are alike ignorant, because there has been no book or series of books putting the matter forward in clear and intelligible language. It is to fill this void in our literature that Mr. Laird Clowes has undertaken this history, of which the first volume is now before us. Whether he is well advised in including the story of "Voyages and Discoveries," or the discussion of old legends and myths, time and future volumes must show. At present it seems decidedly doubtful; for these stories and legends—the myth of Madoc, for instance, and the early Welsh settlers in America—interesting as they are, are in no sense naval history, and still less history of the royal navy. Even the later voyages, ably treated by Sir Clements Markham, scarcely come under that head; and there is surely enough of the history proper to fill the volumes to which Mr. Clowes has limited himself.

In the present volume all that relates to the navy and to naval history is from the pen of Mr. Clowes himself; in later volumes we are to have contributions from Mr. Fraser, Capt. Mahan, Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, and Mr. H. W. Wilson. Of these Mr. Wilson, who is favourably known by his 'Ironclads in Action,' published two years ago, has also contributed the chapters on the old voyages and myths in the present volume. He has much in his favour: zeal, energy, and an easy style—too easy sometimes, as when he is tempted to invent a verb "to pilgrimage"; but there is a possible danger of his writing from undigested knowledge, and suggesting that he has got his subject up for the occasion. Mr. Fraser, on the other hand, is known to have been working at naval history—and more especially at the history of our ships—for several years, but he has as yet published nothing except in periodicals or newspapers. Of Capt. Mahan it is unnecessary to speak, and it is reasonable to expect from him a chapter on the War of American Independence which will be most valuable, most important. Of Mr. Roosevelt we must speak more doubtfully. His 'Naval War of 1812' is an admirable little book as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough, and leaves the reader to suppose that the war was a mere series of frigate actions, in several of which the ships of the United States obtained signal successes, sufficient to bring the mother country to her knees. Of the pressure which the English navy brought to bear on the States he seems to have had no conception when that book was written, though it may be hoped that a study of Capt. Mahan's 'Influence of Sea Power' has, by this time, given him a fuller insight into the conditions of the war and its results.

Mr. Clowes appears to have reserved for himself the important and interesting period from 1660 to 1763, as well as the Revolutionary and Napoleonic war, and much may be hoped from his labours. At the same time it is difficult to avoid a feeling that—notwithstanding the urgent need for it—the present work is a little premature. It is not for one man, or even for three or four men, as a preparation for a work nominally so ambitious, to carry out all the original research which is needed—needed because it has never yet been made. To translate the archaic or slovenly periods of Lediard and Beatson into late nineteenth century English is not what is wanted. Lediard and Beatson's works are crowded with inaccuracies and blunders; and really great care will be necessary if the writers would avoid cunningly laid traps. But this work of original research has now been seriously undertaken by the Navy Records Society. Of the value of its work Mr. Clowes's first volume supplies sufficient proof. His chapter on the campaign of 1588 would certainly have been very different from what it is, had he not had at hand the collection of State Papers relating to it, which the Society published two or three years ago. The want of similar help is plainly noticeable in the chapters which deal with the events of the Spanish war previous or subsequent to 1588. Similarly, the treatment of the wars with France in 1512–13 and again in 1545 is far from exhaustive, and in this sense is immature. The Navy Records Society is still young; when it has been in existence a score of years, several problems in our history which at present are quite dark may, it is to be hoped, be clear in the light of day. Even for the earlier chapters much original research has to be made before the organization of the navy can be really understood. Mr. Oppenheim has lately done something towards expounding this, but much more work is called for in the same direction.

As to the early history of our ships in action, our scanty materials can hardly be extended. There appears to be nothing official; and the monkish chroniclers, who wrote without understanding—ignorant, almost, whether a ship was a four-legged beast or not—have often written amazing nonsense, which a modern author is apt to feel bound to repeat, because it is told in evident good faith. Still, we think discretion might be used. It was scarcely necessary for Mr. Clowes to repeat the fable that, in the battle of Sluys, Edward manœuvred "to avoid having to fight with the sun in his eyes." A reference to the map, even to the little one he has printed on p. 252, must have shown him that, as the French fleet lay along the coast, Edward's movement towards the north or north-east would not give him the advantage of the sun when he attacked "soon after the hour of noon"; and this consideration might have led him to ask, "What, then, was the meaning of Edward's manœuvre?" and to pause before he condemned Edward as showing no tactical ability. It seems to us, on the contrary, that this movement may have marked a tactical ability then very rare—may, in fact, have led the way to an overwhelming attack on the enemy's right wing, the understanding of which would be far beyond the grasp of the chroniclers.

This and such like points are, however, minutiæ which we do not now care to insist on. Whatever may be the future of the book, it can scarcely help being far, very far indeed, in advance of anything we now have, and may—we trust will—lead to that study of our naval history which has been so sadly neglected. One thing, though, is much against its success. The form of the book is excessively cumbersome. "A big book is a big evil"; and this is a very big book, and, what is worse, is a very heavy one. It measures 10½ in. by 8 in., is 2 in. thick, and weighs close on 6 lb. avoirdupois. To hold it in the hand whilst reading is absolutely impossible, and many persons strongly object to read with the book lying on the table. We regret, and shall continue to regret, that instead of this one big heavy volume the matter was not put into two of moderate size. For this convenience we would gladly have sacrificed the pictures and the leaded shiny paper.

Europe in the Middle Age. By O. J. Thatcher, Ph.D., and Ferdinand Schwill, Ph.D. (Murray.)

It is rather the fashion nowadays in England to despise the study in outline of a broad sweep of history and to extol the advantages of concentrating the attention of the student upon a limited period, read in greater detail. Yet it seems a doubtful policy to advise the student who knows nothing of the general course of history to limit himself to a century or so, studied in absolute isolation from what has happened earlier or later. One result of this dislike of "smattering" is that in this age of multiplied "outlines" there is no English text-book which presents the general course of mediæval history in a fashion sufficiently clear, scholarly, and distinct to suit the needs of students of university standing. There are, therefore, reasons for giving a cordial welcome to this attempt from America to supply a want long felt in places where history is studied in a broad spirit. In many ways the book of Drs. Thatcher and Schwill will be a useful addition to our library of text-books. It is of moderate compass, is clearly written, is fairly well brought up to date, contains hardly any really serious mistakes, and is sufficiently free from fads and bias. Moreover, the facts selected for narration are carefully chosen, due proportion is as a rule preserved, and the arrangement, though not altogether satisfactory, is carefully thought out and scrupulously maintained from cover to cover. But though it will serve usefully till a more masterly book appears, it has grave limitations. Its writers, we should be inclined to conjecture, are young American teachers of history, educated or inspired in Germany, and the book is certainly very American and very German. Though the volume bears Mr. Murray's name as publisher, the American spelling and the absence of any printer's name suggest that the sheets have come from over the Atlantic. Side by side with American affectations like "honor," we have an affectation of extreme Germanism when Charlemagne is called "Karl" and his son "Ludwig." Indeed, the perversity with which proper names are spelt all over the book is one of the smaller reasons why it is not completely satisfactory. We have "Karl the Great" and "Charles the Bald." We have "Chlodowig," "Ludwig the Pious," and "Louis d'Outremer." We have "Hugo Capet" and "Jeanne d'Arc." St. Bernard is always, or nearly always, "Bernhard," while Bernard, grandson of Charlemagne, is always "Bernard." Malcolm Canmore's wife is strangely styled "Marguerite." Such points suggest carelessness, eccentricity, or want of clearness on the part of the writers. But of more serious moment are the general flatness in the style, the want of anything striking or illuminating about it, the occasional tendency to obscure big issues by some want of emphasis in dealing with the important points.

The general arrangement of the book involves a good deal of repetition. If you reserve your general account of Mohammedanism until you come to the Crusades, you are likely to confuse the reader by telling something about the Mohammedan conquest of Spain when treating of the West Goths, and rather slurring over the conquest of Sicily by the Normans from the Saracens. But as the writers tell us that these points are partly settled by the needs of American colleges, we ought not, perhaps, to press them too hard. More serious still is the tendency towards carelessness in details, the worst examples of which are further complicated by confused methods of expression. It is perplexing, when we find a perfectly good account of the rise of universities in the twelfth century towards the end of the book, to be told quite at the beginning, concerning the schools of the early empire, "The greatest university of the world was at this period at Athens. Its professors were wholly pagan." Again, our authors speak of the Mohammedan "universities of Bagdad, Cairo, and Cordova," and tell us how Gerbert was a student of a Moorish university in Spain. We should like to know what period is referred to as that "when in Europe the practice of medicine was forbidden by the Church" (p. 359). The ecclesiastical history is unsympathetically told, and not without mistakes. The history of the monastic orders is poor and meagre; the account of the Italian Renaissance is a great deal better. Yet Savonarola, the "Dominican monk," has (quite wrongly, we think) "rightly been called a precursor of Protestantism" (p. 482). Lanfranc (p. 205) was hardly founder of the abbey of Bec. We do not understand what is meant when our authors say (p. 240) that Gregory II. exacted from St. Boniface "the same oath of obedience that he required of the titular bishops of Rome (Sabino, Porto, Ostia, &c.)," or when they tell us on p. 538 that Wyclif "attacked the authority of the Pope and the doctrine of transubstantiation; later even the mass." Yet elsewhere they describe correctly the position of the suburban cardinal bishops, though they nowhere explain how Wyclif distinguished his attack on the mass from his attack on the doctrine that underlay the mass. On p. 156 the counts of Poitou and Poitiers are referred to as if they were different people; and it will be news to students of French history that Toulouse embraced among other districts the territories of Poitou, Saintonge, Toulon, and Auvergne (p. 501). The numerous maps are clear and useful up to a certain point. The index is perfunctory, and not always accurate. But though the book's lack of striking power makes more regrettable the carelessness that has not corrected such small matters as we have noticed, we still think that it may make a useful text-book.

The Flourishing of Romance and Rise of Allegory. By Prof. Saintsbury. (Blackwood & Sons.)

Close upon the heels of Prof. Ker's 'Epic and Romance' comes—as Matthew Arnold would have put it—another professor, Prof. Saintsbury's book dealing with almost the same subject; the one a Scot professing in England, the other a Southron professing in Edinburgh. National vanities ought to be safe into whichever hand the palm be given, for the honours of birth are balanced by the glory of selection. But, truth to say, a comparison of the books is hardly necessary, and it would scarcely be fair to the former of the two. There must be shortcomings in every treatise on so wide a subject as the history of European literature during any age, and we were not able to pass Prof. Ker's volume without indicating its chief source of weakness. But it is in every respect an original and striking book. The reader feels all the time not only that the author knows his authorities, as knowledge goes (in examinations and so forth), but that he has lived with them; that the standpoint from which he studies and speaks is one to which he has slowly attained, and by his own exertions. Prof. Saintsbury's book is one of a series—one, shall we say? of the never-ending series of series. A number of writers are to combine and make out of their united selves a new and better Hallam. The intention is commendable. Hallam was a judicious and a learned writer not devoid of many merits of style. But such a subject as Middle Age literature was one of the last he ought to have chosen to deal with, and without doubt he more than any one else is responsible for the sad neglect of this great field—we say not so much of study as of enjoyment — among average educated Englishmen to-day.

Whatever may be the advantages of dividing an important work into fragments and entrusting it to different hands, such a practice does not favour marked originality of treatment. A man with colleagues is hampered by a sense of his obligations to them—more so, perhaps, by that of his obligations to himself. The feeling is sure to show itself in the dread of criticism; and as criticism nowadays fastens almost always upon questions of fact, that amounts to an inordinate desire to be accurate and complete. The effect of this preoccupation is decidedly visible in Prof. Saintsbury's book. We hasten to say that much of his anxiety is unnecessary. So far as knowledge goes, he is eminently fitted to perform the main part of the task he has undertaken; none more so. And through his pages occur excellent fragments of criticism which show that he too has lived with and made his own the literatures with which he is chiefly concerned. His remarks, for instance, about the influence of the Latin hymn in moulding the prosody of Europe, and, again, as a supplement to this, his view of the origin of prosody in middle and modern English verse, are excellent and excellently true. The little fragment of criticism which he devotes to the Chansons de Geste is irreproachable; no reasonable fault can be found with the citations, such as there are, throughout the volume. But, alas! such plums as these are few and far between. Even passages which one might controvert did space admit — passages which are of the nature of criticism—are rare. Prof. Saintsbury's habitual attitude face to face with his public seems rather to be that of an undergraduate face to face with an examiner: his one great preoccupation is to show how much he knows. Pages follow pages, and contain nothing which (though no doubt due to direct study on the author's part) might not as well have been got from prefaces or summaries. Even when that cannot be said, can these synopses serve to implant in the reader a taste for Middle Age literature, and will they not rather repel him therefrom? Granting, for example, that in the case of so important and widely influential a poem as the 'Roman d'Alixandre' it were necessary, instead of trying to impart some conception of it as a thing of literature, to furnish a tedious brief summary of its mere story, what end can be served by discussing seriatim the variants of the English version after this manner?—

"After a geographical prologue, the story of Nectanabus, 'Neptanabus,' is opened, and his determination to revenge himself on Philip of Macedon explained by the fact of that king having headed the combination against Egypt. The design on Olympias and its success are very fully expounded. Nectanabus tells the queen in his first interview with her, 'A high master in Egypt I was,' and almost eight hundred lines carry us to the death of Nectanabus and the breaking of Bursifal (Bucephalus) by the Prince."

And so on. Altogether this second summary covers two pages. It is à propos of the 'Alixandre,' be it said, that we come across the only example of what we should call conspicuously bad criticism in our author: the statement that the fighting in these poems is not quite so good as that in the Chansons de Geste. We should say, on the contrary, that if the best Chansons were picked out there would, in truth, be no comparison.

Not content with an undue preoccupation to display his knowledge, Prof. Saintsbury does what is not permitted to the undergraduate: he frequently speaks of it. It is twenty years since he began to read the Chansons de Geste, and since that time he has been reading masses of other literature from other times, nations, and languages. If he treats the French literature of his period as supreme in importance over the others, this is due to no desire to speak of what he has known "pretty thoroughly, long, and at first hand" in preference to what he knows "less thoroughly, less of old, and in parts at second hand." Surely, allowing for a certain modest and otiose "pretty," this sentence means that there are no parts of the French literature of his period that our author does not know at first hand. Yet let those who know something of the Middle Age French epic and romance literature—the million or half million verses of the Chansons de Geste, the vast romantic poems of the 'Alixandre' and 'Tale of Troy' type, the twenty-four thousand or so of verses of the 'Roman de la Rose,' and so forth—reflect what that means, in addition to the masses of other literature. Prof. Saintsbury admits, indeed, that "so far as MSS. go"—and only so far, we assume—he does not pretend to vie with Paulin Paris or Sir Frederic Madden in knowledge of the romances of the Arthurian cycle. But as he has just before told us that these two specialists excelled all others in their acquaintance with that branch of literature, it will be seen that this note of modesty is not excessive. There was no reason to protest so much. Prof. Saintsbury is, as we said at starting, more than adequately equipped for the task he undertook, and if his object had been to present the reader with a sort of handbook—something which would enable a so-called student to get up seeming knowledge of the subject—it would have been very well accomplished. There is only one part of the book which can be described as bad: that which treats of Icelandic literature, with the groundless comparison which is suggested between that and the Provençal, and reminds us of Macaulay's most rhetorical extravagances. Truth to tell, the Sagas have nothing whatever to do in this galley, and to try to make them march in line with the romances of the Middle Ages inclines one to fancy that, however much he has read, Prof. Saintsbury has never quite entered into the spirit of the latter.

But if the object of the book, as one would have supposed, was to inspire an interest in Middle Age European literature, then one must, alas! confess it to have conspicuously failed; and one more failure of this sort is little short of a tragedy. It would have been possible, throwing aside pedantry, even in the narrow compass of four hundred pages, to have given some impression of the rise of the second order of poetry in Europe, of the lighter, more graceful, more artistic, less serious verse which superseded that more narrow, more serious, and more epic kind which is represented in England by the Anglo-Saxon poetry, in France by the older examples (which were doubtless represented by the original forms) of the Chansons de Geste. The first order was national, the second order was European. But (though this sounds a paradox, it is true) Europe in the real Middle Ages, that is from the beginning of the Crusades to the fourteenth century, was almost one nation. The wars of Europe, when the Crusades were over, were in character baronial, not national wars. And it was out of—not the quiet so much as the monotony of life, which such a state of things engendered, that the graceful, unreal, international romance arose. It is a great subject that might have been treated greatly.

Heroes of the Nations.— Robert the Bruce and the Struggle for Scottish Independence. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P. (Putnam's Sons.)

In this new biography Sir Herbert Maxwell had a great, perhaps his greatest opportunity. The origins of the Brus family have been exhaustively explored; substantial monographs on King Robert have been written by Kerr, Tytler, and Burns; Bannockburn itself has been made the theme of a long essay by White; so that the ground was well prepared for a modern study incorporating the old and new material for a revised appreciation of the man, the soldier, and the king. The present writer in his early chapters shows that a Scotsman, rationally patriotic, can still do justice to Edward I., perhaps overdoing it when he overlooks Hill Burton's acute inference of an objection by the community to the claim of paramountcy, and passes so lightly over the real oppression and probable after-purpose in the treatment which drove Balliol into revolt. He has the courage to make the suggestion—which we prefer to leave severely to himself—that it is highly probable that Wallace in 1296, before he emerged as the leader of Scotland, was a thief by habit and repute. Some views of evidence are strange. Exact parity of reasoning from mere coincidence of name would conduce to the "highly probable" opinion that he was likewise a litigant in Cumberland, worsted in a plea of novel disseisin (Bain, vol. ii. pp. 150, 191). The great cause of national weakness in 1296, in the aloofness of the Bruce interest from that of the reigning house, is clearly brought out. The evasion of homage to Balliol might have been mentioned; as might the substituted homage with which the young Earl of Carrick began his fateful public career.

This new estimate of that career opens with a succinct reference to authorities, and an appraisement of Barbour and the chronicles, English and Scottish. Great care has been taken, we are assured, to avoid the assertion of circumstances which there is no means of verifying. In this sketch of the historical sources one literary verdict we feel bound to traverse. It is (p. 6) that Barbour in his well-known blunder confusing the competitor, his son, and his grandson "deliberately and consciously perpetrated the fabrication." This would be a hard and cruel saying, were it not grotesque to visit thus harshly the intelligible error of rolling into one three contemporary gentlemen of the same name —not thereby, be it noted, tainting the compound person as a common thief. In the Scottish list of authors one misses most the miscellaneous but indispensable Bower, to whom, were there nothing else, are owing many pages of Bruciana, not wholly unprofitable, including Baston the captive Carmelite's rueful but sonorous lines on Bannockburn, as well as the snatches of song by Bernard, Abbot of Arbroath, on the same topic. Bower's mention of the bombards at Bannockburn is one of the tit-bits Sir Herbert has lost. In the English list one misses also the 'Vita Edwardi Secundi' (not the 'Vita et Mors'), containing one of the earliest and best accounts of the battle. Absent, too, is any mention of the collections of charters granted by King Robert—an omission the more singular as the forfeitures so fully represented in them form an invaluable check upon the historians, and bear closely upon the progress of the war of freedom, the punishment of deserters, the reward of the loyal, and the general royal policy. It may be possible to discuss a king's life without looking at his charters, but the experiment is dangerous; charters are often extremely awkward. For instance, when Sir Herbert, vouching Barbour as his author, narrates (p. 196) how the Scots, at the capture of Edinburgh Castle in 1313, slew Sir Peter de Lubaud, it is disconcerting to find charters repeatedly suggesting that Sir Peter came to his end by sentence of treason. And as the 'Scalacronica' says he was taken prisoner at Edinburgh and turned Scot, but being held suspect came to grief as a traitor, it sends one to verify the citation from Barbour, and to discover that Lubaud, so far from being slain, is recorded to have "become the kingis man."

Before taking up seriously Sir Herbert's personal, military, and political characterization of his hero, we note a few points, partly slips, partly of that category which the introduction formally eschews. The pedigree of the Brus family (p. 18) is not in conformity with the latest genealogical research as represented in Mr. William Brown's most able pamphlet 'The Brus Cenotaph.' On p. 21 for the year 1205 read 1295. What authority is there for styling (p. 27) Prince David in 1107 a king? Was Ailred of Rievaulx known as of Durham? How can the words "congrua deliberatione præhabita" bear translation (p. 58) as an affected hesitation? On p. 83 by "thirteenth century" we presume the fifteenth is meant. The alleged extension of Wallace's siege into a blockade of Carlisle (p. 99) far into 1298—"from November, 1297, till September 8th, 1298"—rests upon an indubitable scribal error of "Septembris" for Decembris, 1297, in the Bishop's account (Raine, 155; Stevenson, ii. 424), as is arithmetically proved by computing the days. Fordun, cited as stating (p. 128) that the fugitive Bruce in 1306 had his horse's shoes reversed, says no such thing. Is there any better authority for "I'll mak siccar" than there is for the unfortunate spider which the introduction brings to a discredited end? Matthew of Westminster as a person (p. 140) has, for critical uses, ceased to exist, yielding up his historical place to the 'Flores Historiarum.' King Robert is said to have been born at Turnberry. If this is not one of those things there is no means of verifying, then Lochmaben and other places may go weep. A fourteenth century Englishman asserted he was born in Essex. For "Coudraye" (p. 208) read Courtray. "Tue dez launcez" (p. 208) does not mean "impaled on two pikes." For 1390 (p. 185) read 1309; for 800 marks (p. 227) read 600; for "garth" (p. 230) in the sense of sanctuary read "gyrth." The date "on Jan. 10th" (p. 233) is not the equivalent of "infra octavum Epiphaniæ." The appellation of Archibald the Grim (p. 364) appears and is glossed in Bower. For "Sir Humphrey" (p. 353) read Sir Henry. We are not sure that Kirkcudbright (p. 350) was a royal burgh before 1329, although Sir Herbert now says it was so in 1327. The misfortunes of the small boy Prince David (p. 296) are curiously mentioned by Galfridus le Baker and the chronicler of Lanercost. The oft-quoted description by Froissart of the Scottish manner of war ought no longer to be styled his; it is (with modifications which are not improvements) from the 'Vrayes Chroniques' of Jehan le Bel, a partaker in the campaign of 1327, and therefore a far better witness than Froissart. To him also belongs Bruce's famous deathbed speech committing his heart to Douglas on its crusading mission.

Turning from these trifles to Sir Herbert's account of Bruce as warrior, it goes without saying that Bannockburn was the central fact of his destiny. There were many preludes, and to the pages concerning these we must first have regard for evidence of tactics and for illustrations of historical method. Starting with Bruce in Glentrool, we observe that the map (suggested, we presume, by one of Mr. Joseph Bain's prefaces) is a very free rendering indeed of the localizations in the records. That might pass, however; but in describing Clifford's attempted surprise of the king (p. 160) Sir Herbert's imagination flies so far ahead of all sober authority that the panting critic toils after him in vain. It makes really a fine story—every locality sharply defined; horses left at Borgan on the Cree; the Englishmen, dismounted, marching six miles to the Steps of Trool. They enter "the jaws of the trap," for far up Craigmin there sounds the royal bugle, the hillmen spring forth, stones and arrows fly and boulders crash, and the English host is shattered. Now for almost all these details Barbour's word is invoked unwarrantably. He neither names nor in any specific manner indicates Borgan, Craigmin, or the Steps of Trool; the bugle is mute, the stones and boulders are still. The one dramatic incident really given is of Bruce himself shooting the foremost Englishman in the thropple, and that Sir Herbert has evidently considered too barbarous to insert.

Another battle is that of Loudon Hill in 1307, important towards an understanding of Bannockburn, for its trenches at the wings to prevent flanking and secure successive lines of defence are of high significance. Sir Herbert describes the fight as begun by the English archers, whose attack was frustrated by the Scots lying down in the first ditch; the cavalry then advanced, but the Scots speared the horses in the bowels and were victorious. To all which the objection is that the authority for the encounter tells of no archers, of no lying down in the trench, and of no special spearing of horse.

When we reach Bannockburn our complaint is not so much that the authentic texts are amplified with the same exuberance as at Glentrool and Loudon Hill, as that eclectic personal inferences are on system affirmed as facts, and that the chronicles have not been mastered, some, perhaps, not read. The 'Vita Edwardi,' for example, has not been used, although it is in several senses a primary authority, and incidentally has the oldest and by far the most reasonable version of Bruce's tilt with Sir Henry de Bohun. The day before the battle, says this chronicle — written, Bishop Stubbs thinks, about 1325—Sir Henry was with some Welsh foot pursuing some Scottish stragglers into the Park, when suddenly Bruce dashed out upon him, and before he could turn his horse to flee from the multitude of Scots, Bruce had broken his head with his axe. Sir Herbert rehearses Barbour's classic version, written in 1375; but when the choice lies between him and the historian of 1325, and the earlier narrative is the more probable, who can hesitate to prefer it?

The great problems of the plan of the battle would demand more space than we can spare. Sir Herbert's categorical affirmations make him far from helpful as a guide through the conflict of chronicle; his version fails to reconcile itself even with the authorities on which he lays most stress. The 'Scalacronica'—which, being from a soldier's standpoint, he rightly emphasizes—is quite distinct in its assertions: (1) that the body of the English army left the road through the wood or Park altogether, and lay encamped in the carse "across the Bannock" (outre Bannokburn)—a feature of vital influence not to be lightly set aside; (2) that Bruce's battle was not defensive, as Sir Herbert decides to make it, but offensive; and (3) that the suddenness of the Scottish charge counted for much in the victory. These things may or may not be true, but they are of prime rank as military evidence alongside of the 'Vita Edwardi,' which tells that the Scots attacked. As in the general plan, so in other circumstances of description, the cardinal defect is the failure to fuse the whole available information, to test and weigh it, and to present it so as to distinguish betwixt eclectic inferences and matters of fact. Galfridus le Baker, an author with pronounced military instincts, has not been consulted at all; yet he has a most important passage on the position of the English archers. Sir Herbert sagely says that King Robert perhaps would have served out liquor to his men "if he had possessed the means"! Perhaps? Well, there is positive chronicle that he did cheer his men with bread and wine. The use of calthrops, we are told (p. 203), is not mentioned by earlier writers than Buchanan. But is Sir Herbert aware that the trustees of the Smith Institute at Stirling possess at least one calthrop, "found while draining the field of Bannockburn"? The employment of something of the sort, whether of iron or of wood, is to be inferred from Baston:—

Machina plena malis pedibus formatur equinis.

Brucian warfare, if carefully examined, must be of great use towards conclusions on the co-ordination of archery, horse, and mounted infantry, in search of which Mr. Oman's studies have been so suggestively directed. 'Gud King Robert's Testament,' or code of general tactics, might well have been registered by any biographer approaching him on his warlike side. We are sorry that the consideration of the king behind the general—the internal and constitutional aspect of the war—has been so neglected. The very Parliament of 1314 which consolidated the national victory by sweeping forfeitures of those who stood against the king's peace and faith passes unnoticed. The political machinery by which the ascendency, once gained, was maintained and the dynasty secured, could only have been traced through the charters, which have been left unstudied. The numerous photographic pictures of landscapes, castles, and abbeys are veritable blinks of old Scotland. The book is dedicated to the Prince of Wales, Bruce's successor in the earldom of Carrick.

NEW NOVELS.

The Pilgrimage of the Ben Beriah. By Charlotte M. Yonge. (Macmillan & Co.)

"I once did hitch the syntax into verse," says Browning, or rather Calverley for him. Miss Yonge has accomplished the almost equivalent feat of "hitching" the Pentateuch into a story. This is a kind of exercise which easily may lead, and in some hands has led, to results offensive enough to the reader of any taste, to say nothing of reverence. ("Your conduct," said a late head of a college to an undergraduate who had misbehaved in chapel, "is what a Christian would call profane, and a gentleman vulgar.") But, on the other hand, if well managed, it may serve to put readers, young readers especially, in a better position for appreciating a narrative of which the marvellous dramatic qualities have been somewhat obscured by its sacred character, and kept in the background, from motives of which we would speak with all respect, by those who would most have enjoined its study on spiritual grounds. Miss Yonge, as it appears to us, has been remarkably successful. Of course, to the attentive and cultivated reader the story can never appeal so forcibly in any other as it does in its familiar form. "There was a great cry in Egypt; for there was not a house where there was not one dead"; there is a knell in the very rhythm of the words, and it is no improvement to say: "From beyond, lower down the river, there was an ineffably awful sound swelling the air, one universal voice of horror and lamentation from thousands, absolutely thousands of voices, came rolling along the stream." But the average reader of Exodus, it may be feared, is not always attentive or cultivated, and a little extra emphasis will, perhaps, help him to see more in the simpler words than he did at first. Similarly, it is no bad thing to have little indications of character developed. Korah, Joshua, Caleb, are, after all, not only "people in the Bible," but human beings who must have made such and such an impression upon those with whom they were in daily intercourse. In some cases we get hints of what their contemporaries thought of them and other personages; and a little expansion of such hints can hardly give offence to any one if judiciously done, and may help some of slower wits to see further into the story than they had done before. The "Ben Beriah" (should it not be "Beni"?) are, we may mention, a section of the tribe of Ephraim, descended from the patriarch's youngest son Beriah, whose name will be found duly recorded in Chronicles, whence, indeed, several of the persons who occur in the story have been disinterred. Miss Yonge has used her documents very skilfully.

Elementary Jane. By Richard Pryce. (Hutchinson & Co.)

'Elementary Jane' is a curious, rather touching, and, we should imagine, faithful study of a society with which the average novel-reader has little direct acquaintance, familiar though he, like every one else, is with the names, and indeed with the persons, of many of its members. The people who dash of an evening in what they call "bro'hams" from one "Theatre of Varieties" to another, doing "turns" at each, probably give as much entertainment, of a not very highly refined order, to their fellow creatures as any class in the community. They form, however, very much of a separate caste, having, it would seem, its own code of morals and etiquette, somewhat laxer, perhaps, than that recognized by the more rangés classes, but far more strictly adhered to. In this odd society Mr. Pryce places his heroine, the orphan daughter of a stage carpenter, who, on her mother's death, seeks a living in the walk of life suggested to her by early reminiscence. She is a simple, naïve girl, extremely matter of fact; perfectly aware of the conditions under which most of her colleagues live, and neither shocked nor allured by them. Two men come into her life: one of a high type, the other somewhat lower than commonplace. Of course, she chooses the wrong one, and suffers for it; though the reader is left with a hope that better things may be in store for her. The merit of the book is not, however, in the story, but, as we have said, in the picture of life. Mr. Pryce is "objective" to the backbone. He is of the school of Dickens, and we do not know that there is a better. And he renders the conversation of the class from which music-hall "artistes" are mainly drawn, and in which they find their most permanent patrons, with a perfectly horrible fidelity.

Essentially Human. By Annie Thomas (Mrs. Pender Cudlip). (White & Co.)

Which of Mrs. Cudlip's characters is "essentially human" the reader may be puzzled to say; but he will have no difficulty in deciding that all are essentially vulgar. The book has no points to recommend it. The story—of a clever young man who loves and is loved by a girl somewhat above himself in social position, with Philistine relations—is as old as any, and is not made either more original or more agreeable by the addition of an unrequited passion for the hero cherished by an elderly and affected widow. The author is good enough to speak in terms of approval of Miss Austen's novels—"polished social cameos," she calls them. It may be feared that this is only conventional admiration; for no one who intelligently appreciated 'Emma' would ever give to the world such an unreal and ill-bred picture of social life as 'Essentially Human.'

Sweet Irish Eyes. By Edith E. Cuthell. (Skeffington & Son.)

The owner of the Irish eyes, Eila Ravensheuch, is a nice bright, loyal, high-spirited girl of the old simple pattern which knew neither nerves nor introspection. Her breezy youth is the best thing in this light and chatty story, "published by kind permission of the proprietors of the Lady," in which learned periodical Eila and her two lovers—the virtuous cowboy Bob and the wicked barrister Warleigh—were first introduced to the world. Bob and Warleigh are cousins dependent on the will of a gouty uncle, who is also of the good old simple school. Bob offends this ruler of their destinies, goes out West, turns cowboy, and comes back to England with Col. Cody's Wild West show; and he and his love and his uncle all chance to meet in the Earl's Court arena, he as a performer, they as passengers in the Wild West coach. There are, of course, other thrilling incidents no more and no less probable, for the course of true love cannot run smooth in novels. But it all comes right in the end, and if we have not quite believed in all the singular coincidences which constitute the story, we have enjoyed the light-hearted, easy telling of this artless tale of youth and love.

Life Again, Love Again. By V. Munro Ferguson. (Hurst & Blackett.)

The author appears to have written other novels, though the hand of the amateur is conspicuous in the present story. The poet hero, who takes himself and his emotions so solemnly, is, perhaps, not more tedious than are many of his compeers in real life; but there is too much of him. Nevertheless, Mark Kendal inspires great devotion in two feminine hearts, and is the cause of much discomfort to both until the elder nobly "stood up and prepared to face the future without him"! After which the enthusiastic Zoe has the field to herself. The smart, worldly woman who ought to afford a welcome relief to all the Herz und Schmerz elements of the tale is too often simply vulgar and silly without being amusing. Occasionally, however, Mrs. Ruthven does manage to be cheerful and sprightly without drawbacks, and then she is welcome indeed in a world of bathos.

Cousin Jem. By L. Higgin. (Hurst & Blackett.)

It is difficult to express satisfaction with L. Higgin's story, though it is a painstaking and laborious performance. The dramatis personæ are unduly numerous, and there is a frequent lack of clearness in the narrative. The moral of the story is, however, good, and there is nothing to prevent it from being appreciated in the schoolroom. We must take exception to such a sentence as "James Beaumont had gone down to Buckinghamshire to interview the Chace," and we do not know why the book is described by the writer as "a sepia sketch."

As a Roaring Lion. By Richard Penderel. (Skeffington & Son.)

In this stout, closely printed volume, which deals with the history of a twice-forged will, Mr. Penderel has introduced deeds of infamy sufficient to have provided material for at least two more novels. His extravagance extends also to the dramatis personæ, for, if by the "Roaring Lion" he means the villain, there are quite three or four of these "rampageous" beasts, and heroes and heroines to match. The action is carried on in several places simultaneously, and the reader must have a clear head and a persevering temperament who can thread his way successfully through the complicated meshes of deceit, crime, and disorder until the happy termination is reached, the many pairs of virtuous lovers happily united, and the evildoers put to confusion. There is, moreover, a weary iteration of insignificant detail and commonplace reflection. Mr. Penderel paints the lily and adorns the rose in a manner that interferes seriously with the individuality of the characters and the real ingenuity of the plot.

MILITARY LITERATURE.

Reprints of contributions to various magazines, the papers in Camps, Quarters, and Casual Places, by Mr. Archibald Forbes (Macmillan & Co.), are worth reading. Some of them, indeed, deserve attentive study. Before passing to these more solid papers, we would touch on one contribution, entitled 'My Native Salmon River,' as it incidentally deals with the late Lord Saltoun. Mr. Forbes gives, however, a wrong impression of this gallant Guardsman, as from his article one would imagine that Lord Saltoun fought the whole day at Hougomont, and that to him the successful defence of that important post was mainly due. As a matter of fact he, with the two light companies of the 1st Guards, rejoined the brigade a little before 4 P.M. Bismarck Mr. Forbes admires unfeignedly from a purely mental point of view, but from a moral standpoint he condemns him unsparingly, and furnishes ample reason for his severe remarks. The great Chancellor was, like his master, utterly unscrupulous, without the redeeming virtue of the latter—a certain amount of humanity in the concrete:—

"I do not suppose, if he had had a free hand, that Bismarck would have exhibited the courage of his opinions; but if his sentiments as expressed count for anything he would fain have seen the methods of warfare in the Dark Ages reverted to. 'Prisoners! more prisoners!' he once exclaimed at Versailles, after one of Prince Frederick Charles's victories in the Loire country—'What the devil do we want with prisoners? Why don't they make a battue of them?' His motto, especially as regarded Francs-tireurs, was 'No quarter,' forgetful of the swarms of free companions and volunteer bands whose gallant services in Prussia's War of Liberation are commemorated to this day in song and story. It was told him that among the French prisoners taken at Le Bourget were a number of Francs-tireurs—by the way, they were the volunteers de la Presse and wore a uniform. 'That they should ever take Francs-tireurs prisoners!' roared Bismarck in disgust. 'They ought to have shot them down by files!' Again, when it was reported that Garibaldi with his 13,000 'free companions' had been taken prisoners, the Chancellor exclaimed, 'Thirteen thousand Francs-tireurs, who are not even Frenchmen, made prisoners! Why on earth were they not shot?' And when he heard that Voights Rhetz, having experienced some resistance from the inhabitants of the open town of Tours, had shelled it into submission, Bismarck waxed wrath because the General had ceased firing when the white flag went up. 'I would have gone on,' said he, 'throwing shells into the town till they sent me out 400 hostages.' The simple truth is that in spite of his long pedigree and good blood Bismarck was not quite a gentleman in our sense of the word; and as this accounts for his ferocious bluster and truculent bloodthirsty utterances when he was in power in the war time, so it was the key-note to his more recent undignified attitude and howls of querulous impatience of his altered situation."

'A Version of Balaclava' is a valuable contribution to military criticism. It is based on the history of the part taken in the battle by C Battery, A Brigade, R.H.A., as related by the chronicler of its deeds, and shows that in several respects Kinglake was in error. It would, however, take up too much space to do more than mention the article with approval. The most valuable and interesting portion of this collection of fugitive papers is one on 'The Warfare of the Future,' an able contribution to the controversy between the partisans of the defensive and the supporters of the offensive; but its nature prevents us from examining it here. One or two points, however, deserve touching on. Mr. Forbes shows that illusions exist as to the extraordinary rapidity of certain modern campaigns. The Franco-German war lasted six and a half months. Napoleon's campaign against Austria aided by Russia in 1805, counting from the date on which the Rhine was crossed, lasted two and a quarter months. Again, the Russians have a good reputation for marching; yet, notwithstanding modern improvements, which are all in favour of speed, the Russians in 1828 excelled in rapidity their successors in 1877-8. Diebitsch took three and a half months to march from the Danube to a point halfway between Adrianople and Constantinople. The Russians in 1877-8 spent eight months on the march from the Danube to the Sea of Marmora. Similar striking contrasts may be drawn between our own operations in the smooth-bore and breech-loading rifle periods. Mr. Forbes also maintains that "the comparative feebleness of contemporary warfare is perhaps exceptionally manifest in relation to the reduction of fortresses," and criticizes with great acumen the merits of such places of defence versus entrenched camps; but to deal even cursorily with that matter would require considerable space.

Prof. Baden-Powell, of Oxford, seems to have left behind him a horde of sons who all travel and write, while most of them fight, in the army, the marine, or the House of Commons. To distinguish the one from the other is difficult, especially as several of them appear from time to time to direct the affairs of the African continent, from various points of vantage. Messrs. Methuen & Co. publish The Matabele Campaign, 1896, by Col. R. S. S. Baden-Powell, 13th Hussars, which is an admirable book of adventure, suitable for boys, soldiers, and the general reader. Col. Baden-Powell writes in a lively, simple fashion that makes his readers like him, and, incidentally, throws much light on the problems of native wars and on the future of Charterland. It becomes clear, after reading his book, why Col. Baden-Powell should be sent for when there is work to be done of the kind which he seems both to enjoy and understand.

SCOTTISH STORIES.

Spindles and Oars. By Annie E. Holdsworth. (Ward, Lock & Co.)—There appears to be no diminution as yet in the output of "kailyard" literature. Those who can face the dialect and enjoy the abounding sentiment of this style of romance will certainly approve of 'Spindles and Oars.' In a series of anecdotal sketches, all more or less connected with one another, the author relates the simple annals, not of Thrums, but of Skyrle, a village composed of "a handful of fishermen's cottages, and a cluster of mills on the brae above them"—hence the title. To the reader from the cold world outside the kailyard the distinguishing characteristic of Skyrle, and of some kindred places also, appears to be the extraordinary and quite hysterical emotion excited on every conceivable occasion by the sight of an ordinary domestic baby, any one's baby, anywhere and anyhow. In every-day life the sight of a normal infant does not, under ordinary circumstances, prove strongly agitating, more especially when the said apparition is itself calm and self-possessed. However, things are evidently different in Skyrle and elsewhere in the same region. All the episodes are pretty; they are not strong, but they are not often silly.

"There 's cauld kail in Aberdeen," as we know on the highest authority. But we fear that upon the "general reader" Mr. J. Mackinnon's Braefoot Sketches (Alexander Gardner) will have the effect of crambe repetita, or "cauld kail het again." We cannot recommend to any one but an expert a book which contains a large number of such dialogues as this:—

"'Wangie 's richt stocherty.'

"'Ay, he 'll niver gie ye a bit o' naething.'

"'A 'll watch him again. A 'll seen be gettin' a penny fae my father.'

"'A 'm gettin' a penny on Setturday.'

"'Fa fae?'

"'Fae oor Geordie.

"'Ha! Ha!'

"'O, bit a'! a'!'
"'Fat for daein'?'
"'Never ye ound fat for daein'.'
"'O, A kent ye wisna gettin't.'
"'Bit A am sot gettin't. Surely A ken better gin you.'
"'It's a' lees, it's a' lees, it's a' lees. Haud yer tongue.'
"'No, A'll nae haud my tongue. Fat div ye—'
"'Fa's gyan owre tae the smiddy?'
"'Me.' 'An' me.' 'An' me.'"

Ohe, jam satis. Yet the connoisseur in dialect will find notable provender in this book. Among other things that Gaelic element which Aberdonians so despise, though it lingered as the language of corners of the land "where Gaudie rins" at the beginning of last century, is much in evidence in occasional words and phrases.

ANTIQUARIAN LITERATURE.

Acts of the Privy Council.—Vol. XIII. 1581–1582. (Stationery Office.)—This volume, which covers the period from March, 1581, to June, 1582, is primarily of interest for its entries bearing on the religious question. The editor, Mr. Dasent, in his introduction, has well brought out the distinction, so essential to remember, between the treatment of the Jesuits and others engaged in an active campaign against the queen and that of the "recusants," unable, on conscientious grounds, to accept the change of religion. Even in the case of the arch-offender Campion, executed for high treason — not, Elizabeth tried to assert, for his religion—those who had harboured and associated with him were, though diligently hunted out, "released by the Star Chamber without further punishment on confessing their fault and promising conformity for the future." The extensive and authentic information in these pages on the actual treatment of recusants enables the editor to challenge with success the highly coloured statements on the subject in the Spanish ambassador's correspondence. At the same time, the language employed renders it evident that, if those who refused to conform were often lightly treated compared with the Protestants on the Continent, or in England under Queen Mary, it was not from any hesitation on points of doctrine. "Poperie and Massing" are the terms which the Council applies to their offence; and a Jesuit is described as, by God's grace, converted "from that sink of error and false doctrine of the Pope unto the true knowledge of the Gospel of Christ." The aim of the Government, as described by itself, was "the advancement of Christian religion and the suppression of Popery"; to say Mass rendered a priest liable to imprisonment; "Massing stuff," when seized, was ordered to be "defaced," and "Popish trashe" was searched for with the utmost diligence; the Mass had become "the Communion," and Sunday "the Sabboth daye." It is utterly impossible to explain away the denunciation of "vestementes and such lyke tromperie for Massing," the search in Lord Southampton's house for "ornamentes for Massinge," or the furious description, as "odyous and unsufferable slaunders" calling for "sharp and seveare punishment," of the rumours that Mass was said daily in the queen's chapel. But while we welcome this explicit evidence, it is a pity that the editor again speaks of "the Established Church," a loose anachronism. In spite of the space devoted in the preface to France, Ireland, and Scotland, it cannot be said that this volume throws fresh light on their affairs. It is rather on commerce and on the internal condition of England and Wales that its information is of value. In addition to the entries relating to foreign trade, suggestive of the energy with which it was now being developed, there are allusions to the new industries growing up at home in the hands of alien immigrants. Glass works are being set up, and the making of cloth, silk, and velvet is increasing in importance. The jealousy which the foreign refugees excited is well seen in the complaints aroused by their important colony at Sandwich, a lengthy document in which the Council settles the controversy, restricting them to fishing and the manufacture of "bayes, sayes, tapestry, and lace." One of the most interesting records in these pages, as the editor observes, is that of the submission of Arthur Hall, imprisoned in the Tower for contempt of the House of Commons. The Council's activity is so miscellaneous that only the actual perusal of its Acts can give an idea of its wide range. We must again question the editor's inferences from the Councillors' attendances as here recorded. It is certain, for instance, from other sources, that the Lord Chancellor attended the Council, January 31st, 1582, although his name is here omitted.

Acts of the Privy Council.—Vol. XIV. 1586–1587. (Stationery Office.)—A gap of nearly four years severs the Acts in this volume from those contained in the last. In February, 1586, the Council Register recommences, and this instalment of Mr. Dasent's work covers fourteen months from that date. For political history these pages contain as little as before of interest or value, but they afford a good deal of curious and miscellaneous information. We have glimpses in them of the eager enterprise in foreign parts that distinguished Englishmen at the time. The merchants trading to "Barbary" and to Russia are mentioned, while the Turkey Company is requested to dispatch a hundred Turkish galley slaves, captured from the Spaniards in the West Indies by Drake, to the "Grand Seignour" as a means of securing his favour and possibly the liberation of Christian captives. The active intervention of the Council in home trade and manufacture is seen in its efforts to encourage employment for the working classes in the clothing industry, to favour the extension of arable land, and, while forbidding the growth of wool, to promote that of flax and hemp with a view to shipping. There seems some reason to suspect that both from Holland and from England cordage and other materials for the fleet that Philip was forming found their way to Spain. Among the now obsolete industries one recognizes the Sussex ironworks with their ordnance cast for the queen and conveyed with difficulty to the coast for transport to London; also the "making of carsey." Both "carsey" and "wool" ought to have been indexed, and so should the "refugees," "Flemings," or "strangers," whom the Council, in accordance with its settled policy, had to protect in their industry at Canterbury, though in London and at Sandwich and Maidstone those who were not attached to any church or congregation were warned to leave the realm. Among the most curious entries are those relating to the enlistment of "scatchmen or stiltmen" in Lincolnshire for service in the Low Countries, to Lord Stafford's extraordinary claim to arrest the Mayor of Bristol and his brother as his bondmen or "villeins regardant," and the Council's instructions to the Archbishop of Canterbury to stop the sale of the supplement to Holinshed's 'Chronicles,' which contained matter distasteful to "the King of Scottes" and other dangerously recent history. The increase of building round London which marked the time is complained of as trespassing on the shooting-grounds, and some painful entries remind us that the Tower rack was frequently in use for inquiry by torture. As we have had to criticize rather severely some previous volumes of this series, it is a pleasure to be able to say that the present one shows marked improvement. The place-names are identified in most cases, though Rivenhall, Essex, lurks undetected in "Ravenhawe," and Norbury, the ancient seat of the Fitzherberts, is not in Derbyshire, but in Staffordshire, whatever the 'Register' may say. Lord Shrewsbury is stated by the editor to have "become Earl Marshal" since 1582, though he obtained that office, we believe, in 1572.

Pleadings and Depositions in the Duchy Court of Lancaster. By Henry Fishwick. Vol. I. (Lancashire and Cheshire Record Society.)—The selections which Col. Fishwick has here made from pleadings in the Duchy Court between 1 Henry VII. and 23 Henry VIII. possess considerable interest. In addition to the information they afford on local topography and genealogy, the fact that English replaced Latin in the proceedings of the Court has preserved for us several curious words and phrases, while we catch some vivid glimpses of the life and manners of the people. Rent collectors have "right straitly escaped away to their grete daunger" from Henry Farington, gentleman, and his friends, armed with bows and arrows. The keeper of Lancaster Gaol reports a gathering of three hundred "riotouse personnes," who had assembled to rescue some prisoners, and who "walked in a garrison and a gret Rowte within the towne of Lancaster" for many hours, being only thwarted in their "mischefauys" purpose by the "durres of yrne" at the castle. Riots, violence, and oppression are the salient features in these pages. A customary Saturday cockfight, which the Bishop of Ely (1515) attended with other Lancashire gentlemen, is represented as the scene of a regular faction battle; while the parson of Bury, having given offence by his appointment of a parish clerk, finds himself, according to his own account, suddenly set upon by some of his parishioners, who were attending divine service, having "swordes, bokelers, schort dagars, and other wepons prevely under there gownes." It was only by retreating to the chancel with a party of supporters that he escaped being "slayne and murderid owt of hand." The whole book may be confidently recommended to students of sixteenth century life. Col. Fishwick seems to have done his work excellently, though we do not like the awkward phrase "the charter of Earl Moreton before he became king." The reader might not discover that this noble was John (not, as it might be, Stephen), Count of Mortain. Miss Fishwick has contributed a copious index.

The Chiltern Hundreds. By A. J. Foster. (Virtue & Co.)—It is with the actual district comprised within these three Buckinghamshire Hundreds that the Vicar of Wootton deals in this modest little volume. He gossips pleasantly of the villages, halls, and churches in this picturesque region, telling his readers just enough of their associations and surroundings to interest them in a country the borders of which are familiar to lovers of "the river." An introduction deals briefly but sufficiently with the Parliamentary device of accepting the stewardship of the Hundreds; but the author might well have alluded to the charter of Henry I. to the citizens of London, securing to them their rights of hunting in "Ciltre." And why can the amateur topographer never resist the fatal temptation to explain local names? In this case we are told that Buckingham is probably derived from "book," and means "the Home in the Book or Charter meadow." The author has added some illustrations by himself, several of which have suffered in the process of reproduction. The frontispiece, representing Eton, is pretty enough.

Select Cases in Chancery, 1364–1471. By W. P. Baildon. (Selden Society.) — Prof. Maitland has in Mr. Baildon a valued lieutenant and coadjutor who is doing excellent work for the Selden Society. But even the pen of its Literary Director could hardly clothe with general interest the subject of this volume. The development, however, of the Chancellor's jurisdiction is a matter that needed to be further dealt with; and Mr. Baildon has addressed himself to the task. The cleavage of the Chancery from the Council, he holds, becomes distinct towards the close of the fourteenth century; the Chancellor is found under Richard II.

sitting apart from the Council. Still, the differentiation of the courts was not complete till a century later. The cases chiefly dealt with by the Council, from which the Chancellor derived his jurisdiction, were those which could be dealt with at common law, but in which, from various causes, the parties were unable to obtain justice from the courts. Gradually, as the Chancellor's court established its separate existence, it ceased to take cognizance of these cases, obtaining on the other hand a monopoly of the equitable jurisdiction, dealing with cases for which there was no remedy at common law. It must, we apprehend, have been when this work was passing through the press that the editor discovered the date of the very curious alchemy case (already given in Palgrave's book) to be 1337, and considerably earlier, therefore, than what he had supposed to be his earliest case (1364). A full abstract of it will be found in the Calendar of Patent Rolls. Certainly there is in this volume no more curious case than the petition for justice against a surgeon who had failed—by neglect, it was alleged—to treat a broken leg successfully. The petitioner appealed for the evidence of experts ("sufficiantz surgeans") on the point. As a general impression to be derived from these pages, it is true no doubt, as the editor asserts, that "the extent to which force of arms was carried in private affairs is truly astounding. Every man seems to have appealed to his friends and neighbours to help him vi et armis, and to have set at defiance the laws of the realm, if not with impunity, at any rate regardless of consequences."

But, surely, the allegations of violence by the petitioners need to be somewhat discounted. The Wars of the Roses, however, were doubtless conducive to lawlessness. Among the points we have noted in this volume is the appearance of a "Baro de Carrew" in the West Country, 1412. This is one of the very few styles of the kind, and is little, if at all, known. Mr. Baildon's "apparatus" is as admirable as we expect in the Selden publications. Foot-notes and index alike are a model of scholarly care. In this respect and in that of the "get-up" of their volumes no learned body does better than the Selden Society.

Year-Books 16 Edward III. Part I. (Stationery Office.)—Mr. Pike resumes in this volume, after a considerable interval, the well-known series of year-books, which are now, we learn from these pages, to be supplemented by a calendar bringing to light the principal contents of those "Placita de Banco" to which they relate. A feature of these year-books which is greatly to be commended is the table of contents prefixed to the introduction. For the want of such a table, the valuable introductions to the volumes, for instance, edited by Dr. Stubbs are virtually a sealed book. Mr. Pike's favourite method is to select some case in his text and devote the bulk of his introduction to a treatise upon it. However valuable that treatise may be, the result is scarcely favourable to a rapid publication of the text. In this volume of nearly 440 pages, we have about 140 of text, the same amount of translation, and 78 of introduction. In this case no fewer than 70 pages are devoted to a study on the origin and development of the municipal liberties of Wells, on the ground that a case here recorded elaborates in greater detail than has yet been done elsewhere the story of the revocation of Edward III.'s charter to the burgesses. If this idea really justifies a dissertation on their struggles for liberty during four hundred years, Mr. Pike has doubtless added a valuable chapter to the history of boroughs under mesne lords. He is, we think, right in holding that until existing error has been frankly exposed, it is useless to advance correct views. On this principle he quotes—only to dismiss emphatically—Mr. Freeman's observations on the "incorporation" of Wells and the position of its burgesses. It is curiously significant that the very ground where the Professor was at his strongest—of which, indeed, he had a kind of monopoly—should have been selected for criticism, first in his lifetime by Mr. Vincent, whose remarkable article on the see of Bath and Wells is now admitted to have proved his case, and here by Mr. Pike in his remarks on the borough. It seems to be established in these pages that the bishop's villeins on his manor of Wells received personally certain liberties in the twelfth century, their advance being crowned by a charter from King John himself, in which these liberties were secured to their "heirs." Under Edward III., a period of agitation against ecclesiastical lords, they succeeded in obtaining from the Crown a charter which recognized their corporate succession, of which, however, they were soon deprived. Under Henry IV. and his grandson their efforts to regain it met with success, but it was not till Queen Elizabeth had been thirty years on the throne that they triumphed at length over all opposition and obtained a true charter of incorporation. Mr. Pike has edited the text of his cases with scholarly care, as usual, and one feels that the year-books are in good hands; but it needs the brilliant style and lucid exposition of Prof. Maitland to make the ordinary comments of a legal antiquary anything but dreary reading at best. The material, however, in such volumes as these will undoubtedly be worked-up to good purpose hereafter.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. FISHER UNWIN publishes the Life of Sir Henry Parkes, G.C.M.G., by Mr. Charles Lyne. This covers the whole ground, and is from the Australian point of view an important book in history and politics, but, as regards human interest, inferior to the little volume of Parkes's early letters lately reviewed by us. Mr. Lyne has done his work with fairness and with competent skill. His difficulties have been great; Parkes's combination of religious feeling with unscrupulous hard hitting is trying to a biographer. Moreover, the biographer needs a leading idea, and Mr. Lyne has to find it in Australian Federation, to which Parkes decided to devote his later years. But Parkes wrecked the Federal Council by refusing to join a body which might, had he supported it, have been utilized for Federation. When dismissed from the lead of the Freetraders, Parkes said of them in the New South Wales Assembly that they had "cashiered the old captain and elected a pirate in his place"; but Parkes was himself a bit of a pirate, though in his rugged strength he had some real greatness. Although characteristically English and Midland-born, Sir Henry Parkes will live in history as the chief of elective rulers in Australasia down to the present time.

WE have received from Messrs. Chapman & Hall the instalment of the "Gadshill" edition of Dickens which contains Nicholas Nickleby. This handsome reissue improves as it goes on. The volumes are kept uniform in size, and promise to make a splendid appearance on the library shelf. Mr. Lang's introduction contains much sensible criticism, but he supplies no notes, although certainly he might, we think, have devoted more attention to the facts on which Dotheboys Hall was founded than a few somewhat perfunctory sentences indicate. In doing this he would have followed Sir Walter's example in the prefaces to the opus magnum. Dotheboys Hall soon passed into a proverb, it may be observed, and found its way into Macaulay's speeches on the Maynooth Gant.—Volumes twenty-one, containing The Little Savage, and twenty-two, containing Valerie, which the author left unfinished, have been added to the tasteful edition of Capt. Marryat's novels which Mr. Brimley Johnson has edited and Messrs. Dent have published. Besides, Messrs. Macmillan have included in their "Illustrated Standard Novels" Poor Jack by Marryat, cleverly illustrated by Mr. Pegram, and prefaced by Mr. Hannay.

MESSRS. DOWNEY & CO.'s reissue of Charles Lever's novels is a worthy rival of the "Gadshill" Dickens. In the handsome clear type provided it is a pleasure to re-read Charles O'Malley, and to see again the old illustrations, from the portrait of the Iron Duke which forms the vignette of the first volume onwards. The preface written by Lever at Trieste shortly before his death is well worth perusal.

A NEW edition of Mr. Kipling's admirable Departmental Ditties, with indifferent illustrations by Mr. Dudley Cleaver, has reached us from Messrs. Thacker & Co.

THAT modest and useful little volume Low's Handbook to the Charities of London has attained its sixtieth year of issue. Mr. Dunville contributes an interesting preface.—Lean's Royal Navy List has been sent to us by Messrs. Witherby.

WE have on our table The Light of Melanesia: a Record of Thirty-five Years' Mission Work in the South Seas, by H. H. Montgomery, D.D. (S.P.C.K.), — Indian Sketches and Rambles, by J. Bowles Daly (Calcutta, Patrick Press),—The Madeira Islands, by A. J. D. Biddle (Philadelphia, Drexel, Biddle & Bradley Publishing Co.),—The Story of the House of Lancaster, by H. Hartwright (Stock),—Eras of the Christian Church, edited by John Fulton: The Age of the Crusades, by J. M. Ludlow (Edinburgh, Clark),—Palgrave's Golden Treasury of Songs and Lyrics, edited with Notes by W. Bell, Book II. (Macmillan), — Greek and Roman Mythology, by K. P. Harrington and H. C. Tolman (New York, Leach & Co.),—Researches upon the Antiquity of Man in the Delaware Valley, by H. C. Mercer (Ginn & Co.),—An Account of the Life and Works of Dr. Robert Watt, by J. Finlayson, M.D. (Smith & Elder), —Selections from Steele's Contributions to 'The Tatler,' with Introduction and Notes by L. E. Steele (Macmillan),—German Social Democracy, Six Lectures, by B. Russell (Longmans),—Warne's Net Profit Tables, by E. Sims (Warne), —The Menopause and its Disorders, by A. D. L. Napier (Scientific Press),—The Jubilee Book of the Philosophical Institution (Edinburgh, Institution Rooms, Queen Street),—The Evolution of the Universe, by W. W. Howard (Nisbet), —Winning Whist, by E. Boardman (Bliss, Sands & Co.), — Namesakes, by M. Haycraft (Hogg), — No. 11, Chesterton Street, by E. Jameson (S.P.C.K.), — Hester Lavenham, by Helen H. Watson (R.T.S.), —My Book of Heroism (Arnold),—The Froggy Fairy Book, by A. J. D. Biddle (Philadelphia, Drexel, Biddle & Bradley Publishing Co.),— A Man with Black Eyelashes, by H. A. Kennedy (Methuen),—The Lighter Life: Dialogues and Sketches, by W. Wallace (Macqueen),— Without Bloodshed, by H. E. Gorst (Roxburghe Press),—Secrets of the Courts of Europe, by Allen Upward (Simpkin),—The Wheel of Life, by C. Scott (Greening),—Two Decades of Song, by A. C. Shaw (Simpkin),—Notes on Christian Doctrine, by Rev. E. Bagshawe, D.D. (Kegan Paul),—Die Syllogistik des Aristoteles, by Dr. H. Maier, Part I. (Tübingen, Laupp),—and Étude Critique du Matérialisme et du Spiritualisme par la Physique Expérimentale, by Raoul Pictet (Geneva, Georg). Among New Editions we have Pheasants, by W. B. Tegetmeier (Cox),— Modern Painting, by G. Moore (Scott),—A Dictionary of the Church of England, by the Rev. E. L. Cutts (S.P.C.K.),—Penelope and the Others, by Amy Walton (Blackie),—From the Earth to the Moon, by Jules Verne (Low), —The Basket of Flowers, illustrated by A. S. Rankin (S.S.U.),—The Lincoln Stamp Album and Catalogue (Lincoln),—The Saucy May, by Henry Frith (Blackie),—The Three Lieutenants, by W. H. G. Kingston (Griffith & Farran),— and A Junior Course of Practical Chemistry, by F. Jones (Macmillan).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Barclay's (Rev. P.) A Survey of Foreign Missions, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Baring-Gould's (S.) A Study of St. Paul, 8vo. 10/6 cl.; Lives of the Saints, New Edition, Vol. 2, illus. 5/ net, cl.
Neilson's (J. R.) Everlasting Punishment, an Enquiry, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net, cl.
Pulpit Commentary: Daniel, by Thomson and Adeney, royal 8vo. 15/ cl.; Reissue: Joshua, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Rendall's (Rev. F.) The Acts of the Apostles in Greek and English, cr. 8vo. 9/ cl.

Fine Art.

Illustrated Catalogue of the Paris Salon, 1897, 8vo. 3/ swd.

Poetry and the Drama.

English Lyric Poetry, 1500–1700, with Introduction by F. I. Carpenter, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Filon's (A.) The English Stage, being an Account of the Victorian Drama, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Horton's (G.) Aphroessa, a Legend of Argolis, and other Poems, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Hugo of Avendon, in Four Acts, by E. L. M., 4to. 6/ cl.
John's (P.) Saul, a Tragedy, and other Poems, Vol. 2, 3/6 cl.
Main's (W.) Bush Solitudes, and other Verses, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Tate's (W. J.) Ruby Blythe, and other Poems, 3/6 net, cl.

Music.

Sayle's (C.) In Praise of Music, an Anthology, 12mo. 6/ cl.

Philosophy.

Consolation of Philosophy of Boethius, translated by H. R. James, 12mo. 4/6 cl.
Morgan's (J. L.) An Outline of the Theory of Solution, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net, cl.
Stock's (St. G.) Lectures in the Lyceum, or Aristotle's Ethics for English Readers, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Wood's (H.) God's Image in Man, some Intuitive Perceptions of Truth, 5/ cl.

History and Biography.

Baden-Powell's (Col. R. S. S.) The Matabele Campaign, 1896, 8vo. 15/ cl.
Bannow's (W.) The Colony of Victoria Socially and Materially, 8vo. 2/6 swd.
Campbell's (C. T.) British South Africa, a History, 7/6 cl.
Holmes's (F. N.) These Sixty Years, 1837–1897, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Lives of Twelve Bad Women, ed. by A. Vincent, illus. 16/ cl.
Macaulay's Life and Letters, by G. O. Trevelyan, Edinburgh Edition, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Mackay's (A. M.) The Brontës, Fact and Fiction, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Newton's (Rev. W.) Twenty Years of Saskatchewan, 5/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

Baxter's (K. S.) In Bamboo Lands, 4to. 10/6 net, cl.
Beautiful Sydney, royal 8vo. 2/6 sewed.
Chapman's (A.) Wild Norway, with Chapters on Spitsbergen, &c., 8vo. 16/ cl.
Crooke's (W.) The North-Western Provinces of India, illustrated, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Loomis's (E. J.) An Eclipse Party in Africa, chasing Summer across the Equator, illustrated, royal 8vo. 15/ cl.
Newton's (M.) Glimpses of Life in Bermuda and the Tropics, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Sportsman in Ireland, by a Cosmopolite, illus. 8vo. 15/

Philology.

Herodotus, Book 3, by Thompson and Hayes, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.

Science.

Aids to the Army and other Examinations, edited by R. C. Welch: Army Mathematical Papers, 5/ net, swd.
Butler's (A. G.) British Birds and their Nests and Eggs, Vol. 2, 4to. 12/ net, cl.
Compton's (A. J.) Malay Game Fowls and Bantams in Australia, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Farini's (G. A.) How to Grow Begonias, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
Gray's (W.) Influenza, 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Herschel's (C.) Experiments on the Carrying Capacity of Large Riveted Metal Conduits, 8vo. 8/6 net, cl.
Johnson's (J. B.) The Materials of Construction, 25/ net, cl.
Lewis's (H. C.) Papers and Notes on the Genesis and Matrix of the Diamond, royal 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Merrill's (G. P.) Stones for Building and Decoration, 3/6 cl.
Stewart's (H. E.) The Birds of our Country, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Tayler's (A. J. W.) Motor Cars, illus. 12mo. 4/6 cl.

General Literature.

Alexander's (R.) Ballyronan, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Buckler's (A.) Word Sketches in Windsor, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Clark's (F. T.) The Mistress of the Ranch, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cresswell's (H.) Without Issue, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Dallinger's (F. W.) Nominations for Elective Office in the United States, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Davey's (R.) Wetherleigh, a Romance of Hampton Court, 3/6
Day's (Mrs. H.) The Dream of Pilate's Wife, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
De Quincey's Works, Standard Edition, Vol. 7, 2/6 cl.
Donovan's (D.) The Chronicles of Michael Danevitch, 3/6 cl.
Dyke's (W.) Craiktrees, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Ferres's (A.) His Cousin the Wallaby, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Giddings's (F. H.) The Theory of Socialization, 2/6 net, swd.
Hall's (W. C.) The Queen's Reign for Children, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Hare's (C.) As We Saw, a West-Country Drama, 3/6 cl.
Hawthorne's (N.) Scarlet Letter, Introduction by M. D. Conway, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Herron's (G. D.) Social Meanings of Religious Experiences, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Hodgetts's (E. A. B.) A Russian Wild Flower, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Jenkins's (E.) Pantalas, and What They did with Him, 3/6
Keith's (G. S.) Facts of an Old Physician, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Kirby's (J.) Old Times in the Bush of Australia, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Langbridge's (F.) The Dreams of Dania, illus. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Le Queux's (W.) The Eye of Istar, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Lee's (V.) Limbo, and other Essays, 12mo. 5/ net, cl.
Mayo's (I. F.) A Daughter of the Klephts, illus. cr. 8vo. 3/6
Mitford's (B.) Fordham's Feud, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Ochiltree's (H.) Out of her Shroud, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Odd, by Author of 'Eric's Good News,' 12mo. 2/ cl.
Osmond's (S.) Snags, a Story of the Shearing Strike, 2/ swd.
Peacock's (F. M.) A Friendship after Plato, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Platitudes of a Pessimist, by Author of 'The Life of a Prig,' cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Political Pamphlets, selected and arranged by A. F. Pollard, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Rowlands's (E. A.) The Fault of One, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Royal Smile, a Child's Story of York in the Seventeenth Century, 16mo. 2/ cl.
Scott's (Sir W.) Waverley Novels: Standard Edition, Vol. 19, The Betrothed, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Sherard's (R. H.) The White Slaves of England, illus. 2/6 cl.
Simplex Farmer's Account Book, folio, 2/6 bds.
Swingle's (J. H.) Circumstantial Evidence, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Tarbet's (W. G.) Ill-Gotten Gold, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Troubridge's (Lady) Paul's Stepmother, and One Other Story, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Wells's (H. G.) The Plattner Story, and Others, cr. 8vo. 6/
Witt's (J. G.) Then and Now, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Wylde's (K.) Our Wills and Fates, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Zola's (E.) His Excellency, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Bonwetsch (G. N.): Studien zu den Kommentaren Hippolyt's zum Buche Daniel u. Hohen Liede, 3m.
Ehrensberger (H.): Libri Liturgici Bibliothecæ Apostolicæ Vaticanæ manu scripti, 25m.
Jalaguier (P. F.): Introduction à la Dogmatique, 10fr.
Roehrich (E.): La Composition des Évangiles, 7fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Guerne (Vicomte A. de): Les Siècles Morts: L'Orient Chrétien, 6fr.
Lichtenberger (A.): Contes Héroïques, 1789-1795, 3fr.
Ségur (P. de): Le Royaume de la Rue Saint-Honoré: Madame Geoffrin et sa Fille, 7fr. 50.
Waliszewski (K.): Pierre le Grand, 8fr.

Geography and Travel.

Marchiennes (O. de C. de): Mes Voyages, 3fr. 50.

Science.

Delage (Y.) et Hérouard (E.): Traité de Zoologie Concrète: Vol. 1, La Cellule et les Protozoaires, 22fr. 50.

General Literature.

Bretonnière (J. de la): Adolescence, 3fr. 50.
Champol: Le Vœu d'André, 3fr.
Chaudordy (Comte de): La France et la Question d'Orient, 1fr.
Destin: Mieux que l'Amour, 3fr. 50.
Druon (H.): La Jeunesse du Doyen, 3fr. 50.
Dujarric (G.): Pages de Contrabande, 3fr. 50.
Jousselin (Madame): Les Planètes Rocheuses: Les Erreurs de la Vie, 3fr. 50.
Maryan (M.): Le Prieuré, 3fr.
Mélandri (A.): Le Roman de Claudine, 3fr. 50.
Mendès (C.): Arc-en-Ciel et Sourcil Rouge, 3fr. 50.
Rodocanachi (E.): Tolla la Courtisane, Esquisse de la Vie privée à Rome en l'An du Jubilé, 1700, 3fr. 50.
Turique (J. B. de): Comme ils sont tous! 3fr. 50.
Valdès (A.): La Fille des Grèves, 2fr. 50.
Vaudère (Jane de la): Les Sataniques, 3fr. 50.

'TRAVEL AND BIG GAME.'

I OBSERVE that Mr. H. A. Bryden, who has long "abused the patience" of readers of the Daily Chronicle, has now found a fresh mouthpiece for his grievances. His letter appearing in your last issue is a copy of one which has apparently been going "the rounds of the press," one which certainly was published earlier in the week by a daily newspaper. What does it all amount to? Firstly, that this gentleman has written two articles for a newspaper syndicate and parted with the copyright—let us hope, for good consideration. Secondly, that he has no legal right to prevent that syndicate reprinting those articles or selling their rights to another. Thirdly, that the syndicate, not finding two articles by Mr. Bryden a very marketable commodity, very judiciously put them in a bundle with others upon 'Travel and Big Game.' Fourthly, that I was the unhappy person to whom this bundle of articles was consigned at so much per thousand words, mine the privilege of commissioning an artist to make the "stuff" saleable.

The candid reader will perceive that Mr. Bryden passes over his customer the Northern Newspaper Syndicate and endeavours to fasten a quarrel upon me; and if I add, what Mr. Bryden omits to mention, that he has corresponded with me both before and since he began his attack in the press, the candid reader will, no doubt, draw his own conclusions.

I may, perhaps, venture upon one observation of a general character before I close this letter. It is this: When a man writes articles for a living he should learn the conditions that govern those of his class (I have just published two volumes in which thirty-seven authors are thrown together, possibly against their own will—I do not know—but certainly not against the will of the person to whom they sold their work), and the way not to obtain any little concession that a publisher may have it in his power to grant is to drag his name through every paper that will make its columns an arena for this sort of combat.

GEORGE REDWAY.

TWO PROTHALAMIA.

Tangley Manor, Guildford, April 26, 1897.

ABSENCE from London and the Easter holiday arrangements have prevented my sooner replying to the letters in the Athenæum of April 10th, 17th, and 24th. I read with much interest the letters of the Master of the Temple and Prof. Case on April 10th, with some surprise Prof. Rowley's letter of April 13th, and with a mixture of the two sensations Prof. Hales's letters of April 3rd and 12th, and these appear to materially strengthen the case sought to be put forward by the original article: (1) By showing that, even to so distinguished a scholar as Prof. Rowley, Vallans's beautiful poem was at the date of his first letter entirely unknown, otherwise he never could have been led astray by my unfortunate (but purely accidental) reference to Hatfield instead of Theobalds. (2) Canon Ainger's letter shows that the poem suggested beautiful thoughts and even lines of verse and prose to as great a favourite of English readers as Charles Lamb. Prof. Rowley now tells us that he was misled by the statement that the swans were passing Hatfield when they saw the seat of Cicill. It was a purely accidental misleading. I regret the mistake, which I did not notice till Canon Ainger's letter of the 17th called attention to it. It was a totally unimportant point for any purpose of the subject under discussion. And it will occur to most people as strange that the Professor should have entered into the discussion as seriously as he did without having first read Vallans's poem. It now appears to be conceded both by Prof. Rowley and Prof. Hales that the date of publication of the poem was in fact 1590, and that accordingly it took precedence of Spenser's 'Prothalamion' by six years.

But if Prof. Rowley was careless in writing as he did without having taken the trouble to look at the poem, or even to examine with any care the article itself, which contained indication that the poem was written in the time of Queen Elizabeth, what are we to think of Prof. Hales, who had read the poem, and knew it well? How can one possibly account for his having endorsed Prof. Rowley's point as strongly as he did (in the Athenæum of April 10th), and suggested, with a great appearance of confidence, that the whole structure of the article was "blown to atoms" by it? To most people it will be plain enough that all through the Professor has acted with exceeding haste—"undue haste" I called it in my reply to his first criticisms.

And this leads me to hope that on a more patient consideration of the whole matter he may be induced to alter, or at any rate modify, his very strongly expressed opinions. Meanwhile, as by his letter of the 17th the Professor puts his final observations on the subject in the form of mere assertion (and that of the "stet pro ratione voluntas" character, rather than argument), and then quietly dismisses me to the Easter holidays with the line,

"Per me licet esse" beato,

I will return this compliment, and think of the Professor enjoying these days of rest also as

Beatus ille qui procul negotiis
* * * *
Libet jacere modo sub antiqua ilice,
Modo in tenaci gramine.
Labuntur altis interim ripis aquæ.
Queruntur in aquis cygni,
Fontesque lymphis obstrepunt manantibus
Somnos quod invitet leves;

or, in the good old English words of 'Piers Plowman'—not impossibly "appropriated" from Horace—

I was wery forwandred and went me to reste
Under a brode banke bi a bornes side,
And as I lay and lened and loked in the wateres,
I slombred in a slepyng it sweyed so merye.

Truly the subject of the 'Two Swannes' seems, as the Professor says, to be now well-nigh exhausted, and it will be pleasant to rest a while on the grass, beneath the oak trees, listening to the songs of the birds, by the murmuring brooks and the streams.

Prof. Case's letter is certainly a valuable addition to the subject under discussion, and for my own part I quite believe that, as he suggests, the two poets were connected—probably friends.

It can be seen from Hearne's notes and the documents he has bound up with Vallans's poem that the poem was probably written at least as early as 1575, though, for reasons explained in Vallans's preface, not published in London till 1590, in which year Spenser was in London publishing the first three books of 'The Faerie Queene.' Now the poets of any considerable note who had at that time written English poetry were exceedingly few — not twenty altogether—but the keenest possible interest was just then beginning to be taken in such work. What more probable then than that on the publication of Vallans's poem (or before actual publication) Spenser should at once have seen and read it? From the extracts from Vallans's preface quoted in Prof. Case's letter it seems highly probable that Spenser and Vallans had talked together about the 'Epithalamion Thamesis'—equally probable that the "promise" there referred to was afterwards "perfourmed" by Spenser when, in 1596, he published the fourth book of 'The Faerie Queene,' and described first a long procession, and ultimately a marriage of the rivers, in canto xi., commencing with stanza xx.:—

> And after him the famous rivers came,
> Which do the earth enrich and beautifie,

down to stanza xlviii.:—

> And after them the sea nymphs marched all,
> All goodly damsels deckt with long greene haire.

For here the marriage of the Thames and the Medway is thus referred to:—

> Soon after whom the lovely bridegroome came,
> The noble Thamis,

who, we are told, was attended by the little rivers, "the pretty pages" who waited on the Thames, and among them the river Lea:—

> The wanton Lea, who oft doth lose his way;

and at last appears the bride:—

> Then came the bride, the lovely Medua came.

But it is plain that between the 'Epithalamion Thamesis' of Spenser and his 'Prothalamion' there is no manner or kind of resemblance—they are totally different things.

Prof. Case adds that Vallans wrote to imitate and animate Spenser. Exception must be taken to the word "imitate," for Vallans does not, so far as I remember, use it; nor do I believe there is any authority for it at all. The Professor says that I spoil my case by catching at such straws as the words "nurse" and "merrie," and truly, taken by themselves, they are straws. But it can hardly be necessary to repeat that it is the combination of what are called straws—the extraordinary combination—that is relied on in support of the argument (the soundness of which, there is reason to believe, would be freely admitted by ninety-nine unprejudiced people out of a hundred) that Spenser borrowed or took from Vallans both the idea and plan of the 'Prothalamion,' and in some of its best passages, its words.

It is hardly fair that out of the many instances given in the article, just the weakest of what are called the straws should be selected by the professors for criticism. Let them take some five or six of the strongest of these straws and see how the case stands then.

It would be tedious to refer again to all the points of resemblance between Vallans's poem and that of Spenser that were carefully noted in the original article, or to the fact that a very beautiful, and what there is good reason to believe was an absolutely unique form of allegorical poem was produced by Vallans in 1590, and adopted and used by Spenser in 1596. But as an additional instance of the indebtedness of Spenser to Vallans I should like to refer once more to a single line of Vallans's poem, written, if I am right in the views that have been expressed as to the date of writing, in or before 1575:—

> Tuning her lute unto the waters fall,

and compare this with the following lines of Spenser of 1579 and 1596. From 'The Shepherd's Calendar' (April), published in 1579:—

> And tuned it unto the waters fall.

From 'The Shepherd's Calendar' (June):—

> —— where byrds of every kynde
> To the waters fall their tunes attemper right.

From 'The Faerie Queene,' book vi., published in 1596:—

> Keeping all noysome things away from it
> And to the waters fall tuning their accents fit.

It is the combination of circumstances that is relied on in support of the argument; isolated facts, such as the use of the words "nurse" and "merrie," are but as links in a chain.

One word about the "garland," and this is Prof. Hales's word, not mine, and where he got it from I do not know. There has been, and is, no desire to take from Spenser as much as a garland, nor anything more than a leaf or two, a bay leaf or a palm. And surely he who has been overwhelmed with garlands—and no English poet has ever more deserved them for the exceeding beauty and sweetness, the melody, and the magnificent construction of his poetry—can well spare these to the less-known, but still eminent poet of his time, not improbably his friend, who seems to have suggested to him at least one very beautiful form of poetry, and beautiful thoughts, and beautiful passages of words; and there the matter must now rest as far as I am concerned.

In the words of Prof. Hales, which I make free to borrow for this purpose, I, too, have but done what I wished to do and it seemed right to do, and I regret exceedingly if there should have been any appearance of friction between the learned professors and me.

Wickham Flower.

 This discussion must now close.

THE INTERNATIONAL LITERARY CONGRESS.

The Nineteenth Annual Congress of the International Literary and Artistic Association was held at Monaco from April 17th to 24th. The members present were, as usual, for the most part French, consisting to a great extent of members of the Paris bar, but there were also several German, Italian, Belgian, and Dutch members, and two from this country. The Congress was very numerously attended, but unfortunately the results attained were not proportionate to the attendance.

The first paper read was that by M. Jules Lermina on what are called in France the moral rights of the author, as distinguished from his right (known as the pecuniary right) to receive all possible profits from his work. The moral rights, which seem also to be distinct from what we know in this country by the name of copyright, include the right to prevent the publication of his works with alterations to which he has not consented, or of the works of others under his name. The author of the paper went further, and claimed that neither the person to whom a work has been sold nor the heir of the author to whom it has descended ought to be entitled to make any alterations in it. The paper gave rise to considerable discussion of a very lively character. It was ultimately decided that the subject—the consideration of which had arisen out of a paper dealing with the rights of an author's creditors in relation to his unfinished works, which was read last year at the Congress at Berne—should be referred back for further consideration, especially as regards the rights of the author's descendants. This was followed by a paper by M. Eugène Marbeau, president of the Société des Études Historiques, dealing with the right to historical documents. M. Marbeau distinguished between ancient or unknown documents discovered in State archives or public libraries and private documents. The former, he contended, could not in any way become objects of copyright, while the latter ought not to be published without the consent of the author or (if he be dead) his representatives until after the expiration of fifty years after his death. He was in favour of giving the courts the power of modifying this period in special cases. These proposals also gave rise to considerable discussion. In the end the Congress, while agreeing with the reader of the paper as regards his first class of documents, declined to lay down any principle as to the second, except that they ought not to be published when their publication would entail a violation of confidence.

Another paper of considerable interest was read by M. Victor Souchon, the representative of the French Society of Authors, Composers, and Publishers of Music, and of a newly founded Austro-Hungarian society of a similar kind. This paper dealt mainly with two grievances, the first of which was that of the system of "mention de réserve," by which music can be performed without the author's consent unless he expressly states on every copy of his composition that he reserves the right of public performance. This system, which is that adopted by the Berne Convention, was invented and prevails in England—a fact to which M. Souchon alluded as showing a low state of development as regards musical composition. The results of the system, he said, are that the public prefers not the best music, but that for the use of which it has not to pay, and that composers of music are left at the mercy of their publishers as regards the preservation of their performing rights. His second grievance related to mechanical musical instruments worked by means of a perforated cardboard or sheet of metal, which supplies the place of the score. The final protocol of the Berne Convention expressly declares that the construction of these instruments or of mechanical sheets of music for them is not to be considered as a piracy. The Congress adopted resolutions demanding the suppression of this clause and also of the "mention de réserve." The second part of the paper, which dealt with the attacks directed against the French Society, especially in Switzerland and Belgium, was not received with the same acquiescence, but the Congress ultimately adopted a resolution in favour of the establishment of similar societies. The paper read by M. Taillefer, of the Paris bar, on the position of photographers, who in some countries are not considered to have the same rights as other artists, led to considerable discussion on account of an amendment moved by M. Charles Constant, the representative of a French society of artists, which asserted that photographers ought not to be entitled to refuse to artists the use of photographs made from their pictures for the purpose of reproducing the pictures. The amendment was ultimately lost by a considerable majority, and the Congress voted, as previous congresses have often done before, that the photographer ought to be in the same position as any other artist.

Perhaps the most important votes of the Congress were those relating to journalistic copyright. A joint paper was read by Messrs. Albert Bataille, of the Figaro, and Osterrieth on copyright in political articles (the reproduction of which is freely permitted by the copyright laws of some countries) and in news. The Congress arrived at the same conclusion which is embodied in the English law, that no distinction ought to be made between political and other articles. In respect of news, it accepted the formula propounded by the authors of the paper, that the repetition of news should only be actionable when it takes the shape of "unfair competition"; in other words, when it shows an intention to profit by appropriating the labours of others.

A paper of M. Harmand also contained some points of interest. It dealt with the provision contained in some copyright laws, notably our own and the French, that the sale of an original work of art carries with it the loss of the copyright, unless a special agreement has been arrived at for its reservation to the artist. The author of the paper pointed out that there are many artists—such as sculptors, medal engravers, architects, and photographers—who do not usually part with their original works, and consequently escape from the operation of the law. The Congress voted in favour of the suppression of this provision.

The other papers which were read were of much less general interest. That of M. Pouillet, on the contract of publication, led to a heated discussion. Ultimately the reader of the paper accepted an amendment moved by M. Max Leclert (the publisher) in favour of the reconsideration of the matter, with a view to the formation of a code of usages by a committee of authors, publishers, and members of the Association, and the principles laid down by the author of the paper were not discussed. The draft model copyright law of the Association was also considered and referred for further consideration; and papers were read by M. Darras on the legislative activity of various countries; by M. Layns on the projected creation of legal offices in various countries for the purpose of giving gratuitous legal advice on copyright matters to the members of the Association; and by M. Poinsard on the organization of national committees for the purpose of carrying on a propaganda in favour of the extension and improvement of copyright laws. These papers, and one or two others of less importance, could not be properly discussed on account of the disproportionate amount of time spent on the others. I.

Literary Gossip.

Messrs. Sotheby are going to sell in the coming season the manuscript of the autobiography of Lord Nelson. It was drawn up for John McArthur, and sent from Port Mahon in 1799, accompanied by a letter, the original of which is to be sold with the MS. It was printed in McArthur and Clarke's big quartos in 1809.

Mr. H. J. C. Cust, formerly editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, who has lately returned to England, bringing with him copious notes and material, is busy writing a book on South Africa. Mr. Cust has promised to lecture in Edinburgh and Glasgow for the benefit of the South African Association.

The series of sketches descriptive of the work now done by the Board schools, which have recently been appearing in the columns of the Daily News, will shortly be published in volume form by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. These sketches are the result of many visits which the author, Mr. Charles Morley, paid to a variety of schools in all quarters of the metropolis.

Yet another series! This time to be called "Builders of Greater Britain," to be published by Mr. Unwin, and to be edited by Mr. H. F. Wilson, Mr. Chamberlain's private secretary. Eight volumes have already been arranged for. The first of them, a life of Raleigh by Major Martin S. Hume, is to be ready in June, and will be followed by a memoir of Sir Thomas Maitland by Mr. Frewen Lord, and a monograph on the Cabots by Mr. Raymond Beazley.

Messrs. Dent & Co. will publish almost immediately a little volume entitled 'Grains of Sense,' by Lady Welby, the object of which is to call attention, from a fresh and mainly humorous point of view, to the absurdities and anomalies in the prevalent use of language, and to suggest possible developments of expressive power which might, the author thinks, simplify and economize verbal intercourse. The book is written in short sections, so as to be easily read in spare moments. Lady Welby will be remembered by her thoughtful contributions to Mind and other journals, as well as by a volume published some years ago.

Dr. G. Birkbeck Hill's long-promised 'Johnsonian Miscellanies,' consisting of upwards of one thousand pages, is practically ready for publication. Vol. I. contains Johnson's prayers and meditations, his account of his childhood, Madame Piozzi's anecdotes, and Murphy's essay on the life and genius of Johnson; while Vol. II. is made up of anecdotes drawn from some scores of sources—letters from Johnson to various persons, Tyers's biographical sketch, extracts from Hawkins's life of Johnson, &c.; and it includes also an elaborate index and a concordance of Johnson's sayings. The 'Miscellanies' are to be issued in medium octavo volumes, bound in half-roan, uniform with Dr. Hill's edition of Boswell's 'Life' and Johnson's Letters.

Mr. W. Alison Phillips, who will be remembered as the translator of the poems of Walter von der Vogelweide, is engaged in completing a concise history of the war of Greek Independence, which will be issued shortly by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.

To the work on 'Women Novelists of the Reign of Queen Victoria,' which Messrs. Hurst & Blackett are about to publish, Mrs. Oliphant will contribute the paper on the Brontës, Mrs. Lynn Linton that on George Eliot, and Miss Edna Lyall that on Mrs. Gaskell.

At the Booksellers' Dinner on May 8th Lord Roberts will respond to the toast of literature. The booksellers have certainly more reason to be grateful to him than to any other writer who published last winter. In addition to those already announced, the following guests have promised to be present: Sir John Evans, Mr. Hall Caine, Mr. Fraser Rae, Mr. W. Appleton, Mr. Harold Frederic, Dr. Schulz (the author of 'The New Africa'), Mr. A. Innes Shand, and Dr. Conan Doyle.

At the suggestion of Mr. G. D. Leslie, Messrs. C. Scribner's Sons, of New York, have printed a limited edition of Mr. Eyre Crowe's 'Thackeray's Haunts and Homes,' originally published in Scribner's Magazine. Although less than three hundred copies of this little book are destined for this country, it will be welcome on account of the writer's close association with the novelist, which lasted for many years. The book contains a series of illustrations by Mr. Crowe of all the houses in London with which Thackeray was associated, from Mr. Taprell's chambers in Hare Court, Temple, where he attempted to study law, to the mansion he built for himself at Palace Green, Kensington, where he died.

The discovery is announced to us from Oxford of a collation of the famous lost MS. of Plautus known as the Codex Turnebi. The collation is entered on the margin of a sixteenth century edition in the Bodleian Library. The next number of the Classical Review will contain an account of the new readings.

Mr. Garner, librarian of the Kendal Public Library, was last week appointed to the librarianship of the Gilstrap Free Library, Newark-on-Trent. Mr. Garner has been at Kendal for nearly three years.

This year being the centenary of the death of Edmund Burke, a series of commemorative meetings is to be held in Belfast under the auspices of the Belfast Library and Society for Promoting Knowledge. On Tuesday next, under the presidency of the Marquess of Dufferin, an address will be delivered by the Archbishop of Armagh on 'Burke as Orator and Writer.' On Thursday a lecture, entitled 'Burke as Statesman and Political Thinker,' will be given by his Honour Judge Webb, Q.C. Finally, on the evening of Saturday next the Rev. J. J. Nesbitt will give a series of readings from the writings of Burke, the selections being prefaced by explanatory remarks from Mr. MacKnight, author of 'The History of the Life and Times of Edmund Burke.'

Mr. Redway is printing a volume of essays on mystical subjects by Mr. Clifford Harrison, the well-known reciter.

Mr. Charles Welsh, formerly a member of the firm of Messrs. Griffith, Farran & Co., has established himself as an agent in New York for English publishers who have not a branch house in the United States.

Arrangements have been made to continue the Booksellers' Holiday Home at Eastbourne till September 29th, 1898. Messrs. Chapman & Hall have sent a parcel of books to augment the library started by Messrs. Bentley, Messrs. Sampson Low & Co., and others.

We are glad to see that success is attending the efforts of the Newsvendors to increase the Victoria Pension Fund. The sum of 760*l.* was announced as having been received at the dinner on Wednesday last. This included 25 guineas from the Earl of Crewe, and a like sum from Mr. Awdry; 21 guineas from Lloyd's News, 26*l.* from Mr. H. B. Marshall, and 55*l.* from the Marshall Trustees. Messrs. Rothschilds gave 20 guineas, Messrs. Smith & Son 100 guineas, the Hon. W. F. D. Smith 25*l.*, Sir Edward Lawson 25*l.*, and Mr. Horace Cox 52*l.* 10*s.*

The joint Examining Board of the four Scottish universities have increased the stringency of the test for admission by requiring that the leaving certificates, accepted in lieu of the preliminary examination, four in number, shall be taken in one and the same school year.

Bangor University College has now followed the example of Cardiff in resolving to discontinue its special courses in preparation for the London matriculation. This breaking with old traditions is a natural sequel to the organization of the courses for the Welsh degree.

The Welsh University Court has determined to postpone for five years its decision as to the permanent domicile of the University offices, partly on the ground that the question had been discussed with too much excitement. It may be hoped that the action of the Court will not merely prolong the rivalry until 1902.

A FACSIMILE of the first edition of Keble's 'Christian Year,' published in 1827, is about to be brought out by Mr. Elliot Stock. It will be accompanied by a preface by the Bishop of Rochester.

WE hear that Dr. Buchheim will co-operate in the completion of the German-English part of Muret's 'Encyclopædic English-German Dictionary,' which was to have been worked out by the late Dr. Sanders, and which the publisher Langenscheidt has assigned to the well-known philologist Dr. Immanuel Schmidt. Another Neuphilologe residing in this country who has promised his assistance is Mr. H. Baumann, who prepares at the same time a Schulausgabe of the great lexicon.

THE Literary Section of the Welsh Guild of Graduates recommend the production of a "Guild Series of Welsh Classics," and propose to draw up a list of fifteen works for inclusion in the series. They also advise the establishment of a Welsh Text Society, for the production of manuscripts prior to the year 1650. The Dialect Section intend to make a comparative study of the Venedotian, Dimetian, and Gwentian codes of law.

IT is in contemplation to establish an Oriental Faculty in the University of Madras. It is perhaps a little surprising to find that such a faculty has not long since been created in every Indian university.

THE week's obituary includes the name of Mr. W. Storr, long a member of the Parliamentary staff of the Times. The decease has also to be chronicled of Signor Stefani, editor of the Nuovo Archivio Veneto, and one of the editors of the diaries of Sanuto.

THE Parliamentary Papers of the week include a List of School Boards and Estimated Grants under the New Bill (2*d.*); a List of Schools warned by the Education Department, &c. (1*d.*); Education, Scotland, Northern Division, General Report for 1896 (3*d.*); List of School Boards and School Attendance Committees in England and Wales (10*d.*); National Education, Ireland, Appendix to the Sixty-second Report (3*s.* 10*d.*); the Forty-fourth Report of the Charity Commissioners (4*d.*); a Report of the Historical Manuscripts Commission on the Manuscripts of Charles Halliday, Esq. (1*s.* 4*d.*); Reports on the Endowed Charities of Three Anglesey Parishes (1*d.* each); a Return of the Endowed Charities of Stoke Newington (3*d.*); and the Report of Wellington College for 1896 (1*d.*).

SCIENCE

BYCYCLES.

Bicycles and Tricycles: an Elementary Treatise on their Design and Construction. By Archibald Sharp, B.Sc. (Longmans & Co.)—Modern Cycles: a Practical Handbook on their Construction and Repair. By A. J. Wallis-Tayler, C.E. (Crosby Lockwood & Son.)—The history of the bicycle furnishes an admirable example of evolution through competitive variation and the survival of the fittest. It exhibits instances of sudden and revolutionary changes comparable to the origination of new species, and also of modifications effected so gradually as to be almost imperceptible. Of the radical changes, the first was from two nearly equal wooden wheels, with iron tyres, to a large front and small rear wheel, with wire spokes and rubber tyres, the driving being still effected by pedals attached to the front wheel. The second was the introduction of a chain-driven rear wheel, geared up so that the wheel makes more revolutions than the pedals. The third was the adoption of the pneumatic tyre. In connexion with both the first and the second of these changes the most prominent name is that of the late James Starley, whose statue occupies a conspicuous site at Coventry. The third was brought in by Dunlop. There is no lack of historical literature on these subjects, and ample materials are available for an exhaustive study of the failures and successes through which progress has been attained; but Mr. Sharp is the first writer who has attempted a systematic application of the principles of theoretical mechanics to the various problems presented by the bicycle. These questions are discussed by Mr. Sharp with a scientific thoroughness incomparably beyond anything that we have met with in previous publications. A few chapters on general mechanics, including stresses and strength of materials, constitute Part I. Part II. is devoted to "Cycles in General," including an historical sketch of their various forms, and a discussion of the principles which apply to steering and balancing, to the resistances which hinder propulsion, and to the mechanism of transmission of power. Part III. contains separate chapters on each of the principal members of a modern bicycle. Competent knowledge of the most modern developments is shown, and the criticisms passed upon them exhibit fairness of mind. The book is pitched at too high a level for the general public; but to the intelligent mechanic (practical or theoretical) it will be eminently instructive and suggestive.—Mr. Wallis-Tayler's book contains a matter-of-fact account of the subjects specified in its title, with ample pictorial illustration, a fair amount of explanation, and a few rather clumsy attempts at scientific calculation. There is a lack of judicious discrimination in the selection of inventions to be described. Out of the many thousands that have been patented, a popular handbook ought to deal only with those which have obtained a substantial footing. But this rule has not been followed. We find, for example, about ten pages devoted to attempts to use balls, instead of teeth, for chain-wheels. A special feature which will be of interest to many readers is a full reproduction of Thomson's patent of 1845, which contains the earliest known description of pneumatic tyres for wheels.

SOCIETIES.

STATISTICAL.—April 27.—Mr. A. E. Bateman, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. H. W. Wolff 'On Savings Banks at Home and Abroad.'

PHILOLOGICAL.—April 23.—Rev. Prof. Skeat, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Dickson-Bryson was elected a Member.—Dr. J. A. H. Murray made his yearly report on the progress of the Society's 'Oxford English Dictionary,' which he and Mr. H. Bradley edit. During the year between 15,000 and 16,000 fresh slips had been sent in by Drs. Mynor and Furnivall, Mr. Beasley, Miss E. Thompson, Mrs. Walkley, Messrs. Gray, Talbot of Ohio, W. P. Garrison of the New York Nation, and Bell, and Dr. Fitzedward Hall. More reading of books like the 'Naval Records' and early treatises on arts and sciences is wanted. In subediting, F to Fiz was done by Mr. Bousfield; Fle to Flo by Mr. Peto; Ga by Mr. Herrtage; Gen to Groundsel by Mr. Bousfield; Group to end of G by Mr. Morris. All G was revised by Mr. Bartlett. H to Harmless was done by Mr. Grumpf; He by Mr. Brandreth; Hi by Dr. Lloyd; Ho by Mr. Peto and Mr. Woods. Mr. Brandreth will revise all H; he gets more fresh quotations than any other subeditor. I was done by Miss Brown and Canon R. Morris; she will revise it all. J was done by the late Mr. Gregor; K by Mr. Brandreth; L by Dr. Hulme and Mr. Warner; M by Messrs. Brown, Lawley, and Smallpiece; N by Messrs. Phayre, Nesbitt, Pope, Brandreth, and Green; O by Mrs. Stewart and Mr. Nesbitt. The other letters not subedited since 1879 are all now in fresh workers' hands. The material from Hydrozoa to Hymen (exclusive), like that for Pa, has been lost and slips to re-supply it are much needed. D was finished on December 31st, 1896, though twenty-four columns a week had to be produced to accomplish this, and nearly a month was lost by the ruinous proposal—since happily given up—to cut down the extent of the 'Dictionary.' The new words like "dynamo" (1867) and its compounds and the medical words in "dys-" took much time. All these technical articles ought to be prepared by an extra staff of experts. H was started in the beginning of January, and it would be a difficult letter. Dr. Murray read his article on it, as well as that on "dynamo." He also dealt with "hab-nab," "haberdash, -er," "habit," "hack" (in which nine words were mixed up), "hag" in "moss-hag," and gave the curiously differing forms and changes of meaning in "hang," "hanged," "hing," "hung" in different parts of the kingdom. F, edited by Mr. Bradley, was in pages to "freeze," and would be finished by midsummer. Mr. Bradley would then take up G, and complete it by the end of 1899. He had nearly doubled his rate of production since he had moved to Oxford. It takes five years to get out a volume of the 'Dictionary'; but if the Delegates will afford a couple of extra assistants, the fourth volume can be finished in 1900, and then half the 'Dictionary' will be done. Dr. F. Hall, Lord Aldenham, Miss E. Thompson, and Mr. R. Martineau had given great help in reading proofs.—Prof. Skeat said the 'Dictionary' work had never gone on so well as it is going now.—Dr. Murray was warmly thanked for his services to the 'Dictionary.'—Mr. Bradley will report his progress in November.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—April 27.—Annual General Meeting.—Mr. J. W. Barry, President, in the chair.—The Report of the Council on the proceedings of the Institution during the past year was read by the Secretary.—It was announced that the following gentlemen had been elected to form the Council for 1897-98: President, J. W. Barry; Vice-Presidents, W. H. Preece, Sir D. Fox, J. Mansergh, and Sir W. Anderson; Other Members of Council, A. R. Binnie, H. Deane, W. R. Galbraith, G. Graham, J. C. Hawkshaw, C. Hawksley, J. Hopkinson, jun., A. B. W. Kennedy, J. Kennedy, G. F. Lyster, Sir G. L. Molesworth, Capt. Sir A. Noble, B. B. Stoney, F. W. Webb, Sir W. H. White, Sir E. L. Williams, H. Bell, T. F. Brown, G. H. Hill, J. C. Inglis, and W. Matthews.

HISTORICAL.—April 22.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Messrs. E. J. Dyer, T. Parkin, and T. C. Worsfold.—A paper was read by Mr. W. J. Corbett 'On the Survey of a Norfolk Village in the Reign of Elizabeth,' being an important attempt to reconstruct the agrarian system of a group of Norfolk manors from contemporary surveys preserved at King's College, Cambridge. The paper was illustrated by numerous coloured plans.—Amongst those who took part in the proceedings were Profs. Prothero and Cunningham, the Rev. W. Hunt, and Messrs. F. Harrison, O. Browning, H. E. Malden, and J. Gairdner.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

MON. Victoria Institute, 4½.—'Nippur, its Inscriptions.'
— Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
— Society of Engineers, 7½.—'Automatic Gas Station Governors.' Mr H. O'Connor.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Design in Lettering.' Lecture I., Mr L. F. Day (Cantor Lecture).
— British Architects, 8.—Annual General Meeting.
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'Volcanoes.' Dr T. Anderson.
— Society of Arts, 4½.—'The Arctic and Antarctic.' Mr A. Trevor-Battye.
— Biblical Archæology, 8.—'The Median Calendar.' Hon. Miss Plunket.
— Zoological, 8½.—'General Zoological Results of the Tanganyika Expedition of 1895-6.' Mr J. E. S. Moore. 'European Slugs of the Genus Arion.' Mr W. E. Collinge. 'Field-Notes on the Antelopes of the Mau District, British East Africa.' Mr. F. J. Jackson. Notes by Mr P. L. Sclater.
WED. Archæological Institute, 4.—'Wreaths.' Mr Talfourd. 'Comparison of Flint Implements of Palæolithic and Neolithic Age.' Prof T. McK. Hughes.
Entomological, 8.—'Homœochromatic Groups of Butterflies.' Mr. Handford.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Railway to India.' Mr C. E. D. Black.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Liquid Air as an Agent of Research.' Prof. Dewar.
— Society of Arts, 4½.—'Kafiristan: its Manners and Customs.' Sir G. S. Robertson.
— Linnean, 8.
— Chemical, 8.—'A Bunsen Burner for Acetylene.' Mr A. E. Munby. 'The Reactions between Lead and the Oxides of Sulphur.' Messrs H. C. Jenkins and H. A. Smith. Election of Fellows.
FRI. Geologists' Association, 8.—'Coral Islands.' Mr. W. W. Watts.
— Philological, 8.—Anniversary Meeting. 'On the Lately Recovered MS. of Alfred's Proverbs.' Prof. Skeat.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Romance.' Anthony Hope.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Greek Theatre according to Recent Discoveries.' Rev. J. P. Mahaffy.

Science Gossip.

SIR EDWARD NEWTON, K.C.M.G., died at Lowestoft on the 25th of April in the sixty-fifth year of his age. The youngest son of the late William Newton, of Elveden in Suffolk, he proceeded to Magdalene College, Cambridge, where he took the usual degrees. Appointed in 1859 Assistant Colonial Secretary of Mauritius, he successively became Auditor-General and Colonial Secretary of that island, relinquishing the last post in 1877 on being appointed Colonial Secretary and Lieutenant-Governor of Jamaica, whence he retired in 1883 through ill health. He was a member of the mission sent by the Government of Mauritius to congratulate the late King of Madagascar on his accession to the throne, and being an ardent ornithologist availed himself of the occasion by materially increasing (as he did during a subsequent visit made with that express purpose) the knowledge of the very peculiar fauna of the country, which he was almost the first English naturalist to investigate on the spot. In like manner he largely increased our knowledge of the zoology of the Mascarene Islands generally, and it is mainly due to his exertions that nearly complete skeletons of the marvellous "Solitaire" of Rodriguez were recovered from the caves of that island, as described in the Philosophical Transactions. Sir Edward Newton was one of the founders of the British Ornithologists' Union, a Fellow of the Linnean Society, and a Corresponding Member of the Zoological Society of London.

By the death at Hyères on April 10th of Mr. Hugh Nevill, F.Z.S., of the Ceylon Civil Service, science loses an enthusiastic worker in many fields. During twenty-seven years' service Mr. Nevill had been an indefatigable collector. He had discovered and described many new species in zoology and had contributed many specimens to our museums. His collection of birds passed to the late Marquis of Tweeddale; but a large and very complete collection of certain genera of shells remains. For some years Mr. Nevill edited and published at his own cost an important journal, the Taprobanian, better known on the Continent and in America than in England. Mr. Nevill leaves also what is probably a unique collection of specimens of the ancient school of Kandy silver work, and took an active part in the revival of the art. The most important collection is, however, that of ancient Buddhist and Pâli manuscripts, which, from his intimacy with Buddhist priests and other native scholars, Mr. Nevill had unusual facilities for collecting. A catalogue raisonné of these has been prepared for publication, and the late Dr. Rost, of the India Office, was most anxious that it should be published. The catalogue is fortunately complete, and Mr. Nevill had brought it with him in order to superintend its publication in England, but was unable to rally from the severe illness that had necessitated his leaving Ceylon.

We regret also to notice the deaths of Mr. Louis P. Casella, F.R.A.S., and Mr. A. Hilger, F.R.A.S., both well known as astronomical and optical instrument makers. The latter has been especially noted of late years for the construction of spectroscopes.

The planet Mercury is still visible to the east of the Pleiades for a short time after sunset, but he will soon cease to be so, arriving at inferior conjunction with the sun on the 21st inst. Venus is a morning star, situated in the constellation Aries, and will be near the horned waning moon on the 28th. Mars has become a faint object, but is still visible in the evening in the constellation Cancer; he will be very near the crescent moon on the 7th. Jupiter is in the western part of Leo, and will be visible in the evening throughout the month when the sky is clear until past midnight. Saturn is in Scorpio, and rises soon after sunset; he will be near the full moon on the 16th, and in opposition to the sun on the 18th.

D'Arrest's periodical comet has now, according to M. Leveau's ephemeris, moved into Pisces, its approximate place for Monday next, the 3rd inst., being R.A. 22h 58m, N.P.D. 91° 9'. The present absence of moonlight affords probably the last chance of seeing it at this return, which is not a very hopeful one, on account of the increasing morning twilight.

FINE ARTS

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(First Notice.)

Until this exhibition is thoroughly studied the public will not fully realize how much it has lost by the deaths of Leighton, Millais, Alfred Hunt, and Henry Moore, all of whom were masters in their way, and might be depended upon to produce noble and distinguished works. Never before did the Academy lose so much in one period, nor are we as yet aware of new men likely to fill, or even partly fill, the places left vacant by these deaths; and matters are not improved by the fact that Sir Edward Poynter, Mr. Watts, Mr. Alma Tadema, Mr. G. D. Leslie, and Mr. J. W. Waterhouse are none of them adequately represented. Of the older Academicians, Mr. Hook alone among the painters holds his own; of the group next to these in time Mr. Calderon, Mr. Davis, Mr. MacWhirter, Mr. Orchardson, Mr. D. Murray, Mr. John Brett, and Mr. B. Riviere improve or at least maintain their reputation; while Mr. Fildes appears as a portraitist only. Of the younger painters those who will attract most attention are Mr. Abbey, Mr. Millet, Mr. Stanhope Forbes, Mr. Sargent, Mr. E. A. Waterlow, and Mr. W. L. Wyllie, each of whom has done something to strengthen his hold on the public. Most of the other artists who are known to the general public are much where they were last year.

Before entering upon any detailed notes and criticisms upon the principal pictures, we may make a sort of itinerary of the gallery, mentioning some other attractive paintings. In Room I. the visitor will notice Mr. P. Graham's characteristic and effective 'Crossing the Stream' (No. 24); Mr. J. Finnie's telling 'Tragic Sunset' (28); the poetical and sympathetic 'Golden Shore' (35), with its deep blue sea and flushed cliffs, of Mr. J. Olsson; and 'Calypso's Isle' (39), by Mr. H. Draper; the naked siren, mirror in hand, sitting upon a rocky point, is a spirited piece of romance. Mr. J. Hayllar's pretty child picture, "I'm Mary Tween of Tots" (45), will charm matrons; 'Sweet Mistress Prue,' not 'Prew' (51), of Miss H. Margetson, is not unworthy of its name; while Mr. G. Clausen's soft and broad interior of 'The Old Barn' (52) is the truest study of effect we have seen by him. Sir G. Reid's 'Prof. Mitchell' (61), though a little demonstrative, as a Scotsman's portraits of Scotsmen are apt to be, is masculine and very like. Mr. Orchardson's 'Bishop of St. Asaph' (70) is marked by genial energy, and seems to us his best portrait. Highly serene and beautiful is Mr. E. A. Waterlow's 'Tranquil Stream' (83). The sterling qualities of Mr. Ouless's 'Hon. W. F. D. Smith' (84) are noteworthy.

In Gallery II. the first thing to be noted is Mrs. Alma Tadema's animated and homogeneous group of cavaliers drinking to each other, named 'A Pledge' (108). 'Audrey's Toilette' (115), by Mr. Arthur Hughes, shows with spirit and brightness that rustic damsel dressing her hair at a stream in sunlight; Mr. M. Loudan's 'Butterflies' (117), a low-toned sketch in brown and white of a lady dancing with a baby in her arms, is decidedly effective at a distance; the 'Bacchanti' (133) of Mr. F. A. Bridgman, gambolling in a wood, tells its tale with vivacity and ease; the 'Fantaisie en Folie' (138) of Mr. R. Brough is good, and his best achievement as yet; we can also praise 'When the Tide is Out' (139) of Mr. J. S. Hill. Beautiful and poetical beyond even his wont is Mr. A. Parsons's "The star that bids the shepherd fold" (146), a rugged Welsh valley. The charming child's portrait of 'Alec Forbes' (163), by Mrs. Stanhope Forbes, and 'Love's Baubles' (164), a crowd of amorous maids following an elfish Cupid, by Mr. B. Shaw, fresh, vigorous, and original, are two of the leading pictures of the season. Sir E. J. Poynter's 'Phyllis' (188) looking at herself in a mirror and his other works here, as well as M. Benjamin Constant's 'Earl of Ava' (194), demand more criticism than we can spare space for now.

In Gallery III. hang Mr. F. Goodall's large 'Ploughman and Shepherdess' (209) and Mr. P. Graham's specimen of sea and rock painting, No. 210. As a contrast to the turmoil of the latter, every visitor will enjoy the idyllic grace and Englishness of 'Autumn Floods' (217), by Mr. E. A. Waterlow. 'Rivalry' (227), a complex flirtation under the Directory, is in Mr. Orchardson's best mood; nothing could be better in its strong and solid style than Mr. Logsdail's 'Bronze Horses of St. Mark' (252), seen in brilliant sunlight; 'The End of a Good Day' (258), by Mr. R. Macbeth, is a characteristic piece, but not his best; while Mr. C. Q. Orchardson's 'Twa Corbies,' his first essay, No. 262, may be commended. In 'After Midnight Mass' (278) his admirers will find something new, if not strange, from Mr. G. H. Boughton. A very splendid tour de force is the large portrait of 'Mrs. C. Meyer' (291), by Mr. J. S. Sargent. There is much that is characteristic in Sir J. Gilbert's fine romantic 'Landscape' (292), and we like Mr. R. Jack's 'Idyll' (293). 'The Message' (299), a group, is one of the best of Sir E. J. Poynter's minor pieces, to be accepted in the absence of the large picture we described some time ago. 'Hylas and the Nymphs' (307) will please Mr. J. W. Waterhouse's friends, who feared his illness would prevent his finishing so considerable a work. In Gallery IV. there are fewer noteworthy paintings. They comprise the bright and gay 'Garden by the River' (321) of Mr. Y. King; Mr. Goodwin's Oriental romance 'The King's Garden' (326); a capital boating scene, a crowd in 'Boulter's Lock' (328), by Mr. E. J. Gregory; 'C. S. Read, Esq.' (333), one of Mr. Shannon's best portraits; Mr. H. G. Riviere's 'Master of the Temple' (339), which establishes the artist as a portraitist of promise; the animated 'Colt Hunting in the New Forest' (346), by Miss L. E. Kemp-Welch; Mr. A. P. Burton's scholarly and good life-size flying nudity in 'Night fleeing from Dawn' (352); Mr. E. A. Waterlow's delightful idyl 'Flowery Fields' (369); and Madame Ronner's clever and lively cat-picture 'A Cosy Corner' (377).

In Gallery V. Mr. Bundy's 'Puritans' (391) is much better than his former works; quite worthy of his sympathetic inspiration is Mr. A. East's 'Sleepy River Somme' (418); never before has Mr. La Thangue done anything equal to 'Travelling Harvesters' (439); nor has Mr. J. C. Dollman been so successful as in his 'St. Antony' (445), the scene of the saint's sorest trial. Beautiful and serene is Mr. M. R. Corbet's 'Vespers' (459). In Gallery VI. the 'Alpine Meadows' (483) of Mr. MacWhirter proves his best work of the year. 'A Dance' (497), by Mr. J. H. Lorimer, confirms his claims on public attention. In Gallery VII. Miss L. Power's portrait of 'Henry Power, Esq.' (551), is very like that distinguished surgeon. In the same room the visitor will find good specimens of the abilities of Messrs. H. T. Wells, Y. King, F. Goodall (a large view of Eaton), A. East, J. S. Sargent (a capital portrait of a pretty child), T. Somerscales, 'The Last Fight of the Revenge' (618), and one or two more. Gallery VIII. is remarkable as containing Mr. J. J. Shannon's 'Jill' (639), a portrait, and 'Sir J. T. Hibbert' (646); Lady Butler's more than ordinarily telling, clever, and apt battle piece 'Steady the Drums and Fifes!' (663) Mr. E. A. Waterlow's lovely 'Summer Flowers' (680), an idyl of rural peace; and portraits by Messrs. Ouless and H. T.

Wells. We pass to Gallery IX., and briefly notice the pretty 'Sussex Pond' (710) as fit for Ophelia, by Miss P. Woolner; Mr. A. Waterhouse's grand and broad 'Bamborough Castle' (715); Mr. H. Woods's 'Leisure Moments' (757) and two other instances; Mr. M. R. Corbet's fine 'Carrara Mountains' (771) and his 'Florence' (822); M. G. Costa's 'Bamborough Castle' (805), a dignified and beautiful view to which, as to many other works now in question, we shall return; and M. Fantin-Latour's artistic 'Zimmias' (874). In Gallery X. the most ambitious specimen is Mr. A. Chevallier Tayler's 'Cantus Evangelii' (957), a scene before the altar; near it are Mr. J. Clark's 'Jubilee Rejoicings' (966), Mr. J. Aumonier's capital 'Hayfield' (975), and the Hon. J. Collier's 'Whist Players' (992). The leading pieces in Gallery XI. are Miss M. Earl's Arctic dog piece, 'Farthest North' (1006); Mr. H. C. Whaite's mountain landscape 'The Strength of the Hills' (1017); Mr. E. M. Hale's 'Road to Paradise' (1033); Mr. A. Stokes's 'Mountain Mist' (1053); and especially Mr. E. Parton's 'Houghton Mill' (1073).

The Water-Colour Room contains more than twice as many examples as the Old Society exhibits; among them are more than usual of high merit, such as we cannot now stop to signalize. In the Black and White Room the prints and drawings are nearly up to the average. Of the architectural works we can say nothing better. Among the sculptures most gratifying works testify to the greatness of the revival of the art they represent in this country. We must not forget that the much-abused Royal Academy is literally the only exhibition of sculpture in Great Britain, and that it contains more than two hundred and seventy carvings and casts. In Burlington House there are now, all told, more than two thousand one hundred instances, which is, within a fraction, the highest total yet admitted.

MR. ALMA TADEMA.

Although Mr. Tadema's chief contribution this year is, as we have said above, far from being an adequate representative of his powers, this is due to its small size rather than to any decay in brilliance, purity of colour, or sympathetic expression of the face and attitude in the single figure he has chosen to depict. In these respects "Her eyes are with her thoughts, and they are far away" (769), fully sustains the reputation of the artist, although it is not quite so crisp and solid as usual. The damsel leans her brow upon her hand, and as she looks seaward and shades her face from the intense light, she sees a far-reaching prospect, a wide view of a sunlit sea, a turquoise sky, and a rocky coast with purple shadows, which recedes headland after headland as far as the eye can reach; but it is not with the eyes of the mind. These are, according to the motto, very distinctly "far away." This little picture is, of course, conspicuous for delicacy of touch, finish, and homogeneity. The damsel's ornaments, the modelling and drawing of her dress, the carvings of the seat and columns near her, and especially the flowers of the pink azalea, are marvellously executed. In the azalea, in fact, the painter has matched the one which figured in his famous contribution to the New Gallery in 1895. Noteworthy even among the abundance of details in the present picture are the designing, drawing, and modelling of the receding line of cliffs. Every one will admire the extreme veracity of the road which climbs from the beach towards the little upland town that overlooks the sea.

MR. E. A. ABBEY.

No one among last year's contributors to Burlington House added more to his reputation than the masculine and original painter of 'Gloucester and the Lady Anne,' which was the figure picture of the season. Technically speaking, and as a designer and man of taste, Mr. Abbey is pretty nearly the antithesis to Mr. Tadema, who for many years past has charmed his admirers with delicate colours, consummate handling, and pure harmonies. On the contrary, Mr. Abbey sends Hamlet (477), a dark picture, strongly coloured, like his contribution of last season; its subject also is grim and tragic, and relieved by sardonic humour. He, in fact, has treated in a quite original and highly dramatic manner the same subject as Maclise's masterpiece at South Kensington. The background lies in semi-darkness, the foreground is bright and clear; the general effect is strong in tone and colour, and the combination has produced chiaroscuro of a highly expressive and massive description. The ruling colours are, as last year, black, various reds, and gold; and the lights and shadows contrast strongly with each other. Somewhat removed from the light and the front of the picture are seen the mean form and wizened features of the king, splendidly bedight in red and gold. His look of cowardice and cruelty is admirable; for he seems to shrink from the fierce eyes of Hamlet as he watches the impression made upon his uncle by the performance which goes on in front. Mr. Abbey made a capital point when he placed the royal pair as far apart as the throne will allow them to be. The queen—much the nobler figure—is dressed in deep blood red and sable, watches the performance with set lips and fixed eyes, but takes no heed of Hamlet, who, in his turn, does not look at her. The aged Polonius, clad in grey, stands close behind her, and looks down askant at his daughter. Ophelia is, of course, completely dressed in white, and her loose yellow tresses cover her shoulders and enclose her face which is by no means so beautiful as it should be. Neither her features nor her attitude, however, are characterless. She sits quite in front, and, chromatically speaking, is the most important element of the work. Her look is one of dire apprehension, bewilderment, and pain, which subtly suggests the agony of a mind full of tenderness, but never strong and likely soon to be overthrown. Her concern is not with the players, whom we do not see, but with the wild and demonstrative Hamlet lying at her side, attired in a costume intended to be Celtic, and wearing jewelled bands about his legs. Mr. Abbey thinks that the Prince of Denmark was more mad than melancholy, by no means without method in his madness, but reckless and revengeful. His neglected dress, his roughened hair; a sort of extravagance in his attitude; the regard, full of wrath and hate, which, from under his overhanging brows, he fixes upon the king; and a certain furious joy he exhibits in the success of the stratagem of which the players are the instruments, all combine in supporting the artist's theory. It is needless to add that Mr. Abbey's ideal Hamlet is different from that of John Kemble. Of Hamlets of the statuesque type Lawrence's picture in the National Gallery is the accepted type; but Mr. Abbey has adopted the modern view of his characters. Having Shakspeare's authority for making Ophelia fair as well as young, he will, we hope, when time allows, revise her likeness in this picture and thus remove its sole defect.

MR. F. D. MILLET.

Mr. Millet has chosen this year a scene in the days of ancient Rome. Slightly cold in its colouring, and, though bright and pure, rather hard in its effect and treatment, Youth (994) is exquisitely finished, and reminds us of the late President's 'Wedded,' and in its delicacy, finesse, and research of the best work of Mr. Alma Tadema, who has painted more Greek and Roman lovers than any of his contemporaries. Mr. Millet has depicted a rocky path sloping gently in soft summer evening light to the shore between a steep cliff and the ocean. A graceful and yet stately Roman lady and her taller lover are walking slowly down it. She leans slightly on his shoulder, and clasps with one hand his brawny arm, which is passed about her waist. The attitudes lack neither dignity nor feeling; the tenderness, and even the passion, of the subject is expressed by the simple yet fine and moving design of the group, which is, nevertheless, sculpturesque in its elegance and reserve as well as in the fineness of its style. Various as Mr. Millet's pictures have been, and always remarkable in respect to style, this one is the best of them, and marks a new departure. Were the coloration a little warmer and the tonality somewhat stronger, the critic would have nothing but admiration for it, for it is long since we saw anything truer, more subtle, or more delicately treated than the expression of the lady's face; nor is the loveliness of her features less to be commended. A good deal of praise, too, is due to the Tadema-like veracity and finish of the lovers' draperies, where every fold "accounts for itself," and does not, as is too commonly the case, hang or sway in defiance of gravitation. The coloration of the picture, besides the verdure, the sea's pale blueness, and the bluer sky, includes the drapery's four whites, which are harmonized with great skill.

MR. J. C. HOOK.

In pleasant contrast to these two ambitious figure pictures are the four contributions of the renowned Academician on whom, this year at least, the reputation of the exhibition more than ever depends. As we have already described them, and one more which the artist at the last moment decided not to send, our notes must needs be critical rather than descriptive. It is somewhat embarrassing that, except in the case of the portrait of Allan J. Hook (308), these works no longer bear the names which they originally bore.

The picture of which the artist has deferred the exhibition is the one we most hoped to find at Burlington House this year, and have already described as 'The Boots,' a manifestly uncouth title. That which we mentioned as 'A Dutch Canal' is to be known as A Dutchman's Home (356). 'The Stepping-Stones' is now named Low Water at the Tidal Crossing (340). A splendid, yet softened study of the effect of sunlight just at the decline of summer upon the pale blue sky, marked by exquisitely graded and harmonious hues, it depicts a shining river which reflects it in a thousand varieties of azure, turquoise, and silver, and is intensely brilliant where it is colourless. The painting of the water is really beautiful and delicate. The pools among the stepping-stones of the ford are the brightest elements of the whole scene. There is much fine painting in the foreground of brown earth and stones, and in the modelling of the level stream. The general aspect of this picture is uncommonly delicate and refined, its ruling tints being silvery, though warm, its blues more tender than usual, and its effect being broad, soft, and somewhat subdued.

Quite otherwise is the picture which we have already mentioned as 'The Three Donkeys,' but which is in future to be called From the Shore to the Field (287). Mr. Hook has never painted a better or more powerful study of the Cornish coast and its seas; the more distant water extends in dark tracts of indigo, grey, and purple, subtly graded till they are merged at the horizon (where a white sail faintly gleams) with the wan vapours, which, as the eye ascends, darken into a deep blue firmament. The artist has painted the summer clouds that move slowly across the sky with all that unique skill of which he possesses the secret. We prefer this picture to either of the other landscapes.

Apart from their brightness, not the least charm of Mr. Hook's pictures of the year is the homogeneity, breadth, and simplicity of them all. As a colourist he is quite up to his mark. Of the three pictures above named we like least 'A Dutchman's Home.' His fourth contribution is the life-size, three-quarters-length portrait of his elder son already described. An admirable likeness, full of expression and character, showing a face unusually thoughtful, this is a strong and expressive portrait—so good, indeed, that it might be quoted by those who maintain that painters of pictures proper paint portraits at least as well as those who paint nothing else. It will be distinguished in the Academy by the depth and strength of the sitter's very dark and richly varied blue dress, and the way in which the golden hues of the flesh mask to a certain extent the ruddiness of the face.

MR. BRITON RIVIERE.

Mr. Briton Riviere has, for the nonce, turned from his wonted path and exhibited a fine and powerful nearly life-size portrait at full length of Lady Wantage (77), standing at the side of a favourite park donkey, upon whose saddle she is resting her elbow. Her aristocratic features and air of distinction make her likeness a first-rate artistic exercise. She is dressed in a gown of pale primrose colour with a white sheen, which assorts finely with the ass's light brown hide, upon the well-groomed surface of which falls a silvery light. The colour-scheme, including the foliage behind and the verdure at foot, centres very happily upon the intense blue of a large Egyptian enamel pendant to a carcanet of gold, which is a marked element of the lady's costume. The style of this portrait is large and fine; its execution is solid and facile, but there is not the least chic or pretence of any kind. Another portrait by the same artist is Mrs. F. Methold and her Deerhounds (233), a capital group at life size, introducing the lady dressed in black and a large lace collar. Energetic and bright as the whole picture is, it is not unfair to say that the dogs are the best-painted parts, and excel, too, in variety of attitude and expression. We might say also of the donkey that it is worthy of the artist's high reputation. Another skilful and valuable contribution of Mr. Riviere's is the finely modelled and beautifully finished anatomical figure in bronze of a lion prowling, which as No. 2099 will be found in the Sculpture Gallery.

MR. VAL. C. PRINSEP.

Mr. Prinsep, who last year gave us a scene from Paris of the Revolution, has at present in the same gallery a life-size allegory, if such it may be called, entitled At the First Touch of Winter Summer fades Away (220), comprising two figures emblematic of the seasons. Whatever we may think of Mr. Prinsep as a moralizing artist on a large scale, with a turn for tragedy which is new to us, it is our duty to admire and praise the solidity, care, and learning which are distinct on this large canvas. The sympathetic design of Summer's face does the artist credit, and her attitude, while shrinking from the coldness of the wind which follows the steps of Winter, is justly felt and thoroughly good in its way. It is to be feared that in this country of bad colds of all sorts Mr. Prinsep's accomplished reminder of its drawbacks will not be enjoyed as it deserves, so that his artistic virtues must needs be their own reward.

MR. T. C. GOTCH.

This painter, who began his career with marked success as an illustrator of genre subjects, with groups of gossips and "lookers-on" in streets and elsewhere, has of late taken himself and his art much more seriously, and has, with unusual good fortune, gained the favour of a public which is seldom in a hurry to recognize merits the better parts of which are not exactly on the surface. No purchase made by the Chantrey Fund was more wise than that which added to that very unequal collection the 'Alleluia!' of last year's Academy. That picture won for Mr. Gotch a reputation which will grow when the ardent and elevated spirit of this year's work is understood, and its excellent technique as well as the purity of its style are appreciated as they deserve to be. The young girl before us in the very choice, but unpretending picture (315) is, according to him, The Heir to all the Ages, and as she symbolizes the childhood of the coming years, so she holds in both her hands a golden reliquary, or monstrance, thus signifying that she possesses all the treasures of the past. It is more than possible that the allegory may be a little stiff; but, on the other hand, there is no mistaking or undervaluing the gentle and elevated spirit, the holy looks, and the animated, yet simple air of the child of ten. Mr. Gotch, who is nothing if not logical, and insists, at all costs, on the motives of his pictures as well as the treatment of his ideas being in the strictest harmony, has carried out this new notion of his in a similar spirit to that which inspired his 'Alleluia!' He is as faithful to himself, and in art, at least, as sincerely devout, as Mr. Holman Hunt; but what may be called the archæology of the Christian faith possesses no such attraction for him as it does for Mr. Hunt. Mr. Gotch ought, however, not to have forgotten that his mode of expressing a very noble idea by means of the Gothic monstrance of enamelled gold is most distinctly out of keeping with the girl's rose-coloured satin frock embroidered in silks and gold, her brown silk stockings, and, worst of all, her neatly-made modern shoes of bronzed leather! Where the artist is right is as regards the purity and exalted beauty of the child's face, the exquisite painting and finish of its carnations, to say nothing of the freshness of the work throughout. The glossy perfection of her frock, hose, and shoes attests the care and skill of the painter, who, founding himself upon Van Eyck and Rogier Van der Weyden, forgets that monstrances are out of fashion now. His lofty inspiration and the soft, bright, and harmonious tones of his picture are all we could desire, and the more precious to us because the Royal Academy is by no means overstocked with such pictures.

MR. P. H. CALDERON.

The leading work of the accomplished Keeper of the Royal Academy is a life-size figure of a comely damsel of Sir Joshua's days or a little earlier, which he calls The Answer (264). She is dressed in pure white, like one of Romney's maidens, and like many of them she wears over her auburn hair a white mob-cap, trimmed with turquoise-coloured ribbons. She leans back with really natural grace in a chair placed before a writing-table, and, while one hand holds her pen, she rests an arm over the back of the chair, and it is skilfully suggested that, absorbed in the matter of her letter, she slowly moves one hand upon the chair rail. Her attitude and features leave nothing to be desired; the colouring of the picture is sober and choice, its execution is as sound and solid as a draughtsman could wish, while the soft and brooding smile that spreads slowly over her face not only indicates the nature of the "answer," but takes us pleasantly into her confidence. Another less conspicuous work of the Keeper's shows him as a face-painter of very unusual skill and care, who is free from chic and the insincerities which go so far with untrained observers. Named Ruth (98), it is the life-size bust of a handsome damsel who has drawn a white hood over her dark and grave features. As a piece of flesh and drapery painting this is excellent, and as a specimen of style and frank and firm handling it shows what good painting ought to be—solid, massive, and, like a fresco, luminous in its lighter tones, dark and clear in other parts.

MR. STANHOPE FORBES.

Mr. Forbes, whose chief work of last year greatly added to his reputation in Paris and in London, sends to the present show three less ambitious examples, the best of which, Christmas Eve (405), is a view of streets in Penzance, crowned in the distance with that by no means beautiful church which the churchwardens of other days than ours supposed to be a specimen of Gothic architecture. Standing on high here, however, and in the misty light of a cold and rainy moon, the poor and commonplace tower is not without a sort of dignity and pathos which are in keeping with the sentiment of the picture. Christmas worship is going on within the church, and the light from its windows struggles with the dim pallors of the moon and mist. In the foreground we have a street band performing as waits before the Dock Inn. The scanty audience and four horses complete a picture in which there must be something we have not detected, although, of course, it is important enough to reward the time, skill, and care Mr. Forbes has expended upon it. The fault is ours, no doubt, but to this larger work we much prefer the so-called Red Room in Holland (768), a capital study of colour and effect, but nothing more. Across the Stream (378), Mr. Forbes's third example of the year, is simply a landscape painted near a stream which is well known in Penwith, and is here depicted as swollen with heavy rains, so that the torrent runs furiously in a little cascade between the rocky banks, crowned with sparse lines of trees still straining in the wind that followed the rain and hastened its downfall. Bright, good in keeping, naturalness, and colour, we have nothing but praise for 'Across the Stream.'

MR. GOW.

Mr. Gow continues to show his sympathy with the sorrows of royal exiles by illustrating the ill-starred ventures of Prince Charles Edward in No. 97, the title of which is Waiting for Prince Charlie. The scene is laid on the sands of the seashore in very calm grey weather, a sort of white calm pervading the atmosphere and covering the horizon. In the near mid-distance a row-boat with passengers comes fast towards us from a brigantine loitering in the offing and but faintly seen from the land. In front, at the edge of the sea, is a group of horsemen, one of whom leads a horse ready saddled, and hails the boat. It is a spirited and expressive design, which cleverly tells its story; the sea and land are ably painted; and it has a good share of the best French taste of Meissonier's school, extreme deftness and precision of touch, and draughtsmanship which is irreproachable in the horses and men. The tragedy of Napoleon I. is illustrated in the same artist's still more elaborate and much more complex work On the Way to Exile (221). It is rather a larger picture than No. 97, but not so distinct and simple, nor quite so compact and homogeneous, for from the nature of the subject its composition is unavoidably somewhat complicated, though not confused. However this may be, there is no doubt that it contains more of the fruits of thought, knowledge, and study than anything which has hitherto come from the same easel. Some of a crowd of men and women are cheering, and some seem to mock the fallen conqueror as he drives through Rochefort. It is, as we read the design, the latter's voices which have provoked Napoleon to thrust his pale face from the window of the berlin, which is closely followed by his faithful generals Lallemand and Becker, capital figures. The melancholy-looking footman in the rumble of the berlin, wearing the green imperial uniform laced with gold, which time and weather have made shabby, is in harmony with the design, and so are the chasseurs who follow close after Lallemand and Becker, a disorderly body, mounted on tired and rather lean horses. The characteristic qualities of Mr. Gow's technique, which, by the way, have greatly improved of late years, are seen to advantage in this Napoleonic subject; the expression of the Emperor's face, the figures of his followers, and especially of their horses, are all in the artist's best manner. The subject lent itself to the massing of strong colours and deep tones in the groups of travellers and the attendant crowds of the foreground, which stand out distinct from the whites of the houses beyond the bridge. Still the picture as a whole is somewhat hard, and lacks breadth, if not simplicity of effect. At any rate, 'On the Way to Exile' fully deserved the pains and skill expended on it.

MR. WATTS.

As a Retired Academician Mr. Watts has obeyed the rule of the society of which he has long been an ornament by contributing one picture only, Miss Dorothy E. MacCallum (216), which we have already briefly mentioned. It is the half-length, life-size figure of a young lady wearing a primrose and rose-coloured dress, which is delightfully harmonized with her pure, brilliant, and yet perfectly solid carnations, the undertones and hues of which are such as few have achieved. The fineness of her animated expression and her graceful and simple demeanour are not to be hastily forgotten.

MR. J. B. BURGESS.

A more than usually prolonged period of weak health, involving intervals of abstinence from work and absence from London, has told against Mr. Burgess's work. A Mothers' Meeting (246) is his sole picture of the year, but it is more animated, and its incidents are more diversified, than it is his wont to give us, its subject being the vicar's wife and her daughter holding a mothers' meeting in the large room of an old farmhouse or cottage. The audience comprises some good and appropriate figures, each occupied in her own way, and the whole is an interesting example of the painter's resources, his peculiar turn for quiet humour of a sort, and especially of his characteristic mode of looking at his subjects as well as of painting them.

MR. G. A. STOREY.

The most successful of Mr. Storey's works is A Fair Musician (833), painted somewhat in the vein of Metsu. So far as spirit, character, and design go, it is worthy of that master, and Mr. Storey, although no plagiarist, is quite in sympathy with his admirable model. The style of art adopted agrees more completely with that of Eglon van der Neer's pictures than that of Metsu. The pleasing and elegantly dressed young performer is seated at a table, clad in nicely and clearly painted black and pink, and lute in hand. Her fair face, her look of attention, and her graceful and simple pose combine happily with the agreeable coloration of the whole picture, while her costume harmonizes with the light grey-blue screen of the background. The Daughter of the Regiment (868) is also prettily painted and sprightly. The most pleasing parts are the fresh face and lively expression of the girl, who is masquerading in her father's regimentals. Mischief (203), a portrait of a lady in white satin holding a bow and arrows, is not Mr. Storey's best production, nor is it most characteristic of him. Summer Days (891) is more worthy of him, because it is quite in his own vein. It depicts two comely young damsels walking in a sunlit avenue. The red and blue dress striped with silver of one of them and the rose and grey costume of the other are of the modern Watteau type, pleasing and bright, though hardly so brilliant, so delicately or so crisply touched, and so sparkling and gay as we look for whenever the master of Valenciennes is, however remotely, imitated. The damsel in red and blue holds the blossom of a dandelion run to seed, on blowing which briskly she says, "He loves me! He loves me not!" The expressions and characters of both the maidens are the most appropriate and freshest that Mr. Storey has devised, nor are the figures, faces, and dresses inferior to the best of his work.

MR. DENDY SADLER.

This capital painter of "old-fashioned" English incidents sends two eminently representative examples of his clever designing and firm drawing and handling. One of them, a picture of a bridal party, called For Weal or Woe (635), is almost worthy of his best time. It embodies the most pleasing elements of his art and humour. Every part of the old farmhouse garden has obviously been painted from nature with scrupulous care, but the effect of sunlight is less happy than we could wish, the half-tints being a little leathery, and the lights, though brilliant enough for the truth, are opaque and overloaded—so much so, indeed, that they owe much of their success to the remarkably firm, precise touch of the artist. The old and wise mother of the bridegroom makes good comedy, but the bride herself—a charming woman in the quaint attire of the period, including much lace and muslin, a wonderful spoon-bonnet pitched high upon her head, and a long and drooping veil cast about it—is an unhackneyed conception, and besides is very well painted. The other figures in this composition are suited to the occasion. Nearly Done (428) is an excellent specimen of that sort of pathetic comedy in which Mr. Sadler takes special delight. The approaching completion of one of our grandmothers' masterpieces of needlework, a most elaborate patchwork quilt of divers coloured silks, and its inspection by an elderly gentlewoman and her daughter, form the subject. Except that it is a little leathery, opaque, and hard, while its bright tints are needlessly isolated, so that the colour-scheme lacks simplicity, homogeneity, and, above all, breadth, massing, and softness, this is a very good specimen of its class. Those who admire artistic handicraft pure and simple will do well to study the precision and delicate yet laborious handling of the furniture, to say nothing of the younger lady's rose-coloured ribbons and lace cape. The technical qualities, good and less good, of this picture are the same as those of similar works of Mr. Sadler's. No painter of genre has taken more pains to deserve success, or been more happy in winning it.

A group of the best land and sea pieces in the exhibition may well come next in these notes, and be followed by remarks on some of the best portraits we have yet seen. Among the sea painters of our time few hold so honourable a place as Mr. John Brett, and, accordingly, we venture to put him first before the reader.

MR. JOHN BRETT.

The distinguished artist who began to exhibit at the Academy more than forty years ago is exceptionally well represented this year, for his subjects are much more attractive and impressive than usual. He has painted a powerful coast piece in Castel Moel, Isle of Skye (123), a wide, far-reaching panorama of a turbulent sea, and, hanging over it, huge masses of dense grey clouds which nearly conceal the firmament, and, so closely are they driven together, show only their own white sides and vast and dark level bases. The vigour of the gale, which is rapidly rising to a tempest, is so happily rendered that the visitor may be excused for thinking he is witnessing it all from the deck of the painter's yacht, that point of vantage of which he has made such admirable use. An equally brilliant and solidly painted picture impressively represents The South Stack Lighthouse, the Wind athwart the Tide (384), as seen from the sea during a late autumnal evening, when the lower clouds glow in various hues, and a line of gigantic cliffs near to us shares the sullen splendour which dies away as it extends to the left and right. The impressiveness of the scene is enhanced by the hugeness of the masses of dark ashy and almost black clouds which, drifting landwards, cling to the summits of the hills that rise from the edges of the lofty cliffs; in the very heart of the gloom a pale flash of light half reveals a solitary white building in the mid-distance, while, nearer at hand, the slender tower and walls of the famous beacon catch the brightest lustre of the view, and thus stand out conspicuous. At the foot of the rock a little vessel scudding before the wind indicates clearly enough the painter's sympathetic handling. She is rushing from the darker sea into that pallid emerald gleam which lies before her and athwart the mysterious distance. The painter has been more than usually fortunate and self-exacting in giving us so much of the fury of the water in front as to rivet our attention on its deep glassy green, its crests of foam, its hollows charged with wan and dark reflections, and that look of motion which is an essential element of his success. Nor is the distant horizon, where what remains of a stormy day fades into an ominous twilight, and a brooding darkness closes the scene, the least of the poetic elements in one of the artist's best works, a sort of antithesis to 'Britannia's Realm.'

MR. W. L. WYLLIE.

Mr. W. L. Wyllie's contributions to the Academy are three, and, like Mr. Brett's, they are all of them coast pieces of great strength and brilliancy, as naturalistic in their way as Mr. Hook's, and yet entirely different from either, although they combine many of the merits of both these artists. Each of the three excels in representing light, colour, and the motion of the sea and clouds. The most ambitious of the group now before us is The Winding Medway (263), a fine and very expansive view from a somewhat elevated point over the Medway in the Rochester region, where the rich green meadows, well painted and full of colour, extend from our feet, so that we look beyond the autumnal trees upon a watery plain that is illuminated by grey and shining silvery light of a hundred finely harmonized tints, handled with such skill that it seems to be, as in nature, perfectly level. This space reflects a world of low clouds and a sky that appears to grow paler with the omens of impending rain. In the distance we see through the vapour to the remote shore crowded with groups of trees and buildings, and the air there is interspersed with wreaths of steam and sullen bars of smoke. It is rendered in the painter's broad, harmonious, and delicate manner. Barry Docks (695) represents a very different subject, yet it is treated with equal skill. A crowd of steamers are gathered in the harbour and at the quay, and they are busily discharging their cargoes by means of the overhead cranes and derricks. Hasty jets of steam and slower clouds of smoke stand out distinct against the pure blue sky. In the stream, grouped in a dark mass upon the shining water, more steamers wait their turn to be loaded or unloaded. In less energetic and appreciative hands such a subject as this might become a mere illustration or a diagram; but Mr. Wyllie has made 'Barry Docks' picturesque and full of expression by the vigour of his conception. The great steamship, the Dungarvan Castle, bears her name rightly in Mr. Wyllie's beautifully drawn and modelled portrait of her at full length, the dark grey iron bulk of her hull being most elegant in itself, as she makes her way swiftly, steadily, and—despite her great weight—buoyantly upon the sea. She yields slightly to the constant pressure of the gale, although her yards are pointed towards the wind. The portrait is admirably expressive, and like all the painter's likenesses of ships, which he generally takes from a near point of view, spontaneous and complete. It is this spontaneity which adds so greatly to the charm of the artist's sea and sky painting. The picture is called The Liner's Escort (1186). No one who looks at this capital example of a very unusual sort of art will soon forget the finesse and learning of its drawing. Doubtless this is, as such, the most brilliant sea piece in the Academy, but, of course, neither Mr. Hook nor Mr. Brett has this year aimed at brilliancy pure and simple.

MR. H. W. B. DAVIS.

This Academician takes us from the wild Atlantic to the sunlit hills and streams of Wales. We may mention first The Banks of the Upper Wye (602), in which the spectator views the sunny stream from among the shadows of the boughs of some beeches grouped close to its nearer bank. In these shadows are a cow and calf, capitally drawn and painted, which have come to drink. On the further surface of the river reflections of the blue sky and gleams from the hillsides are happily represented. The effect of the light is as praiseworthy as it is solidly painted throughout; bright as it is, it is not deficient in breadth. The second picture in our notes is well qualified to illustrate its motto from Milton, "Song, on a May morning," and its title Flow'ry May (240). The subject is a huge and ancient thorn, thickly laden with blossoms whose perfect whiteness the sunlight makes brighter; a cow and some sheep are grouped, partly in and partly without the deep blue sun-shadows which are cast among the boughs round the tree. The clearness of these shadows proves the painter's skill no less than the brightness and purity of the atmosphere between us and the distant purplish hills. The picture is one of the most effective and solidly painted which the year has brought us.

MR. DAVID MURRAY.

The merits of Mr. Murray's art are greater than they seem at first sight. Each of his four large pictures now in view is intensely fresh and like nature, but, although quite as effective and truthful as any of its forerunners, is, we are bound to say, not so searchingly finished as usual. Hampstead, long the haunt of Constable, Varley, and Linnell, has found such favour in Mr. Murray's eyes that of his four pictures this year three of them record his impressions of the beauty which has suffered so much through "improvements" and smoke. The first of the three is named Hampstead, the Firs by "The Spaniards" (411). The well-known tavern is seen under the boughs of some dark pines and between their ruddy stems, now become purplish in the deepening twilight which imparts to the scene a dignity and pathos; some sheep are gathered in the gloom of the trees; there is a rosy flush on the highest clouds. The solemnity obtained by these means is an unusual element for the artist to employ. The next work of this group is called Hampstead's Happy Heath (640), whence we look from the height over the undulating foreground; a red-coated pensioner is a telling feature of the chromatic scheme, which as a whole is very successful. Looking beyond these from the much-worn sward of the foreground to the distance of the smoke-laden horizon, we enjoy the harmonies of the pervading light, colour, and tone in the expansive and sunny atmosphere. The last of the four pictures is Hampstead, from the Viaduct (30), comprising a pond and a deep gully which are spanned by the well-known bridge; beyond it St. Mary's spire rises above the trees which gather thickly about it. The summer air, dimmed partly by smoke, partly by mist, has been used with great pictorial effect to give a certain opalescence Mr. Murray knows how to make the most of, and the beauty of the result is equal to its delicacy. Indeed, it suggests Constable's work in the same region. Notable points in Deeside (476) are the surface of the stream, which reflects the blue of the sky, and the sunny road flecked with shadows at its side. The picture is a capital study of late autumnal sunlight at its brightest, from the road in the front strewn with ruddy leaves to the high bank beyond the river, covered with a foliage which includes some boughs which have not lost their green.

MR. CHARLIE W. WYLLIE.

This sympathetic and delicate-handed delineator of quaint old-fashioned country towns and picturesque river-banks contributes to this exhibition a beautiful study (1047) of pearly light, opalescent and soft herbage gone to seed, and a wide rising field, on the higher ridge of which farm people are busily piling a monstrous rick. A paradise of wild flowers occupies the foreground, and consists of poppies and daisies in multitudes; beautifully painted clumps of the taller stalks of brown seedlings dry in the sun, and grass turned grey shines like silver in the autumnal heat of a sultry sky laden with vapours. The whole picture is delightfully soft, harmonious, and English, and deserves the place of honour which has been awarded to it in the gallery.

THE NEW GALLERY.

(First Notice.)

This exhibition is of about the same importance as its forerunners; it is, indeed, probably better than the average of them, but not much better. It is more enjoyable than many, simply on account of the absence of a certain class of extravagances which were sometimes met with in this gallery, and made the visitor wonder why they were admitted to a place which professes to be a centre of culture and educated art.

Mr. Watts deserves a place of honour such as has been awarded to his Paris on Ida (No. 106), a full-length figure kneeling on the mountain-top and turning his gaze upwards. The execution, tones, and colours are choice, and the conception of the subject, though not too masculine, or at least robust, is appropriate and graceful. 'Paris on Ida,' as a Watts must needs be, is grand in many ways and perfectly in harmony with itself. More interesting, and therefore more welcome, on personal as well as pictorial grounds, is the painter's bust portrait, in profile and at life size, of Mrs. G. F. Watts (140), which, though it lacks fibre, is an excellent likeness, painted with all the sympathy due to the master's wife. She could not wish for more. —Mariana in the South (163), Mr. J. W. Waterhouse's sole contribution, may be praised for a choicer surface and more finish than are usual with him. The design seems, however, not to have enough of that inspiring and romantic force which alone succeeds in suggesting the subject to us; the "long-continued yearning of her love" ought, it seems to us, to be manifest in every feature, limb, and movement of the damsel; but in her countenance there seems little that is romantic and not much that is more than commonly good-looking, much less handsome. Nor is there any of that mystery that the theme suggests in other parts of the picture, while the type of Mariana's face is neither more nor less than that of a model Mr. Waterhouse has too long relied on. Still, putting aside such considerations, we are bound to admire and fully praise the technique of most of this picture.

